McKees Rocks, Pa.—The new Island Avenue Theater, the latest of local moving picture theaters to be erected in this city, has at last been completed, have thrown open their doors and are receiving an excellent business.

Toledo, Ohio.—C. J. Karg and C. J. Beidler have erected a moving picture and vaudeville theater at Main and Starr avenue which will be known as the People's Theater.

Easton, Pa.—A new moving picture theater has been erected at Danielsville.

Newburg, N. Y.—Lander street is to have another moving picture theater which will be known as the New Star.

Wheeling, W. Va.—The following films made an excellent hit at the Olympic Moving Picture Theater: "Ransomed; or a Prisoner of War" and "The Engineer's Sweetheart."

Greenpoint, N. Y.—Leopard Wempfheimer will erect a moving picture theater on Driggs avenue near Newell street.

Florence, Mass. E. B. Stark and John Daly are the new proprietors of the Lily Theater.

Riverside, Cal.—A new moving picture theater is being planned for this town which will be under the proprietorship of S. W. Trepto and W. B. Patrick.

Bloomington, Ill.—Alfred Bodhaine has gone to Chicago for the purpose of erecting a moving picture theater.

Brazil, Ind.—Work has commenced on the erection of Robert Kidd's Moving Picture Theater, which will be considered as the most handsome of moving picture theaters in this vicinity. This amusement house will be able to seat about 200.

Wateriel, N. Y.—Fred B. Andrews, proprietor of the Star Theater here, has closed it and will remodel and enlarge it so as to seat more patrons and make them more cozy.

Peoria, Ill.—Peoria is to have another picture palace. The Old Weast Theater has been remodeled and converted into a moving picture theater and will be under control of a large theatrical syndicate headed by Sandy McGill.

Phoenix, Ariz.—A new $40,000 moving picture theater is being planned for North First street.

Milwaukee, Wis.—The Unique Theater on Main street has been sold to George B. Frellson.

Reading, Pa.—William K. Goldenberg is the new manager of the Palace Theater at 734 Pennsylvania avenue.

Springfield, Mass. W. H. Lyons will open a new [illegible] theater at Oak street and Main.

Madison, Me. Manager Sanborn of the Pastime Moving Picture Theater has taken a long lease on the Harmon Hall and will convert it into a new moving picture theater.

Rock Island, Ill. The Family Theater at 215 East [illegible] street has been leased to other men and [illegible] opened.

Harrisburg, Pa. The Empire Building at 221 Market street has been leased by Silverman Brothers, who will convert it into a moving picture theater.

Columbus, Ohio. Plans are being made for a new [illegible] theater on West Broad street near Market [illegible] by Al Taylor.

Harrisburg, Pa. Moving picture entertainments are being held at the Pennsylvania Railroad Y. M. C. A.

Philadelphia, Pa. E. Bernstein has a contract for the erection of a high class moving picture theater at 12, S. 9th street for A. J. Myers.

Hudson, Mass. Felton & Wadleigh have installed a new Powers Cameragraph at their moving picture theater.

Windsor, Vt. The Lemieux Moving Picture Company is planning for the erection of a picture palace on Central street.

Corning, Iowa. Will Dotson will open a new moving picture theater in the Helling building.

Louisville, Ky. The West Broadway Moving Picture Theater Company has commenced the erection of a new theater at Eighteenth and Broadway.

Milwaukee, Wis. Julius Wasniewski has secured a permit for the erection of a new moving picture theater on Third avenue near Mitchell.

Sheboygan, Wis. Tom McCormick is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater in the Gerow building.

Hartford, Mich. M. G. Hotchkiss has opened a new moving picture show here. It is known as the "Grand."

Harrisburg, Pa. George Colburn and Ray Fox opened a new moving picture show here.

Atchison, Kan. Carl Mensing has purchased the Colonial and Graphic Moving Picture Shows here.

Viola, Ill. Smith Bros. have opened a new moving picture show here.

Puyallup, Wash. George W. Stevenson is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

East Moline, Ill. A new moving picture theater, to be known as the "Imp" is to be opened in the Musgrove Hall, at the corner of First avenue and Ninth street.

Xenia, Ohio. P. H. Flyn is pleading to start a new moving picture show here.

Carrollton, Mo. Mr. Watterson will open a new moving picture theater on South Main street.

Mantua, Ohio. Anthony Cretan has opened a new moving picture theater here.

Mobile, Ala. Jules Bistes is contemplating the erection of a new moving picture theater here.

Kansas City, Kan.—E. R. Stewart and J. L. Flinn are preparing to open a new moving picture theater at 2121 Silver avenue.

Wheeling, W. Va.—A new moving picture theater is being planned for Fifth street.

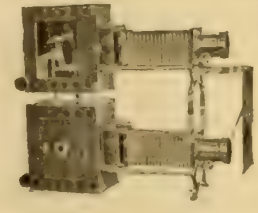
McMechen, W. Va. The local moving picture theater at the corner of Seventh and Marshall streets have been forced to close on account of not complying with the law.

Bellville, N. J.—Moving picture shows will be shown in the Beville Hall here, twice a week. The Essex Amusement Company will be in charge of the performance.

Louisville, Ky.—Ground has been broken for the erection of a high class moving picture theater at Eighteenth street and Broadway which will cost the proprietors about $30,000. This theater will be known to the patrons as the West Broadway Theater.

Milwaukee, Wis.—L. Bartman & Pretschold are planning the erection of a new moving picture theater here.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Joseph Janczyka has secured a permit for the erection of a new moving picture theater at 1040 Sycamore street.



DISSOLVING-ERKO-SCOPE A PERFECT STEREOPTICON

Has been used for five years by the most successful Moving Picture Theatres in the country.

Its special features such as: first quality, well ventilated condenser mountings, high light-tight lamp houses, large doors, new centering device and easy carbon feed, place it beyond competition.

Price Complete with Rheostats, $95.00

We make other Dissolving Lanterns from $50.00 up.

ERKER BROS. OPTICAL COMPANY, 604 Olive Street, St. Louis, Mo.
Moving Picture Theatre Supply House.

SPECIAL ROLL TICKETS The Big Ticket. Any Printing Any Colors.

5,000	- - - -	$1.25	20,000	- - - -	$4.60	50,000	- - - -	$7.50
10,000	- - - -	2.50	25,000	- - - -	5.50	100,000	- - - -	10.00

Get the Samples — Stock Tickets, 6 Cents

NATIONAL TICKET COMPANY - - - Shamokin, Pa.

FOLDING CHAIRS

For Moving Picture Shows Grand Stands, Assembly Halls, etc. In sections if wanted.

Write for Catalog No. 2.

The Kauffman Manufacturing Co.
ASHLAND, OHIO

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES

ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. No. 31

The A. H. Andrews Co.

174-176 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill. Branches in all leading cities

CHEAP

Steel Frame Theatre Chairs
ABSOLUTELY Non-BREAKABLE

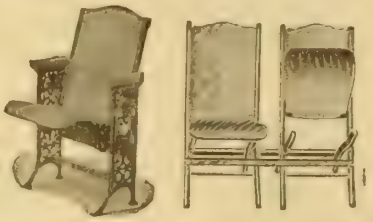
Suitable for small theatres and Moving Picture shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

Second Hand Chairs
Also seating for Out-of-Door Use.

Address Dept. W.

STEEL FURNITURE CO., Grand Rapids, Mich.
New York Office: 150 Fifth Avenue
Boston Office: 224 Congress St., Boston, Mass.

Opera and Assembly Chairs



Most popular priced chairs on the market for pictures show use.

Prompt Shipments. Write for Catalogue
PEABODY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO.
NORTH MANCHESTER - - INDIANA
New York Agents—ROBERT J. EHLERS CO.
Lexington Ave and 43rd St. - New York, N. Y.

The Automatic Theatre Chair

It is a friend to the public.
It advertises your theatre and makes your business grow.
It folds automatically and can be revolving, stationary or self righting.
It is the only sanitary chair.
It is a space-saver, life-saver and money-saver.
It is the world's greatest theatre
r.
you have not seen our latest models, investigate.
Write today for Circular A.

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO.
Canal Dover, Ohio, U. S. A.

FILMS FOR SALE. 50 Reels of Film
$8 to $16 per Reel
Second-hand one pin Edison machine, $100.00
MAYER SILVERMAN, 105 Fourth Ave, PITTSBURG, PA

Want Chairs Quick?

Stafford chairs excell all others. We use no three-ply veneers. Why? Not good enough! Five ply is best, and that is why we use them.

Chairs like cut
IN STOCK and GUARANTEED

Ask for Catalog No. 305

E. H. STAFFORD MFG. CO.
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

THE ENTERPRISE MODEL B

Portable Calcium Gas Outfit

Is the only Substitute for Electricity for projecting Motion Picture or Stereopticon views and is the

Only Satisfactory Portable Outfit

because it operates by WATER PRESSURE, IS CONSTANT, REGULAR AND RELIABLE and has no complicated spring valves to corrode, choke up and otherwise get out of order. Is patented.

"OXONE" in SQUARE CAKES is most Satisfactory for the production of Oxygen Gas. Send for particulars.

For Sale by Dealers

Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co. MANUFACTURERS AND SALES AGENTS 564 and 572 W. Randolph St. CHICAGO

SONG SLIDES

LIDE NON-BREAKABLE—NON-INFLAMABLE LIDE

Colored Song and Announcement Slides

Patent Applied For

Just the kind of a slide you have all been waiting for. Guaranteed against breaking from heat or the careless operator. Send for list. Made and sold only by the original inventors. None others genuine.

NORTH AMERICAN SLIDE CO., 143 North 8th Street PHILADELPHIA, PA.

SONG SLIDES

Motion Hand Book Now Ready. Price, $1.50 Postage Free

"Some of These Days"

you'll wake up and find out that our 25c slide service is a gilt-edged proposition.

25 CENTS A SET PER WEEK

Our method of shipping your week's supply in one shipment every week should appeal to you for various reasons. Write us, and we'll tell you.

Chicago Song Slide Exchange
Sixth Floor, Portland Block
107 Dearborn Street Dept. 1 Chicago, Ill.

EVERY OPERATOR

wants the Bio Arc Screen as soon as he sees it. It enables him to get a better light, and get it easier than ever before. Send along a dollar and see for yourself. Your money back if you want it. That's fair, isn't it?

CHARLES L. KIEWERT CO.

39 Cortlandt Street, New York — 421 Frick Building, Pittsburg — 58 Plymouth Court, Chicago
114 Huron Street, Milwaukee — 195 Fremont Street, San Francisco

Dear dignified old Gen. Flimco is hitting nothing but the high spots while beating his retreat from the mad-bull onslaughts of the Independent Exhibitors. I knew doggoned well you could get his goat if you only stuck to it, and I want to congratulate you on your stick-to-it-ivenesss. The minute the rest of you wake up and determine to try Independent films, consult the biggest and best film renter in the world. Don't start wrong by trying a wildcat exchange or you'll never get anywhere. Start by connecting with yours truly,

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

196-198 Lake St.
CHICAGO

Minneapolis Portland
Omaha Salt Lake City
Evansville

The BIGGEST and BEST film renter in the world

Motion Picture Hand Book
NOW READY
Price, $1.50, Postage Free

Cut Out ⅔ the Heat of the Arc

You're bound to get both light and heat from the arc of a moving picture machine. Necessarily one accompanies the other. But there's a great difference in the amount of heat given off in different methods of using an alternating current supply.

Using Alternating Current directly, you need a current of 60 amperes to obtain 4800 candle power.

By changing the supply for the arc, to Direct Current, 20 amperes gives 5000 c.p.

These figures are taken from a test in which the

G. E. Mercury Arc Rectifier was used to rectify the alternating current.

Especially designed for moving picture machines this device eliminates two-thirds of the heat of the arc. Think what this means:

One-third the discomfort to the operator
One-third the chance of cracking condensers
One-third the consumption of carbons

The rectifier is the most effective transforming device on the market. It operates with little loss of power and requires practically no attention.

It is vital to your interests to learn all about this device Sign and mail the attached coupon. Don't lose this opportunity to improve your winter service. Write today.

GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY

Largest Electrical Manufacturer in the World

DEPT. 53-J

SCHENECTADY, N. Y. 2777

Without incurring the slightest obligation on my part, please send me your illustrated Booklet, telling all about the use and operation of the G-E Mercury Arc Rectifier. Mail me also an information blank to be filled out and return to you, so that you can advise me how much money I can save, and how much my light can be improved.

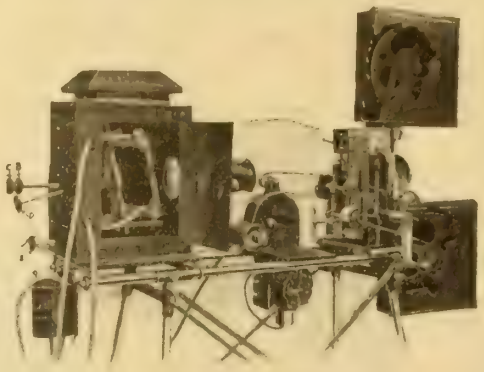
Signed.....
Theatre.....
City.....

W 3

Address: GENERAL ELECTRIC CO.
Dept. 53-J. SCHENECTADY, N. Y.

The "STANDARD"

THE MACHINE THAT GIVES RESULTS



FIREPROOF—FLICKERLESS

Many have machines running for two years that have never cost a cent for repairs.

Write for Illustrated Catalogue—Dept. W.

AMERICAN MOVING PICTURE MACHINE CO.
101 BEEKMAN STREET :: :: NEW YORK

One of Our Specialties

Portable Box Offices

For Theatres and Picture : : : Houses : : :

Wired Complete,
Ready for Lighting.
Cathedral Glass Dome.
Marble or Wood Base.
Any Size. Any Style.

The Largest Builders of ELECTRIC SIGNS in the WORLD

STRAUSS & COMPANY
(Incorporated)
440-442 West 42nd Street, New York
Write for Estimate and Catalogue

To Operators Who Want More Money

The best way to get more money is to give better results.

Thousands of operators are making themselves "solid" with "the boss" by using BIO Carbons.

The BIO Carbon is an expert's carbon—it is meant to give better results, when used right.

It takes more brains to fly an aeroplane than to trundle a push cart. You never find BIO Carbons and a "crank turner" in the same booth—BIO Carbons are for operators.

Pin your check for $1.50 to this Ad and mail to nearest office for sample 50-(5/8x6 Cored) Prepaid.

CHARLES L. KIEWERT CO.

NEW YORK PITTSBURG CHICAGO MILWAUKEE SAN FRANCISCO

KLEINE OPTICAL CO., (Canadian Agents)

MONTREAL ST. JOHN, N. B. TORONTO WINNIPEG VANCOUVER

MOTION PICTURE HANDBOOK

A GUIDE TO MANAGERS AND OPERATORS OF MOVING PICTURE THEATRES

By F. H. RICHARDSON Price, $1.50, Postage Free

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
125 East 23d St., New York

Darn It. Mr. Exhibitor

We hate to do it—but here goes

Exhibitors Special No. 2 Packed in Handy Cartons

50 Pink Label Carbons Cored 6 x 8
5 Thousand Tickets 5 or 10c. any color numbered.
2 Pearl White Condensers 6½, 7½, 9, (name size.)
1 Bottle Exhibitors Cement "That Sticks."
1 Can Exhibitors Machine Oil.

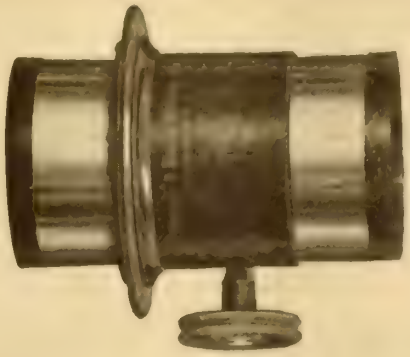
Outfit $3.05

We ship to all parts of U. S. same day goods are ordered. We buy and sell M. P. Theatres no dead ones. We have four money making M. P. Theatres on sale now.

WE SELL:—Machines, Machine Parts, Chairs, Supplies

EXHIBITORS SUPPLY HOUSE Suite 1 Lyric Theatre Bldg. FT. WAYNE, INDIANA

GET OUR PRICES ON CARBONS, TICKETS ETC.



¶ Don't be deceived into believing that any other lens will give the same results as the

BAUSCH & LOMB
Projection and Condensing Lenses

They are the American standard lenses.

¶ We have an experience of more than fifty years in the making of lenses for all sorts of purposes.

¶ We operate the largest lens plant in the world.

¶ Send for New Projection Lens Catalog containing useful information for operators.

Our Name on a Photographic Lens, Microscope, Field Glass, Laboratory Apparatus, Engineering or any other Scientific Instrument is our Guarantee.

Bausch & Lomb Optical Co.

NEW YORK WASHINGTON CHICAGO SAN FRANCISCO
LONDON ROCHESTER, N.Y. FRANKFORT

The Cincinnati-Buckeye Film Company

$100.000.00 incorporation, operating the CINCINNATI FILM EXCHANGE, 315 W. 4th Street, Cincinnati, Ohio, and the BUCKEYE FILM PROJECTING COMPANY, 309 Arcade Building, Dayton, Ohio. Biggest Independent Film Renting Concern in the UNITED STATES today. BUYING almost the entire Independent Output. Reference: SALES COMPANY, 111 E. 14th Street, New York. If you are looking for a real Film Service, drop us a line.

The Cincinnati-Buckeye Film Co.

315-317 W. Fourth St. CINCINNATI, OHIO
309-321 Arcade Building DAYTON, OHIO

CONTEST

$100 in Prizes

FOR THE BEST

UNIFORMED ATTENDANTS

OF

Motion Picture Theatres

OPENS DEC. 1st

SEND FOR PARTICULARS

Moving Picture World

160 Washington St., (Post Bldg.)
CHICAGO, ILL.

Can furnish all makes Independent Films Second-hand—10, 20, 30, or 90 days old.

The largest dealers in New and Second-hand Films in the United States. New Films, 4c. per foot up, Second-hand, $5.00 per reel; No. 5 Power Machine, like new, $100; Edison Model B., $125; Ex. Model, $90. Complete lists and prices furnished free upon request.

UNITED STATES FILM BROKERS & IMPORTERS

41 Union Square West — Broadway and 17th Street — New York City

THOMAS RICKETTS

Motion Picture Producer and Director

For two years Chief Dramatic and General Producer for the Essanay Company, has withdrawn from The American Film Company, and will consider proposal from responsible firm. Author and Producer of The Celebrated Full Reel One Scene Art Pictures: "Justified," "Gratitude," "The Adventuress," "Woman's Wit" and "Maud Muller," "Hand of Uncle Sam," "The Thief," "The Game," "His Only Child," "The Stolen Fortune," "A Fair Exchange," "An Advertisement Answered," etc., etc., etc.

THOMAS RICKETTS, 1262 Wilson Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Phone Edgewater 5800

SAY:

These Celluloid Advertising Buttons are Certainly Winners.

Pinned on the coat of a boy or girl, you know they stick.

Give them away at some special matinee and watch results.

This is the price on the best size with any lettering and in any color. 1¼ inch.

250 for $7.50 500 for $10.00 1,000 for $15.00

We make other sizes and novelties for souvenirs, etc.

AMERICAN BADGE CO.

141-143 W. Michigan Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

JUST A MOMENT PLEASE

Mr. Exhibitor, have you sent us your order for one of our

Film Announcement Titles

Any of the following Announcements sent by mail upon receipt of price.

That's All, Good-Night—15 ft.
Hand Colored Trick Film.....$2.00
(Same Black and White) 1.50

Entire Change of Program To-morrow—10 ft.
Hand Colored 1.50
(Same Black and White)..... 1.00

We thank you for your patronage and ask you to call again—20 ft.
Hand Colored 3.00
(Same Black and White)..... 2.00

Next Show in Five Minutes—10ft.
Hand Colored 1.50
(Same Black and White) 1.00

All that have not seen the entire Performance may remain for the next—20ft.
Hand Colored 3.00
(Same Black and White) 2.00

Any Announcement you wish made to Order at lowest Prices.

Send us an Order. Your money back if you say so.

French American Producing And Manufacturing Co.

918 Madison Street CHICAGO

Announcement Slides
Advertising Slides
Songs Illustrated

THREE STAR SLIDE CO.

Rooms 523-4

225 Dearborn Street - Chicago, Ills.

USE THE "PERFECTO"

The New Calcium Light Outfit

The Initial Cost is Less than that of any other and it can be Maintained for Less.

$25.00
Complete with Burner

At last a calcium gas making outfit that produces the maximum light at the minimum expense can be had. The "Perfecto" solves the problem. In this light you get more gas pressure than in any other calcium light, hence a more powerful light, and at less expense because of its generating process. It is the simplest of calcium lights and naturally the best; is non-explosive, never gets out of order, and complete weighs only 15 pounds. There are no frills about the "Perfecto." It's just a plain calcium gas making outfit that produces the powerful light that you must have, and above all at the least possible cost. Every exchange and dealer in lighting outfits should handle this light, and every exhibitor who is forced to use a calcium light should use this one. It's the cheapest in every way, and the best. Write for more particulars, or will ship C. O. D. upon receipt of deposit. Price $25.00 complete with burner.

CAPITAL MERCHANDISE COMPANY,
225 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

E. O. Prince T. P. Bible

Imperial Film Exchange

144 N. 12th St. Philadelphia, Pa.

Mr. Exhibitor: We can give you a Commercial Film Service for the lowest prices. Write, Wire or 'Phone.

MOVING PICTURE SUPPLIES

Get accustomed to write to American M. P. Supply Co. for their prices before you order any supplies elsewhere. It will pay. For example:

Bio Carbons 6 x 5-8 per 100 . $2.15
Electra Carbons 6 x 5-8 per 100 . 2.10
Arco Carbons 6 x 5-8 per 100 . 1.95
Asbestos Wire No. 8 per foot . .05
Tickets—roll of 2,000 16
Extra Heavy Carbon Holders, each .75
Pure White Condensors, each . .75

SEND FOR CATALOGUE

American Motion Picture Supply Co.

61 West 14th Street, New York City

UNIFORMS AND CAPS FOR Moving Picture Theatres

Catalogues, Samples and Prices for the Asking

James H. Hirsch & Co.

Jackson Boulevard

CHICAGO.

Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax

EVIDENCE!

Quality Alone Gets Orders Nowadays

COMING!
Dec. 9th
LADY BETTY'S STRATEGY
A STRONG FEATURE FILM

READ
WHAT THESE EXCHANGES SAY:

INDEPENDENT WESTERN FILM EXCHANGE says: "Your last release is certainly a feature film and a success.

H. & H. FILM COMPANY of Chicago says: "We are much pleased with your releases and find them good renters and that our customers are complimenting them."

CONSOLIDATED OF BALTIMORE Say: "We are giving you a standing order because the quality of your film warrants it."

"GET THIS"---Exchanges Seldom Praise

¶ "Wise up" on all this fuss and holler about SOLAX FILM. You, Mr. Exhibitor, for your own good should help your exchange secure a better and bigger program by insisting upon SOLAX "the best film made,"—get a move on—wake up your exchange—Tell them what you want—demand a SOLAX every week—Feature SOLAX every Friday—Bill Friday—"SOLAX DAY."

¶ The crowds will storm your doors because they know that SOLAX stands for the highest quality in moving pictures, "the best film made."

RELEASES

FRIDAY, NOV. 25

One Touch of Nature

The story deals with a country girl who marries the city chap, abandoning her country love. Later they separate, the husband taking their little boy with him. Years later the husband dies and the boy uses his influence to bring about a marriage between his Mother and her former love.

FRIDAY, DEC. 2

What Is to Be Will Be

Jack and Stanley both love Mollie—the belle of the Fishing Village. Jack leaves on a voyage, and news coming of the supposed wreck, Mollie marries Stanley. Years later Jack turns up, but Mollie, after a mental fight with herself, remains true to her husband.

FRIDAY, DEC. 9

Lady Betty's Strategy

The tale of a coquette eagerly sought by two admirers. Gypsy witchcraft teaches her that one of her lovers is false. Disguised as a Continental officer she becomes involved in a duel with the fortune hunting lover, but finally succeeds in extricating herself and winning her true lover's heart.

WE'LL EXCHANGE A BOOKLET EVERY WEEK FOR YOUR NAME AND ADDRESS

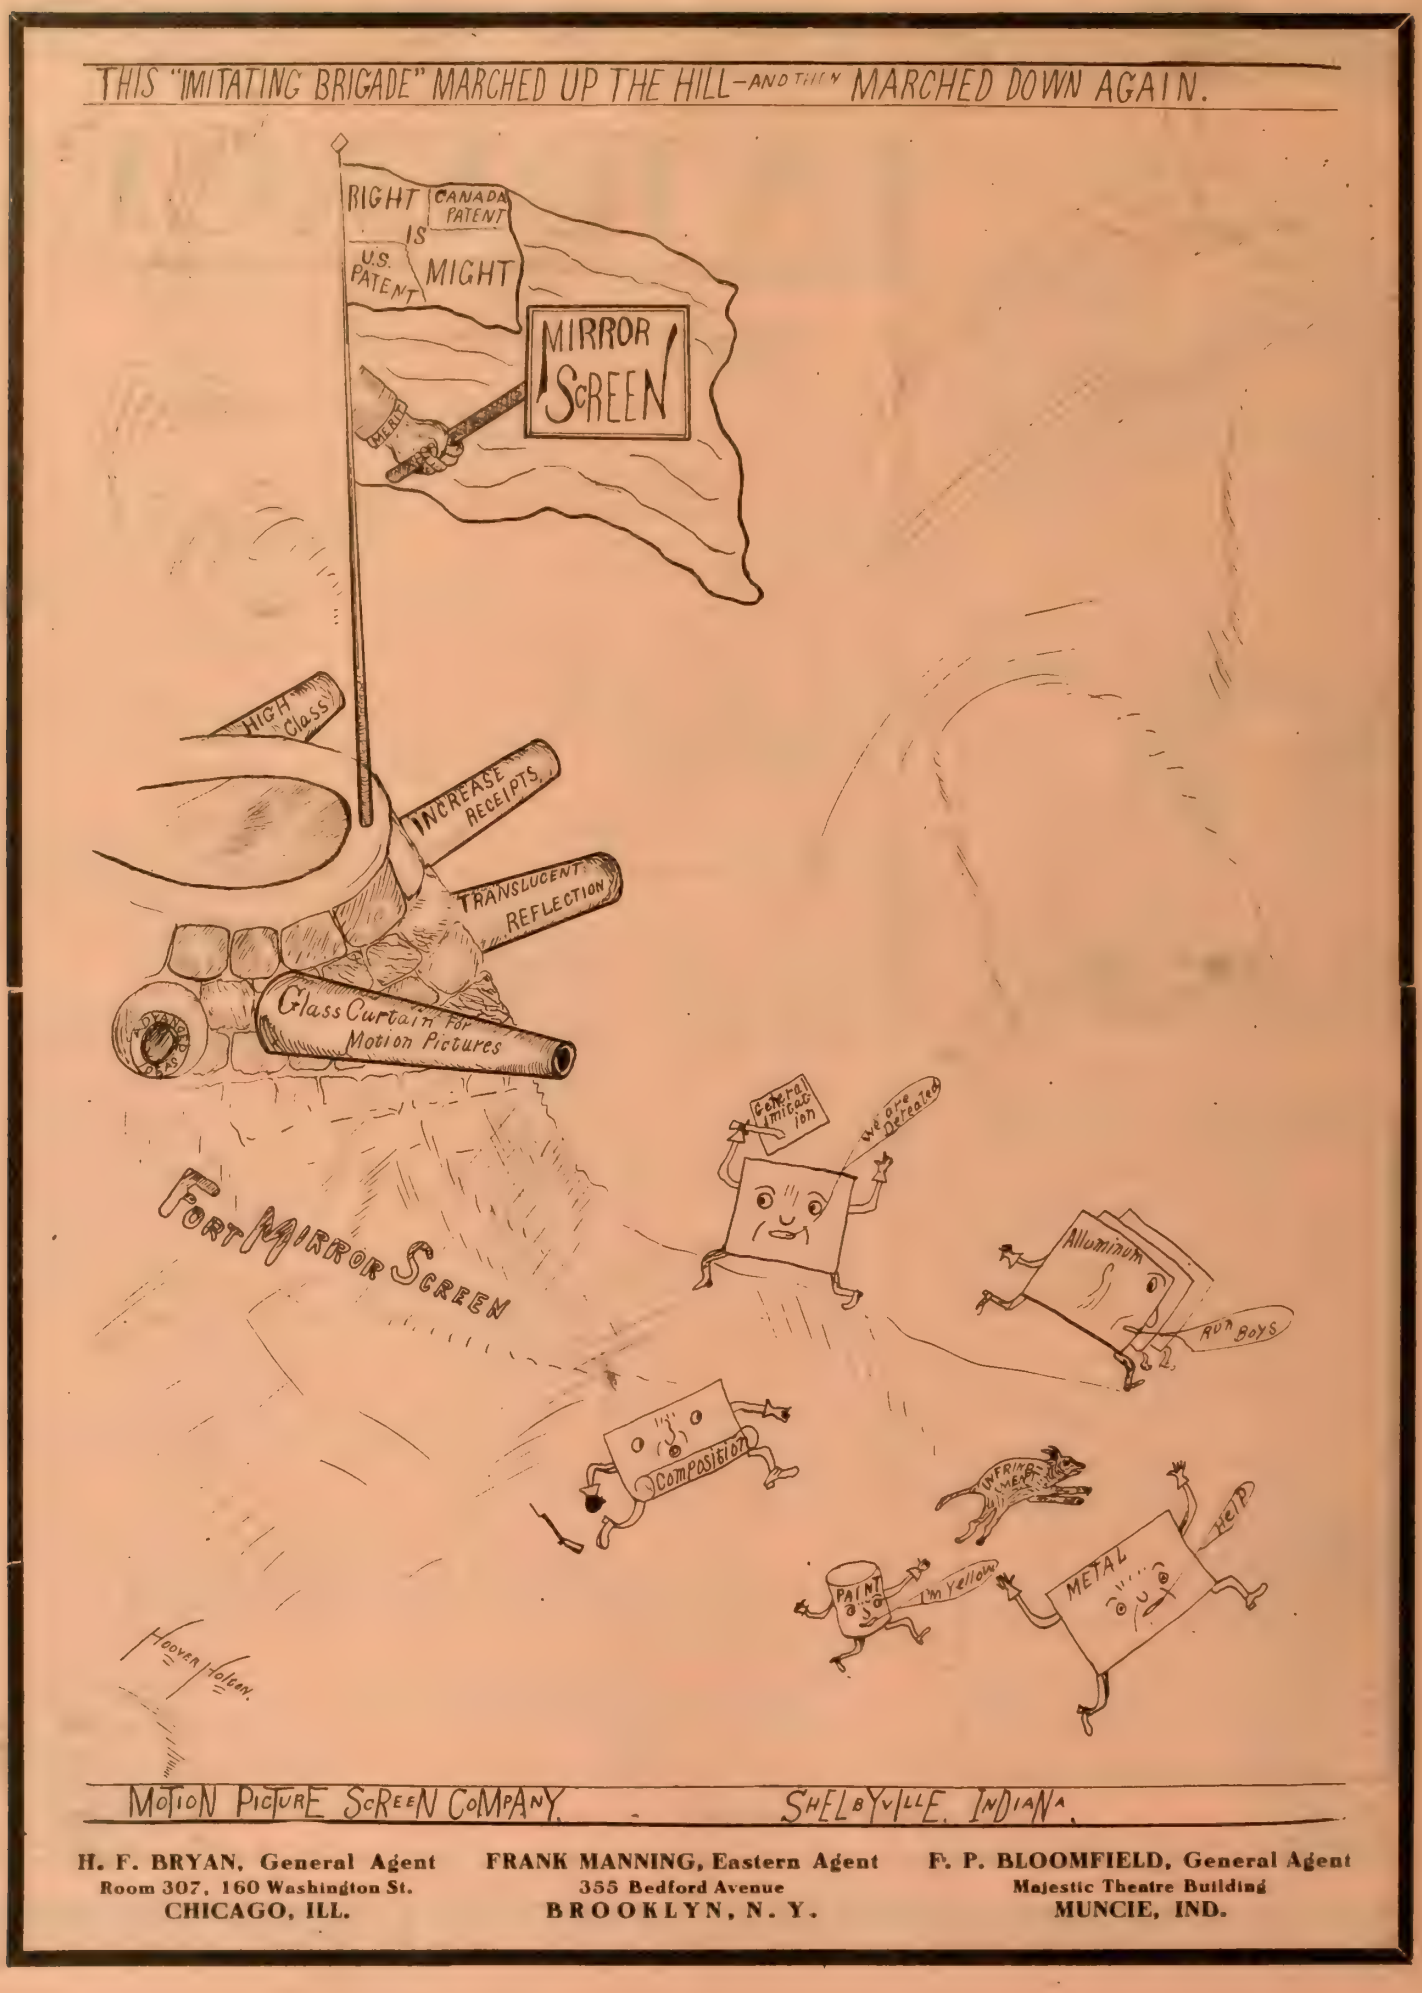
Solax Company

Telephone 1864 Stuyvesant

147 Fourth Avenue - - New York

All Solax Films Sold through THE SALES COMPANY, 111 E. 14th St., New York

Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax



THIS "IMITATING BRIGADE" MARCHED UP THE HILL—AND THEN MARCHED DOWN AGAIN.
RIGHT IS MIGHT CANADA PATENT
U.S. PATENT
MIRROR SCREEN
HIGH CLASS
INCREASE RECEIPTS
TRANSLUCENT REFLECTION
Glass Curtain for Motion Pictures
FORT MIRROR SCREEN
General Imitation
We are Defeated
Aluminum
Run Boys
Composition
Infringement
Help
Paint
I'm Yellow
Metal
Hoover Holgan
MOTION PICTURE SCREEN COMPANY. SHELBYVILLE, INDIANA.
H. F. BRYAN, General Agent
Room 307, 160 Washington St.
CHICAGO, ILL.
FRANK MANNING, Eastern Agent
355 Bedford Avenue
BROOKLYN, N. Y.
F. P. BLOOMFIELD, General Agent
Majestic Theatre Building
MUNCIE, IND.

Vol. 7, No. 24. December 10, 1910 Price, 10 Cents

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE ORGAN OF THE PHOTOPLAY AND ALLIED INTERESTS

NEW YORK

"Power's No. 6," the Perfect M. P. Machine

It is easy for us to SAY:

Our machine is the best—

Our machine projects the best pictures—

Our machine will outlast any other—

But don't take our word, find out for yourself.

Buy a "POWER'S No. 6" and use it. If it does not do all we claim, you can return it to the dealer and get your money back.

Do you know any other machine you can buy on the same understanding?

Do you know any other moving picture machine that is absolutely guaranteed for one year?

And remember—

More "POWER'S NUMBER SIXES" are being sold to-day than of any other moving picture machine in the world.

WRITE FOR CATALOGUE G. AT ONCE.

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

115-117 NASSAU STREET, : : : : NEW YORK CITY

2 4 U

AND GOOD ONES, TOO!

The Thanhouser 2-a-Week

Release of Friday, Dec. 16th

The Story of the One Wise Man!

The Millionaire Milkman was one of those supremely clever beings who, surrounded by vast wealth and fawning friends, can realize that the latter aren't always loyal when the wealth fades away. It's hard to admit to yourself that your warm admirer in prosperity may ignore you in adversity. But life is life and friendship is friendship—It comes and goes. A pretty girl's friendship came to the bright, rich hero of this splendid story: it went from him when he lost his fortune. Or rather, when he APPEARED to lose his fortune. For the fortune-losing was a part of a very neat ruse, and the picture gives its purpose.

No. 168 Code Word, Milkman

Scene from "LOVE AND LAW"

Release of Tuesday, Dec. 13th

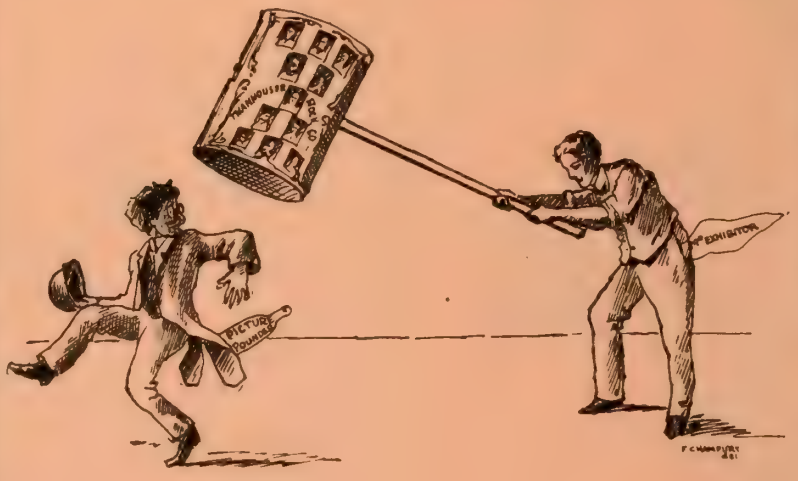
Another Subject of the Thanhouser Detective Series

Love and Law

is a lovely yarn that you ought to go to law for, if need be. GET IT! GET IT! GET IT! Subpoena your exchange for it, summons your exchange for it, GRILL your exchange for it. Seldom has a love theme been hitched to a detective theme so neatly—generally the two won't mix. But we mix 'em here as skillfully as druggist e'er mixed compound, and the result we hand you will be like medicine to your box office. The film shows the fallicies of the circumstantial evidence system as it now exists and will come as a gift to the many who feel such a system pernicious.

No. 167 Code Word, Law

VICAR OF WAKEFIELD IS COMING!



Soak the Picture Pounder

as hundreds of others are doing—with that Thanhouser Photoframe. Show OUTSIDE YOUR SHOW the faces of the men and women who have helped make the motion picture the noble institution it is. The "pounder" will come inside to see these splendid players AT THEIR WORK. To realize the strength of this argument RECALL THAT THE RABID PICTURE POUNDER IS THE ONE WHO NEVER SEES THE PICTURES. The Thanhouser Photoframe gets him INSIDE YOUR SHOW.

From A Buyer of the Photoframe

"I think they are the best business getters that could be had," says F. E. STETLER, Empire Theatre, Reading, Pa., one of the first Photoframe purchasers.

Let It Get Business for YOU!

The Thanhouser Photoframe

consisting of portraits of the famous Thanhouser "Stock," framed in solid oak, mission finish, 33 inches in width and 43 in depth with glass and easel (6 feet high) complete.

GOES TO YOU FOR $3.50

with order. This is the prize outfit that tickled-to-death exhibitors the country over are calling

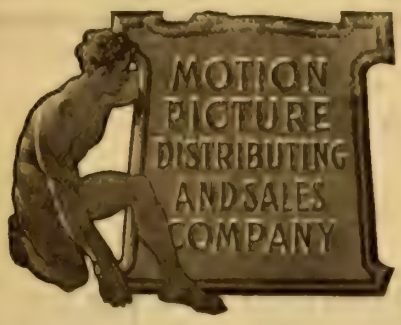
The Greatest Lobby-Display Bargain Ever Known

For System's sake address ART DEPT.

Thanhouser Company
New Rochelle, New York

2 4 U

AND GOOD ONES, TOO!



Do You Want to Beat the Trust?

If every trust exhibitor turned Independent right now the trust, having no market, except the few houses its manufacturers control, would be compelled to become Independent and offer its films upon a basis of QUALITY. There is no reason in the world why exhibitors should support the trust, pay its iniquitous royalties, or obey its directors. Be Independent and secure the finest service in the world from the following:

PROGRAM

EVERY MONDAY

AMERICAN—American Film Manufacturing Company
ECLAIR—Eclair Film Company
IMP—Independent Moving Picture Company
YANKEE—Yankee Film Company

EVERY TUESDAY

BISON—New York Motion Picture Company
POWERS—The Powers Company
THANHOUSER—Thanhouser Company

EVERY WEDNESDAY

AMBROSIO—New York Motion Picture Company
ATLAS—Atlas Film Company
CHAMPION—The Champion Film Company
NESTOR—David Horsley

EVERY THURSDAY

AMERICAN—American Film Manufacturing Company
IMP—Independent Moving Pictures Company
ITALA—New York Motion Picture Company

EVERY FRIDAY

BISON—New York Motion Picture Company
LUX—R. Prieur
SOLAX—Solax Company.
THANHOUSER—Thanhouser Company
YANKEE—Yankee Film Co.

EVERY SATURDAY

CAPITOL—Capitol Film Co.
GREAT NORTHERN—Great Northern Film Co
ITALA—New York Motion Picture Company
POWERS—The Powers Company
RELIANCE—Carlton Laboratories.

List of BUYING EXCHANGES, December 3rd, 1910

ALABAMA.

Dixie Film Co., 503 Chember of Commerce Bldg., Birmingham.

CANADA.

Applegath, L. J. & Sons, 145 Yonge St., Toronto, Ont.
Canadian Film Exchange, Calgary, Alberta.
Gaumont Company, 154 St. Catherine St., Montreal, Que.
Great Western Film Co., Kennedy Bldg., Winnipeg, Man.
Kinetograph Co. (for Canada), 41 East 21st St., New York City.

CALIFORNIA.

California Film Exchange, 1065 Mission St., San Francisco.
Miles Brothers, 790 Turk St., San Francisco.
Western Film Company, 108 East 4th St., Los Angeles.

COLORADO.

W. H. Swanson Film Exchange, 801 Railroad Bldg., Denver.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Paramount Film Exchange, 428 Ninth St., N. W., Washington.

GEORGIA.

Consolidated Film Exchange, Rhodes Bldg., Atlanta.

ILLINOIS.

Anti-Trust Film Co., 70 So. Clark St., Chicago.
Chicago Film Exchange, 40 Jackson Blvd., Chicago.
Eugene Cline, 59 Dearborn St., Chicago.
Globe Film Service, 107 E. Madison St., Chicago.
H. & H. Film Service Co., 98 Jackson Blvd., Chicago, Ill.
Laemmle Film Service, 196 Lake St., Chicago.
Standard Film Exchange, 155 E. Washington St., Chicago.

INDIANA.

Central Film Service Co., 119 N. Illinois St., Indianapolis.

KANSAS

Wichita Film and Supply Co., 122 No. Market St., Wichita.

LOUISIANA.

Dixie Film Co., 720 Maison Blanche Bldg., New Orleans.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Boston Film Rental Co., 665 Washington St., Boston.
W. E. Greene Film Exchange, 228 Tremont St., Boston.

MARYLAND.

B. & W. Film Exchange, 412 E. Baltimore St., Baltimore.
Consolidated Amusement Co., 28 W. Lexington St., Baltimore.

MINNESOTA.

Laemmle Film Service, 400 Sykes St., Minneapolis.

MICHIGAN.

Michigan Film & Supply Co., 1106 Union Trust Bldg., Detroit.

MISSOURI.

Bijou Film & Amusement Co., 1222 Grand Ave., Kansas City.
J. W. Morgan, 1310 Walnut St., Kansas City.
Swanson-Crawford Film Co., Century Bldg., St. Louis.

NEBRASKA.

Laemmle Film Service, 1517 Farnam St., Omaha.

NEW YORK STATE.

Albany Film Exchange, 418 Broadway, Albany.
Victor Film Service, 89 Church St., Buffalo.

NEW YORK CITY.

Empire Film Exchange, 150 East 14th St., City.
Exhibitors Film Exchange, 203 E 15th St., City.
Great Eastern Film Exchange, 21 East 14th St., City.
Hudson Film Exchange, 138 East 14th St., City.
Paramount Film Exchange, 61 West 14th St., City.
Peerless Film Exchange, 94 Fifth Ave., New York City.
Wm. Steiner Film Exchange, 110 Fourth Ave., City.

OHIO.

Capitol Film Service Co., 422 N. High St., Columbus, Ohio.
Cincinnati-Buckeye Film Co., 309 Arcade Bldg., Dayton.
Cincinnati-Buckeye Film Co., 315 West 4th St., Cincinnati.
Toledo Film Exchange, 319 Superior St., Toledo.
Victor Film Service, Prospect and Huron Sts., Cleveland.

OREGON.

Ind. Western Film Exchange, Swetland Bldg., Portland.

OKLAHOMA.

United Motion Picture Co., 112 Main St., Oklahoma City.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Eagle Film Exchange, 143 N. 9th St., Philadelphia.
Ind. Film Exchange, 415 Ferry St., Pittsburg.
Philadelphia Film & Projection Co., 44 N. 9th St., Philadelphia.
Philadelphia Film Exchange, 934 Arch St., Philadelphia.

TEXAS.

Texas Film Exchange, 311 Elm St., Dallas.

UTAH.

Co-operative Film Exchange, 320 Atlas Block, Salt Lake City.

WASHINGTON.

Pacific Film Exchange, Globe Bldg., Seattle.

WISCONSIN.

Western Film Exchange, 307 Enterprise Bldg., Milwaukee.

Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co. 11 E. 14th St., N. Y City

Extra "IMP" Advertisement!

Another Sensational "Scoop" for

THE "IMP" COMPANY AT ENORMOUS EXPENSE

COUNT DE

To pose in a special

Outbidding and outgeneraling another film manufacturer (not an independent one) the "Imp" Company has secured an exclusive contract with Count de Beaufort, the now famous French nobleman whose private affairs have been crowding the columns of newspapers all over the civilized world during the past three weeks.

The Count, by the time this advertisement appears, will have posed before "Imp" cameras with other performers in a drama entitled "The Romance of Count de Beaufort." The film is to be released the minute we can complete the developing, printing and shipping. It will be one of the greatest FEATURE FILMS ever produced in America. For the first time in the history of moving pictures a GENUINE BONA FIDE NOBLEMAN will appear in the leading role of a moving picture playlet.

Imagine what it means to every INDEPENDENT EXHIBITOR who gets this FEATURE FILM! Imagine what a sensation it will cause in every city, village and hamlet where there is a moving picture theatre! Imagine what a local sensation every Independent Exhibitor can create by advertising such a film in his local newspaper.

Now then, a word to every In-

HERE COMES AN "IMP" SPLIT REEL!

"A Clever Ruse"—"Faithful Max"

RELEASED DECEMBER 12th

You've been begging for split reels. Very well. Here's one that will tickle you and it will be followed by other "splits" all up to the "Imp" standard. "A clever Ruse" is a crackerjack comedy that will be interesting on every one of its 500 feet of length. "Faithful Max" has the now popular "Imp dog" as its hero. Here's the kind of a story that will appeal to every heart. When you see how the dog acts, you'll doff your hat to him and to us!

"The Poor Student"

RELEASED DECEMBER 15th

This story is made into a full reel because it deserves to be. The interest in the love affairs of a student and his sweetheart is maintained in splendid shape from start to finish. See that you get this film and also the split reel. Ding dong at your exchange until you get TWO IMPS every blessed week of your life!

Demand Two Imps Every Week

Telegraph Your ... an Early ...

INDEPENDENT MOVING
102 W. 101st Street, New York.

Extra "IMP" Announcement!

Independent M. P. Exhibitors!!!

SECURES AN EXCLUSIVE CONTRACT WITH THE BEAUFORT

"Imp" Release!

dependent Exhibitor—a word we want you to give your most serious thought:-

The "Imp" Company cannot possibly make a cent of profit on this release. The price paid to Count de Beaufort makes profit out of the question. We are spending this money fot two reasons:—First, to give Independent Exhibitors something to crow about; Second, to advertise the enterprise of the "Imp" Company. If you Independent Exhibitors want to derive the benefit of such a FEATURE FILM it is up to you to do one thing, namely:—

TELEGRAPH your exchange to book you for "Romance of Count de Beaufort" at the earliest possible moment. Don't wait to write. TELEGRAPH, and do it now! The film will cost you more than an ordinary one, because it will cost your exchange more. Don't quibble with your exchange about the extra charge. Pay it like a true sport. You are not taking any chances. You are going to get a feature film that you'll be glad to get on a return date more than once!

That's all you have to do to show us that you appreciate this attempt to give you something special.

Exchange and Get Booking

PICTURES CO. OF AMERICA
Carl Laemmle, Pres.

20 Trust Exhibitors in Twenty Days!

Transfer Their Allegiance to the Independents!

Mr. Scherer of the Bijou Film & Amusement Co., Kansas City, says:—"The number of trust exhibitors that have lately flown over to the Independent fold gives us every reason to believe that the climax of the situation is at hand and that 'Gen. Flimco' as you term him is about to lay low. We could mention 20 trust exhibitors that we have taken over in the course of 20 days."

Imp Lithographs are Praised

Mr. Scherer in the same letter says:—"Your new lithographs are indeed of fine quality. Improvements of this kind are assisting exchange men to introduce independent service in localities where it was hardly thought possible. Keep up the good work!"

Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax

The Film that Never Disappoints

RELEASES

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 2ND.

What is to be, Will be

Jack and Stanley both love Molly, belle of the fishing village. Jack leaves on a voyage and Molly, hearing of his supposed shipwreck, marries Stanley. Some years later Jack turns up, but finding Molly apparently happy he returns again to the sea.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 9TH.

Lady Betty's Strategy

Society Comedy—A Colonial Picture, Beautifully Staged and Costumed.

The hand of Lady Betty is sought by two admirers. A gypsy tells Betty that one of her lovers is false. Disguised as a Continental Officer, she becomes involved in a duel with the fortune hunting lover, but finally succeeds in extricating herself and winning her true lover's heart.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 16TH.

TWO SUITS

Fine Comedy—Splendidly Acted, This Film Is Laughable from Start to Finish.

The man has a double, and the double has a sweetheart. Both men purchase light suits, which leads to side-splitting complications with the wife and sweetheart. The plot becomes so entangled that nothing but the police court can straighten it out.

WHY

Perfect Workmanship
Steady, Beautiful Photography
Strong Stories Told in Detail
Chosen Actors

Solax

"THE BEST FILM MADE"

Looks as New on 30th Run as the Day of Release

Guaranteed Against Defects

Solax Company

Telephone 1864 Stuyvesant

147 Fourth Avenue, - - - - NEW YORK

Sold through THE SALES COMPANY, 111 E. 14th St., New York

Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax

GREAT NORTHERN

Scene from "The Poacher."

Release for Saturday, December 3rd

(SPLIT REEL)

THE BIRTHDAY PRESENT

A splendid film with a love story of Japanese interest.

The Ohami Troupe of Acrobats

A capital film showing two truly marvelous performances of the celebrated continental troupe. A beautiful artar on stage and the beautiful costumes of the performers make the last portion very attractive.

Release for Saturday, December 10th

THE POACHER

The kind of feature film that will be appreciated by every moving picture audience. Beautifully tinted scenes and splendid action throughout.

Good films are the life of the moving picture business. Therefore, put life into your business by using GREAT NORTHERN film productions.

ALL FIRST-CLASS INDEPENDENT EXCHANGES HANDLE OUR FILMS

Great Northern Film Co.

7 East 14th St., New York

Sold only through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company

EVERY FRIDAY — THE WORLD'S BEST—BAR NONE — EVERY FRIDAY

LUX FILMS

EXHIBITORS & EXCHANGES:

Look for Lux
Use Lux Weekly
Xenotime with Lux

Feature Lux
Insist on Lux
Lux brings business
Means Larger and Satisfied Audiences.

GET LUX

GET LUX

Release, Friday, Dec. 9th, 1910

WHAT IT WILL BE

Comedy—491 Feet

AND SHE CAME BACK

Comedy—452 Feet

The first half of this reel pictures in a mirthful manner this hustling age of ours and introduces several amusing skits on present day methods, culminating in a funeral by aeroplane.

The ruse of the long-suffering son-in-law to get rid of mother-in-law succeeded for a time but you will never guess in a hundred years what it was till you see the picture.

GET LUX

FREE COLORED LITHOS.

See Other Pages for Synopses and Past Releases

R. PRIEUR

10 East 15th Street Phone 3427 Stuyvesant New York City

Sold only through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company.

ON THE WAY Monte Cristo SOON HERE

EVERY TUESDAY EVERY SATURDAY

POWERS PICTURE PLAYS

Saturday Feature, December 10th

THE RIDE TO DEATH

An Indian War incident, full of love and bravery; the stirring spectacle of the Chief's daughter tied on a horse and abandoned is only one feature,

DON'T MISS IT

Tuesday "Split Reel," December 13th

A Plucky Western Kid

A breath of the early mining camp, with girl riding and child acting unparalleled.

2 on 1

The Tramp Bicyclist

Here's Charley Weston, the catch-as-catch-can and devil-may-care wonder on wheels, in his best work.

Saturday Feature, December 17th

HIS GYPSY SWEETHEART

A naturally acted comedy-drama, in which a society girl essays the role of a Gypsy maid, and not only finds an ardent lover, but real adventure to boot.

THE POWERS COMPANY

241st Street and Richardson Avenue - - New York

SALES COMPANY SOLE DISTRIBUTERS, 111 East 14th Street

Get Our Photo Frames with REAL Photographs For Lobby

ON THE WAY Monte Cristo SOON HERE

Columbia Film Co.

INDEPENDENT

ON account of changes made in the Company we will postpone the Release date of The Cattlemen's Fued to Saturday, December 24th and from that time on release weekly on Saturday.

We have withdrawn from the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company, and will therefore sell direct to the Exchanges.

Send in Your Orders Now for

THE CATTLEMEN'S FUED

A Romance of the broad prairies of the West—of herds of countless cattle, of man's greed for pastured fields, ripening to resentment until the border is flamed to fued fury. After thrilling conflict between the Ranchers, peace finally triumphs through a union of loving hearts.

The Columbia Film Co.

301 West 37th Street, NEW YORK

Eclair Films

ALWAYS

"Abreast with the Times"

Exhibitors

and

Exchangemen

HERE IS ANOTHER EXCEPTIONAL OFFER ! ! !

YOU MUST IN YOUR OWN INTERESTS AVAIL YOURSELVES OF THIS OPPORTUNITY !

To be Released December 12th

The Bowling Craze

Length 445 Feet

Our Dear Uncle From America

Length 470 Feet

Two Roaring Comics—Vigorous, Entertaining, Exciting—They Fairly Scintillate with the Finest Humor—ONE REEL!

Ask Yourselves the Question:

Do we get such an offer every week!

Order at Once

IT MEANS MONEY TO YOU

ECLAIR FILM COMPANY

NEW YORK: 31 E. 27th ST.

CHICAGO: 35 E. RANDOLPH ST

Sold only through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company.

Revier Motion Picture Company

NOT IN ANY TRUST, BIG OR LITTLE

TRADE

MARK

First Release, December 14th

LOVE'S SORROW

Length Approximately, 950 Feet

A gripping tale of the West, Real Western scenery, Real Cowboys in their natural surroundings; taken midst the hills and plains of Utah.

Regular Release Day—Wednesday

EXCHANGES

Write, wire, phone. or call for terms and conditions.
Four-color lithos. free.

A. J. CLAPHAM, Sole Selling Agent, 12 E. 15th Street, N.Y. City

Offices: Majestic Theatre Building H. REVIER, President

Salt Lake City, Utah

FACTORY: Sugar House Station

Fairness to All, Privileges to None, Correspondence Solicited

KINEMACOLOR

(URBAN-SMITH PROCESS)

The brilliantly illuminated Kinemacolor pictures are pictures no longer, but realities in the actual colors and tints of Nature.

No artificial coloring approaches their beauty.

We are still inviting negotiations for exclusive territorial rights.

The Kinemacolor Company of America

Executive Offices and Factory

ALLENTOWN - - - PENNSYLVANIA

Upon appointment, we make private demonstrations at Allentown, Pa, or at our New York City office, 516 Fith Avenue, corner 43rd Street.

Atlas Announces an Amazing Animated Anecdote

A Pictured Story of two lads who grew up, battling with Life's Perplexing Problems; one rising while the other fell, until Fate brought them together under most peculiar circumstances.

RELEASED WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 14th

BROTHERS

Heart-interest in every scene. Sentiment throughout the story. Your regular patrons want this sort of Pictures and we've mounted it elaborately, without regard for expense.

SEND FOR BULLETINS AND POSTERS. WE MAIL THEM FREE

ATLAS FILM COMPANY

10 East 15th STREET - - - NEW YORK CITY

"Yankee Doodle Keep It Up—Yankee Doodle Dandy"

THAT'S THE ENDLESS SONG OF THE SATISFIED EXHIBITOR

The White City Theatre, New Haven, Conn., says:
"I've been in business five years and have never seen anything to beat your "Women of the West."

The Empire, Reading, Pa., says:
"I take pride in exhibiting all your releases. Mail me a lithograph each week."

THAT'S WHY TWOYANKSPERWEEK BREAK RECORDS

Not perfect by any means, for the Perfect Picture has never been made, but the kind of Moving Pictures the masses approve of and spend their money to see. Besides, they're Getting Better and we're proving it by Selling More Every Week.

ON THE WAY NOW TWOMOREYANKS—LOOK OUT FOR THEM

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 9th. A Real "Holiday" in Film

Western Justice

Most Exciting and Vividly real of all the Famous Yanks of the West. The stealing of a child by an Indian while riding at break-neck speed forms but one of the story's thrilling moments. YOU GET THIS BIG FILM.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 12th
Arsene-Lupin Out-done

A Fight For Millions

A Detective Film involving living, real people of today, which juggles with suspense in a manner sure to keep you on the tip-toe of excitement. A Problem-Picture Pre-Eminent. ANOTHER ITALIAN SENSATION.

Write Today For "THE YANKEEGRAM" AND EXHIBITORS ADVANCE POSTERS

DON'T FORGET Our "Queen of the Nihilists" Advertising Contest. Send at once for photos and posters and win that $25.00. Ask your exchange for bookings today.

Yankee Film Co., 344 E. 32d St., New York

Telephone 6170 Madison Square

Write Your Order to the Sales Company

UNCLE SAM FILMS — MADE BY YANKEE FILM COMPANY NEW YORK — TRADE MARK

THE GNOME
MOTION PICTURE COMPANY

DONT FORGET

1st Release 12th December. "The Birth of the Gnomes"
2nd Release 19th December. 'Alice in Funnyland'

Write to the Gnome Motion Picture Company,
S. W. Corner Park and Tremont Avenues
The Bronx, New York.

FOR
THE JOURNAL of THE GNOMES

Moving Picture World

THE WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING COMPANY - 125 E. 23d Street, NEW YORK
(Beach Building) Telephone call, 1344 Gramercy

EDITORS: J. P. CHALMERS, THOMAS BEDDING, F. R. P. S.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Post free in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rica and the Philippine Islands.

ADVERTISING RATES: Whole page, $60.00; half page, $30.00; quarter page, $15.00; eighth page, $7.50; one inch (3¼ in. wide), $3.00; one inch (2¼ in. wide), $2.00; classified (no display), 3 cents per word.

TIME DISCOUNTS: 5% two or more insertions, 10% three months order, 15% six months, 20% twelve months.

WESTERN OFFICE: 160 Washington Street, (Post Building, Chicago). Telephone Main 3145.

Entered at the General Post Office in New York City as Second-Class Matter.

Vol. 7 DECEMBER 10, 1910 No. 24

Summary of the Week.

The Face and the Picture 1338
As It Should Be 1338
"The Best Interests of the Business" 1339
"Where It Stands and What It Stands For 1340
Exhibitors' Association of New York 1341
Picture Personalities—Miss Mildred Hutchinson 1341
Plunders or Wonders of Cinematography 1342
"Man About Town" Visits a Few of the Shows 1343
Construction and Decoration. By J. M. Bradlet 1344
Music For the Picture. By C. E. Sunn 1345
Trouble Department. By F. H. Richardson 1346
"Lux Graphicus" on Some Independent Pictures 1351
Count de Beaufort Captured by the "Imp" Company 1355
The Press and the Picture 1355
Comments on the Films 1356
Chicago Notes 1360
Motion Pictures as a Chaser 1361
In the Mississippi Valley 1362
New England Notes 1362
An Evening in the Star Theater, Boston 1362
Washington, D. C., Notes 1363
Farragut Hall, A Popular Brooklyn Theater 1364
Why? About Projection. By F. H. Richardson 1365
Poster Display 1365
Stories of Licensed Films 1366
Release Dates of Licensed Films 1369
Stories of Independent Films 1370
Release Dates of Independent Films 1374

NOTICE.

The new Western offices of the Moving Picture World, Rooms 307-309, Post building, 160 Washington street, Chicago, are now ready to receive World readers visiting Chicago. Mr. John M. Bradlet, Western representative of the World, will extend to every one a cordial welcome. They will find a complete file of manufacturers' catalogues and a bureau of information on films, theater construction, materials and supplies. They will also find desks and stationery for their correspondence, the services of a lady stenographer and a polite messenger boy to act as their guide or go their errands. We invite every exhibitor or person interested in motion pictures to make our Western office their headquarters when visiting Chicago.

HANDBOOK OF MOTION PICTURE PROJECTION
By F. H. Richardson.
Cloth bound, $1.50. Postage free.

The Independent Situation.

"Go for that patent," said a well known moving picture manufacturer to us this week. "Go for it, and keep going for it. That is the best way in which the Independent side of moving picture making can be advantaged." He meant patent reissue No. 12,037, 1902, to which we referred in our first editorial last week. We will keep our eyes on this patent and "go for it" just in the measure of what is called for in the interests of the business at any time the occasion may warrant, but the time appears to be past for patent control of the business.

Once more the air is thick with rumors of the Patents Company's intention to put this, that or the other manufacturer out of business. This one is to go to jail, that one is to be wiped out; another one will be bankrupted, etc., etc., etc. The Patents Company employ an army of agents to disseminate this kind of talk, probably intended to bluff or frighten people. The Patents Company lawyers or rather the Edison lawyers, know this as well as we do; and they also know as well as we do that the Independent moving picture business will go on expanding from month to month and from year to year. To quote their mouthpiece, the "Films Index," all these threats are mere Yankee "jokes," unworthy of serious notice.

The crux of the Independent situation is this: It does not possess that best of all assets, a few validified or adjudicated patents. The Bianchi camera might have helped matters some; but the Bianchi camera did not do that. It is, for the time being, technically under a cloud. Still the Bianchi camera may one day come into its own.

Meanwhile we have to state that the keynote of the Independent situation has been thoroughly appreciated by those who have the cause of Independent moving picture making at heart. Besides third and fourth parties in the game, there is, we are creditably informed, in process of formation a large, well capitalized corporation controlling an absolutely novel, effective, practical, non-infringing camera, which, for a consideration, will be placed at the disposal of Independent moving picture manufacturers, together with all the raw stock required for the making of negatives and positives. The raw stock is in course of manufacture; it of course goes with the camera. On the face of it, when this scheme is put before the Independent manufacturers, it should, if practical, clear the atmosphere of the legal aspect of the business and put an end to the nightmare of injunction threats.

The Face and the Picture.

The face we have in mind is, of course, that of a pretty woman. Instances will occur to the reader where pretty women's faces have made the success of individual moving pictures; have made the success of moving picture manufacturers for a time. The Moving Picture World was the earliest to recognize the influences which beauty, prettiness, or what you like to call it, had over the picture. In this respect, the picture is something like the lighter form of stage plays, which rely very much for their success upon a large proportion of the show girl element—prettiness of face and figure being the principal, if not the only asset of these ladies.

But the time has gone, we are convinced, when mere prettiness of face and figure are sufficient in the modern moving picture. Physical beauty is all very well in the picture, if it is allied with acting ability. The latter is imperative; the former is permissive. If you cannot get it first hand, you can create it; in other words, for the purpose of making these pictures, you can convert a plain actress into a very beautiful one by means of suitable make-up.

The call is undoubtedly for greater acting ability. Moving picture actresses of the first rank can be counted on the fingers; pretty moving picture actresses are fairly common. We want women on the moving picture stage who can interpret an author's or a producer's meaning and express the emotions. We want fine comedy, dramatic, if necessary, tragic actresses. We want humor, pathos and sentiment. We want women to let themselves go on the moving picture stage, just as they let themselves go on the ordinary stage.

The first requirement of the picture makers is that their leading women should be pretty, and look well on the screen. We have nothing to say against this; in fact we applaud it. But we think the film makers would do well, if they placed acting ability of a very high order of merit in the forefront of their requirements especially amongst the lady members of their cast. Not all the leading actresses of the time (we are referring to the ordinary stage), are pretty in the academic meaning of the term. Indeed some of them are very plain persons, indeed. Of course they look attractive on the stage. Broadly speaking, the public at large cares less for physical beauty, than for acting ability.

We write this article responsive as it were to evident indications in the moving picture field. The makers are disposed to serve up prettiness; the public are demanding good acting. The public demand that the picture story should hold the attention from first to last in respect of its human sentiment; therefore, it must be well acted. To our thinking, within certain limits no price can be too high for the services of really good moving picture actresses—actresses with the dramatic instinct. The film maker who pays attention to this vital point will, we think, score a greater success over the one who essays mere beauty of face and figure. So far the picture has hardly produced actresses of the first rank; but this no doubt will come in time when it is realized that the public demand is all in that direction.

As It Should Be.

In glancing through "Film Facts," the house organ issued by the American Film Manufacturing Company of Chicago, one little feature attracted our attention to which we desire to give a word of praise in this article. In mentioning the releases, the producers' names are attached. Thus we have "Regeneration" produced by Frank Beal, formerly producer for the Selig Company. Then, "Two Lucky Jims," and "A Touching Affair," produced by Sam Morris, an ex-Essanay man. Finally, there is "Vera, The Gypsy Girl," produced by Tom Ricketts, likewise an ex-Essanayite. And there is a list of these producers' previous successes. This is as it should be.

The other day when commenting upon the Imp Company's release, "The Double," we alluded to the fact that the name of the authoress was given; somewhat exceptionally, too, the lady's portrait was reproduced. We do not expect this in every case, but we think that the name of the author should be given on each film, just as is done with an ordinary play. The author stands by his success, or he falls by his failure. In film making, we think that he should be given the choice of one or the other. If he is a good man, and writes good scenarios, let him profit by his ability. The Edison Company give their authors' names in the "Kinetogram," and, we believe, on some of the films. At any rate they give the authors a chance. Which is as it should be.

Then, again, the other day we saw in a Kalem advertisement (which was not printed in our pages, though this is a minor matter) a list of the cast of the actors in a particular film. This is as it should be. It should be general. Some of the foreign film makers do this habitually; the American film makers, occasionally. We think it should be done in every case, just as is done in ordinary stage plays.

What we want to see, in fact, in this connection, is the film treated just in the same manner as the stage play is treated. We want its title and nature printed on the picture; we want to see the author's name there, and we want to see the producer's name there also. We want to see a list of the characters and the names of the actors and actresses who impersonate them. We think this information will be appreciated by the public at large. More than that we think it will accentuate the public's interests in the pictures; in those who write the plays, produce them, and act them, all of which is as it should be.

At the present time the many capable producers in the moving picture field are practically unknown to fame outside the factories in which they work. We think they should be known, and that they should be allowed to stand or fall by their work. An innovation of this kind would lead to the uplift of the producing art, the best of which is bound to assert itself on the principle of the survival of the fittest. So, too, with the authors of the scenarios or plays. So, too, with the actors and actresses. All these people have a right to success which comes from public appreciation of their work, just as in the same manner they have to accept and pocket public condemnation.

Time will inevitably bring about what we are pleading for. A year ago, the personalities of moving picture players were unknown by fame and name to millions. We think this kind of publicity should not be confined to pretty looking moving picture actors. Feminine beauty we know counts for much in the moving picture as in other walks of life; and deservedly so. But brains, ability, cleverness, genius whether allied with beauty or not should be recognized. Let us have the fullest glare of the light of publicity cast on all those associated with the moving picture. This we are convinced will make the picture more popular with the general public; it will make the profession of picture producing, picture acting and the like more popular and incidentally more remunerative. Anyhow the entire industry will benefit by the unrestrained policy of publicity which we are advocating.

"The Best Interests of the Business."

We would like to bet the reader that he would not guess the source whence we cull the phrase at the heading of this article. It is a common phrase. It is an expressive phrase. It means much. It means anything, everything in connection with the subject of moving picture progress. Consciously and unconsciously it is used by us all at times—whether we write, or whether we talk, about the moving picture business. It has passed into moving picture currency, just as the phrases, "the usual thing" and "the sentiment of the picture" have also, as it were, become established by linguistic and literary customs.

"THERE WILL BE A NOMINAL LICENSEE FEE TO BE PAID BY EACH EXHIBITOR, AND THE FUNDS THUS RAISED WILL BE USED IN PROMOTING THE BEST INTERESTS OF THE BUSINESS."

This is a sentence from the original document announcing the formation of the Patents Company, which we published in the MOVING PICTURE WORLD for December 26, 1908. The documents give a list of the officers of the company, a list of the licensees, and a few other details all amounting to this: that the various conflicting interests in the business had got together for the purposes of mutual profit. Litigation was at an end; all the patent rights were pooled; competition amongst licensees was to go on; price cutting was not to be permitted; projecion machines were to be licensed, and, we repeat in bold type, "THERE WILL BE A NOMINAL LICENSEE FEE TO BE PAID BY EACH EXHIBITOR, AND THE FUNDS THUS RAISED WILL BE USED IN PROMOTING THE BEST INTERESTS OF THE BUSINESS."

As two years have elapsed since the formation of the Patents Company, we propose to see how far this concern has carried out its pledge to use the funds raised "in promoting the best interests of the business."

The history of the Motion Picture Patents Company in the first months of 1909 can be told in a very few words. Things seen in perspective present a truer aspect than things seen close up. What applies to objects, applies also to events. Looking back at the early days of the Patents Company, it is palpable that very few people indeed, understood what the exact mission of this company was. There was a great deal of dust in the air. In fact, you could not clearly see things through the thick cloud of dust raised by the formation of this company. Nobody outside the charmed circle seemed to know what was going to happen; all was confusion, doubt, suspicion, mistrust. Now, at this reasonable distance of time, we can all of us see what was happening and what happened. We can all see how far this company has carried out its promise to use the funds exacted from the exhibitor "to promote the best interests of the business."

Like many others, we believed at the time of its formation, that the Patents Company had the best interests of the business at heart; so we gave the company the hospitality of our columns and encouraged it in its progress. But frankly now, after twenty-four months, we are free to confess that we were mistaken in the Patents Company. The only interest which it ever had at heart was its own success and the accumulation of the almighty dollar. This we shall proceed to prove.

The first thing the Patents Company did, "in promoting the best interests of the business," was to strangle and choke the F. S. A. out of existence; so that now there does not exist any real representative moving picture organization in the United States. The F. S. A. took a long time to die, but it did die, for it was doomed to die. The hurdle [illegible] of the F. S. A. was inimical to the "best interests of the business," i. e., those of the Patents Company.

When the F. S. A. was bludgeoned into helplessness, the Patents Company, through its officers, began to talk "uplift." It began to talk "moral, educational and elevating subjects." But it only talked or wrote. It did nothing. It was just throwing dust in the eyes of its contributing exhibitors who were helping it "to promote the best interests of the business." Then the Patents Company began to talk the sanitation of theaters; the restriction of the number of theaters; the elimination of competition. It began and as suddenly stopped a press campaign. It ostentatiously did a little in preventing unfair legislation. It echoed a remonstrance against unjust local authorities. Again it re-echoed public sentiment and talked censorship. It talked all these things, parrot fashion, for about four months in 1909, all for "the best interests of the business."

Then it started in to cancel licenses right and left, presumably for "the good of the business." It began to talk morality. It began to sling mud at the heads of those whose licenses were taken away, serenely oblivious of the fact that amongst its own licensees were some of the greatest film dupers in the country—men who openly boasted of the money they had made by film duping—men who, personally and morally, were neither better nor worse than many of those whom this self-constituted censor of commercial morality, the Patents Company, were turning adrift.

But this was all for "the promotion of the best interests of the business!!!"

Then, round about May, 1909, legal threats began to issue from the Patents Company's offices, and the solemn farce of existence "for the best interests of the business" was at an end. The Patents Company for the last eighteen months has simply existed as a money-making concern pure and simple. It was never anything else.

Plainly and briefly, the Patents Company has never exerted or asserted itself "to promote the best interests of the business." It has done nothing but swell its banking account, and hand out dividends to its stockholders. How much money the licensed manufacturers have paid into the Patents Company's bank we do not know—it is not our business—but it is probably many hundreds of thousands of dollars. How much of this has been used to promote "the best interests of the business," or anything except the Patents Company's money-making proclivities? Did it require all this money to get evidence for the cancellation of exchange agreements "for the good of the business?" And if these former buyers of licensed films were cut off "for the good of the business," how is it that they are permitted to make and sell pictures in direct competition with the Patents Company licensees? Is this the "protection" expected by the licensed manufacturers when they signed their agreement with the Patents Company?

Now we come to that $2 licensee fee. A rough calculation shows that since January, 1909, the exhibitors of the United States or the exchanges, or both, have paid into the coffers of the Patents Company something like a million and a half dollars. Read what the Patents Company said, in December, 1908, about this prospective one million and a half: "THERE WILL BE A NOMINAL LICENSEE FEE TO BE PAID BY EACH EXHIBITOR, AND THE FUNDS THUS RAISED WILL BE USED IN PROMOTING THE BEST INTERESTS OF THE BUSINESS."

Again we ask, how much of this million and a half dollars has been used to promote any other interest but that of the Patents Company and its stockholders? Judged then, by its failure to carry out its philanthropic professions, whatever its business success may be, what right has this Patents Company to the position it arrogates in the picture field to-day?

The moving picture exhibitors of the United States have paid this million and a half dollars. Where has the money gone? It has gone, first of all, for the upkeep of the 80 Fifth avenue offices; for the payment of salaries, and probably some dividends. The balance of it has gone into the pockets of a clique, who, all things considered, are doing very well out of patent No. 12,037, 1902. "Le'etat? C'est Moi!" said the French king. "The best interests of the business! Why, they are my interests." We may imagine the oracle at 80 Fifth avenue to be saying this.

"Where it Stands and What it Stands For."

Not for the first time do we find it necessary to apologize to the reader for the introduction of what are known as "personalities" into the editorial pages of this journal. We do not like personalities, especially those which deal with contemporary publications. As we have said over and over again, we would much rather write about the picture, and all that concerns the picture and its progress, than anything else. This is what the MOVING PICTURE WORLD exists for: what its readers like and want to read, in order that their success in their businesses may be facilitated. The reader, therefore, may take it from us that whatever is "personal" in these pages just now is forced upon us by circumstances, malice, or some other cause, and in defense of the position that we have assumed and maintained since the foundation of this paper three years ago as an independent journal uncontrolled by trade interests.

"The Film Index," in its December 3 issue, of course came out with the expected tu quoque, in reply to our article of November 26, "The Policy of This Paper." This reply was couched in the characteristically bombastic language of which the editor of that sheet seems so inexplicably proud. "The Film Index" unfortunately seems to have, during its whole career, been conducted by a race of editors whose determination appears to be to demonstrate how low the profession of an editor can sink. Or is it that our subsidized contemporary is unable to secure the services of a competent man to bolster up the deplorable cause it represents?

Most of the childish nonsense which the "Index" prints under "Casual Comment," is hardly worth answering or noticing; but we feel obliged to make an exception in favor of one quotation: "As for 'The Film Index' it makes no apologies. Everybody knows where it stands, and what it stands for—the best there is in motion pictures in America."

Great minds think alike. This is just about the kind of stuff which Streyckmans used to write in "Film Fancies," a house organ which we are glad to see has moderated its tone, since we called attention to its extravagances. Now for "The Film Index" which "makes no apologies." Everybody does NOT know where it stands and what it stands for, so we will tell the reader. "The Film Index" is a house organ, the so-called editor of which has to do exactly what he is told and write what he is told, just as his henchman, or aide, does at Chicago. They are just puppets dancing to the tune played at 80 Fifth avenue, New York City, and the servile press agents of the nine licensed manufacturers. Pages of "Casual Comment" or "Chicago Letters" will not alter this glaring fact. What, therefore, becomes of the value of what is written in this pathetic sheet? Hoff's and McQuade's opinions are of no more account than are those of H. J. Streyckmans. Streyckmans in "Film Fancies," boosts the pictures of his employers because he is paid to do this and nothing more. Hoff and McQuade, in the "Films Index," boost the Patents Co. licensees because they are paid to do this and nothing more. No intelligent man will therefore pay the smallest heed to what is said in the "Index." Everybody NOW knows where it stands and what it stands for. Everybody may not know, however, that the "Index" has a very trifling circulation and subscription list. It is generally known as a "give away." It is sent gratis, we are told, to licensed picture theaters, but it does not refuse subscriptions from those who are foolish enough to help pay for the mailing of the circular matter of the manufacturers who own it.

Now what of the policy of this elaborate circular which has the audacity to print on its title page "Leading American Exponent of the Photoplay"? Its scheme of operations is beautifully simple. Hoff beslavers the six Eastern Edison licensees. McQuade beslavers the three in Chicago. Here are the headings of the articles in the last number: "The Red Cross Seal, by Edison Players, Assist the American Red Cross and National Association"; "A Simple Rustic Tale, Delightful Subject by Gaumont"; "Good American Pathes"; "The Story of Molly Finne, Pictures by Kalem Players"; "The Law and the Man, a Dramatic Vitagraph Life Portrayal," and so on. Nothing else but the stories of the films and a few ideas appropriated from the pages of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD. Criticism never intrudes into the pages of the "Films Index." Oh, no. This house organ, to quote one of its owners, simply exists for the purpose of unqualifiedly boosting up their own pictures. And so, to quote the "Index" against itself, "From its very inception it has been a truckling, time-serving sheet; mercenary to the last degree," for it is not above accepting money from other advertisers to help defray its expenses.

That is where the "Films Index" stands, the discredited mouthpiece of monopoly; the apologist of confiscation; the blatant booster of a favored few. That is where the "Films Index" stands and what and who it stands for, but not, Bro. Hoff, not "for the best there is in motion pictures in America." Not yet.

Therefore, as the editor of the "Index" can only argue from one side of the fence without jeopardizing his position, we advise him to stick to the job of boosting his employers' wares, which he is doing very well indeed. But, as for expressing an impartial opinion or criticising the motives and views of an untrammelled newspaper, his journalistic experience should teach him to leave that to others as long as he wears a noose around his neck.

Having finally and irrevocably "placed" the cheekiest of house organs, we shall not waste further space in noticing it, or its vitiated pronouncements. Three weeks ago it challenged our attitude toward the "dominant interests" (sic) in the moving picture field; we accepted and answered the challenge; it replied in terms of bluster and bluff, and courted being told where it stood and what it stands for. As it did not know its precise position, we give this house organ the information of which it stood in need. That being done, we wash our hands of "The Film Index" and its affairs, and apologize to our readers for this explanation.

Open Meeting of Exhibitors' Association of Greater New York, Nov. 28, 1910.

Although it was a wet and disagreeable night, about three hundred exhibitors of Greater New York gathered in Joe Driscoll's Nicoland Theater at Third avenue and 161st street. The large attendance was no doubt due to the fact that Francis V. S. Oliver, the chief of the license bureau, was announced to address the meeting and the audience were certainly not disappointed, neither could Mr. Oliver have been at the rousing reception he received.

The Nicoland is one of the few theaters that is properly illuminated by electric bulbs which are shaded from the eyes of the spectators and from the screen, and that this in no way detracted from the brilliancy of the picture was demonstrated during an exhibition of the Cinephone. Mr. Oliver, in his opening remarks, paid a high tribute to the exhibitors for the willingness with which they carried out the various suggestions and requirements of the city departments. He spoke very highly of the quality of the programs and the conduct of the theaters and dwelt at some length upon the desirability of adequate illumination of the hall at all times. He pointed out that the small saving by having the lights turned off was more than offset by the hesitancy of the better elements of the public to enter dark places. He said that under the present regulations he believed that the moving picture theater was as safe as any other place where people congregate and far safer and more sanitary than a great many.

Mr. Oliver believed in a rigid censorship and advocated the appointment of a civil service board of censors to be filled by competitive examination from the ranks of practical moving picture men. Not the least important part of his address was a call to every exhibitor who was not a member of the Association to affiliate and stand together for the rights and privileges that they were justly entitled to from the city. He deprecated the fact that the rules of the various departments were so overlapping and conflicting that the exhibitor never knew where he was at. He wished to see a unified code of rules drawn up and submitted to the Board of Aldermen that could be presented in concrete form to any exhibitor —rules that would define and limit the power of the fire department, the building department or any other department, and which would make individual persecution or grafting an impossibility. He said that the only way to accomplish this was through the Association as a body, and he believed that if such a body of men as he saw before him laid their demands before the Aldermen that it would be listened to and very promptly and favorably acted upon.

Mr. Robert L. Luce, counsel for the Association, followed with a brief talk in which he urged the members to faithfully observe all the rules under which they held their licenses and the laws of the State, especially that relating to the admission of minors without guardian or parent.

Mr. F. H. Richardson, of the Moving Picture World, followed with a talk on projection. He emphasized the fact that the most important part of the whole outfit was the operating booth, yet it generally received the least attention. Men would spend thousands of dollars in building and fitting up elaborate exhibition palaces, yet economize in every way when it came to the operating room, the fountain-head upon which depended the gate receipts. Mr. Richardson's remarks were attentively listened to and received frequent applause, and when the World reporter left he was still the center of a group of exhibitors who were plying him with questions.

Altogether it was a pleasant and profitable meeting and Secretary Donegan made an excellent chairman pro tem. Mr. Driscoll provided refreshments and the only regretable feature of the evening was the untimely boosting of certain trade interests. We would suggest that when the exhibitors get together again that the time could be more profitably spent.

Picture Personalities.

Miss Mildred Hutchinson.

The leading lady of the Gnome Motion Picture Company is, it will be seen by her photograph which we reproduce elsewhere, a very young lady indeed. She began posing for moving pictures at the age of six, working for the Vitagraph Company, the Edison Company, and the Melies Company. She was also associated with what are euphemistically termed "Broadway productions"; that is to say, she appeared on the ordinary stage.

With such training and such experience the little lady, therefore, should do good work with the Gnome Company, whose immediate program is the production of moving pictures of "little people" especially designed to please children, a policy which we think will be successful. No film manufacturer that we know of is at present doing this kind of work, and when it is considered that the moving picture theater of the country could not possibly exist without the support of the child, it will be conceded that some special effort should be made to capture their suffrages. We hope to have many opportunities of making the acquaintance of Miss Mildred on the screen and we wish her the success and popularity that it is now customary to lay at the feet of moving picture stage queens.

BLUNDERS OR WONDERS OF CINEMATOGRAPHY.

Many persons love motion pictures because they believe they are free from tricks and are natural from life, yet these persons have no idea of how motion pictures are faked. We live in a wonderful century, every day bringing us a new discovery, and as now physicians can change our personal appearance, making us look younger or older, why should we criticise the manufacturers of motion pictures when they upset all the well known traditions, to show us what we think is impossible.

When a young girl cries and tells us that her obdurate papa refuses to let her marry the fellow of her choice, we naturally picture this stern father to be an old, white haired man with a grouch on his face. In "Bertie's Elopement," the manufacturer reverses these traditions; he shows us a father nearly as young and as good looking as the sweetheart of the girl. It seems that such a young father (most likely a widower, as no mother is shown to exist) should only be too pleased to see his girl married, in order to be free himself to re-marry.

"The Nine of Diamonds" shows us something still more wonderful. In 1845 (so says the sub-title), Floyd and Garland are young prospectors in the gold fields of California. In 1863 (so says the sub-title), eighteen years after their meeting in California, Garland is an old, white-haired man, weak in appearance, and he has a son of about 25 years. This son must have been reared in an improved incubator to grow to be a strong, healthy Union soldier in less than eighteen years. Another remarkable fact is that while Garland aged at least forty years in the period of eighteen years, his old companion Floyd did not age a bit, as in 1863 he is a strong, healthy soldier of the Confederate Army. It is wonderful how motion pictures can in eighteen years add forty years to your age or keep you for the same period without showing any change.

"Gratitude" offers us some other remarkable facts. When Red Bear accidentally shoots his squaw, she is in the tent. After the firing of the gun, we see the squaw walk out; she does not appear wounded, but walks to Red Bear as if to inquire what was the matter. Then she takes a notion, that she has been shot and collapses at the feet of Red Bear. This reminds me of a tale that our gardener tried to make me swallow when I was a kid. The gardener claimed that after having chopped off the head of a young chicken, the bird ran the whole length of the yard without its head, then realizing that he was a dead one, he dropped to the ground.

In "Gratitude," we do not understand the motive of the stranger. He is called a stranger on the screen, while in the synopsis the manufacturer calls him Gerald Winston, a prospector. How does he know that Morgan is away? How does he know that Mrs. Morgan is alone with the squaw? What has Morgan done to Winston to cause him to entice away Mrs. Morgan? We see no motive for the appearance of Winston, except to give to the picture the sensational touch which some manufacturers think necessary. They want a villain. Winston does not run away; he merely walks out of the picture, while Morgan and Red Bear make no attempt to capture and punish him.

The picture has been over-exposed in a bright sun, leaving big white places and making it very indistinct. When the squaw falls at the feet of Red Bear, she is as white as the ground. In fact, you see nothing and would not know that there is a woman on the ground if you had not seen her fall.

"A Tale of a Hat" shows us the remarkable power of the automobile, not as a means of quick transportation, but as a scenting machine and perhaps in the near future the police will discard the hound dogs to replace them by automobiles.

Mr. Tipton sees a woman, Mrs. Welton, enter Harry Fenton's automobile and the machine starts. Because Tipton sees on the head of Mrs. Welton, Mrs. Tipton's hat, he believes that it is his wife and decides to follow her. He goes to a garage, hires an automobile, and starts on a chase. It is wonderful to see how Tipton's automobile takes the scent, as with all the time wasted to look around, to go to a garage and have a machine ready, Fenton's automobile had time to get a lead of at least from one to three miles.

Well, we should not wonder, as motion pictures teach us that some of the participants have the faculty to see at great distances and even through all sorts of obstacles. I remember a Kalem picture, in which an engineer with his train on a curve around a mountain, could see, through the rocks, his wife on the other side of the curve, flagging the train. It is wonderful; it is perfect wireless sightseeing.

To-day I ran "The Toymaker, the Doll and the Devil"—a pretty good little story that could have produced a fair picture if the producer had not tried to make us believe that the audiences of moving picture theaters are fools, unable to discern between a dummy and a live person. It is the most ridiculous thing to show us the toymaker and his son twisting the arms and hands of the girl, as if they were working on the doll. A blind man by the contact of the soft and warm flesh of the arms of the girl would have soon realized that he was not working a dummy. The story could have been worked to bring out the desired effects, yet remain natural.

In "Blasted Hopes," Mr. Selig shows the proverbial lazy tramp. Very lazy, indeed, as during the four years announced on a sub-title, the tramp had not made an extra hole in his old pants nor another slit in his old coat, nor had he tried to patch them.

W. F. KELLY.

MOVING PICTURES FOR THE CHICAGO SCHOOLS.

Chicago, November 19.—The many 5-cent theaters and moving picture shows of Chicago will face keener competition when the school "centers" which the Board of Education has established are opened. "There will be the best class of moving pictures," said John D. Shoop, assistant superintendent of schools, last night. "Large phonographs will give out patriotic songs and other music. There will be gymnasium and singing classes, illustrated lectures, debates, and lyceum programs. The centers will be open three nights a week."

VULGARITY AND VIRTUE

If in being "Just common," the moving pictures are bad, those who are perplexed by the question of regulating them have a clear and easy solution. Make what is best just as common as what is worst. The public will certainly take the best it can get as soon as it can get it. In the meantime, lofty and disinterested virtue leaves this great invention chiefly to those who want common nickels.—St. Louis "Post-Despatch."

MOTION PICTURES TO REPLACE SERMON.

Skowhegan Pastor Will Show Life of Moses.

Skowhegan, Me., November 11.—The first time that motion pictures will be shown in any of the churches of Maine will be next Sunday evening, when Rev. Robert Morris, of the First Baptist Church, Skowhegan, will replace the regular service with such entertainment. He began last Sunday evening by showing pictures with a stereopticon machine.

He will illustrate the life of Moses with a motion picture machine, and songs that are to be sung during the services will be shown on the screen. He plans in many cases to have illustrated songs with a soloist.

The object of this new method, as expressed by Mr. Morris, is to bring to the church people who now do not come. He believes it will be for the best interests of the community. —Boston "Globe."

LOW PRICES FOR STORIES.

Great as the progress the film people have made in the matter of scenarios, there is room for still further improvement. As yet the manufacturers do not hold out sufficiently large inducements to attract the best talent.

A good story is told of two well known magazine men who were asked by a representative of some film manufacturers to write up a series of scenarios for them.

A few weeks ago these two men were sitting in a club room where they frequently met for lunch. A debonair individual approached, effusively greeting one with whom he was acquainted. Assuming the air of benefactor, the newcomer talked of "easy money." "All we want," he said, "is the bare outline of the story laid out in scenes. Six hundred words is enough. A hundred dollars is the price I am authorized to offer." The debonair individual, so the story runs, appeared to be greatly surprised that neither one of the pair grasped his hands. They merely looked at each other and grinned.

As the editor of one of the leading publications explained, a scenario that will make a full reel will also make a magazine story of eight to ten thousand words, for which a writer of good standing may receive five cents a word. If the story is good enough to be thus rated, it stands a good chance of being noticed by other editors; to bring requests for other contributions. If the story happens to make a favorable impression on the editor of a dramatic company, or a star, and is dramatized, it may bring a little fortune in royalties. The insufficiently paid hack writer is therefore relied upon for most of the moving picture ideas. The result is melancholy mediocrity.—Buffalo "Courier."

AN AFTERNOON IN NEW YORK AND AN EVENING IN BROOKLYN AMONG THE PICTURES.

Desiring a thorough insight into the current events in the actual moving picture picture world the writer selected several points as best portraying the condition of affairs generally. The Bijou in Twenty-third street, New York, presented the first claim and while a good program is presented, there were several occasions where improvement is very necessary, the most noticeable being the painful flicker and scratched film, giving a rain-like appearance to the pictures which together proved very trying to the eyes. The first picture shown, "That Popular Tune," strove to say hehl the secret of the next great handicaps to the enjoyment of the pictures in this place.

The subject shows a young man distracted by the constant repetition of the popular tune. Under all circumstances he hears it, and upon each occasion his protestations bring dire results; at the vaudeville, in the restaurant, in the office, at home, on the street, everywhere, that same tune; giving the peculiar feature of a comic picture based upon distraction.

The strong lesson this subject so strongly illustrated, is the distraction caused by the constant use of the military drum in this theater, making a strong analogy between "The Popular Tune" and "the military drum" for, if ever there was a nuisance in the moving picture show this is the one; anywhere, everywhere, in place, out of place, all the time the ear racking drum is played, always by an unsympathetic player; may he soon be as popular a nuisance as "The Popular Tune" then, perhaps, he may be relegated to oblivion. The combination of flickering pictures distressing the eyes and rolling drum distracting the ear is such that few nerves can stand, besides being so distasteful in what purports to be a first class theater.

"Jim Bridger's Indian Bride" is a recast of many similar subjects and while in itself a good picture, possesses a sameness which it is now timely to depart from. "Hank and Lank," too, are being overworked, although as "sandwich men" they did earn a meal at least Hank did—but Lank was not so successful, meeting with many troubles before his "round" was accomplished.

"Cast Into the Flames" was the most important subject, and while a good attempt in the portrayal of a Biblical incident, its shortness and incompleteness seemed to suggest that the makers had undertaken a task which proved too great for them; these sacred subjects had better be left untouched than to bear evidences of a failure to accomplish the end in view. To follow a picture of this kind on the same film with a "comic" is not only a mistake, but such exceeding bad taste that censure must really be pronounced upon those who deliberately cast together in one breath both the sublime and the ridiculous. "A Woman's Wit" is strained fun. Natural mirth bubbles, but manufactured fun drags, as the improbable does not really amuse, even if it raises a temporary laugh. A woman fearing to lose her star boarder by marriage, pays a tramp to claim relationship with him when he is alone with his fiancee, bribes a young woman to claim a previous affection, and procures a number of children to call him "papa." She does not lose her boarder, her "wit" has saved her and we have given to us a sample of the French comic—well the French usually do strain a point anyway.

"The Bum and the Bomb" is not either a pleasant or safe sounding title; it is a comic picture entirely along new lines, probably a Vitagraph experiment. It seems like an attempt to imitate the French idea of forcing circumstances to act as occasion for the presentation of a ridiculous situation and secure the laugh; this being the object in view, it succeeds whether it pleases or not. "A Modern Courtship" is misnamed; it should be "A Novel Courtship," as there is no suggestion of any modern idea at all. A young lady not wishing to marry a man liable to become bald causes her lover to deceive her by wearing a wig, after vainly trying many "hair restorers" and failing. While seated together on a couch he discovers she has false curls, she discovers he has false hair; "like for like." They sink their prejudice and are married. Truly the courtship was more novel than modern. Of the vaudeville attractions, this is not the place to mention them, save to say that they tested our eyes and ears as previously explained.

It is to be hoped that a change under new management and with such a location as "The Bijou Dream" may be able to raise the standard of moving picture work until it be the pictures are not at their present best, better music provided and musical accompaniment are easily possible and make such greater pictures appear better. Also to the man who is the reader of the picture talks going to stand on the right side of the platform?

In Brooklyn.

The [illegible] Moving Picture Company gave its patrons a splendid exhibition on Tuesday evening. This always crowded [illegible] is [illegible] and upon this occasion [illegible] a [illegible] program. The [illegible] is [illegible] and [illegible] to the pleasure of [illegible] residents of the [illegible] and [illegible] this [illegible]. The [illegible] of the exhibition is shown, first in the musical part of the [illegible] a piano [illegible] and [illegible] instrument, rendering [illegible] and [illegible] music, always suitable to the subjects presented at the moment; it is a pity [illegible] on the [illegible] drum. In the next place the illustrated [illegible] is [illegible] with care. It is [illegible] how quickly the first time of [illegible] on this occasion "Arrah Wan Glad You're Irish" proved a most acceptable [illegible] appropriately [illegible] by the new picture, "The Lad from Old Ireland," giving the evening crowd an Irish American thrill.

The new Kalem film, "The Lad from Old Ireland," is quite a success, but the makers deprive themselves of one place to be roped especially from sending to Ireland for the thorough local color, by failing to inform the audience of the various important characteristics of the picture; but for the fact that the writer is a Britisher he might have been as equally ignorant as the rest of the audience. There is no advantage in sending "thousands of dollars" in securing true scenery, even if the people are told of this expenditure it does not enlighten them as to the details; in such an audience not one reads any published synopsis. How lamentably ignorant they are of manufacturers are! An intelligent comprehension of the surroundings of this story is one of its chief advantages; the gathering of peat, "Ireland's coal," is the first interesting picture as showing one of the most important phases of Irish peasant life, the typical farm, the cabin-house, the rolling land, the peasant women, the village priest, the family hut, are all so worthy of more distinction than they receive.

The well kept railroad station, the English railway train with its side doors, the Irish jaunting car, all give an interest entirely unnoticed, therefore unappreciated, leaving the simple characteristics of the play itself to appeal to the people, making all unnecessary the unexplained yet elaborate surroundings. In the play it is pleasant to have the "lad" return to "old Ireland" even if he has prospered in America and attained some wealth by climbing the ladder of politics; it is a tribute to sterling character and worth and a credit to the "lad from Ireland."

* * *

"A Widowed Mother's Greatest Grief, or Two Waifs" is a wonderfully attractive piece. It is well known that where the fate of children are concerned everyone is interested. Seldom have we seen more intense interest in any play than the audience showed in this subject which for a wholesome drama, is one of the best we have seen. A wealthy widow who loses her only daughter is led to adopt two little girls who have strayed from the "Home" where they were under the care of "Sisters of Mercy."

Believing they could find Heaven "where their mother had gone" they wander to the wealthy widow's magnificent home which seems to them a "celestial mansion" and are duly adopted by the good lady. This is a clean subject from beginning to end, no unpleasant features, nothing ambiguous or distasteful; it was a pleasure to see it. Among the comic features "Archie's Archery," "Hawkins' Hat" and "Max on the Spree," proved really humorous without being ridiculous, so that this whole program was most acceptable and the proprietor of this place is to be commended for providing an evening of genuine moving picture entertainment.

CONSTRUCTION DECORATIONS

BY JOHN M. BRADLET.

Photograph showing effect of light and dark colored walls on the brilliancy of the screen.

Several parties called to inspect the two miniature theaters, now on exhibition at our Western Offices, 160 Washington street, Chicago, and the unanimous remark has been: "Is it possible? We had no idea that the colors of the decorations and of the walls of an auditorium could play such an important part on the projection of good pictures."

New experiments have been made in daylight with the same wonderful results. With the two miniature auditoriums placed in the same daylight room, pictures were thrown respectively on both screens and while the picture was clear on the screen of the dark colored theater, it was dull in the light colored one.

Several exhibitors have asked us to name the best colors, but this is a rather delicate question, as we have not all the same taste. Our advice is to use sombre colors and as much as possible colors with a dull finish. If you paint your walls, do not glaze them, as the light of the projection will reflect more or less on such a glossy finish and produce on the screen, the same dull effects obtained from walls painted in light colors.

We are pleased to inform our readers that within a few days the decorators will deliver to our display room of Chicago, several specimens of decorations for the walls. One will show a panel of a rich green, with borders of a green of a darker shade and the plastic ornaments finished in ebony color. Another specimen will show the panel of a rich red, borders of a darker red and the plastic ornaments finished in old ivory. Other combinations of maroon, blue, old silver, old gold, mahogany, etc., will be shown.

To avoid the glare of the paint, the interior walls can be covered with colored burlap or what is called Japanese Grass Burlap.

If the walls are to be papered, we would like to call the attention of the exhibitors to the Robert Graves Company, of 483 Fifth avenue, New York, who are making a specialty of wall papers for theaters. Perusing their catalogue, we find a number of very good suggestions for moving picture theaters. Their plate No. 18 gives a correct idea of our views on the colors to be used for interior walls and decorations, and we are pleased to see that the Robert Graves Company, who have made a grand success of their business by paying special attention to appropriate papers for the different kinds of entertainment halls, are fully sharing our views on the subject. While the Robert Graves Company advise sombre colors for a moving picture theater, they, in their plate No. 16 offer a more cheerful light combination for a regular playhouse. For persons who do not wish to spend too much money in the decoration and yet want to retain the so well known features of plastic relief ornaments, the Robert Graves Company have wall papers representing columns, arches, cornices, mouldings, ceilings, ornaments and figures, so correct in design and so well shaded, that they deceive the eye of the observer.

Without condemning local talent, we urge once more the exhibitor to look around before he closes his contracts. In every town you will find stores selling wall papers, but few carry stock or even samples of goods of special manufacture. While you will find the best and newest wall papers for parlors, bedrooms, etc., you will be at loss to find something suitable for a theater. Do not neglect the local trade, as it is to your interest to deal in your community to get the support of everyone in your new enterprise. In the case of wall papers, try to see the catalogue of the Robert Graves Company of New York or other manufacturers of wall papers specially adapted for theaters, and after making your selection, give the order to your local merchant; let him have the profit to which he as a dealer is entitled to. Same with the plastic ornaments and other details of construction.

An architect had an idea. He placed a few lights in the ceiling instead of placing them on the side walls, his idea being that three or four electric bulbs in the ceiling would light the auditorium better than the side lights. To keep the rays of the lights from reflecting on the screen, he placed the electric bulbs behind the beams of the ceiling. The arrangement had to be discarded. The exhibitor could not understand why his picture was so dull and he was all the time after his operator for a better light, also experimenting with new carbons and new devices. When I saw the electric bulbs in the ceiling, I advised the exhibitor to shut them off, and as soon as he did so, his picture increased 100 per cent. The architect had not taken into consideration that the rays of the ceiling electric bulbs, being placed so high, would diffuse too much light, whereas if they had been dropped to within a few feet of the heads of the spectators and encased in opaque shades the rays would have been deflected to the floor where they are needed and would not have interfered with the screen or the eyes of the spectators.

(To be continued.)

A CONTRAST IN JOURNALISM.

On the front page of the "Illustrated London News" last week, there appeared a splendid picture of a number of gentlemen (evidently professional men) at a moving picture exhibition of a series of subjects by Pathe.

In a recent issue of "Puck" there appeared a cartoon contrasting the most vicious idea of a moving picture with a Sunday school; a vulgar sheet of fiction worked out by an unclean mind fed only by a grain of truth and exaggerated into an impossible ridicule. What a contrast! the one sees the high and noble purposes, and illustrates them for the edification of mankind.

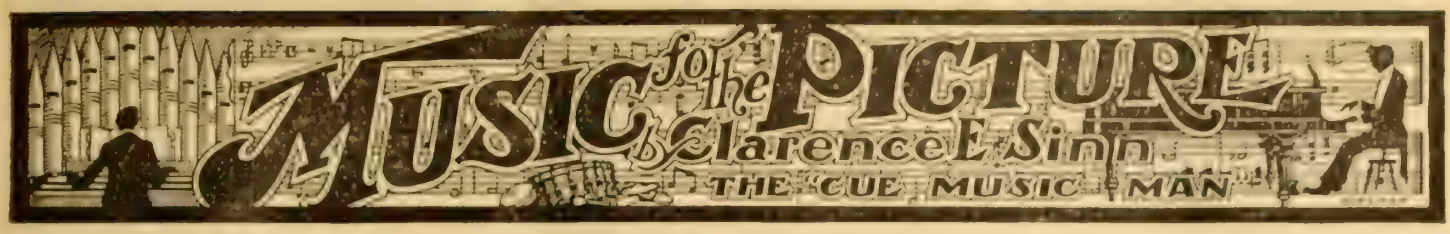
The other sees only the vice and wickedness and enlarges upon them to feed the moral scavengers and fake reformers and to arouse a spurious indignation.

"Look on this picture and on this" may aptly apply here as illustrating the true and the counterfeit. If character may be judged by the way in which people interpret that which they see, then indeed the London "News" like the Moving Picture World is evidently endeavoring to present to its readers the highest and best uses of cinematography. While "Puck" resorts to impossible depths of the false for the sake of illustrating the weakest features of a noble work.

Doubtless, if the artist of the objectionable cartoon were a reader of these pages he might secure better material upon which to stretch his artistic imagination with truthfulness and profit to those who see his productions; there is such a thing as "yellow journalism" applied to art and "Puck's" cartoon is an example.

W. H. JACKSON.

Scenic films, educational, scientific and industrial subjects, are getting to be very popular, but, to retain their supremacy, they must be faultless in details, and in photography, as the photographic beauties must make up for the absence of a plot. In comic and dramatic films, where the plot is such as to keep the audience in suspense from beginning to end, the details and photographic work are not so much considered. It is an entirely different proposition in scenic films. I have just had the film "A Trip Through the Rocky Mountains." The photographic work is weak, very faint and dull in many instances. Looking at this scenic film is like looking through the photographic album of a young amateur, you get tired and wonder how folks can waste so much film and chemicals.



A dozen different pictures may represent a dozen different methods of working up. One may have a theme or motif which is constantly recurring throughout the picture, while in the next the musical numbers follow consecutively like a string of beads; many of the sensational melodramas work out in this manner—a march, a "hurry" and a plaintive; a waltz, a plaintive and a "hurry" make up the greater part of these. There is a reason, but we will take that up later. Pathe's "Isis" is well described by a single number (like Lorraine's "Salome") running straight through and interrupted only by the dance (for which use "Zallah," by the same composer). A stop may also be made for the harp solos if this effect is imitated.

Some pictures (like "Mr. Four-Flush") may have one "fill-in" running through while each description is of a different character; again, others may require a single descriptive theme while the "fill-ins" vary. In fact, nearly every picture which displays originality is apt to present a new problem which makes it difficult if not impossible to formulate a set of rules governing all cases. As I said before, one must fix on the predominant theme of a picture and work to that. This theme always centers in the principal characters of the play. For example, suppose we have a love story laid in the time of the American Revolution and the principal character is a girl; the story is all woven around her—the things she does and the things that are done for her and because of her, form the plot of the play. Whenever she appears she is the center of attraction to the audience (and must also be so to you), and in these scenes the other characters are valuable only to the degree in which they affect her. Of course, when she is out of the picture, any character or incident holding the attention at the time is the dominant part. A General enters with a staff of officers. (Martial music.) An Indian messenger comes on, or a few Indians gather in the background. This does not necessarily mean Indian music unless they are to take an important part in the action. Otherwise they are simply accessories—pieces of stage furniture—and the General is the focal point of attention. In other words, you should not withdraw the observers' attention from the important parts of the story or direct it to the unimportant parts. But whenever an element enters which has a bearing on the story, cater to that if you can. Sound effects are often given which are directly opposite in character to the descriptive music, and yet enhance the value of the picture. The heroine is in the foreground weeping—the passing army in the background. Pathetic music for her, soft drum taps for the marching soldiers. A single soldier passing would not be of sufficient importance to direct the attention to him. A minor character, be he soldier, Chinaman, Indian, or anything else, is ignored unless he has a direct bearing on the scene.

Permit me to digress a moment to speak of Indian music. The question has been raised as to whether an Indian "tom-tom" should accompany all Indian music. I believe it should in most cases, but always softly unless otherwise called for. The instruments in a picture-show orchestra are used for twofold purposes, viz.: to provide music and furnish sound effects. When he is imitating some instrument of a like nature, the player is producing a sound effect, and his instrument should then be made accordingly conspicuous, but only then. Indian music is descriptive and the "tom-tom" adds greatly to its suggestive character, but discretion must be shown in this as in all other things. It might be left out of a love scene (Indian). In the case of the "sleeping Indian village" referred to in a previous issue it seems to me that as such a scene suggested perfect quiet, the "tom-tom" would be entirely out of keeping. Query: Was Indian music really essential to the scene? In a recent release, "His Sergeant's Stripes," Indians play an important part, yet the dominant note in the picture is the soldier's devotion to duty and centers about the dispatches he carries. Instead of accenting the Indians' presence with Indian music, work up the motive with something of a mysterious and threatening character. To exemplify further the difference between "sound effects" and descriptive music: Suppose the orchestra (or pianist) is playing pathetic or other music incidental to the scene; this is descriptive and is merely accessory to the picture. A character enters the picture, seats himself at a piano and runs his fingers over the keys, the pianist in the orchestra imitating him. This is a "sound effect" and is a part of the picture. The difference between the "accessory" and the "sound effect" can be made apparent enough if the musician uses judgment. The same thing applies to other instruments in the orchestra if there be others. And here let me digress again to say that I hope the time will soon be here when it will be the rule rather than the exception for moving picture orchestras to be composed of enough instruments to describe ordinary pictures. Imagine the "Swan Song" or "The Violin Maker of Cremona" without the violin sound effects. Nearly every battle scene (and they are common enough) needs trumpet calls. W. E. King's orchestra (Orpheum Theater, Chicago) not only has a sufficient number for ordinary effects, but the management has provided a mandolin attachment for the piano, permitting of imitations of mandolin, harp, guitar, etc., and a reed organ which is useful not only for organ effects, but gives us also the hand-organ, accordion, mouth-organ and bagpipes, besides being frequently used in pathetic and religious scenes as accessory music when no instrument appears in the picture. But to return to the subject in hand.

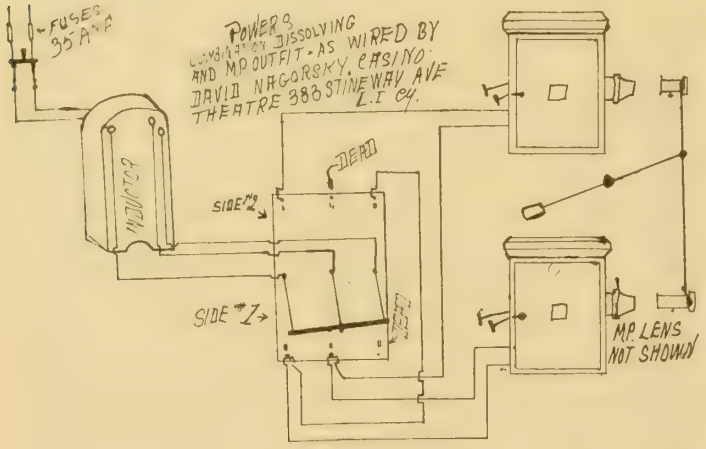
Some pictures are shown in which the scenes alternate so rapidly as to make it impractical to change music with every change of scene. For example: A mother watching her dying child in one, and the desperate father about to commit a burglary in the other. Ordinarily, the first scene suggests a plaintive and the second a pizzicato or mysterious, but here there is time to play but a few bars of each, not enough to develop the scene, and the effect of such skipping about would be absurd. Here comes the "principal motive" again. The father is turning burglar for the sake of the child. The child dominates both scenes. Therefore your pathetic runs straight through until a scene occurs which is long enough to permit a change of music if such be necessary. Again: We have a ballroom filled with dancers; you are playing a waltz. The heroine comes down to center or one side, her attitude suggestive of grief. A pathetic might seem logical at first glance. She is the dominant figure, the dancers merely accessory; but in this case they are equally prominent. She is in the ballroom, she hears the music and sees the dancers. Keep your waltz up, but subdue it, for it must partake of the nature of a "sound effect" as well as a descriptive. In this case a soft, slow waltz will answer for both. Should the dancers stop or retire, leaving her the stage center, a change in the music is permissible. Should your scene be outside of the ballroom, yet in hearing of the music, your dance music is played softly—as a "sound effect"—until the scene grows sufficient in intensity to obliterate the ballroom from the minds of the audience. Then work up to the scene.

Understand, these are only hints and must not be understood to be ironclad rules. I am using these illustrations to induce you to look for the core of the picture and not the surface alone.

Queries.

"C. M.," Brooklyn, wants to know what I mean by the expression "fill-ins." I thought the term was self-explanatory, but it seems not. I use it to indicate music of a neutral or non-commital nature, which is played between the descriptive numbers, melodramatic or otherwise. The scenic-comedy, "Mr. Four-Flush," furnishes an easy illustration. The leading character (Mr. Walton) is relating his alleged travels to his club friends. The first scene is a club room. The next an adventure in a foreign land (the story he is telling). Then back to the club room, then another foreign scene. Mr. King's orchestra opened the picture with a bright waltz which was continued to the change of scene when "Isis" (a Greek intermezzo) was used for the descriptive. Whenever the scene reverted to the club room, the same waltz was played. The cannibal scene was described by Victor Herbert's "Oriental Dance"; the gondola scene by a Venetian serenade with a guitar effect, etc. These numbers were descriptive, the waltz was only used for filling in. Ergo: A "fill-in."

Power's Inductor Connection.—David Nagorsky, New York City, writes as follows: "Permit me to submit to the Trouble Department, for the benefit of brother operators, the following: I have a 110-volt Power's inductor used on a combination dissolving and moving picture machine. This means two separate amperages of 60 and 30. On the moving picture machine I use 60 amperes between the two, as both lamps are in series. Plan furnished by the Power's Company called for two single-throw switches and stated that in order to change from moving picture to dissolver I would first have to open one switch before I could close the other. This I considered not the best practice, since one might possibly forget to open one switch before closing the other and thus get into trouble. To overcome this objection, I concluded to use a three-pole switch so that when I wish to use the moving picture lamp with 60 amperes all I have to do is to throw the switch on the side marked No. 1 on the plan, and when I wish to use both lamps together in the series for dissolving (30 amperes between the two) I throw the switch to the side marked No. 2. By this plan you do away with all unnecessary worry, confusion and splicing."



FUSES 35 AMP
POWER'S DISSOLVING AND M.P. OUTFIT - AS WIRED BY DAVID NAGORSKY, CASINO THEATRE 388 STINEWAY AVE L.I. CY.
INDUCTOR
DEAD
SIDE "2"
SIDE "1"
M.P. LENS NOT SHOWN

Referring to the above, will say that the Power's Company inform me that they have used the triple pole connection, the objection to it being that in many cases the law requires an enclosed switch, and with a triple pole switch there are objections, one of which is that the enclosing casing must be quite large. The plan, however, is ingenious and its evolution is a distinct credit to Neighbor Nagorsky.

* * *

Legal Matters.—A few days since a Brooklyn manager called up the editor of the Trouble Department and made the following inquiries: "(1) Is there any law governing the distance an airdome operating room must be away from a dwelling or other building? (2) Is there any law in contemplation obliging the audience to face the street? (3) Can a metal lined frame building be erected to cover the entire lot, or must it be narrow enough to allow passageway beside the building?"

(1) The head of the Electrical Department informs me that he knows of no law or rule requiring an airdome operating room to be any specified distance from a residence or other building. The Brooklyn Building Department says the same thing. (2) It seems that there was a movement to compel moving picture theaters to have the screen at the street end of the house so that in case of fire it would not be necessary to pass under or near the operating room to escape. I cannot discover any evidence that this was enacted in a law or even made a rule in any department. (3) The Borough of Brooklyn Building Department informs me that the law is that a theater room, other than a corner building, must have passageway at one side not less than 4 feet wide, if it seats less than 100; 4 feet 6 inches, if it seats 100 to 200, and 5 feet, if it seats as many as 300.

As I have intimated, the rulings and laws governing moving picture theaters in the City of New York are so scattered and authority is distributed among so many different departments and so much is left to the discretion of the individual inspector that it is practically impossible to give any intelligent reply to many questions similar to the above. The editor of this department is at present engaged in an effort to get things, at least to some extent, straightened out and systematized. What he will be able to accomplish remains to be seen.

* * *

Operators' Strike.—This history is a little ancient, but nevertheless interesting. On October 3 the operators of the four moving picture theaters in Beaumont, Tex., went out on a strike, and what do you think they struck for? An increase from $12 to $15 per week. The managers of the four houses were a unit in turning down the men's demand. Ye gods! What next? These Beaumont managers have theaters representing an investment of surely at least as much as $1,500 each, possibly very much more; yet they propose to depend for returns on that capital upon the performance of a $12 a week man, all of which goes to prove that the Beaumont foolkiller is on a vacation.

* * *

An Excellent General Letter.—From Los Angeles, Cal., comes the following: "It goes without saying that a man is pardoned if he be ignorant of certain things essential to his business, provided he endeavors by every possible means to eliminate such ignorance. Speaking with a friend recently concerning his trade, he made the remark that he was just beginning to ascertain and realize how much he did not know, and the fact that there were so many interesting and likewise different things to learn was the reason the vocation interested him. It might be suggested that a man's capacity be rated more or less along the following lines—I refer, of course, to his percentage of knowledge or ignorance in his vocation: First—(a) What does he know; (b) how thoroughly? Second—What is it he knows that he does not know, and what is it that he does not know that he does not know? In my earlier days I went through a primary course in an electrical school. My teacher made the remark: 'It will be a month or more before you will even begin to ask questions; the more questions you ask the better we will realize how much we will have to teach you.' If that portion of a man's anatomy in which his knowledge is stored could be examined and an inventory taken, it would certainly be a great help to the man who wishes to know all he can. One knows so much perfectly, fairly, reasonably well, and so on, graded down to ignorance. And wouldn't the inventory show up humbugs, four flushers, etc.? I have more admiration for a man who, say, proportionately speaking, knows only one-eighth or one-tenth of a subject, but is willing to learn more, than I have for the man who pretends to know it all, even though he really does know more than half the subject. The first man you will be able to teach, but the second man already 'knows it all' (?) and that settles matters—it will always be the half and no more."

I have given space to the above letter for the reason that it contains many good and valuable thoughts. The letter speaks for itself and it would be well for many operators to give it considerable study. The writer winds up by saying: "I do not care to have my name published, but if you know of anyone with a practical improvement of any kind, especially some poor but aspiring operator, tell him to send his circulars, description or sample to me and I will do what I can to promote sales in this section." The editor will cheerfully transmit any matters of that kind.

* * *

About Economizers.—Nacomas, Ill. (Chas. J. Law, manager New Palace Theater), writes about as follows: Says he has been getting a swell light through rheostats, paying $18 per month flat rate, running ten reels and six songs per night, seven nights in the week. Has recently installed a Hallberg economizer, under the representation that it will effect a large saving in current bills; says the light is no better than it was and he thinks not so good. He says that the economizer makes so much noise that it can be heard almost a block away and prevents the operator from hearing the song or much of anything else. Says he has it hooked up right, according to diagram sent with the machine. He wants to know if there is any good in a current saver, and winds up with the following: "On the dead square, Mr. Editor, do you think this economizer is the thing for me to buy?"

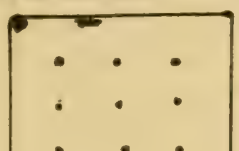
No, Friend Law, I do not. If you were getting good light on a flat rate of $18 a month running ten reels and six songs per night, it is hardly within the range of possibilities that you will effect much saving by installing an economizer or any other current saving device, always provided you can go back to that flat rate. As between the metered service working through rheostats and through a good transforming device there is no comparison, the transformer (economizer, inductor, compensare, etc.) will save you from 45 to 85 per cent of your current bills, according to voltage. As to Mr. Hallberg's economizer, it has been criticised by several for the reason that in order to change from one amperage to another it is necessary to make new wire connections; whereas with the compensare and others the amperage may be increased or decreased by merely moving a switch. The writer could not recommend in your case the purchasing of any transformer at all, so long as you can get that flat rate.

* * *

A Sunlight Projector.—Lorane, Ore. (J. M. Nighswander), writes: "I would like to mention a sunlight projection apparatus on which I did some work. I made a reflector of twelve 3 x 3-inch plate glass mirrors, all set on one solid back piece but focused so the lights of each one would strike the same spot at about 18 feet. By setting the machine in line with mirror and center of screen with the bright sunlight, intensified twelve times by mirrors 18 feet back, a bright, pure, evenly illuminated picture could be shown. The mirror frame was mounted on triple swivels to allow for movement of the sun. In front of the projection lens the light rays cross in a circular spot not over ½ inch in diameter. The picture was very sharp and not so much care was necessary to get a good focus. No condensing lens was in the combination and if the machine was moved out of the spot of light the twelve spots would strike the screen in a space of 6 x 6 feet, like this:



This ought to be enough to bring more of those gray hairs, so I will close."

On behalf of the column readers I thank you, Neighbor Nighswander, and would further request that you send a drawing and description of the way you mounted that looking glass reflector. Neighbor Nighswander also submits some excellent sketches of the triple pole, double-throw switch connection, in two of which he shows a transformer on the A. C. side instead of rheostats. The connections are properly made.

* * *

Curtain Coating and Other Things.—Jos. Miranesio, manager Pastime Theater, Beaversdale, Pa., pays some very high compliments to the Department and the Moving Picture World in general, and then proceeds as follows:

"Please tell me where I can obtain English whiting, as I wish to follow your direction for curtain coating. Regarding the ever-present music trouble, many small town exhibitors cannot find a good pianist. To them I would suggest the procuring of a Columbia B. C. phonograph, at a cost of $125. This instrument has a large volume of sound and plays cylinder records, so that classic pieces, operas, etc., are always available. It is better to have it with the four-minute attachment. If one is able to select good orchestra pieces one is sure to get music far superior to that produced by mediocre piano players, and it is always easy to have records harmonizing with the picture. Place the phonograph behind the curtain and it doubles the effect, the music seeming to come from the picture itself. Even better than this is the Victor Auxetophone, but these are very expensive instruments, though they are the best. With them we are able to have the real Pryor's, Sousa's, etc., bands. I said 'real' because if the Auxetophone is placed behind the curtain the audience will certainly imagine there must be a regular band on tap. Also with this latter instrument we may have the best singers in the world virtually present in person in our picture theater.

Friend Miranesio then gives his idea of a good program. It is too lengthy to reproduce here, but it certainly is a beauty. The Auxetophone is certainly a magnificent instrument and, in the writer's judgment, is the most available music for the small town theater, but it is very costly. The volume and body of its tone, however, is simply amazing. As to the English whiting, you should have your druggist order it from a wholesale drug house.

* * *

Acetylene Light Not Good.—Stanberry, Mo., writes as follows: "I note in a recent issue an article regarding the position of condensers. In a machine which I recently took charge of I found the concentric with the convex side to the front; or, to put it another way, both with the flat side to the light. I was surprised to find that when I changed the front condenser to its proper position it made no apparent difference. I then placed them in about every position or combination and could note but little difference in effect in the picture, but we do not put on the worst picture in the world either. We purchased one of the acetylene generators recently advertised and found that it is not good for moving pictures, and for stereopticon work not so good as the gasoline vapor mantle light. I wish to register a protest against film manufacturers putting their trade-marks on the most conspicuous part of the film. Even Pathes' little rooster mars the most sacred scenes of the greatest picture of them all, the 'Passion Play.' Such things should, in my judgment, appear in the introductory title only, in which should also be presented the names of the actors, with, possibly, their portraits."

That condenser matter has always puzzled me somewhat, Stanberry. I have found, much to my surprise, that the changing of the position of the lenses seems to have no appreciable effect in the concentration of the light. I have looked high and low for something that would give me a working idea of just how the light rays act in passing through a condensing lens, but up to date have not been very successful. As to the trade-marks, I thoroughly agree with you. The placing of the trade-mark throughout the picture may be necessary as a legal protection, but the manner in which it is done in many cases is poor taste and worse judgment, but so long as the exhibitors stand for such crude work, so long will they be obliged to.

* * *

A Puzzle.—Stillwater, Minn., writes as follows: "I notice that quite a few have been devoting their time to solving the action of light rays through lenses. I will now give them something new to puzzle over. I have been experimenting for some time on how to get more light through a three-wing shutter. According to measurements, the three-wing shutter, as it now is, cuts off a little more than 50 per cent. of the light. I have managed to evolve a shutter which will give at least 60 per cent. light to 40 per cent. black and is absolutely flickerless at any speed. Let the boys try to figure out its shape for a couple of weeks and then I will send you the diagram of it. I will give them this much to work on: It is not a three-wing, and it is a peculiar shape, but it certainly does give the results. I see that Richford, Vt.'s, wife kicks because he bakes his condensers in the oven. Let him try this: When he breaks the back condenser, take out the front one and put it in the back and your new one in the front for a few nights and then change back again, and I will guarantee he won't have any more trouble. Success to the column and let the good work go on."

I am afraid, Stillwater, there won't be much response to that shutter stunt. In fact, I am skeptical myself, and with reason. I know that about every imaginable thing in the way of a shutter has been tried and retried. When you say "absolutely flickerless at any speed" your are, I believe, advancing an impossibility. There must be one or more alternations from white to black with each picture and given a slow speed this cannot help but be visible. I should be glad, indeed, to receive the sketch of your shutter and if it is what you claim I shall be pleased as well as surprised.

* * *

An Outrage.—Pittsburg, Pa., sends in a clipping and asks what I think of the expert testimony. The clipping, in part, reads as follows under a big heading: "Death was Very Near in a Dark Nickelodeon. When the lights in the Nickelodeon, at 21 Boggs avenue, were suddenly extinguished on Monday night, October 31, several hundred persons, mostly women and children, did not know how near death they were. A moving picture reel had just been finished when darkness came. Investigation later revealed that the wires were cut at the rear of the show place. Had the wires been cut one minute, or even thirty seconds, sooner while the moving picture machine was in motion, three very combustible films would have exploded with the force of dynamite. The operator of the machine would have been burned to death in his little cage above the heads of the audience and undoubtedly a fire would have started and some of the several hundred women and children would not have escaped."

This, Pittsburg, is merely another exhibition of the utter ignorance of the average reporter who presumes to write of moving picture affairs. The jackass who wrote the above probably neither knew nor cared what damage his reckless statements might do to the owners of moving picture theaters. Such dense stupidity and ignorance might be excused in a Southern plantation negro or in a native of the Fiji Islands, but one would naturally suppose that a man connected with newspaper work would at least know that celluloid (from which the stem of his pipe is made) is not in any degree explosive.

* * *

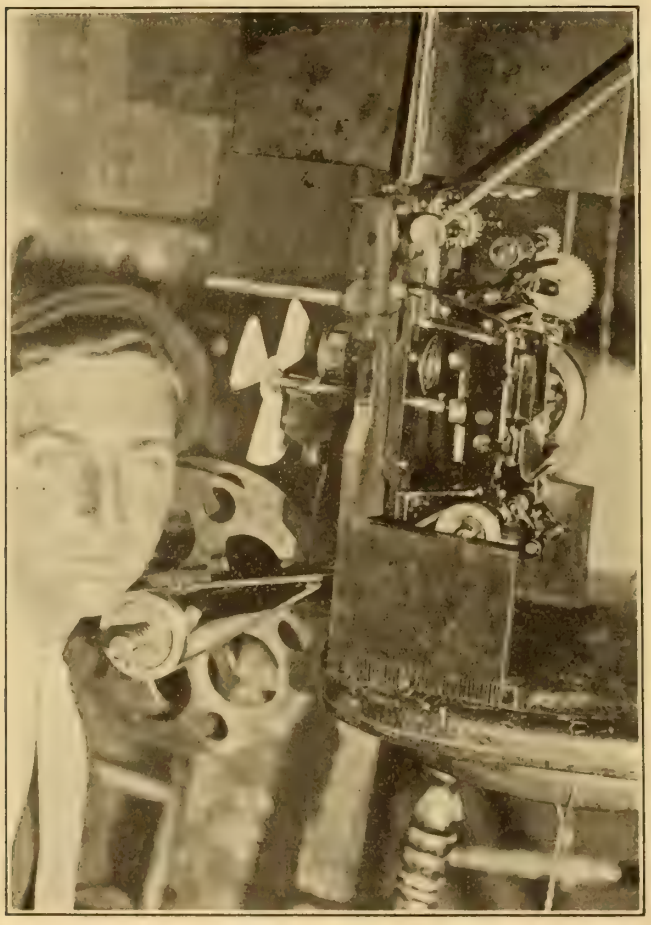
Remedy for Bad Focus.—Ramona, Okla., writes as follows: "Have noticed the troubles operators have with picture being out of focus on one side. I have blundered on a remedy which may or may not work in all cases, but has, at any rate, remedied mine. The trouble, as I find it, is that the lamp house does not set square with the projection lens. I twist the lamp house on the baseboard, moving the rear of the lamp house to the clear side of the picture."

Your idea, Ramona, amounts in effect to lining the condensing lens aperture and objective lens, the importance of which has been frequently set forth in this Department.

* * *

Film Buckling.—D. L. Van Luvens, Bakersfield, Cal., contributes the following: "In regard to film buckling between the springs, thus throwing the picture out of focus, I have been able to remedy two out of every three cases by moving the face or aperture plate back out of the intermittent sprocket towards the lamp house by putting washers behind it. This gives film that has a tendency to curl or buckle a chance to pull straight from under the spring and at the same time grip the intermittent sprocket at a circling angle. I have also found that sometimes a bent aperture plate will help matters on the Power's machine.

"You will find enclosed a picture of my Edison machine which I remodeled with a three-wing shutter in front. This shutter works as well as any three-wing shutter I ever saw and does not require much attention. I am pleased to say there are no crank turners in this town and that every theater in the city shows a first class picture. All operators working at present are union men."



I am very much obliged to you, Van Luvens, and pass the information on to our readers. The portrait is excellent and will, no doubt, enable other operators to equip their Exhibition Model machine with outside shutters as you have done. Glad indeed to hear you have good projection in Bakersfield. Wish more reports of that sort could be made.

* * *

Condenser Breakage.—Santa Paula, Cal., submits the following: "I have a remedy for condenser breakage that is, I think, the best yet. Place a piece of plain glass just back of the condenser; that is all. I havn't broken a condenser since I put it in months ago. Before that I broke one every week."

Yes, Santa Paula, but what is going to prevent the plain glass from breaking. I should think it would pop to pieces almost immediately. However, let some of the columnites experiment and report. If it works it is great.

* * *

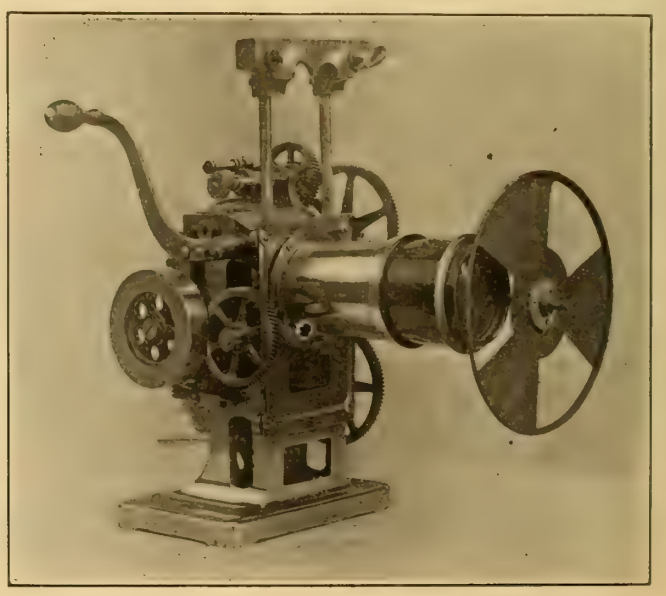
What Size Lens?—Utica, Ohio, says kind things about the column and the World in general, and then proceeds as follows: "I am one of those unfortunate manager-operators practically forced into running my own machine. I would like to get a 9 x 11 picture with a 60-foot throw, Edison No. 3-A projecting lens, condensing lenses 7½ and 6½, 14-foot ceiling, 18 inches off center. Present picture 7 feet 4 inches by 10 feet."

I do not exactly understand what you mean, Utica. If you want to know how to get a 9 x 11 picture with a lens now giving you a 10 x 7 picture, distance remaining the same, you cannot do it. You would have to move your machine further from the curtain. The practical thing is to get another lens. Multiply the throw in feet by the exact width of moving picture aperture, in fractions of an inch, and then divide the product by the width of the picture you desire. The result will be the equivalent focus (E. F.) of the required lens. Make your film exchange give you a lens of proper focus in return for yours and a small cash bonus. You should procure a copy of the Handbook, in which is found projection tables and rules for figuring lenses.

* * *

Half Size Projection Lens.—Max Stern, manager The Exhibit Theater, Columbus, Ohio, writes as follows: "I am sending you photo of our Power's No. 6 equipped with half size motion picture lens. The photograph explains how it was done better than words could possibly do. Our throw is very long; picture, small. We find that the half size lens gives very clear definition on the long throw. It is, we think, a distinct improvement over the ordinary projection lens wherever a very long focal length of projection lens is necessary."

The photograph, Neighbor Stern, is certainly a curiosity and will, we believe, be of much interest to our readers. Just how much advantage, if any, may be gained by the use of the half size lens for long focal length, I am not in position to judge. Would like to hear reports from any other operators or exhibitors who have tried this scheme.



Another Sketch. South Bend, Wash., submits a correct and very excellent sketch of the triple pole, double throw connection. I am very sorry it is too late to publish, South Bend.

* * *

Second-Hand Power's Machine Wanted.—J. K. Van, Opera House, Liberty, N. Y., wants a second hand Power's No. 5. Doesn't care what condition it is in as long as it can be repaired. Would prefer style "A," automatic fire shutter. Anybody having such a machine will do well to let the fact be known.

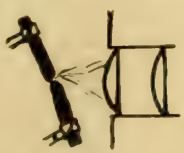
* * *

It Didn't Work.—R. M. Wheeler, Chehalis, Wash., sends us an excellent drawing of the three-pole switch connection and writes: "I baked some condensers and put them in and they both broke about five minutes apart. I never before had the front condensing lens crack. I had the back of the lamp house open and a hole in the hood also. In a recent issue you say they use from 90 to 100 amperes in Australia. Please tell some of us poor ignoramuses what make of carbon will stand 100 amperes and is good for A. C."

Personally, the editor hasn't much faith in that condenser baking proposition. Neither has he much faith in the boiling of condensers in water or oil. The only thing in which he really has faith is in intelligence in the matter of lamp house ventilation and not having the condensers cramped by a metal mount or anything else. Also—but what's the use? I have set forth my views on this subject at length several times. Will be glad to do so again if our readers care to have me,—not otherwise—since to fully cover the subject requires a good deal of space. Baking, boiling, etc., may do some good, I do not say they do not; I simply say that I haven't much faith in those schemes but submit them to our readers for experiment. This I will say, though: they cannot, I believe, do any harm (if properly done), notwithstanding the fact that Friend Wheeler's condensers broke after baking. That, I think, was merely a coincidence. As to the carbons, I am afraid you meant that "ignoramuses" as a bit of sarcasm, Neighbor Wheeler; and if you did, it is a barbless arrow. Any make of carbon will carry 100 amperes, provided it be of large enough diameter. A carbon from ¾ to 1 inch in diameter is used, but the use of 100 amperes on standard film is, in the writer's judgment, exceedingly dangerous; since the beam of light is so powerful that probably less than one-quarter of a second would be necessary to set the film on fire. Later: Baxter Morton, general manager Nicholas Power Company, just returned from Europe, tells me they used 80 to 90 amperes of current with 5/8 cored above and ½ inch below. It seems impossible, but Mr. Morton assures me it is the fact.

* * *

Try this Out and Report.—Toronto, Ont., contributes the following: "I would not be without the Moving Picture World, and its Trouble Department is the first thing I read. Should I ever come to New York I shall certainly call on its editor, being anxious to meet the man who has given me so much valuable information. Regarding the using of the front condenser with convex side in front, as described by Jackson, Mich., I do not understand how he could work his slide carrier. This is the way I have mine:



"I find by having them this way the spot is larger at aperture, the lamp house can be moved to the back of the table, giving more room, and the lamp can be set almost as far back as it will go. My picture is just as bright with the same amount of current as with the condenser set in the regular way, and I have not cracked any condensers since I made the change. Operators should be careful when baking their condensing lenses. I know of one man who put some in the oven and when he took them out found them cracked."

I shall be glad, indeed, to see you, Ontario, when you come to the Big Town. As to the condenser proposition, I should be glad to have others try this scheme and report their findings. It must be remembered, however, that while moving the lamp back from the condensers will decrease breakage, naturally it will also decrease the amount of available light, since the farther back the lamp sets, the less amount of its light will strike the 4-inch circle of the condenser and the more will be wasted on the inside of the front lamp house wall.

Setting the Geneva. Columbus, S. C., asks how tight the star should be set against the cam.

The star should be set up quite snugly against the cam, but not so tight but that the intermittent sprocket will move just a little under the pressure of your thumb, that is to say, when you put your thumb on the face of it and work it backward and forward. If the star is set up perfectly tight against the same; or, in other words, if all lost motion is eliminated when the machine is cold, when the light is turned on, through the heat generated at the spot combined with the friction of the Geneva itself, the expansion of the metals will cause the Geneva to become too tight. The one particularly important thing in taking up lost motion in the Geneva is to keep the star shaft and cam shaft absolutely parallel to each other. In other words, to turn each eccentric bushing exactly the same amount.

* * *

McCook's Light Plant.—W. H. Harmon, manager Pastime Theater, McCook, Neb., comes forward with the following: "I see you want me to give a more detailed description of my light plant. I have a Westinghouse, 110 volt, 3 k. w. dynamo and a 5 h. p. Alamo engine. Before I installed my plant my light bill ran as high as $55 a month, whereas now it averages about $12, and I get D. C. instead of A. C., which is, of course, much better for projection. I have a double arch on the front of the house, one across the sidewalk and one inside, the latter having 24 2 c. p. lamps and the one over the walk 12 2 c. p. lamps, making 36 in all outside. Inside I have 22 green 4 c. p. lamps, 4 32 c. p. lamps and 4 fans. I can operate the whole business, together with my machine lamp, at one time. If any moving picture man desires further information I shall be glad to give it.

"I want to say just a word about a picture I showed Saturday night, entitled 'The Cat Come Back,' made by the Atlas Company. It sure made a big hit and the coloring was simply grand,—a most pleasant change indeed. Give us more colored and fewer plain pictures."

Many thanks, Neighbor Harmon, both for the description of the light plant and for your offer to furnish information to those interested. I would caution those writing Neighbor Harmon, however, to enclose at least a self-addressed, stamped envelope for reply.

* * *

Automatic Fire Shutter.—Galveston, Tex., asks if it is really necessary to use an automatic fire shutter.

It is not absolutely necessary to use an automatic fire shutter, Galveston, but one should always be used, since it is an added safeguard not only to your own property, but to your audience as well. I am aware that many exhibitors think that a machine equipped with an automatic shutter is not as safe as one without, their idea being that the operator depends on the automatic and then when it fails to work gets into trouble. This contention, I believe, does not hold good. I regard the automatic fire shutter as a distinct addition to the safety of the film. If the shutter be of good design (and all standard machine shutters I know of are of good design) it will seldom or never fail to work if properly taken care of. I would, therefore, advise Galveston by all means to use the automatic fire shutter.

* * *

Carbon Resistance.—On page 1,231, November 26 issue Friend Pringle, St. Paul, Minn., advances the idea that above 40 amperes carbon resistance becomes very high, the natural conclusion from his remarks being that he thinks 40 to 45 amperes about the capacity of a 5/8 carbon, and that anything above overloads it. To satisfy myself as regards this, I caused some experiments to be made and found that with 50 amperes flowing through a closed circuit the insertion of 10 inches of 5/8 cored carbon into the circuit only reduced the current flow by about 1 ampere.

* * *

Cross Projection.—Chicago, Ill., writes as follows: "I have a Chicago stage lighting spotlight that was used on vaudeville turns when we had that kind of junk in the house. We are running all pictures and illustrated songs now and I wish to train the spotlight on the singer when the illustrated song is on. The singer stands in an alcove at the right of the screen, whereas the spotlight is on the left of the dissolver. What effect, if any, would this have? You might think I could try this without asking questions, but it is quite a job to connect up the spotlight, which has not been used for some time and besides that I have got to get a new rheostat for it. I do not care to do this unless it can be used."

The crossing of the two light rays, Chicago, will have no effect at all. The rays from your dissolver will not be affected in any way by the fact that the spotlight ray cuts through them, nor will the spotlight ray be affected by the dissolver light.

An Error.—Last week, on page 1,288, appears cut of tension equalizers. This cut appears wrong. Turn the paper so that side margin of page is below and the picture will appear as it should be, the belt leading off to the left and upward.

WHEN DOCTORS DISAGREE.

From the New York "World."

Priest Condemns Craze for Moving Pictures.

At the children's mass at St. Mary's Church of the Assumption this morning, the rector, the Rev. Francis O'Neill, took occasion to admonish the younger members of the parish against an over-indulgence of the hilarities of Hallowe'en, which Father O'Neill said, is being carried to the extreme.

He declared that the original celebration of the eve of All Saints' Day was one of devotion rather than of noise and misbehavior, such as had been witnessed last evening in many sections of the city.

Father O'Neill also emphasized the fact the moving picture craze had a tendency to demoralize the minds of the young, and pleaded with the children to select pleasures of higher ideals.

From the Elizabeth (N. J.) "Journal."

Moving Pictures to be Shown in Parish Hall.

Moving pictures and illustrated songs are to be given every Tuesday and Thursday evenings during the Winter in the parish hall of the Church of Our Lady of Good Counsel, Putnam and Ralph avenues. Rev. John B. Gorman, associate rector of the church, is the directing spirit in the movement.

A small entrance fee will be charged, but Father Gorman wishes it to be known that his picture shows are not a business proposition. He says the purpose is to present the best and latest pictures in an atmosphere that is clean, wholesome and morally elevating.

It is believed that the movement will be taken up in other parishes.

QUILL AND THE POSTER.

The genial Tom H. Quill of moving picture poster fame has been one of our visitors during the past week. Mr Quill has charge of the Poster Department of the Goes Lithographing Company, Chicago. Under his direction this company produced posters for Selig, Essanay, Kleine and others, including some of the Independent manufacturers. The Goes posters appear to be exceedingly popular with moving picture manufacturers, and Mr. Quill says that his business is very largely on the increase. We are always glad to hear of progress in the poster end of the moving picture, as we think that the better and more artistic the poster, the more readily will the public be led to patronize the theaters which are advertised by these productions.

A TIP FROM SOUTH AMERICA.

No. 5721. Kinetoscope or other moving picture machine.

—A report from an American consul in a South American country states that an American missionary in his district desires to purchase a kinetoscope or other moving picture machine, the best that can be had, to operate with calcium light. Full information is desired, including description and prices of slides showing scriptural scenes and comic pictures. Correspondence should be in English. As moving picture shows have but recently become a source of popular entertainment in that country, the consul writes this is a good opportunity to introduce American machines.—United States Consular Report.

SELIG IN FLORIDA.

The Selig Polyscope Company has established its large company in Jacksonville, Fla., for the Winter. The expedition is in charge of the producer, Mr. Persons, and is said to resemble a circus, Wild West and "rep" show combined.

According to local press reports from Jacksonville we learn that the collection of animals includes elephants, tigers, lions, and all such as are owned by a first class menagerie. All of them are of the highly trained sort, too, and are among the most costly and valuable in captivity. The horses owned by the concern are especially valuable and are trained through the most painstaking care for the work.

So far Mr. Persons has not completed every detail of the arrangements, but as fast as the animals and the men arrive they will be adjusted to their new homes. Work of making films, or getting the originals, will be started at once.

The contracts for the food for the animals and their quartering have been completed. The looking out for the actors and the men connected with the operating end of the work will be the next thing. So far it is not known what all the territory will embrace for the acting of the new themes, but it is probable that the banks of the St. Johns for a long number of miles will be used extensively.

One part of the equipment is fifteen real American Indians, who have been in the service of the Selig Company for a number of years. Besides the Everglade and Seminole Indian scenes, tropical effects will be worked in at a good advantage over this territory.

ANOTHER THIRD PARTY.

Some time ago, when we hinted at the probable formation of a "third party" in the moving picture field denying allegiance either to the Patents Company or Sales Company aspects of the business, we were ridiculed for our information. Nevertheless this "third party" is in course of formation, capital being forthcoming to start a manufacturing system in co-operation with exchanges and exhibitors. This is the National Film Company.

But there is still another Richmond in the field. We have definite information that some of the manufacturers allied with the Sales Company have either withdrawn from that combination or are intending to do so, simply by reason of the fact that they are of the opinion that they can sell more pictures outside than in it. The result is the formation of something like a fourth party, consisting of some six or eight American and foreign manufacturers. These are about to market their pictures independently of the Sales Company through other exchanges than those controlled by that company. We are informed that the Columbia Film Company, hearing of this proposition, thought it so good that they have virtually handed in their adhesion to it. The manufacturers of the new combine will not be connected with any exchange. Plenty of capital is behind the venture; orders are in hand and it is the intention of those ventilating the idea, to grant exclusive territory as may be desired. The new combine will make up a complete program of pictures.

We shall keep the reader apprised of any information regarding this new development.

FRIESE GREENE IN NEW YORK.

Mr. Friese Greene, of Brighton, England, whom many claim to be the real father of the modern moving picture, is in New York City, by the invitation of the Sales Company, who desire to have his evidence in probable or imminent litigation. Mr. Friese Greene, as we have repeatedly informed the reader, produced moving pictures on celluloid in the year 1890 in a camera of his own design, which is practically the much discussed and patent-protected Edison camera of to-day. This camera, however, if we are correctly informed, was not protected by patent in the United States of America. Mr. Friese Greene is also the inventor of a system of making moving pictures in natural colors, which has frequently been referred to in these pages.

THE AMERICAN FILM MANUFACTURING COMPANY: ITS PROGRESS, PLANS AND OUTLOOK.

We are very pleased indeed to have news of the progress of the American Film Manufacturing Company, Chicago, which is very highly spoken of as already taking a foremost position in the ranks of the Independent manufacturers. To show the company's enterprise, they have organized within three weeks of the formation of the company the largest moving picture acting company west of the Mississippi. This company is to make pictures in and around the settlement of old Santa Fe in the State of New Mexico. The Western company numbers fifteen people, all experienced actors and actresses of the Western type. Moreover the company have developing facilities wherever it travels. The pictures are being made in a picturesque section of the country. These settings should heighten the popularity of the American Film Company's pictures. Clearly the sign of "The Flying A" is destined to be very popular with moving picture audiences all over the world. We wish the American Company the utmost success in its work.

HANDBOOK OF MOTION PICTURE PROJECTION

By F. H. Richardson.

Cloth bound, $1.50. Postage free.

I will defer to a more convenient opportunity another lesson in French for the genial editor of the "Film Index." He and his half dozen employers in the moving picture game, must wait while I discharge a self-imposed liability that I noted on my blotting pad a few weeks ago. Come to think of it, it is hardly my business to point out how "The Film Index" should be edited. The "dominant interests" should have brains enough to manage this matter for themselves. The trouble of the situation is, of course, that they have too much money and not enough brains. Poor things.

* * *

"Who's Looney Now?" I asked a few weeks ago, when I pointed out that the prediction of a well-known trust magnate, that there would not be an Independent side to the film manufacturing business, has been fatally falsified. There are, as I remarked, and as everybody knows, no less than fifteen Independent manufacturers of moving picture films in this country. What is more, they are making good pictures (some of them) and they are selling them (all of them). Curious to tell they are selling them exactly in the ratio of the qualitative characteristics of the pictures. Those of us who are familiar wih the facts of the business can predicate almost to a certainty, the number of copies that an individual Independent manufacturer is selling. The predication is based wholly and solely on quality.

* * *

Just as the Independent manufacturers are numerically the superior of their competitors, all the signs of the times point to the swing of the pendulum in another direction. The direction of quality. At one time the Independent product was derided in no unmeasured terms by that eminent authority, the "Films Index." But the "Films Index" is getting wise under this head and is holding its noise. It has got quite enough to do to boost up the falling quality of the licensed product instead of worrying itself about the imaginary inferiority of the Independent product. I use the term "falling quality" with reference to the licensed product advisedly. This is true, as any intelligent student of the moving picture to-day must admit. With the single exception of the Vitagraph Company, the other trust manufacturers are "marking time." They are not advancing. Their pictures to-day are neither better nor worse than they were twelve months ago, in fact, in specific instances, people are openly saying and are writing that the licensed manufacturers are retrogressing; that is, progressing backwards, a fatal direction to take.

* * *

How stands it, qualitatively, with the Independent product? In this column last week, I paid a well-deserved tribute to the Powers product. In a recent number, something equally well deserved was said about the Imp product. But chiefest of all the names that can be conjured with in the Independent moving picture field of to-day is that of the Thanhouser Company. The Thanhouser advance in quality is so remarkable that it needs, and in fact deserves, extra special recognition at this juncture of affairs.

* * *

Looking at the beautiful representation of "Paul and Virginia" which the company put out some weeks ago, I could not help feeling that out there at New Rochelle there is an evident determination to get out all the best qualitatively from each picture that is sent out. I was perfectly astounded at the effective realization of that classic idyll, "Paul and Virginia," on the screen. I had read the book—who has not?—so that the prettiness of the story had long occupied a corner in my mind. It is so thoroughly French in sentiment. I see that one critic has animadverted on some minor defect in the piece. It is easy to be hypercritical in such matters; but nobody will deny that in "Paul and Virginia," the Thanhouser Company succeeded in getting a pictorial tone poem on the screen. At the risk of making disagreeable comparisons, I do not think any other moving picture maker could produce a qualitatively better film than this.

* * *

It is the Thanhouser mind that I admire so much in the work that is done out at New Rochelle. The mind may be E. T.'s, or it may be somebody else's, but there it is, and it counts in the pictures—pictures that are selling and that are stamping the Independent product to-day with the hall-mark of first class quality. Take the Thanhouser stories. They are never hackneyed, jejune or stupid. It argues considerable intellectual acumen to select such a subject as "Paul and Virginia." More recently we have had, as the reader can see for himself, time-honored "Rip Van Winkle," and, best of all in my opinion, that beautiful and thoroughly English story, "John Halifax, Gentleman," which was Mrs. Craik's masterpiece: a tender piece of sentiment which the Thanhouser people have successfully "got over."

* * *

The very names of the Thanhouser releases argue what it is the fashion to call the possession of splendid mentality out there at New Rochelle. The result is success. The Thanhouser people, let it be said, are making pictures and good pictures—mark the words "good pictures." Some of the other Independent manufacturers are making photographs, good, bad and indifferent, photographs which are selling in the ratio of their merits. One firm is selling 25 prints, another 40, etc., etc. Quality is telling.

* * *

Notwithstanding what is now said by latter-day recruits to the doctrine of quality—I allude, of course, to the editors of the licensed booster—the Moving Picture World was the first, the only publication devoted to this business to insist upon the value of pictorial, technical, dramatic and literary quality in the pictures released. Thanhouser has answered this call well and nobly. The result is Thanhouser pre-eminence. There is no doubt about the latter; general opinion assigns the Thanhouser a pre-eminent place amongst the Independent product. It deserves that position and this week I want to make special reference to the fact and to compliment everybody out at New Rochelle upon the splendid progress they are making. I want every reader to realize that this is a spontaneous utterance on my part. I take stock of the rise and fall of quality; individual makers progress or the reverse; in fact, every visible indication of the happenings in the moving picture field, and I am always happy when, as in the present case, it falls to me to spontaneously say nice things about anybody who is engaged in the good work of popularizing the moving picture.

"THE RIDE TO DEATH."

A Powers Surprise.

The Powers Picture Play Company of Wakefield, New York City, acquired possession of the milk-white horse that Miss Maude Adams bestrode in the famous play, "Joan of Arc," when it was presented at Harvard last year. With characteristic enterprise they are making use of this horse for pictorial purposes. It figures in the December 16 release of the company, entitled "The Ride to Death." This is an Indian drama full of movement, excitement and intensity of action. A feature of the film in our eyes was the remarkably fine photographic quality of the picture. The horse is utilized much in the manner of the horse in Lord Byron's great drama, "Mazeppa." In the former case, Mazeppa, the naughty young lover of another man's wife, is tied to the "Tartar of the Ukraine" breed and sent adrift in the Siberian wilds or some such uncomfortable place. In the Powers Ride to Death a young Indian woman is tied to the back of the Maude Adams' horse and also is sent adrift. The horse gets through the business exceedingly well, but we have an impression that the Selig horse was more violent an animal than the Powers horse. But then the Selig horse was a trust horse and the Powers horse is a kind, peaceable beast. We will not pursue the parallel. This is the kind of picture that will no doubt be very popular with the junior patrons of the moving picture theater, for as we have said, it is full of life, movement, excitement and is besides something of a departure from the usual Powers production.

COUNT DE BEAUFORT,

who has signed a contract with the "Imp" Company to appear as leading character in a special release, "The Romance of Count de Beaufort," which will be filmed within the next few days. The count declares he will make over $50,000 this year by means of his vaudeville and moving picture contracts. His object is to prove to his daddy-in-law that he can make money as well as any American. The count's dog, "Bob," will also appear.

"COUNT DE BEAUFORT NOBODY'S FOOL," SAYS CARL LAEMMLE.

"If anybody tries to tell you young Count de Beaufort is a bonehead or a fool, send him to me and I'll tell him a few things that will make his hair curl," was the characteristic remark made to the Moving Picture World by Carl Laemmle, who arrived in New York this week to remain permanently.

Mr. Laemmle has been having his own troubles securing an exclusive contract with the somewhat notorious young foreign nobleman to pose for the "Imp" Company, and—but let him tell it in his own way—

"As soon as Count de Beaufort went on the vaudeville stage to prove to his American father-in-law that he could earn his own living, my respect for him went up several pegs. Up to that time I had regarded young de Beaufort as only one of the many foreigners who had been attracted by American gold and I didn't suppose he had grit enough to strike out for himself. I took it for granted he was grafting his living off of his American daddy-in-law.

"This evidence of nerve struck me as a good sign. It also made me think that young de Beaufort would make a rattling good attraction if he would pose for a feature film for the Imp Company.

"If I thought I was going up against a soft proposition in dealing with the Count, I soon changed my mind. He came out frankly and said he was out for the coin; that he didn't expect to live off of his father-in-law; and that the highest bidder would get quickest results in any deal with him.

"I expected to meet a human being of the genus bonehead, but I soon found out that de Beaufort is in reality a good sport; that he wants to buckle down and work and that his ambition is to become a full-fledged American.

"In the course of several conversations, he made remarks that increased my respect for him. Once he said: 'Mr. Laemmle, I give you my word of honor as a man that when I married my wife I didn't know whether her father was worth ten cents or worth ten million dollars. And I didn't care a continental damn. All I wanted was her! I loved her, I love her yet and as soon as she can get out of the hospital I am going to have her. She wants me. I want her. No father-in-law, whether he is an American or anything else, can keep us apart.'

"He added that he went onto the stage because he found he could make ten times as much money per week in vaudeville as he could in any other sort of job. The man has a simply colossal confidence in himself and his ability. He isn't afraid to tackle anything. When we began to talk over the question of moving pictures, he made several suggestions which will be used in the feature film we are about to produce. Come to think of it, nearly the whole scenario of the play in which he will appear was suggested by the Count himself.

"He has a quick mind, a keen understanding, and makes a mighty good impression upon anyone he is conversing with.

"After we had signed up the contract under the terms of which he is to pose before Imp cameras next week, I told him he ought to sing some of the Music House of Laemmle songs when he appears on the New York stage. What do you think he said? He said: 'I'll sing your songs if you'll pay me a hundred dollars a week for each song I sing!' And mind you, I had just allowed him the most liberal terms imaginable in the moving picture contract.

"No, don't mistake him for a fool or another Count Boni. Young de Beaufort has the makings of a real man, a real American in him, and I'll bet dollars to doughnuts he'll make his mark in this country.

"My old friend Lubin tried to get the Count to sign a contract so that the trust theaters could have the sole benefit of this big stunt, but 'Pop' was several hours too late. By the time he had heard that the Count might be willing to pose for moving pictures, my deal with de Beaufort was closed and the arrangements all completed for the making of the pictures.

"Of course you'll grin when I tell you the Imp won't make a cent on this film, but that is the honest, straight truth of the matter. What's more, I don't care a rap. I am satisfied to have exhibitors and exchanges know that the Imp crowd is willing to go the limit to bring out feature stuff like 'The Romance of Count de Beaufort.'"

Hackensack, N. J.—D. C. Hayden has bought out the interest of his partner, G. Royal, in the Royal Theater, and is now operating it alone. As soon as his enlargement, now in process of construction, is completed, he will greatly improve his show. He is now running Independent films and within less than three months enlargement became necessary.

THE PRESS AND THE PICTURE.

We are glad to notice that the St. Louis Times is one of the first of the big metropolitan dailies to devote a column to the review of picture plays, the same as to stage drama, under the heading, "In Moving Picture World."

Let's have no moving pictures of King Frederick of Denmark and Booker T. Washington dining together. All possibility of precipitating a race war must be averted.—Toledo Blade.

Because one of his buffaloes tossed her over a fence, a woman is suing Buffalo Bill for damages. She might have made more money out of it if she had arranged to have a moving picture of herself taken while the buffalo and she were performing.—News, Bangor, Me.

The moving picture houses have been violating the law by presenting pictures of money. There is no doubt that money is a suitable subject for things in motion, but that will not satisfy the government.—Gazette, Rockford, Ill.

When the talking pictures really come, it ought to be easy to get a speaking likeness of anyone.—Springfield (Mass.) Morn. Union.

Much of the objection to immoral moving picture performances has grown out of the common use of Parisian films that know no joke but the domestic trouble.—Editorial, New York "World."

FLICKERS.

If any of our readers have not yet heard of the "Oh, Joy" Theater of Portland, Ore., we think it is high time that they did. Also the "It" Theater, Waynesboro, Pa.

A recent political meeting in Massachusetts was a failure because the opposing party rented a vacant store and gave a free moving picture show across the street from the intended rally. Can there be any further doubt about the power of moving pictures?

A license has been granted to the Franklin Amusement Company of Brooklyn, against the protest of the Rev. W. W. W. Wilson. Now just suppose you were a stutterer, or had a jag and tried to say W. W. W. Wilson. That's all.

Perhaps you folks out in Chicago, Denver, New Orleans, 'Frisco, and other places, are not aware that New York has just passed through a strike of the East Side Vaudeville Actors' Association.

They're at it again. They want to stop airships from flying on Sunday. Credit for the movement goes to the Social Service Committee of the Episcopal diocese of Long Island.

The City Council of Los Angeles, Cal., has passed an ordinance requiring that all seats in moving picture theaters shall be securely fastened to the floor. We always had an idea that Los Angeles was a law abiding town.

The Skowhegan pastor who has a new idea and is going to replace the regular Sunday evening service with a moving picture exhibition showing the life of Moses, might get even larger audiences, perhaps, if he would get some films showing experiences of the Prodigal Son instead.—Boston Globe.

You let Skowhegan alone, Boston Globe. If it wasn't for prodigal sons from towns like Skowhegan, what would Boston be?

Anybody can make films, but the trick is to make films and make money at the same time.—Bill Swanson.

Members of censorship committees are reminded that there is good pin-money to be picked up in spare moments writing crimeless scenarios.

Apparatus that brings moving picture photography within the reach of the amateur has been invented by a Parisian.—News Note.

There are some amateurs who have been getting away with it for several years without the aid of any invention.

Motion Picture Handbook Now Ready.
Price $1.50. Postage free.

NESTOR

"Rarely Equalled—Never

HAIL! HAIL!! HAIL!!!

"The Conquering Hero"

He Comes to Conquer on Wednesday, December 7, 1910

A Conquest. Length 970 Feet

BE A CONQUEROR!

ORDER NOW! GET IT!!

MR. EXHIBITOR!

You are in close touch with the public—the Judge whose decision is final, supreme and irrevocable. You are, therefore, fully and ably informed as to what is wanted and what is best in motion pictures.

You have repeatedly told us and are constantly telling us that, of all makes, Nestor gives the most uniform and the most thorough satisfaction, adding that the mere announcement of a Nestor is enough to crowd your theater. You also write us an infinity of complimentary things and best wishes, oftentimes going out of your way to do so.

Think you we are insensible to this? No! We confess to a certain feeling of pride that has quietly taken possession of us—and the perusal of all such spontaneous outbursts of praise makes us strive the harder to please you.

Films that draw the crowds are hardest to get—that's why you have to fight tooth and nail to get Nestor films.

Keep up the good fight, for it pays to get Nestor films.

Scene from "THE CONQUERING HERO"

"THE CONQUERING HERO"

is a comic topliner that will easily be the conqueror in the film tournament of the week.

Unlike the usual run of comedies, "The Conquering Hero" is an excellent blending of sense and nonsense, and the story it tells is a veritable cascade of breezy, delightful and mirth-provoking situations.

Take a peep at the synopsis on page and get an idea—however faint—of what "The Conquering Hero" does in order to conquer.

Get this film and you will wonder at the marvelously lifelike acting, staging and photography.

Act quick: Don't wait till you are finished with this paper—order now!—go after your Exchange with a will—a will to get "The Conquering Hero" and get it!

NESTOR'S MAILING LIST

is still growing—scores of names are being added to it every day—is yours already in? If not, write now to "Nestorlist 1001," 147 Fourth Ave., New York.

DAVID HORSLEY, German Savings Bank Bu

FILMS

ırpassed—Often Imitated"

NESTOR MADE BY DAVID HORSLEY FILMS

"IF IT'S A NESTOR IT'S GOOD!"

That's Why All the Reliable Exchanges Buy

NESTOR FILMS

37 Lively and Reliable Exchanges Are Here

EASY NOW!

3

At a Clip!

37

This Week!

WATCH All the Others GET ON!

LIST OF EXCHANGES:

1.	Albany Film Exchange	418 Broadway, Albany, N. Y.
2.	Anti-Trust Film Exchange	79 South Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.
3.	Applegath, L. J., & Sons	145 Yonge Street, Toronto, Ont.
4.	Bijou Film and Amusement Co.	1222 Grand Avenue, Kansas City, Mo.
5.	Boston Film Rental Co.	665 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.
6.	Buckeye Film and Projecting Co.	309 Arcade Building, Dayton, Ohio.
7.	California Film Exchange	1065 Mission Street, San Francisco, Cal.
8.	Canadian Film Exchange	Calgary, Alberta, Vancouver, B. C.
9.	Capitol Film Exchange	422 North High Street, Columbus, O.
10.	Chicago Film Exchange	48 Jackson Boulevard, Chicago, Ill.
11.	Consolidated Amusement Co.	Rhodes Building, Atlanta, Ga.
12.	Co-operative Film Exchange	320 Atlas Block, Salt Lake City, Utah.
13.	Eagle Film Exchange	143 North Ninth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
14.	Exhibitors' Film Exchange	203 East Fifteenth Street, New York City.
15.	Dixie Film Co.	503 Chamber of Commerce Bldg., Bi mingham, Ala.
16.	Great Eastern Film Exchange	21 East Fourteenth Street, New York City.
17.	W. E. Greene Film Exch. (Inc.)	28 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.
18.	H. & H. Film Service	98 Jackson Boulevard, Chicago, Ill.
19.	Independent Film Exchange	415 Ferry Street, Pittsburg, Pa.
20.	Independent Western Film Exch.	Swetland Building, Portland, Ore.
21.	Laemmle Film Service	196 Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.
22.	Laemmle Film Service	1517 Farnam Street, Omaha, Neb.
23.	Michigan Film and Supply Co.	1106 Union Trust Building, Detroit, Mich.
24.	Pacific Film Exchange	Globe Building, Seattle, Wash.
25.	Paramount Film Co.	61 West Fourteenth Street, New York City.
26.	Paramount Film Co.	428 Ninth Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.
27.	Philadelphia Film Exchange	934 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
28.	Standard Film Exchange	155 Washington Street, Chicago, Ill.
29.	Swanson-Crawford Film Co.	723-724 Century Building. St. Louis, Mo.
30.	Texas Film Exchange	311 Elm Street, Dallas, Tex.
31.	Toledo Film Exchange	319 Superior Street, Toledo, O.
32.	Victor Film Service	Prospect and Huron Streets, Cleveland, O.
33.	Western Film Company	108 E. 4th Street. Los Angeles, Cal.
34.	Western Film Exchange	307 Enterprise Building, Milwaukee, Wis.

THIS WEEK'S ADDITIONS:

35.	B. & W. Film Exchange	412 E. Baltimore St., Baltimore, Md.
36.	Empire Film Exchange	150 E. 14th St., New York City
37.	W. H. Swanson Film Exchange	301 Railroad Building, Denver, Colo.

37

Exchanges Worth While!

37

Names in the Vanguard of the Film Trade!

Nestor Films Are Distributed Through The Sales Co.

ding, 4th Avenue, and 14th Street, New York

"His New Lid" (Biograph).—A lively comedy, presenting the troubles of a man who bought a new hat. He lost it as a starter and it was picked up by a neighbor and then there was a funeral to pay for which never occurred. The owner of the hat saw no joke in it when he paid the undertaker's bill.

"Not So Bad as It Seemed" (Biograph).—A mixup caused by jealousy and what seemed to be a clandestine meeting, but afterwards was easily and satisfactorily explained.

"Romance of the Lazy K Ranch" (Lubin).—A comedy, presenting in a humorous way the difficulties of a couple forced to become engaged because prospective fortunes depended upon the ceremony. But when the complications entered into it because each one met and loved another it took a fake duel to straighten matters out and get everybody ready for the other ceremonies which probably occurred shortly after.

"The Cowboys and the Bachelor Girls" (Melies).—A humorous mixup on a Western ranch, with a party of girls, sworn to receive no attentions from men, and a group of cowboys as the principal factors in the picture. There are fake attacks by the cowboys accompanied by daring rescues, and eventually the leader herself is involved and succumbs like all the rest amid the plaudits of the crowd.

"The Merry Wives of Windsor" (Selig).—The story of Falstaff and his difficulties with Mistress Page and Mistress Ford. One of the most amusing of all Shakespeare's comedies, this picture necessarily has to confine itself to Falstaff's doings principally. A thousand feet of film is scarcely capable of containing more. In the film Falstaff is crowned with an ass' head, when the text calls for a buck's head. This can be easily remedied, but as it is presented it makes an incongruity which is like a discord in music. It jars upon the nerves of the one who is familiar with Shakespeare. Aside from this one defect, the picture is a relatively satisfactory presentation of Falstaff's doings, and markedly appreciated by the audience.

"A Daughter of the Mines" (Edison).—A love story with the scene laid about the coal mines. The superintendent's son falls in love with a miner's daughter and despite parental opposition a wedding occurs. Like all love stories this opposition only stimulates the affections of the couple, and eventually they marry.

"The Roses of the Virgin" (Kalem).—A sentimental film depicting how some roses stolen from the image of the Virgin, where they had been laid as an offering, prevented the elopement of an innocent girl with a married man and restored her to her former lover. Then together they reverently return the roses to their original place at the Virgin's feet.

"Isis" (Pathe).—An Egyptian drama representing the moon goddess in a love complication. For a goddess she engages in a very commonplace lovers' quarrel, but eventually the difficulties are all solved and everybody is satisfied, including the goddess, who reascends her pedestal and changes back to stone.

"A Dog's Instinct" (Pathe).—An exhibition in which a dog acts a prominent part, which includes some surprising rescue work. The dog is a star and his performance pleases the audience.

"A Four Footed Pest" (Vitagraph).—A story of a horse that managed to get into all sorts of mischief and create a large variety of trouble and eventually gets a great concourse of people chasing him.

"The Statue Dog" (Vitagraph).—A dog that engages in impersonations and poses which are astonishing and quite out of the ordinary run of events. Interesting and novel in its conception.

"His Mother's Thanksgiving" (Edison).—A touching Thanksgiving story, told in a way that appeals directly to the heart. It is of the different type and affects the emotions strongly. The action of the girl is surprising, but none the less attractive for that reason. The story is good. The details are worked out moderately well, but the question will arise how a young man like this can have such an elaborate home. City life is not like that. Thanksgivings are not eaten in homes of that type by young men. Further, while it is common enough for sweethearts to invite their lovers to Thanksgiving dinners in their homes, here is a distinct novelty. The young man has a home and he invites the young woman there. Perhaps the novelty justifies the innovation, but the feeling that here is something quite out of the ordinary cannot be overcome. Of course it is not impossible, but it is, to say the least, quite unusual.

"That Popular Tune" Essanay).—The audience can sympathize with this unfortunate individual whose sufferings because of the perpetual infliction of the latest popular tune send him on the way to the funny house.

"Hank and Lank, Sandwich Men" (Essanay).—Hank, in this instance, makes good and gets his meal. Lank, the poor unfortunate, gets nothing because of a scurvy trick played upon him by some boys.

"A Western Woman's Way" (Essanay).—A Western drama which contains much of life and represents in many ways a type of picture which an audience likes and watches with interest. The Essanay players perform their parts with discretion and an understanding of the requirements not possessed by all players who attempt Western roles.

"Samson's Betrayal" (Gaumont).—A pictorial representation of Delilah's betrayal of the strong man into the hands of the Philistines. The picture follows the Bible narrative with the exception of one point. The narrative says Delilah cut off the hair from Samson's head. The picture shows Delilah hiring a man to cut it off, a departure from the Scripture which has no excuse.

"Calino Travels as a Prince" (Gaumont).—A comedy representing the comedian, Calino, as valet to a prince, stealing his employer's letters of credit and traveling as the prince. The fun appears in his attempt to act the part of the prince. The many blunders he makes afford much sport.

"An Eleventh Hour Redemption" (Pathe).—A drama by the American company representing a girl with two lovers. The difference in this is that eventually both die. Some of the scenes are handsomely worked out and make attractive pictures.

"Love, Luck and Gasoline" (Vitagraph).—A comedy which has many unexpected and altogether novel thrills, with chases in gasoline motor boats and a wedding in a motor boat plunging ahead at full speed while the father and the discomfited lover are raging in the rear in a much slower boat. There is plenty of life in the picture and the audience takes to it very kindly.

"A Plain Song" (Biograph).—A pathetic picture illustrating the commandment which inculcates honor for parents. Remembering it at a critical time in her life saves a working girl from leaving her parents and going away with a strange man. The picture is a good deal of a sermon, like many other Biograph pictures. Probably it tells a story which may not often end like this. As usual the Biograph actors take it well.

"Sunshine and Shadows" (Lubin).—A melodramatic story, interesting, perhaps, but very unlikely; almost impossible. It is too true that old men are often dismissed from service when they have been faithful for years. That part of the picture will appeal with brutal force to many. But to have the old man find a large sum of money to which he is shown to be heir is too impossible to be interesting. Perhaps the audience will rejoice in his prosperity, but it would be better to have had it come some other way, the death of a relation, or some of the more conventional ways. Motion pictures are not improved by too much impossibility.

"A Border Tale" (Pathe).—A rather picturesque story of the smugglers of the border. A little love is mixed with it, but it is chiefly devoted to the rough work of the smugglers. One Gypsy girl pays the penalty of exposing the band with her life and the leader of the smugglers afterwards forfeits his own.

"A Freak" (Pathe).—A picture of an acrobat who seems to be made of rubber, so unusual are his contortions.

"THE SIGN OF THE FLYING A"

ANNOUNCING THE FIRST WESTERN RELEASE OF AMERICAN FILM

TWO LUCKY JIMS

A Western Comedy. Released Thursday, Dec. 8th

In the West—of the West—and made by our Western Stock Company in New Mexico.

Real Western—more realistic, sensational and enthrallingly interesting than any other Western films heretofore produced.

If you will ask your Exchange man to give you AMERICAN FILM you will obtain an AMERICAN WESTERN each week.

Get to your Exchange man right away—ask him to include our film on your program.

TWO REELS PER WEEK

Release Monday, Dec. 5th

"Vera, the Gypsy Girl"

An intensely interesting Drama. Close-up photography. Beautiful settings. Depicting the romantic, picturesque and passionate characteristics of Gypsy life.

GET IT

AGAIN WE SAY

Release Thursday, Dec. 8th

"TWO LUCKY JIMS"

Our first Western release. A Western Comedy.

If you want to make more money GET 'EM BOTH—but for Heaven's sake get "TWO LUCKY JIMS."

ASK YOUR EXCHANGE MAN TODAY

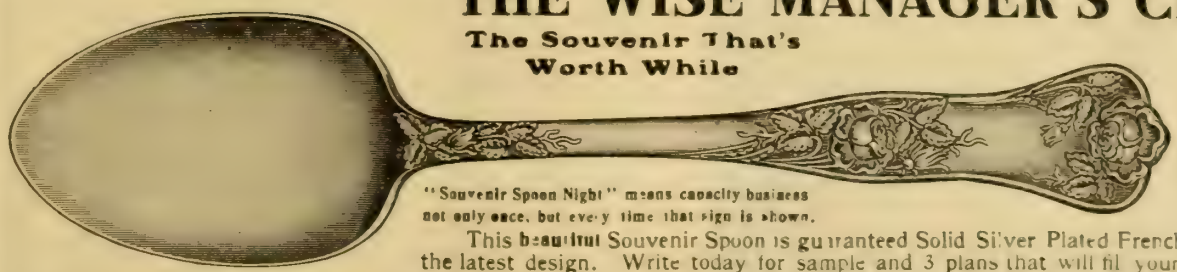
AMERICAN FILM MFG. COMPANY

BANK FLOOR, ASHLAND BLOCK, CHICAGO, ILL.

Our films sold exclusively through the Motion Picture Distribution and Sales Co.

THE WISE MANAGER'S CHOICE

The Souvenir That's Worth While



"Souvenir Spoon Night" means capacity business not only once, but every time that sign is shown.

5c. EACH

$5.00 Per Hundred

This beautiful Souvenir Spoon is guaranteed Solid Silver Plated French Gray Finish and the latest design. Write today for sample and 3 plans that will fil your house to capacity.

UNITED STATES FACTORIES CO. MANUFACTURERS 40 Dearborn Street, Chicago

"The Great Love" (Edison).—An extremely emotional picture in which Mlle. Pilar-Morin runs the gamut of human emotion, suffering everything that a human being can suffer, even to seeing her idolized son arrested as a thief. The scenes are extremely dramatic, and in instances burning with passion. The dramatic heights reached in the picture have probably never been surpassed in a silent drama and the audience watches with almost breathless interest the transposition from one degree of suffering to another. It seems as though the poor woman was called upon to bear more than weak humanity can withstand, but eventually the difficulties pass and suffering is replaced by a serenity which promises something of happiness for a hitherto oppressed soul.

"The Tie that Binds" (Essanay).—A photoplay based upon a serious subject, but brightened with entertaining comedy. It includes a clever newspaper reporter in its cast and the stunts he performs to get a story are interesting and not improbable. But after all he doesn't get the story. He gets the girl instead and the threatened separation of her parents is prevented.

"The Flat Next Door" (Gaumont).—A love story involving a widow who accepts the younger of two lovers, only to discover his cowardice in times of danger. She disposes of him and accepts the older man. To see a man undertake to hang himself and fall through the ceiling and land at the feet of his lady when she is beset with burglars is indeed a twisting of the usual run of fate which supplies good comedy features.

"Tarascon on the Rhone" (Gaumont).—A good outdoor picture of this Southern France city, little known to Americans The work is creditably done and the short journey through it is well worth while.

"A Woman's Love" (Vitagraph).—What man has sounded the depths of woman's love? Even though her former lover forgot her when he was prosperous she remembered him when he became blind and poor and sought him out, took him home and cared for him when all others forsook him. That is the interpretation put upon the depth of a woman's love by this dramatic photoplay.

"Arms and the Woman" (Edison).—A Western story of interest, with a family complication in a stage coach hold-up that astonishes a sister and a brother, and afterward only the quick wit of the driver saves the young man from arrest. However, the film ends with everybody safe and the young man started on a better way of life, while the mother and daughter are supremely thankful for the friendliness of the driver. The scenery is interesting and the acting is quite in harmony with the subject. The film interests the audience greatly.

"The Touch of a Child's Hand" (Kalem).—Insane because his child was killed, a father believes the only reparation is to kill the child of the man who accidentally killed his own. Gaining access to the house, he is ready to murder the sleeping little one, when he reaches up and touches the man's face. The touch brings back his reason and explanations follow which are satisfactory to all.

"Up the Thames to Westminster" (Kalem).—A travelogue which undoubtedly has merits. But being unfamiliar with the locality, excepting as pictured in previous films, the writer can only say that these pictures look good and seem to afford a fair impression of the locality.

"Who Is Nellie?" (Pathe).—A story of jealousy and the injustice done a man who was endeavoring to do something to please his wife. The Nellie was a horse, but the woman was so much obsessed with the idea that Nellie meant another woman that she wouldn't believe, even after the horse was presented to her, until she actually saw the check in the hands of the stableman from whom the horse was purchased. Jealousy has been the basis of a good many photoplays, some of which are stronger dramatically than this.

"Falls of the Imatra, Finland" (Pathe).—A colored travelogue which illustrates this little known rapid and fall. The mechanical work has been done with ability and discretion and the audience becomes almost enthusiastic over the different effects obtained by making the exposures from different ferent eects obtained by making the exposures from different viewpoints.

"A Trip Through Ceylon" (Urban).—A travelogue of merit, presenting a series of interesting views of this island, giving pictures of the people about their daily duties and pleasures and reproducing some of the striking scenic features encountered in a journey through the island.

"The Return at Midnight" (Urban).—A French story which might be used to illustrate graphically the difference in marriage customs between France and the United States. Even though the young man is cast off because he marries the woman of his choice, later he is taken in by the father and he and his Gypsy wife are made welcome. No dramatic strength is noted and the scenic qualities are mediocre.

"The Queen of Hearts" (Selig).—Who caused the arrest of Black? Was he a defaulter, a thief, a burglar or a murderer? The producer fails to give a reason for two gendarmes to throw down a door, as if said door had been minus a lock and hinges. This was certainly a poor piece of stagecraft. We will admit that a farmer, having no faith in banks, will carry his money on his person, but to show us a business man, the cashier of a bank, supposed to be wealthy, with a strong bank at his disposition, to carry on his person and during his honeymoon, a mortgage, is something out of the way. Business men crossing the ocean always prepare themselves; they do not carry their money with them, but a letter of credit, and they leave their valuables behind. It seems very funny that when Dick arrives at the farm house in time to see his former sweetheart depart on her honeymoon and follows them to Europe, that the producer fails to show a meeting between the two lovers. Dick is supposed to be on the same steamer, supposed to be in Monte Carlo at the same time, yet he makes no attempt to see the object of his passion. It is unreasonable to make us believe that Dick followed the newly married couple merely to look at them from a distance. It is a shame to represent the costly palace of Monte Carlo with the common windows that we find in our factories and to show us for the roulette, one of those cheap fortune wheels used in county fairs. Illustrations of Monte Carlo would also have shown to the producer, that the gamblers at the palace by the sea are comfortably seated around the tables and not standing up.

INDEPENDENT.

"Nothing but Money" (American).—A comedy which is fairly described in its title and which keeps an audience in good humor throughout its length. Probably most who see the film would execute equally funny stunts under the same circumstances.

"A Big Joke" (American).—A picture that will make them laugh as it did in New York the day it was released. The audience will watch with interest what the big joke is and what occurs as it works out.

"Forgiven" (Defender).—A drama containing much of unusual interest and which appeals to the emotions. The situations are well planned and well worked out and the audience seemed pleased with the way it was presented.

"The Country Boarder" (Imp).—A story like many of the same sort which have been told before. The suave city man makes love to the unsophisticated country girl, but this is different in that the young man's perfidy is discovered before the innocent girl is harmed. The young man who plays fast and loose with the affections of two girls loses both and is kicked off the place. To say that his discomfiture pleases the audience is stating it mildly. Usually they applaud vigorously. The young countryman got his sweetheart back, and that pleases them more. A good film for any program.

"In Friendship's Name" (Lux).—A dramatic love story representing one man heroically overcoming his own affection and assisting another to secure the girl he loves himself. The principal interest centers in the self-forgetfulness of the man whom everyone sought when in trouble. The film tells the story in a straightforward way and with more zest than some love stories are told. The characters all perform their parts to good advantage and the photographer has made the pictures unusually clear and satisfactory.

"One Touch of Nature" (Solax).—A love story based upon the separation of a couple of lovers by the appearance of a city man, whom the country girl marries and is abused until he strikes her and leaves her for dead. Long years after, in searching for the child the husband took away, she finds the child in the care of her former lover. Thus the story ends with something besides heartache and sorrow apparent for all.

"The Wild Flower and the Rose" (Thanhouser).—A love story built up around the invention of a new type of aeroplane. The machine flies and the inventor gets the girl of his choice. The picture has, therefore, a pleasant ending.

"Thou Shalt Not Kill" (Powers).—A story based upon a feud. In some degree the story of a feud is hackneyed, but this one has incorporated in it an oath not to kill. The situation well worth seeing, as the old man refrains from when after killing a man the murderer flies to the father of the dead man for protection, which is readily granted until the murderer's character is discovered. Then is a dramatic situation which is presented later can be imagined, perhaps, killing because of his oath. It is impossible to adequately describe such a picture. Its power is too subtle and it depends too much upon actually seeing the film to be made plain by description. Suffice it to say that the picture held the close attention of the audience throughout. It is an unusually strong picture.

"Absent Minded Arthur" (Powers).—A roaring farce graphically depicting the experiences of a young man who was so absent minded he forgot to put on his trousers when going to call on his girl. That is about the limit of absent mindedness and may be considered the climax of this film. The audience laughs from the time it appears on the screen until the close, and surely if a New York audience becomes enthusiastic the same thing will hold good elsewhere.

"A Thanksgiving Surprise" (Thanhouser).—To be plunged from affluence to poverty unexpectedly is a bitter experience, yet the young man here depicted stands the test, as an interested audience can easily see. And then comes another surprise when he is as quickly raised from poverty to affluence. The contrasts and the delineation of human nature constitute the principal points of interest, and they are worked out with full appreciation of the dramatic varieties. The implied false friends have a good many counterparts and the way they are depicted here is too graphic to be misunderstood.

"Stage Coach Tom" (Columbia).—A love story told around a Western ranch, with an objecting father and a favored suitor to disturb the love dream of the couple. Tom loses his situation through the machinations of the villain. After a runaway marriage the couple try to secure the father's blessing, but relentless to the end, he drives them away. Eventually, however, Tom saves his father-in-law from a robbery by rustlers. Then all is forgiven and probably the young people dwell happily afterward. The film will please because it tells the story in a plain, straightforward way, without fuss and complications that obscure the meaning. The actors have performed their parts sympathetically and the mechanical reproduction is quite satisfactory. The audience enjoys it because of the action and the easily understood plot.

"Kean; or the Prince and the Actor" (Great Northern).—A sumptuous production of a sensational episode in the life of Kean, the famous actor, who once thrilled the audiences of Drury Lane with his genius. The representation of the inside of this famous theater has a historic value which should not be overlooked in considering the value of this film. The love story in which Kean and the prince share is plainly told, and there is a dramatic scene when Kean denounces the prince from the stage. Happily, however, the differences are patched up and the actor is brought to see that another woman is the better for him. The acting is to be commended. The climaxes are worked up with unusual appreciation of the dramatic requirements, and the attention is held closely by the sympathetic interpretation of all the moods represented. No manager will make a mistake if he includes this in his program.

"A Windy Day" (Itala).—A comedy which represents very graphically some of the results of a high wind. The audience will find in this picture a certain antidote for those uncomfortable sensations known as the blues.

"The Woman Hater" (Powers).—He clearly thought he was a woman hater, but the story tells in an intense way how a woman helped the man to read his own heart, and what came of it. It is a Western tale, but told as the Powers actors tell it, there is more human interest displayed than is sometimes developed in these films, with the result that an audience follows the film with the closest attention. A good Western drama, depicting the life there as it is popularly supposed to be, is still popular, and this one deserves to rank in the popular list. The Powers people are to be congratulated upon their success in producing such an excellent piece of work.

"The Wreck" (Eclair).—A thrilling story of pirates, with a wreck and a buccaneer fight to supply spice. The actors perform the parts of the buccaneers acceptably and the great Morgan bears his dignity with an air that would become a great man. He assumes that it is quite as great an honor to be the terror of the seas as it is to be great in any other direction, and he bears himself in accordance with that belief. This film is unusual in that a handsome girl is rescued and none of the band fall in love with her. They send her and the old man, her companion, on their way homeward, with no intimation of a love story, a boon which cannot fail to please any audience. Any departure from the well-worn pathway is to be commended, and this one is desirable.

"A Difficult Capture" (Eclair).—To have a fairy assist policemen in making captures is a novelty which will appeal to almost any audience. Then, too, the aeroplane chases the balloon, which is another interesting phase. The officers make their capture and receive due commendation. It is a semi-humorous production with no claim to dramatic interest.

"True Western Honor" (Eagle).—A drama of more than usual interest, well arranged and well worked out.

"The Revolving Door" (Imp).—A lively comedy based upon a mix-up in two pending weddings caused by the principals unwittingly following each other around a revolving door, each one meeting the other and not his or her fiance each time. Enlisting the services of the clergyman, they get him into a lot of trouble with his wife because she finds him holding two young women. But ultimately the difficulties are settled and the weddings proceed. The principal novelty is the recognition that a revolving door affords a comedy opportunity worth accepting and the Imp players have done well enough with it to win applause from the audience.

"The Heart of an Actress" (Yankee).—A dramatic presentation of the way an actress opened the eyes of a deluded man and taught him that even actresses have hearts that can feel for others. Perhaps one of the principal points of interest in the picture is the fact that the story represents what is almost a novel phase of human nature. It is not often that an actress assumes to teach an admirer his home duties, but so dramatically is this accomplished that it adds to the strength of the picture and forms a distinct feature in its development. The actors have performed their parts with discretion, instilling into the film an interest in the human phases of character quite apart from the other attractive features. The last scenes, presenting the two happy families form a pleasant closing. The picture possesses many points that make it distinctive.

"Who Wins the Widow?" (Powers).—A comedy which contains a number of unexpected and interesting situations. For example, one man supposes he kills another in a duel and returns to his sweetheart to discover her being married to the man he supposed he killed. Then the widow takes a hand in the surprise business and marries the other man. The combination of surprises affords a period of pleasure. The audience is kept busy wondering what will happen next in this series of strange denouements.

"Wanted: A Baby" (Powers).—The rich uncle announces he is coming to see the young couple's son. Inasmuch as they haven't any son it is essential that they obtain one, and that quick. Accordingly they borrow one, but when it arrives the horror can be imagined when it is discovered that it is a colored baby. That difficulty is straightened out and the young people succeed in securing a white baby. Then things go smoothly until the real father of the child appears and demands its return. That produces a complication which is left to the imagination. The play is lively and the characters perform their parts with a good deal of discretion. The consternation of the young people is well simulated and the manager who puts this on the screen can feel assured of hearty laughs from his audience.

"Value Beyond Price" (Thanhouser).—To put a baby in pawn is a novelty which will interest from the beginning. What leads up to this act is the usual representation of the difficulties which beset the poor. It is an old, though it must be confessed, an ever new story and one that appeals to very many people who see motion pictures. Then when the father appears and redeems the child there is grief in the old pawnbroker's heart. He dislikes to see her go; but when the reunited father and daughter decide to include him in the family the happiness is complete. Perhaps it is well that the poor mother is apparently forgotten. She is at rest and her sorrows are over, is the inference drawn from the picture. While the play attracts because of this novelty, it still has dramatic interest, dramatic because it tells a life story in a simple way. Such stories are the most interesting since there are numerous persons who see it that can duplicate it either in their own experience or the experience of some of their friends or acquaintances.

"Saved by a Vision" (Atlas).—This film is somewhat melodramatic, but none the less interesting. The acting in that portion represented in the vision is strong and the girl's frenzy is one of the best pieces of work the Atlas actors have yet performed. There is a reality to the picture that holds the audience fast until the denouement. There is a suppressed sigh of relief when they discover that it is, after all, only a vision. Then when the rich suitor appears and is promptly sent away by the girl and the former lover is accepted the audience is ready to applaud. She escapes from unpleasant consequences through this vivid vision. It is a picture which will be popular and will linger long in the memory.

"The Indian Land Grab" (Champion).—The political machinations portrayed in this film are unhappily too prevalent, but whether that portion representing the white girl following the Indian to the wilderness and there insisting upon becoming his squaw is desirable, is a question. There is something so repugnant about a conception of this sort that even though the dramatic strength of the picture is admitted, there is a feeling that this isn't quite right. It is well that the girl seeks to make reparation for the wrong she has done these Indians. And to have her follow the chief to his home with the paper guaranteeing the integrity of the tribe's lands is good, but it would be better if the story stopped there. It would improve it to leave off the rest of the picture. Perhaps she did love him. But there is an inseparable racial gulf which it is repugnant to see crossed. Better change that portion. It would then make an excellent picture.

"Valley Folks" (Nestor).—The charm of this picture lies in the rendering of what seems to be scenes among people one may have known. The shadows which come into the lives of friends can find here a counterpart. The appeal of the baby as he looks into his grandfather's face has probably been seen by more than one in each audience. And there is manifest rejoicing when the grandfather receives his daughter and her child to his embrace, mentally vowing that never again shall they be separated from him and never again shall they know suffering or want if he can prevent it. There is something inexpressibly touching in these domestic pictures which appeals to the heart of every audience. The homely experiences of life are familiar to all and when they are well acted, as they are in this film, they produce a profound impression.

Mirror Screen for Hammerstein.—A Mirror Screen has been installed on Hammerstein's Roof Garden, New York, for the coming Winter season of vaudeville and pictures.

The Biograph Theater of York, Pa., has also installed a Mirror Screen.

Vitagraph Stock Company in Maine.—The Vitagraph Company recently had a company of players at Cape Shore, near Portland, Me., where many scenes were acted that call for a rocky coast. The rock bound coast of Maine affords some wonderful backgrounds for rugged romance, and we may expect some striking stuff from that quarter in the near future. Among those in the party were Walter Arthur, photographer; Miss Florence Turner, Charles Kent, Robert Gaillard, Director Lawrence Trimble and his famous dog Jean.

Kalem Company in Florida.—Following their usual custom, the Kalem Company people have again located in Jacksonville, Fla., for the Winter. They are now in Fairfield, near the Roseland Hotel. For several seasons, they have been coming to Jacksonville for the Winter's work. The beautiful St. Johns River furnishes them with good natural staging for their pictures, of which they have made several in this locality.

Chicago Notes.

When I wrote "A Delightful Evening" I praised the Hyman Bros., of the Janet Theater, for their pluck in offering to the public "Nero," a repeater one year old. At the same time I said that I admired broad minded exhibitors who did not hesitate to show good repeaters. Since then I have learned with pleasure that Chicago has a number of these broad minded exhibitors, as I have been informed that the Union Theater, Sixty-third and Halsted streets, was the first one to show the renovated old repeater, "Nero," with such success that they had to book it again for three nights.

Last Sunday evening the Janet Theater scored another success in showing "Ave Maria," of Ambrosio, and showing it in the Orpheum style. Manager Hyman hired a special violinist and each time that the violin was in action on the screen, the piano player and the drummer would stop, leaving the honor to the violinist, who played the "Ave Maria" notes.

As we are on this subject, it would be well to warn the drummer of a motion picture theater not to make an abuse of his cocoanut shells when horses are seen running on grass or soft ground. While sound effects enhance and give life to a picture, exaggerated sound effects can kill a picture

J. M. B.

MIRROR SCREEN.

I do not like to tell it, but in justice to the Mirror Screen, I have been surprised at the change at the Janet Theater. I was there the other evening with two parties much interested in the Mirror Screen and the results were disastrous. The light was miserable, not the light of former days; in fact, my companions told me that the pictures shown at Gilmore's place, on the other side of the street, were clearer, sharper and with more details than the pictures shown at the Janet. Mr. Gilmore does not use the Mirror Screen, but he seems to have an operator who knows how to keep a good light

While the Mirror Screen manufacturers claim less current is required to obtain a clear picture on the Mirror Screen, they do not claim that their invention will correct badly adjusted carbons nor a too low amperage. A good workman can do good work with poor tools, while a poor workman can only spoil good tools.

J. M. B.

ELIXIR OF YOUTH.

To the known inventions of Thos. A. Edison, we must add Elixir of Youth. Like all drugs, you must take the exact potion, as too much can work havoc. It seems that Mme. Pilar-Morin in her part in "The Greater Love" took the prescribed dose, while her sweetheart took an extra measure. By following the directions of the patent medicine man, Mme. Pilar-Morin is as young and lovely after twenty-years of a miserable existence and a term in prison, as she was the day she was going to elope with her lover. On the other hand, to punish the sweetheart for having taken an extra dose, he is made to age at least fifty years in the same space of time. Is it not wonderful?

The robbery is improbable. The woman refuses money; she does not approach the stranger nor does she go out with him; she has no chance to rob him. The stranger and the judge should have seen that the woman was shielding her son. These little things do not worry the producers, no more than the glaring incorrectness in the details and costumes.

At the same show I saw "Dull Razor." Very short, it is true—about 150 feet—yet too long for a decent audience, and, as the assistant manager of the theater told me: "It is disgusting." "A Dull Razor" was the finish of an already silly reel, a great mistake on the part of the diamond trade-mark, as a short scenic, even a scenic of Chicago, would have helped us to forget the noisy country hotel of "No Place Like Home," while the "Dull Razor" made a bad finish. Here, again, the manufacturer did not seem to care for the quality; he wanted the quantity.

With a few exceptions, the work of the licensed manufacturers is progressing backwards or at a standstill. We are not the only ones to say so; it is of public notoriety, and, notwithstanding the arguments of their trade booster, the Independents are getting very strong and converts to the Independent side are of daily occurrence. During the week, we have been told by three licensed exhibitors of Madison street, Chicago, that unless the General Film Company can give them an improved service, they will go Independent.

We are sorry to have to mention so much bad work, but it is our duty to call the attention of the manufacturers to the public verdict. We remember the days when a sign of a Biograph, of a Selig, etc., would crowd houses. They can do so again, as they have proved in the past that they could do good work. J. M. B.

BALL OF OPERATORS' UNION, LOCAL NO. 145.

The ball of the Operators' Union is scheduled for December 7th, and we wish it the best success. We have always been for the operators. Our constant fights for good pictures, for no vaudeville, for appropriate music, etc., have been carried on with the object of improving the business and of making motion pictures a lasting and safe amusement for the public; consequently giving good employment to many operators. This week again we come out with a word for the operators, when we urge the Union to instruct their members to refuse the orders of the managers, to run the pictures at a too high speed.

THE ROYAL THEATER.

Over on the north side on Milwaukee avenue in the vicinity of Ashland avenue, moving picture theaters are not a novelty—every block has three or four; all styles are represented, from store fronts to picture palaces, and a great variety of shows are to be seen, ancient junk reels, vaudeville, and even first run pictures.

One of the most prominent theaters in this vicinity both as to structure and program, is the Royal Theater, 1369 Milwaukee avenue, of which A. M. Gollos is the proprietor. Exclusive first run Independent pictures are shown here; the house is a model picture theater, the music is good, and the projection under the direction of Lee A. Forbes, is all that could be desired. Afternoon or evening makes no difference in the attendance at the Royal, and regardless of the keen competition in the neighborhood, this theater is always playing to capacity, due in a great extent to Mr. Gollos' efficient management.

Mr. Gollos' efforts are not directed to the management of the Royal Theater alone, however, for he is also the proprietor of the New Royal, at 6728 South Halsted street, and he has just recently purchased the Jefferson Theater at Fifty-fifth and Lake avenue, a 900 capacity house which he converted from a vaudeville to an exclusive picture theater.

J. C. K.

A PLEASANT SURPRISE.

After a man has been connected with the moving picture industry for any length of time, he becomes a pretty hard individual to surprise, for the business itself is such a rapid succession of surprises. The "Chicago End" of the Moving Picture World was so pleasantly surprised one night last week that we can't refrain from telling you about it. And it all came about in this way:

Several months ago when J. M. B. wrote up the Roseland Theater on Michigan avenue, he mentioned that owing to the homelike atmosphere that prevailed, the Roseland should have been named the "Family Theater." Mr. Berkson, the proprietor, then conceived an idea which he put into effort and on Wednesday he invited us, in company with Julius Singer of the Laemmle Film Service, to go to Indiana Harbor with him, to see whether his idea had been, in our estimation, properly carried out. We knew that Mr. Berkson had built a new theater at Indiana Harbor, but when we considered that the town was only about 10,000 strong, we thought we might see a "fairly good" picture house if we accepted his invitation, so we decided to make the trip.

Mr. Singer, accompanied by his congenial "better half," J. M. B. and J. C. K. composed the inspection party, which on its arrival at Indiana Harbor, was met at the station by I. E. Berkson with a large automobile waiting to take our party to the theater, which is located about a mile and a half from the station. Surprise—well, I guess. Some theaters we inspect we have to "sneak in"—here's a man that takes us to his theater in an auto.

But the surprise proper is the "Family Theater." Notice the name—"Family Theater." Who said the exhibitors don't follow J. M. B.'s advice? Cold words can't describe the beauty of this pretty little picture house; you must see it to appreciate it. Built of brick and concrete, 120 feet long extending from street to street, with exits in the rear and at the sides, the Family is as near fireproof as human ingenuity can make it. The marble and tile lobby with its vestibuled front, is imposing in its simplicity and richness; the most pleasing feature of the lobby is the arrangement of poster frames built in the walls. These frames open like doors, and contain the posters for the entire week's program. The idea is original with Mr. Berkson, and through this clever arrangement the posters really appear artistic.

The interior is very neatly decorated, and the seating arrangement is excellent; a good view of the screen can be had from any one of the 400 seats. The operating booth, the lighting and ventilating arrangement, the patent exit doors, all are perfect. In fact, the theater seems to be just about five years ahead of Indiana Harbor itself. But the public is showing its appreciation of the Messrs. Berkson's enterprise. They fully realize that Manager Gus Berkson is giving them an opportunity of enjoying the best that can be had in the way of moving picture entertainment, as the large attendance would easily prove. Gus has a good eye when it comes to selecting a program, his run of a Reliance, an Eclair and an "Imp" on Wednesday night being well received by the audience.

It is indeed gratifying to see men like the Messrs. Berkson in the business. They are enthusiastic picture men, optimistic of the future, and their excellent business methods will greatly aid in placing the picture show in the foremost ranks of entertainment enterprises.

J. C. K.

MOTION PICTURES AS A CHASER.

The Majestic Theater of Chicago, the high class vaudeville house, has found the best way to empty the place by showing motion pictures and, at the same time, the most successful method to kill cinematography. Persons who see motion pictures at the Majestic Theater get such a bad impression that they cannot be induced to visit regular moving picture houses. They have enough of motion pictures and I do not blame them as I never was so disgusted, and I can state that it was the first time in my life that I walked out of a place before seeing half of a reel of pictures. It was the greatest and most powerful chaser offered, far better than a "Fire cry."

The pictures are projected from the top gallery and appear distorted on the screen. The picture instead of being wider than its height, is higher than its width and the bottom of the picture is wider than the top, consequently the figures appear elongated and distorted. Add to this bad throw a miserable light, and you can safely say that the Majestic Theater shows the worst pictures in the country.

The picture on the screen was "Mathilda's Winning Ways," a good production of Lubin, that I had enjoyed some time ago at the Orpheum. If the Motion Picture Patents Company were fulfilling their promises, viz.: to give protection for the $2 they collect each week from the exhibitors and if they had any solicitude for the future of cinematography, they would issue orders to their exchanges to refuse service to the Majestic.

Evidently the Motion Picture Patents Company and the General Film Company are not working for the betterment of motion pictures. They are in existence for the sole purpose of working a get-rich-quick scheme and the $2 per week from the Majestic and other vaudeville theaters look too good in their coffers, to think of the exhibitors suffering from the unfair competition from vaudeville theaters.

The exhibitors in paying their $2 per week, have helped the Motion Picture Patents Company to put a rope around their necks in telling them just what they must show and what they must not show. The exhibitors in continuing to pay the $2 per week, will help the General Film Company to pull on the rope and the words of a certain licensed manufacturer will come true. Allow them enough rope to hang themselves.

Mr. Exhibitor, you are more or less responsible for the conditions of affairs at the Majestic and other regular vaudeville theaters, as by showing cheap vaudeville acts to beat your competitors, you have engendered an ill feeling from the legitimate play houses and you will never get peace until you discard the vaudeville from the moving picture theaters.

J. M. B.

IN THE MISSISSIPPI VALLEY.

The new Colonial, Second avenue, Rock Island, Ill., got ready in time for Thanksgiving and was host to 2,000 patrons on that day. The place is finished in Mission style, has a seating capacity of 418 and besides being equipped with five exits has all necessary fire-fighting apparatus and automatic fire-doors on the operating room. Two reels, two songs and music by a four-piece orchestra, made up the initial program. Manager I. N. Martin and assistants were forced to hurry to get the benefit of the holiday.

The Star Theater at Petersburg, Ill., recently used Fred Beck, the Boston National outfielder, and his tenor voice as an attraction.

George Mills, of Karzin & Mills, owners of the Royal and Casino moving picture shows in Springfield, Ill., have invaded Moline, Ill., and leased the Rydback building at 513 Fifteenth street in that city. This will make eight moving picture shows in Moline and the fourth within a radius of one hundred feet.

For the first time in the last three or four years, Leroy, Ill., is without a moving picture show, the Lyric having closed.

Street railway operators claim that the popularity of the moving picture shows has ironed out or evened up the evening load of current which formerly reached its peak at 11.30 immediately after the theaters, according to the "Electric Traction Weekly." When people go to the moving picture shows there is no fixed time for going or returning and the travel is spread over the entire evening. Because of the cheaper-priced entertainment people go oftener, so the street car companies profit by an increased business as well as a more desirable evening load factor.

W. S. Helm, of Peoria, Ill., has leased the Illinois Theater at Abingdon, Ill., and will sub-let the place to Mrs. Zat-Zam, of Peoria, who will operate a moving picture show.

Edward T. Dolly and W. W. Wilmerton have purchased a site at Fourth avenue between Nineteenth and Twentieth streets, in Rock Island, Ill., and will build a vaudeville house seating 2,500 persons.

The Mayor of Watseka refused to cancel the permit to the Star Theater, upon request of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and the Jeffries-Johnson pictures were shown without more strenuous opposition than that offered by a representative of the women calling the manager from the theater and threatening arrest.

Miss Ruby Hoffman, of Effingham, Ill., is now pianist and solist at Clarence Kepner's Bijou Theater at Villa Grove, Ill.

Miss Alona Allison, of St. Louis, is now singing at the Bijou at Greenfield, Ill.

George Fitch, the humorist, whose articles are much in demand by the "Saturday Evening Post," "American" and other leading magazines, is a devotee of the moving picture shows and producers would profit by a study of his daily column in the Peoria "Herald-Transcript" which he produces to warm up his versatile brain. Apropos of the plea for comedy, he says:

"The moving picture men have taken to murdering children to make their films more touching and it ought to be stopped. Two bright and beautiful little girls died in films shown in Peoria last week and the theaters were soggy with grief when the foul business was over. The pot who slaughters babies relentlessly in pursuit of his art is bad enough, but to put the operation on a canvas—to show the last gasping breaths of the curly haired sufferer and the frantic grief of the mother is going several hundred miles too far. We are an insurgent and demand that only trust magnates and short weight coal dealers be killed in the moving picture shows."

The editor of the New Berlin (Ill.) "Tribune" cannot be lined with the enemies of the picture show who are numerous in the Fourth Estate, judging from the following homely tribute:

"Thanksgiving night Wall Street Theater gave us a crackerjack of a show, and had a house packed. Say, farmers, why not rest your weary body from the day's corn shucking and bring your family to the show? Three nights in the week it is in running gear and Saturday night is always the big night. Come to town and see what great times we have."

F. H. M.

New England Notes.

The Pastime Theater, Brunswick, Me., has very recently been enlarged and renovated. The seating capacity is now nearly 600. This house has an excellent reputation among the trade and is reported to be doing good business.

Harry Jacoby has given up the management of the Premier Theater, Fall River, Mass., owing to poor health. He intends going to New York and take a complete rest.

The Broadway Theater, Lawrence, Mass., will soon be ready to open its doors to the public. The house is most attractive and ought to make good.

J. C. Burke is now building a theater to be devoted to moving pictures and vaudeville at Springfield, Mass. His son is interested with him in the enterprise.

C. S. Higginbotham has recently purchased the Globe Theater, Holyoke, Mass., from Woods & Cavanaugh. Mr. Higginbotham also operates the Grand Theater, at Holyoke.

THE STAR THEATER, BOSTON, AND SOME FILM REVIEWS.

The New England representative of the World went to see the performance given at the Star Theater, November 21-23. He saw one of the best conducted houses that it has been his good fortune to enter, and some good—and some poor films. The best film of the evening was an excellent Vitagraph effort, "Francesca Da Rimini"; the poorest, "Song of the Wildwood Flute," a Biograph film. "Francesca Da Rimini" was sumptuous, startling and gripping. This release far surpassed the Vitagraph's previous effort to give this classic. The backgrounds were more beautiful, the acting more finished and natural. The heroine was excellently played by the Vitagraph girl; she knows how to interpret her parts; she makes you catch the spirit of Francesca as the writer meant it should be. That scene where Paola told Francesca of his love was well taken care of, being far removed from the usual sickly, mawkish love scenes. Vitagraph producers seem to know the art of interpreting realistic lightning in the photoplay. It was excellently used here, and reminds us of the "Life of Moses" films, when thunder and lightning were excellently and realistically produced. The picture was as easily followed as any slapstick comedy, and certainly afforded much instruction and interest to the crowded audience who viewed the film. In this connection, we wish to compliment as highly as possible the work of the pianist and drummer at the Star. Grand opera selections and classics were used throughout, seconded by the best trapping we have heard in many a day, aided the film more than may be supposed. The World's New England representative made it a point to ascertain their names, wishing to give them credit in the World itself. Messrs. Seaver and Scottron worked the musical end of it. Good work! Keep it up.

Now, in order to have a real anti-climax, and to show we "knock" when needed, as well as praise, let us pass on to the Biograph's picture. "The Song of the Wildwood Flute" failed to "arrive," simply because white people cannot impersonate Indians—that is, with success. The audience seemed rather amused throughout the picture, at the contortions, facial and otherwise, made by the white actors in their painful endeavors to become Indian-like. It is no use, you cannot do it. Query: Hasn't the World told producers that fact enough without the "still" making tableaux for this reason? The heroine fell down badly. To tell the truth, she provoked some audible snickers. "Little May," as she is known, so we hear, bore the brunt of the tableaux, as she was better known to the audience than the other actors. The young lady should not play Indian parts. She positively shouldn't, really. We merely draw attention to her as her part was the most important, the whole "tribe of Indians" were just as poor. It is too bad, that a film which was evidently the product of much time and attention, should fail because of a fact which has been spoken of so often. The story was good, the scenery was good. No doubt "authentic Indian customs were incorporated" we are no judge of such things—but the white actors sounded the film's death knell. The exhibitors have had too many Indian films, anyhow. Let the Biograph Company, which has proven itself capable of the higher class of work, stick to that. We get enough Indian impersonations without them.

Selig had a split reel. The shorter one, "Dull Razor"; the longer one, "No Place Like Home," both of "the usual thing." Although the "Dull Razor" is an old subject, it brought a few laughs. The title tells the story. Probably the audience had often experienced similar trouble to that of the man shaving with a dull blade. The "No Place Like Home" was that most direful of comedies—the one that does not produce a laugh. Although intended as a broad farce, it did not seem to hit the audience.

Pathe's "Other Way" made good. It had two good features—a love story and several hearty laughs. The picture is not logical, but it held close attention. After all, that is the main point. It seems strange, to be sure, that the heroine should have found her position as nurse-girl so soon after she left the parental roof, that she had not changed her clothes. In fact, she evidently found her position ten minutes after leaving. The same holds true of the hero of the film. Never mind, the film made good, and must be called successful. That kid in the picture was "bully."

Two acts of vaudeville, one a singing act, and the other, some stunts by a clever equilibrist, made good. They both received good applause.

The illustrated songs, "I'm Looking for a Dear Old Lady" and "Lend Me a Kiss To-night, I'll Bring It Back To-morrow," were both good and well handled, although the latter's name is against it. Take it all in all, we saw an excellent show, well put together. This house shows excellent pictures—very clear and very steady. Two Power's Cameragraphs, No. 6, do it, so Manager Appleby says.

The Star is a fine house, and is unusually well conducted, and supported by the public. Congratulations, Mr. Appleby, on a smoothly running, well regulated house.

HENRY.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Manager Bradley, of the Paramount Film Exchange, is making a canvassing journey through the South. The new exchange is busy every day, which demonstrates the necessity for such an office. He is doubling the number of reels he had previously contracted for. This alone shows what work he is doing, and the outlook is that when he returns from the South he will demand a trebling or quadrupling of reels. The offices of the Paramount Film Exchange are very attractive and the fact that Mr. Bradley is known as a hustler is ample cause for good business.

* * *

Tom Moore, of the Moore Film Exchange, is on a canvassing tour through the South, including Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and the Carolinas in his circuit. He is making this in his big touring car with Mrs. Moore, and the reports indicate that he is mingling pleasure with business, for portions of the country he will travel through are beautiful at this season of the year. The business of the Moore Film Exchange has already taken its Fall impetus; houses that closed for the Summer months are opening and making even greater demands than last year. Mr. Mack is at the helm in Washington and he finds it necessary to work overtime to keep pace with calls.

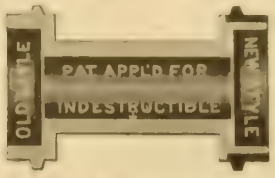
* * *

I. Boyd Dexter, of the Index Film Company, has had to take on a number of new hands recently. "I could make use of half a dozen more," he said to me, "if I could get the kind of men I want." Even while we talked, he had to jump up to attend to business every few minutes. The poster side of this company is an important feature. It is wonderful what an agreeable transformation he can make out of a homely lithograph with freehand touches of scrolls, words or figures in artistic designs.

We buy, sell and exchange Moving Picture Machines. Complete line of Supplies. Skillful Repairing a Specialty.

PHOTOPLAY SUPPLY CO.
107 East 12th Street, KANSAS CITY, MO.

LIKE A JEWELED WATCH



Improved Pinwheel, Star Arbor and Sprocket for Power's, Edison, Lubin or Motiograph machines, $12.00.

TESTIMONIALS:
"Grand Success" says one.
"Fine Job" says another.
"Jackey-jack" says another.
"Worth $ 0" says another.
"Brilliant Work" says another.

Old Brass Sprockets Repaired, $2.25
Steel teeth makes them last 3 to 4 times as long.

NEW SPROCKETS that can be continually repaired for $1.00 UPPER or LOWER $2.50. Intermittent $3.50.

E. W. LAVEZZI, 3042 North Ashland, Ave Chicago, Ill.

RUINED

A large number of New Machines are ruined by using cheap Oils. Are you saving 10 cents on your oil and wearing out $15 00 worth of Machinery? Take no chances and oil your Machines with

One Drop Oil

The only scientifically compounded oil for moving picture machines on the market.

Ask your Exchange for One Drop Oil and if they do not carry it, send 25 cents for full size bottle of One Drop Oil.

ONE DROP OIL CO.
4059 N. 47th Avenue, CHICAGO, ILL.

HERE IT IS!

It is what every Operator or Manager should have in the Theatre, for quick, clean, economical, Slide Making. With our material, you can make an Announcement Slide for less than a penny that will show on the Screen as neatly as any manufactured Slide on the market.

This following introductory offer for a short time only:
6 Prepared Slides, including Colored Cover Glasses.
1 Bottle of our Superior Slideine. Enough to cover 50 Slides.
1 Bottle of each of the following Translucent Colorines: Red, Green and Blue. Enough to cover more than 200 Cover Glasses.
1 Roll of our Perfect Slide Binding, with full directions. All for $1.00.

POTTSVILLE NOVELTY CO.
319 N. 3rd St., POTTSVILLE, PA.

A Cement that will not burn and that will patch both the Celluloid and the N. I. films

This new Cement is not an experiment but a product in great demand and doing the work.

The chemist inventor although assured of a good income, wishes to dispose of his invention as the making of the said Cement interferes with his regular paying business. Profits are large and the proposition can be fully investigated. Repeated daily orders from all over the country prove the efficiency of this new Cement.

Formula, stock on hand, and good will for sale for $1200

Address Cement, care of M. P. World
160 Washington Street - - Chicago, Ill.

FARRAGUT HALL, A POPULAR BROOKLYN THEATRE.

One of the ideal photoplay houses in Brooklyn is Farragut Hall, Rogers avenue and Farragut road, Flatbush, owned and operated by Oetjen Brothers, two prominent business men of the section and leading members of the local Board of Trade. Farragut Hall is one of the most beautiful, inside and out, as well as one of the most adequately equipped and best conducted places of amusement in that exclusive residential section of Brooklyn, where perfect moving picture theaters abound and where to excel it is necessary to reach the top notch. In fact, it seems as if Flatbush were trying to corner all the perfect ones in Brooklyn. The accompanying photographs give as good an idea as pictures can of the appearance of the place. One picture shows the extremely artistic exterior with its graceful lines and tasteful decorations. The color scheme is worked out in shades of green and the windows are of panels of stained glass. The two suspended lights are Adams & Bagnell flaming arc lights of 1,600 candle power each. Over the ticket booth is the rewinding room, the operator's booth being projected inside the main auditorium. At present the management are constructing a plate glass storm front directly under the large outside arch, thereby giving the place a kind of lobby or vestibule. To the right and left under the arch two large panels were specially constructed in the wall. Here on a black background, bright gold letters set forth the policy of the management. It is something like this in part:

"Newest and best American pictures. Special courtesies extended to ladies and children. No picture will offend the most fastidious taste. Pictures approved by the Board of Censors. No objectionable persons admitted. Latest illustrated songs, etc." This seems to be a pretty clear statement of facts.

The main hall is 110 feet long by 33 feet wide, giving a total floor space of 3,630 feet. The interior colorings are varying shades of light and dark green pleasingly harmonized, and one of the features is the lighting. There are eight handsome four-light side fixtures, four ceiling Tungsten lights, and in addition to these are four large dark green globes a foot in diameter mounted on tall brass pedestals on either side of the rear entrances to the aisles. These can be plainly seen in the picture, as well as the heavy brass rail which divides the seating space from the 825 square feet of standing room in the rear. The center section of seats is six rows wide, with five feet of aisle on either side and flanking sections of seats four rows wide. The seats are hardwood stained dark green and highly polished. The floor is hardwood polished smooth, sloping to the front, with heavily carpeted aisles. A $1,000 Fischer grand piano is the only musical instrument.

The ventilating system is perfect, consisting of six 16-inch oscillating electric fans, four ceiling ventilators, side wall ventilators, three windows on the right, one on the left and six in the rear. The place is steam heated throughout, special care having been taken to place a radiator in the ticket booth, which is unheated in so many places, leaving the ticket seller to shiver and often resulting in an illness with a fatal termination. Four steel beams do away with all center supports.

Last but not least is the operator's booth, which is one of the best features of Farragut Hall. As can be seen in the picture this projects out over the standing room space and is supported at the outer corners by steel braces. It extends eight feet and is six feet wide. It is entirely of steel, with a ventilator in the ceiling. The floor of the booth is eight feet above the floor of the auditorium and the booth itself is ten feet high. It is equipped with a Model B Edison, with a Fort Wayne Compensarc. Back of the operator's booth and directly over the ticket booth is the rewinding room. This is five feet by six feet, and eight feet high. The running staff of the place consists of seven.

For a long time the Messrs. Oetjen were at a loss as to what special attraction they could offer to boom their matinees. After trying many things, they have adopted the following scheme, which has proved a success for them and may be of value to others: Each patron of the matinee receives a coupon bearing a number. Every Wednesday afternoon the patron with the lucky number is presented with a piece of cut glass of really excellent quality. As most of the matinee patrons are ladies, the idea of a new piece of Essaying to visit a Brooklyn theater on Fifth avenue near Thirteenth street, a large poster at the door announcing: "Put Your Arm About Me Honey," as the chief attraction, acted as a danger signal; the writer was accompanied by his children so decided that this was not a suitable place to visit. cut glass for the buffet is a strong attraction.

* * *

* * *

But a few months ago it was necessary to call attention to the backward state of moving picture work in Brooklyn. Things are changing so rapidly that before long New York will have to take great care or it will be outclassed. A. H. M.

NEW PHOTOPLAY HOUSE IN FLATBUSH.

Wm. R. Lusher, Dorchester road and Coney Island avenue, Flatbush, Brooklyn, N. Y., will in a few days open his new Dorchester Photoplay Theater, and people in that section of Brooklyn will have a theater in their midst equipped in every detail with the most up-to-date motion picture apparatus. Mr. Lusher has spared no expense to furnish his patrons with every comfort and convenience; his operating booth is equipped with two 1910 Model Motiographs with Hallberg Electric Automatic Economizers, and in front of the theater in place of incandescent or flame arc lights, Mr. Lusher has installed a large electric sign reading "Dorchester," each of the letters being 12 inches in height. This sign is something entirely new in this country. J. H. Hallberg, "The Economizer Man," is now importing them from England. The beautiful effect of this sign must be seen to be appreciated; besides its operation means a saving of 70 per cent. in current consumption over the ordinary incandescent lamp sign.

WHY?

By F. H. Richardson.

Within a radius of three blocks of the writer's home are three small houses where motion pictures are the nightly attraction, but in all of them the projection is so miserably poor he has not cared to pay more than one visit. He has lived in the hope that some of them, at least, would get a real operator, but, so far, in vain.

Three blocks away, however, on 145th street, near Eighth avenue, a new house has just been completed, known as the 145th Street Theater. Vaudeville and motion pictures is the legend on its front. The house seats 1,000 and is really a charming little theater, having an orchestra, boxes, balcony and gallery; prices, 5, 10 and 15 cents. The stage is of good size and the interior decorations pleasing.

Surely, I said to myself, here is a place to go where at least passable projection and probably good film will be seen. But alas! The films were junk and the projection absolutely rotten! To begin with: the films were literally rainstorms, in some instances without titles. The film titles and vaudeville acts were announced by the crudest kind of slides—glass blackened and the names scratched in with a pointed instrument. The light was poor and miserably handled. The pictures were full of shadows and full of misframes. The "operator" (?) at one time allowed the picture to stay out of frame (the dividing line right in the center of the screen) for approximately 40 feet of film. Fully half the time the picture was badly out of focus, sometimes very badly. The speed was most of the time so slow that the action was utterly ruined (when the light was good enough to judge by it). The curtain was badly light-struck on its lower half and the interior lights of the house, while ornamental, were calculated to badly injure even good projection. The curtain was sewn so that it was full of wrinkles. In short the whole thing, so far as the pictures were concerned, was simply vile.

The vaudeville was mediocre, except as to one act which was very good indeed, but still the acts were not to be criticised, considering the price charged.

Why? Why?? Why will men put thousands of dollars into a theater and then place at least half the bill in charge of utterly incompetent hands, still further hampering projection by apparently dense ignorance in the matter of house lighting and curtain? Such things are utterly past the writer's understanding. If that beautiful little house can be filled at 5, 10 and 15 cents, giving such an utterly disgusting projection performance as we witnessed last Sunday, it could be filled at 10, 20 and 30 cents with high class pictures and high class projection, plus the present vaudeville program.

* * *

And right here let me relieve my mind of something else: the Keith & Proctor Harlem Opera House has gone back to vaudeville and motion pictures, after a most successful Summer season with pictures only, with excellent projection. Many times on the very hottest nights last Summer I visited that house to find S. R. O.—nothing but pictures and songs, but good pictures, well projected, admission 10 cents.

The house has gone back to vaudeville and pictures, as I said, admission 10, 15 and 20 cents. It is Keith & Proctor's privilege to conduct their business as to them seems best, also it is the writer's privilege to comment. I believe, firmly, that had this house replaced its present antiquated projection machinery with up-to-date appliances, properly blocked in its curtain (which was partly done at the writer's suggestion last Summer), made certain needed changes in the house lighting, that Mr. Ritter, the operator, in conjunction with Mr. Holmes, the manager, could have filled that house during the Winter season, and with pictures only, at its present scale of admission.

POSTER DISPLAY.

Advertising has become so general that it is needless to dwell upon the necessity of publicity in any line of business. But while all agree in this estimate of its value, few know how to apply it to their particular requirements.

With the exception of a few of the larger theaters in every town, which have secured the services of professional letterers, the front of the average nickelodeon resembles a meat market or cheap grocery store.

Mr. Exhibitor, stop and think a moment. Your house may be beautifully decorated, your programme well selected, your help courteous, everything may be run in shipshape style, but it will avail you nothing if the public is not properly apprised of what is going on inside. You have to get the people inside by your exterior.

If any kind of signs will do, why do the larger houses hire permanent sign writers by the week when some porter or usher could scrawl the announcements? If a small house can save two or three dollars a week on signs, a larger concern of, say, ten times the size, can naturally save twenty or thirty dollars per week by using cheap signs. This is plain arithmetic. But the answer is simple. As soon as a man's interests increase, his scope broadens in the same ratio.

In emulating the methods of successful business men, do not neglect the minutest detail. The public appreciates art. The first impression the passer by receives is from the signs. They should be clear, neat and artistic, but devoid of "gingerbread," so that he who runs may read. The main thing to remember is, that the general effect is what counts.

Take a walk through your streets and observe the signs of any moving picture theater. The color schemes are usually incongruous, the lettering amateurish and in many cases almost illegible.

If you cannot afford to hire a good letterer permanently, make some agreement with the best sign painter in your locality, whose reputation for artistic workmanship is without question. Arrange to have him do your work for a certain specified sum, and if he is fair minded and anxious to please, you will be the gainer. Don't haggle over a few dollars. Make it interesting for him to use his brains as well as his paints and brushes.

Above all take an interest in the work yourself and remember that a cheap man in any capacity is always the most expensive in the end.

We are in receipt of a very neatly printed brochure from the Industrial Moving Picture Company, of Chicago, in which the advantages of using moving pictures for general publicity purposes are convincingly explained. There is no doubt that this profitable method of advertising will soon come into universal use, and the Industrial Company, with such an able advertising man as W. R. Rothacker at its head, will soon be making the "picture ad." as popular as those of the daily newspapers. Who knows, the time may come when a home without moving pictures will be as lonesome as one without a piano.

THE THANHOUSER PHOTOFRAME.

consisting of portraits of the Thanhouser stock company, framed in solid oak, mission finish, 34 inches in width and 44 inches high. This handsome lobby display is furnished to exhibitors for $3.50, less than cost. Complete with glass and 6-foot easel.

BIOGRAPH.

A CHILD'S STRATAGEM. Mrs. Walton is one of those hapless-minded women who misconstrues every act of civility on the part of her husband towards any one of the female sex. In truth she has no grounds for such feelings, as Mr. Walton is the most devoted of husbands and the kindest of fathers. Every trivial matter that can be construed circumstantial is the food for a quarrel. These quarrels are always in the presence of their little ten year old daughter. So frequent are these dissensions that the child, though young, begins to fear for the future. The worst comes when one evening a party of lady friends call on Mrs. Walton, one of them deliberately tries to flirt Mr. Walton's attentions. He quite innocently and courteously acknowledges her, what he considers, assistance cordially. However, Mrs. Walton's eye is ever on the designing lady, and foolishly imagines her husband attracted. After the visitors have departed there is the worst storm yet and a separation seems inevitable. All this transpires with the child as a witness. Next morning Mrs. Walton packs her trunk and leaves a note to her husband on the breakfast table to the effect that she is determined to begin divorce proceedings. The little one now intervenes, but with poor success. Young as she is, she appreciates the enormity of the affair and is at a loss to circumvent it. While she is sitting pondering at the table an article in the newspaper concerning a black hand kidnapping strikes her gaze. The words 'Kidnapping' Succeeding something happen to her everybody would become alarmed and excited and mamma and papa would no doubt forget their own differences in their efforts to lift the veil of mystery from her. Fine! She at once puts the scheme into effect by writing a letter to her momma and another to her papa ostensibly from the Black Hand to the effect that she has been kidnapped. Despatching the letter, she goes to hide at her aunt's home. Arriving at her aunt's house she finds the place vacant, the aunt having moved. There is nothing for her to do but to stroll about and kill time. This she does, but wandering so far she loses her way, and falls into the company of some poor but honest folk. Telling them her address, Jimmy, the newsboy, volunteers to escort her home. Meanwhile, Mr. and Mrs. Walton are thrown into a state of wild excitement and in their endeavors to locate their missing child forget all else. Hither, thither the search is made, but in vain, and they are both on the verge of mental collapse, when the little one, escorted by the gallant newsboy, enters. She then makes clear the reason for her escapade. The parents now realize how foolish they have been and what a lesson their little tot has taught them.

TURNING THE TABLES.—Mr. Peck has long had a weakness for going out with the boys. Though a married man, he has not been able to fully control the craving for a little game of pinochle. His wife grows tired of these regular sessions and puts her foot down hard. "No more." Peck, however, must get out so he resorts to that effective subterfuge "A sick friend." It goes, and he is allowed until ten to return. At ten o'clock the game is just getting warm and a breakaway is impossible. Mrs. Peck has begun to doubt the truth of the "sick friend" story, and starts out after the renegade Peck, making tracks towards the nearest cafe. Entering, she loudly insists that the manager present her husband. Peck, who is in the back room, hears her voice, and diving out the back way, beats it for home, while the Madam is searching for him. Getting into bed, after putting the clock on a couple of hours, he is apparently asleep when she returns. Aroused by her entrance, he with mock dignity, demands: "Woman, where have you been until this unseemly hour?" Well, as really makes her feel the incriminating evidence of her own apparently compromising position, and not being able to give convincing proof of her own innocence, she becomes abjectly contrite, promising never to deny Peck his little pastimes.

HAPPY JACK, A HERO. It is the evening of a reception given by Mr. and Mrs. Stamford in honor of their daughter's birthday. The house is beautifully decorated and one of the features is the antique room. In this room stands a figure in a suit of armor of value. During a skylarking between the butler and maid this figure is knocked over and broken. In terror the butler, fearful of the consequences, rushes out to get someone to stand in the suit instead. Happy Jack, the rover, passing by at the time, takes the job on the promise of a good feed. There have been a couple of sneak thieves operating in society circles, and they learning of the affair, plan to attend. In evening suits, they present themselves and while the butler is engaged with one of them, the other pilfers two invitation cards, which gain them admittance. The daughter is presented by her father with a beautiful diamond and pearl necklace. During the evening the crooks nip it, and going to the antique room to examine their spoil, espy an open safe. This is easy, and they at once begin to help themselves. This is done under the eye of Jack, whom they think a stand of armor. When their work at the safe is about complete, Jack discloses himself, nabs them up and hands them into custody. You may imagine his reward now amounts to something more than a feed.

EDISON.

THROUGH THE CLOUDS. Judge Grey is a candidate for the nomination for Governor. His opponent is a man named Roberts, a thorough politician, who realizes that Grey will easily defeat him in a fair fight, and therefore begins to deal in what some people call "good politics." In other words, he throws mud at his opponent by prompting a newspaper report to the effect that Judge Grey has tried to bribe a contractor named O'Brien in return for political influence by offering him a ten million dollar interstate water supply contract if elected Governor. This, of course, is false as far as Judge Grey is concerned, but not so with Roberts, himself. He has offered to throw the contract to O'Brien providing the latter will swear that the newspaper report is true. This O'Brien agrees to do, first forcing Roberts to sign an agreement as to the facts of the deal in order to hold Roberts to his part of the bargain.

Jack Stanley, a young aviator, who is in love with Judge Grey's daughter, does not learn of the existence of the incriminating newspaper report until late in the afternoon of the convention day. By a clever trick he succeeds in securing possession of it and starts for the nearest railway station. Here he learns that he will be unable to reach the convention hall in time, and so is forced to send a telegram to his sweetheart, telling her of his discovery and instructing her to meet him in her auto at once and such a field, as he is coming in by aeroplane. This fact is discovered by the opposing party, and here follows a real novelty in motion picture stories, introducing the latest and fastest mode of travel. Of course, all is not accomplished without obstacles, there being a fight and many other thrilling happenings, but at last the young aviator arrives at the great convention hall in the nick of time, the convention is stampeded, and Judge Grey is nominated for Governor. He eventually becomes Governor of the State, and the aviator, the hero of the hour, wins the girl of his heart.

A DAUGHTER OF THE MINES.—The heroine's name is Betty, and you can bet that Betty knew who had won her hand, for it was none other than the son of the mine superintendent. He was rich and she was poor, but that made no difference, nor did the fact that her old dad was just one of those dirty, black men who came pouring out of the mines at the mouth of the shaft, where she stood waiting for him, to meet him with a glad cry of joy just as if he had been the president of the company. In some mysterious way little Betty Bobbin also met handsome Harry North, the superintendent's son.

No one ever really knows how true lovers meet. Sometimes it's a smiling, shy look and the work is done; sometimes it's just an "excuse me, miss" and "thank you kindly, sir," and the world is new again, and sometimes a man and woman have known each other all their lives when suddenly eyes meet eyes and life is a glad, new thing. So what matters how or when or where Betty Bobbin met Harry North? They met and kept on meeting, as lovers always do, yet the stern, grand old father of the boy knew it not, nor did the gray-haired old man. But love is a hard thing to hide, and finally the truth came out, and the rich man stormed and the poor man cried, but to no avail. One father was hard at work a thousand feet under the earth, and the other father was at his books thinking of his wealth, while little Betty Bobbin and Harry North went running away on a switch engine to be married that very night. "and all the king's horses and all the king's men couldn't make Betty single again."

THE GREATER LOVE.—The story itself is laid in the provincial district of France, and reveals that stern law which gives the French parent command and control over the life and will of his child. The heart of a little French peasant girl has gone out to a young barrister, whom she worships and who worships her with all the holy loyalty of a noble love, but centuries of custom force their cruel way between them, and the girl is compelled to bow down to her father's will. At the signing of the marriage contract we are shown her heart in all its sufferings.

Time passes, and twenty years later we see the result of a father's law. Annette, the daughter, has married her father's choice, a coarse, cruel brute; her life is crushed; the only gleam of joy that lights up her face is when her eyes rest upon her son, her boy. She worships him, but ere the day closes the awful truth is revealed to her that her boy is a thief! Mlle. Morin at this point reaches the supreme climax of the art of "Silent Drama." A moment after the discovery and the gendarmes are in the room searching for the thief, and then the dumb terror seizes her. She sees her boy a prisoner. She sees him behind the iron bars —sees him suffering. Then the greater love comes forth and she takes the guilt upon herself. "I am the thief," she protests, but the law of a lie rarely finds a home in happiness and relief. It always reacts upon the offender, which is clearly shown in this picture when she is brought before the Justice, who proves to be her former sweetheart.

Here, before the man she loves, she condemns herself with a lie as a common thief, and he is forced to sentence her to one year at hard labor. We then catch a glimpse of her prison life and finally her release. We next see her wandering back to her native village, penniless, heartbroken and alone. Through the window of a village inn she beholds her boy, gambling and drinking. She sends word to him, but he turns from her. Can woman being suffer more? At last she is found by the Judge and taken to his home, and through his love and care we realize that her life in future will be sweeter and that her boy will learn to love dearer before that greater love which has given so much for him.

ESSANAY FILM CO.

LOVE'S AWAKENING. The opening scenes of the picture show a number of young farm hands and their sweethearts seated on a load of hay entering the barnyard at the end of the day. Jewel Graham and David Allen are among the young people and when the others go dancing from the scene David confesses his love for Jewel but she impatiently turns away and welcomes Jim Long for whom she shows a strong preference. Jim and Jewel turn away leaving Dave in the deepest dejection.

Jim is the clerk in the small country drug store and the model young man of the village. Later, when he proposes to Jewel he is just going on a visit but the old man tells Jim he must go out into the world and make his fortune before he can have his bride.

The next day Jim, suitcase in hand, bids Jewel goodbye and takes the train to the city. Love is discouraged but not without hope when he meets Jewel again and again pleads his suit. But Jewel refuses to listen and her father considers the young man but efforts him no encouragement as Jewel, he knows, will have her own way in her love affairs.

In the city Jim is established in a fashionable drug store behind the soda counter. Here he meets a great many young ladies and one of whom in particular is fascinated by Jim's good looks. Not long after, having met the city girl on several occasions, Jim finds that his love for Jewel is cooling and in despair for fear of losing her he wires her to meet him at the station in Hopkinsville.

Shortly after Violet, the city girl, enters the store and coaxes a confession from Jim concerning the little country girl. Violet works her most subtle wiles and finally wins Jim over, persuading him to again wire Jewel that he cannot meet her.

In the meantime Jewel has received Jim's first message and at 10 o'clock that night steals away from home and goes to the station but Jim is not on the train and as she turns to leave the station agent hands her Jim's second telegram. The girl is brokenhearted when she reads it and sobbing as though her heart would burst wanders aimlessly back toward home.

It is Dave who finds her and to whom she confesses Jim's faithlessness and the big fellow's heart goes out to her as he helps her into his buggy and they drive home.

The next day Jewel has recovered from the shock and we find her and Dave seated on the Graham porch, when a letter is handed her from Jim, who has been thrown over by the city girl and who now begs forgiveness and asks to be taken back.

Dave thinks it is all up with him and turns to go when Jewel puts her hand in his and tells him she has had a change of heart and that it is not Jim but he whom she loves. Her father comes upon them when they are in embrace and gives his blessing as the picture closes.

A COWBOY'S VINDICATION.—Will and Frank Merrison, brothers, are working their mother's extensive ranch and while Frank is manly and upright, Will is a dissipated gambler and drunkard. The first scene opens showing Frank, Will and their mother at breakfast. Frank rises hurriedly and goes out to the barn to saddle his horse, while Will lingers over his meal, then slips out of the house.

We find him next meeting with a little crowd of roystering cowboys, who drag him into the saloon and make him buy the drinks. Here Faro Nan, a dissolute habitue of the place, persuades Will to also buy her a drink. A little flirtation follows which is interrupted by Jesse Gibbs, gambler and fancier of Nan, which ends in a fight, interrupted by the entrance of Frank who drags Will from the place, makes him mount and rides home with him.

With a sound lecture for his dissolute ways Frank orders Will into the house and to stay there. Will enters but finds his mother's purse, slips out a few dollars and is about to leave when his mother enters. She begs him to return the money but fails to reach the hardened heart of her son, who brushes her rudely aside and stalks out of the room.

A few minutes later Frank enters and again finding his mother in tears demands an explanation. She tells him what Will has done and begs him to go find the boy and bring him home.

In the meantime Gibbs, who is suffering in acute jealousy slinks from the saloon with the intention of finding Will and putting an end to him, thus making a clear road to the heart of Nan.

Frank finds Will at the stables about to saddle his horse and after a short altercation the two are locked in a struggle. Frank endeavoring to wrench the gun from his brother's hand. In the struggle both the weapons it is accidentally discharged but neither are hurt. Just then Gibbs who has heard the shot comes to the defense of Will in the scrimmage and while the backs of the two enraged men Will to the back and tried running from the place.

Frank is overcome with when the lifeless body of his brother goes through his mind to be the last. Yet he is confident that it was not at who fired the fatal shot. Gibbs is out of sight and Frank as alone with a smoking revolver one of the barrels of which gives evidence that to be the murderer.

Realizing that he must get quick to escape with a light and silence of an ex-bank. It rests [illegible] back against an [illegible] to [illegible] and am going to [illegible] down my brother's slayer."

Gibbs at the courthouse has returned to the saloon where he passed and [illegible] when [illegible] together and [illegible] a scout to the Mountain stables and leaves soon [illegible] Mormon [illegible] way.

In a moment the [illegible] to [illegible] look [illegible] Will and the [illegible] to Frank. Frank however is [illegible] that Gibbs [illegible] brother's slayer and [illegible] to be the [illegible] [illegible] and the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] to [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] and, wresting herself from her lover's arms, sees the ascending tide mounting to her father's knees. The old gentleman is awakened, but still can only scream in recognition. Fortunately, his cries are heard by Henry, who happens to be near enough to clamber down the rocks and dash through the water and rescue him. Stella, who has witnessed the whole scene, yields to impulse and rewards him with her hand and heart.

HER FIRST HUSBAND'S RETURN.—Helen Thurston is happily married and she lovingly bids her husband George farewell as he starts out on business. Accompanying him to the doorstep, she is seen by a seedy looking individual, who gives a start of surprise and recognition unnoticed by Helen. She returns to her parlor, and gazing at her husband's photo, is dreaming of happiness when this individual enters. She starts as if stung. She recognizes him as Tom Warren, her first husband. He had years ago been reported killed in a railroad accident. Warren shows her a clipping from a newspaper that corrects this report as erroneous. She is stunned for a moment and then rushes to the telephone. Warren intercepts her and she becomes hysterical. He seems to enjoy her misery, and finally makes a demand for money. She gives him all she has, and fearing to lose George Thurston's love, promises to send more in the morning if only he will go. He agrees to leave on these conditions, and Helen, lowering the light, retires to another room. It is night. A burglar enters by the window, and rummages around the room. He sees the door opening and hides behind a screen. Helen enters and turns up the light. At this moment Warren, suspicious that Helen will not keep her word, also returns and renews his demands for an immediate payment. He shows her their marriage certificate. She struggles to obtain it and the screen is upset and the burglar brought to view. Warren draws his revolver, and in a struggle with the burglar it falls to the ground. Helen seizes the weapon and in a flash has covered both Warren and the other man. She bids the burglar strike a match and burn the certificate in Warren's uplifted hand. He does so. She continues to keep them both covered and orders the burglar to leave by the window. He gladly accepts this ready means of escape. Helen then telephones to the police. Two officers are soon at the house, and pointing to the kit left by the real culprit, she hands over Warren as the burglar. At this moment George Thurston enters. Helen explains that she had been disturbed by a burglar and while the police lead Warren off in custody she falls into George's arms.

SELIG.

THE WIDOW OF MILL CREEK FLAT.—To be married or not to be, that is the question—or is there more real happiness in connubial bliss than single blessedness? This remains for you to judge after seeing how Sandy, a miner in a Western placer camp, allows the ship of state to founder on the rocks of domestic unrest.

The widow of Mill Creek Flats maintains a boarding house and among her stalwarts was Sandy Doolin, who has an eye on the charming widow and takes the first opportunity of popping the question and much to his surprise she not only accepts—but takes no chance in his escaping and almost kidnaps poor Sandy. He is led back to the house and she presents him to his fellow sufferers as her fiance.

The widow has visions of a life of sunshine and roses and Sandy is to be her gardener—his first duty was to get in the wood and other exercises practiced around the home—the boarding house is to cease to exist and Sandy's pals are out in the cold for home, while he is relegated to the back yard to peel potatoes—he has the sympathy of all the boys. Casey has an idea and imparts it to Sandy as an avenue for his escape—the widow discovers the clandestine meeting and promptly returns the prodigal to the peaceful flats. Watching his chance, he escaped from the window—he has decided upon deception as the only means of regaining happiness and indites the following touching note to the public:

"Good bye all:

"Married life ain't what I thot it was, I am going to try to cross the river and I can't swim a stroke. If my remainders are ever found don't plant me near Sally; she aint at all peaceful.

"SANDY."

It is delivered to Sally and she is almost on the verge of nervous prostration. The river is being dragged and the future looks gloomier—the boys are all invited back to board—in the meantime Sandy is in hiding. He ventures out and by chance his fair Sally meets him unexpectedly and the chase is on completing a picture of unique and interesting incidentals.

IN THE WILDERNESS.—Simon Girty, an unsuccessful suitor for the hand of Mary Odel, visits the Indian camp and uses his efforts to bring about an uprising among the Indians as revenge and to further his own ends. In the little cabin of the trapper Daniel assures them there are no fears of the Indian outbreak, again, however, he has his own fears and determines to keep a watchful eye on the fearful redskins.

By accident, the old trapper, who has won the confidence of the Indians, overhears Girty plot the uprising and hastens to give warning. In the meantime the two sisters have left the stockade and gone for a ride in the mountains—Daniel having joined the logging camp is ignorant of the impending danger. Mary and her sister enjoying a delightful ride on their favorite mounts, unmindful that Girty, the unwelcome suitor, has already kindled the flame of revolt and carnage. Girty stations his spies in the riders' path and Mary, who is less fortunate than her younger sister, is taken captive.

Daniel learns of the uprising and enlists the woodmen, who prepare for their defense and the recovery of the girl. Warning is sent broadcast and the faithful ones of the cause of humanity together with their stock, seek refuge in the stockade and prepare to defend themselves against the Indians. Daniel, finding the trail of the scheming Girty, is in hot pursuit when about to be discovered conceals himself in a large tree to which Mary is afterwards tied and left under guard of the Indians. While they sleep Daniel effects a miraculous and perilous escape by swinging from the limbs of the tree and releasing Mary, after which he draws her up into the tree for safety.

The Indians awaking find their prey is gone and rush from the scene enraged because of the girl's escape. Daniel and Mary take this opportunity to seek safety in the stockade. Finding a stray unsaddled horse Lucy mount it and ride for their lives, pursued by Girty and his followers. They reach the stockade in the nick of time and its loyal defenders repulse the desperate Girty and his redskins completing one of the best Indian pictures ever produced by the master builder of Western picture subjects.

VITAGRAPH.

LOVE, LUCK AND GASOLINE.—A young man and girl; the girl has a father. The young man, "Bob" by name, is in love with the girl, and her father objects to him as a suitor and very much favors another man as a future son-in-law, whom we designate as the villain. The scenes surrounding this state of affairs are at the seashore and a beautiful harbor containing motor boats and yachts that are incidentally and dramatically part of the play.

"Bob" is elected Commodore of the local yacht club, defeating the villain as a candidate for the same office. The villain, who wants the girl, never fails to show his dislike for "Bob," and, furthermore, he is naturally disagreeable, as shown in his refusal to subscribe to the building fund of the local church, entirely snubbing the Rev. Jones, who is the pastor, soliciting donations for the good work among the members of the club, all of whom, and even the skipper of the "Vita," a small speed motor boat, contribute to the purpose and at the same time take considerable pleasure in satisfying Mr. Jones' curiosity in the workings of his craft.

The villain becomes impatient and sore at the aversion "Mollie" displays to his attentions and proposals to her; she refuses him. He tells her father. The old gentleman is very angry, and, to separate her from "Bob," threatens to send her abroad.

"Mollie" sends word to "Bob" of her father's decision and suggests that they be married at once. "Bob" gets his motor boat, "Esmeralda," ready, meets "Mollie," and they make for Newport, where they will be married. The villain sees them going and informs "Mollie's" father, who follows, but they are too late to reach her—she and "Bob" are well on their way and far out to sea.

The villain and the father jump aboard the "Ethel," and they follow the lovers. The "Esmeralda's" machinery goes wrong and the "Ethel" is fast gaining on them. "Bob" rushes to the wireless with which the "Esmeralda" is equipped and tells the operator to wire Rev. Jones to hire the "Vita," instruct the skipper to catch the "Esmeralda" before the "Ethel" reaches them and marry him and "Mollie" at once.

The preacher runs to the dock, tells the skipper, and they get in the little speed boat and are off like a flash, cutting the waves like a knife, throwing the spray in showers of foam. Reaching the "Esmeralda" in less time than it takes to tell it, "Mollie" and "Bob" are taken into the "Vita" and the race is resumed. Rev. Jones performs the ceremony while the boat is ploughing and skimming through the water, and the two lovers are married; the father is defeated and the villain vanquished.

A WOMAN'S LOVE.—A young Italian artist, in love with and loved by a sweet country girl, is "discovered" by a gentleman, visiting the home of the young people, to be a genius of great ability and future. He induces the young fellow to go to the city with him to take up the study of art and make a name for himself.

The young fellow goes and becomes a great painter, courted and feted by a large following of admirers. He forgets his country sweetheart, although she keeps a constant watch for his letters and anxiously awaits news of his success or whereabouts.

After a year or more news eventually reaches the poor girl through a newspaper, and then she learns that he has become blind and must lay aside his paint and palette forever. In his blindness he is deserted by his so-called friends and admirers and becomes very poor, but there is one who still loves him and goes to him in his hour of need. The sweetheart of his younger days comes to the city and does not give up her search for him until she finds him, comforts him and takes him back to her home.

A woman's love is unmeasurable and is generally strongest when a man is weakest. It gives all and never speculates on recompense, her love is its own reward.

THIS WEEK'S PROGRAM OF LICENSED FILMS.

Monday, December 5.

Biograph—A Child's Stratagem (Dr.) 998
Lubin—On the Mexican Border (Dr.) .....
Pathe—The Clever Domestic (Com.) 485
Pathe—The Mexican Tumblers 476
Selig—The Widow of Mill Creek Flat (Dr.) ..1000

Tuesday, December 6.

Edison—The Winning of Miss Langdon (Dr.) ..995
Essanay—Love's Awakening (Dr.) 1000
Gaumont—A Man of Honor (Dr.) 834
Gaumont—Professor's Hat (Com.) 171

Wednesday, December 7.

Edison—The Life of a Salmon (Ind.) 440
Edison—Amateur Night (Com.) 550
Kalem—Rachel (Dr.) 1000
Pathe—An Animated Armchair (Com.) 650
Pathe—Cocoanut Plantation (Sc.) 348
Urban—Death of Admiral Coligny (Dr.) 992

Thursday, December 8.

Biograph—Turning the Tables 416
Biograph—Happy Jack, a Hero (Com.) 576
Lubin—Reggie's Engagement (Dr.) .....
Melies—What Great Beer Learned (Dr.) .....
Selig—In the Wilderness (Dr.) 1000

Friday, December 9.

Edison—The Captain's Bride (Dr.) 1000
Pathe—Saved in the Nick of Time (Dr.) 800
Pathe—Soap in His Eyes (Com.) 184
Kalem—The Rescue of Molly Finney (Dr.) 1007
Vitagraph—He Who Laughs Last (Com.) 927

Saturday, December 10.

Essanay—A Cowboy's Vindication (Dr.) 950
Gaumont—The Revolt (Dr.) 942
Pathe—Her First Husband's Return (Dr.) 990
Vitagraph—The Color Sergeant's Horse (Dr.)...978

Moving Picture Machines EXCHANGED

Trade your old machine for new and up-to-date outfit.

STELZER BROS. McCook, Neb.

Exhibitors' Advertising Specialty Co.

BORDER DESIGNS FOR POSTERS

TO-DAY'S NEWEST FEATURE

Poster fits exactly in this space

This is a reduced facsimile of one of the many original ideas for advertising Moving Picture Theatres designed and for sale only by the Exhibitors' Advertising & Specialty Co.

Send us $1.00 and we will send you four complete sets as a trial

A. B. C. And all other Makes of POSTERS

Unique and Distinctive M. P. Printing Lithographed Frames for Posters. Special Snipes and Advertising matter of all kinds.

105 E. 14th Street, New York

A POWERFUL DRAMA OF STIRRING HEART INTEREST

LICENSED RELEASES.

BIOGRAPH.

Oct. 24—Message of the Violin (Dr.).....997
Oct. 27—Passing of a Grouch (Com.).....537
Oct. 27—The Proposal (Com.).....466
Oct. 31—Two Little Waifs (Dr.).....997
Nov. 3—Waiter No. 5 (Dr.).....997
Nov. 7—The Fugitive (Dr.).....996
Nov. 10—Simple Charity (Dr.).....993
Nov. 14—Sunshine Sue (Dr.).....998
Nov. 17—The Troublesome Baby (Com.).....492
Nov. 17—Love in Quarantine (Dr.).....565
Nov. 21—The Song of the Wildwood Flute (Dr.).996
Nov. 24—His New Lid (Com.).....563
Nov. 24—Not So Bad as It Seemed (Com.).....432
Nov. 28—A Plain Song (Dr.).....997
Dec. 1—Effecting a Cure (Dr.).....997
Dec. 5—A Child's Stratagem (Dr.).....998
Dec. 8—Turning the Tables.....416
Dec. 8—Happy Jack, a Hero (Com.).....576

EDISON.

Oct. 25—His Breach of Discipline (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 28—The Swiss Guide (Dr.).....990
Nov. 1—The Key of Life (Com.).....975
Nov. 2—Boy Scouts of America in Camp at Silver Bay, Lake George, N. Y. (Scenic).....450
Nov. 2—Riders of the Plains (Dr.).....550
Nov. 4—The Little Station Agent (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 8—A Trip Over the Rocky and Selkirk Mountains in Canada (Scenic).....440
Nov. 8—The Lassie's Birthday (Com.).....560
Nov. 9—The Ship's Husband (Com.).....1000
Nov. 11—The Adoption (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 15—Into the Jaws of Death (Dr.).....990
Nov. 16—The Stolen Claim (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 18—The Toymaker; The Doll; and The Devil (Com.).....990
Nov. 22—His Mother's Thanksgiving (Dr.).....995
Nov. 23—Through the Clouds (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 25—A Daughter of the Mines.....995
Nov. 29—The Greater Love (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 30—Arms and the Woman (Dr.).....975
Dec. 2—The Cowpuncher's Glove (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 6—The Winning of Miss Langdon (Dr.)...995
Dec. 7—The Life of a Salmon (Ind.).....440
Dec. 7—Amateur Night (Com.).....550
Dec. 9—The Captain's Bride (Dr.).....1000

ESSANAY FILM CO.

Oct. 26—Hank and Lank: They Take a Rest (C.)298
Oct. 29—The Silent Message (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 1—A Fortunate Misfortune (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 5—A Westerner's Way (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 8—The Masquerade Cop (Com.).....428
Nov. 8—Hank and Lank "Life Savers" (Com.) 560
Nov. 12—The Marked Trail (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 15—Love at First Sight (Com.).....978
Nov. 19—The Little Prospector (Dr.).....960
Nov. 22—That Popular Tune (Com.).....
Nov. 22—Hank and Lank (as Sandwich Men) (Com.).....
Nov. 26—A Western Woman's Way (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 29—The Tie That Binds (Dr.).....953
Dec. 3—"Circle C" Ranch Wedding.....
Dec. 3—Present (Com.).....
Dec. 3—"Circle C" Ranch's Wedding Present (Com.).....1000
Dec. 6—Love's Awakening (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 10—A Cowboy's Vindication (Dr.).....950

KALEM CO.

Nov. 4—Silver Cloud's Sacrifice (Dr.).....967
Nov. 9—For a Woman's Honor (Dr.).....960
Nov. 11—The Attack on Fort Ridgely (Dr.)...1000
Nov. 16—A Drama of the Present (Dr.).....990
Nov. 18—Jim Bridger's Indian Bride (Dr.)...1000
Nov. 23—The Lad from Old Ireland (Dr.)....1000
Nov. 25—The Roses of the Virgin (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 30—The Touch of a Child's Hand (Dr.)...870
Nov. 30—Up the Thames to Westminster (Dr.)..125
Dec. 2—Elder Alden's Indian Ward (Dr.).....945
Dec. 7—Rachel (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 9—The Rescue of Molly Finney (Dr.).....1007

LUBIN.

Oct. 20—Archie's Archery (Com.).....450
Oct. 24—Romance in the Rockies (Dr.).....990
Oct. 27—False Love and True (Dr.).....990
Oct. 27—Edith's Avoirdupois (Com.).....375
Oct. 31—Brothers (Dr.).....950
Nov. 3—Mike the Housemaid.....990
Nov. 7—The Taming of Wild Bill (Dr.).....990
Nov. 10—The Mystery of the Torn Note (Dr.). 550
Nov. 10—The Gambler's Charm (Dr.).....450
Nov. 14—The Street Preacher (Dr.).....990
Nov. 17—Right in Front of Father (Com.).....990
Nov. 21—Caught by the Camera (Dr.).....
Nov. 24—Romance of the Lazy K Ranch (Dr.).....
Nov. 28—Shadows and Sunshine (Dr.).....
Dec. 1—Sperry Sam (Com.).....

GAUMONT.

G. Kleine.

Nov. 1—Picturesque Majorca (Sc.).....269
Nov. 5—The Fishing Smack (Dr.).....961
Nov. 8—Pharoah; or, Israel in Egypt (Dr.)..1050
Nov. 12—Faithful Unto Death (Dr.).....693
Nov. 12—A Trip to the Blue Grotto, Capri, Italy (Sc.).....309
Nov. 15—Both Were Stung (Com.).....696
Nov. 15—Picturesque Majorca (Sc.).....276
Nov. 19—Lisbon, Before and During the Revolution (Sc.).....727
Nov. 19—Spanish Loyalty.....280
Nov. 22—Cast Into the Flames (Dr.).....381
Nov. 22—A Woman's Wit (Com.).....595
Nov. 26—Samson's Betrayal (Dr.).....519
Nov. 26—Calino Travels as a Prince (Com.)....189
Nov. 29—The Flat Next Door (Com.).....722
Nov. 29—Tarascon on Lie Rhone (Scenic).....243
Dec. 3—Lured by a Phantom (Dr.).....712
Dec. 3—Nancy's Wedding Trip (Com.).....273
Dec. 6—A Man of Honor (Dr.).....834
Dec. 6—Professor's Hat (Com.).....171
Dec. 10—The Revolt (Dr.).....942
Dec. 13—The Phantom Rider (Com.).....279
Dec. 13—Closed Gate (Dr.).....676

URBAN-ECLIPSE.

G. Kleine.

Oct. 5—City of a Hundred Mosques, Brousa, Asia Minor (Sc.).....296
Oct. 12—Foiled by a Cigarette (Dr.).....991
Oct. 19—In the Shadow of the Night (Dr.)....502
Oct. 19—Tunny Fishing off Palermo, Italy (Ind.).....500
Oct. 26—The Signet Ring (Dr.).....868
Oct. 26—In the Spreewald (Scenic).....132
Nov. 2—Tragical Concealment (Dr.).....640
Nov. 2—Crossing the Andes (Sc.).....350
Nov. 9—Secret of the Cellar (Dr.).....788
Nov. 9—A Trip Through Scotland (Scenic)....217
Nov. 16—The Rival Barons (Dr.).....860
Nov. 16—An Alpine Retreat (Sc.).....142
Nov. 23—Behind a Mask (Dr.).....516
Nov. 23—Nantes (Scenic).....450
Nov. 30—The Return at Midnight (Dr.).....634
Nov. 30—Ramble Through Ceylon (Scenic).....319
Dec. 7—Death of Admiral Coligny (Dr.).....992
Dec. 5—On the Mexican Border (Dr.).....
Dec. 8—Reggie's Engagement (Dr.).....

G. MELIES.

Oct. 6—Billy's Sister (Dr.).....950
Oct. 13—Out for Mischief (Com.).....950
Oct. 20—Uncle Jim (Dr.).....950
Oct. 27—Under the Stars and Bars (Dr.).....970
Nov. 3—Birthday Cigars (Com.).....
Nov. 3—Generous Customers (Com.).....
Nov. 10—A Mountain Wife (Dr.).....980
Nov. 17—His Sergeant's Stripes (Dr.).....950
Nov. 24—The Cowboys and the Bachelor Girl (Dr.).....
Dec. 1—Pals (Dr.).....
Dec. 8—What Great Bear Learned (Dr.).....
Dec. 15—Old Norris' Gal (Dr.).....

PATHE.

Nov. 18—Military Cyclists of Belgium (Ed.) ..276
Nov. 19—The Other Way (Com.).....995
Nov. 21—The Old Longshoreman (Dr.).....331
Nov. 21—New South Wales Gold Mine (Edu.).....959
Nov. 25—How Rastus Gets His Turkey (Com.).....508
Nov. 25—Wonderful Plates.....997
Nov. 25—Isle (Dr.).....492
Nov. 26—A Dog's Instinct (Dr.).....459
Nov. 26—An Eleventh Hour Redemption (Dr.)..998
Nov. 21—A Border Tale (Dr.).....979
Nov. 28—A Lesson.....285
Nov. 28—Who Is Number? (Com.).....950
Nov. 30—Unusual Types of Europe (Sc.).....444
Dec. 2—The Lure of Minnie Lind (Dr.).....446
Dec. 2—What a Dollar Costs.....344
Dec. 4—The Maid of Niagara (Dr.).....995
Dec. 5—The Crucet Domestic (Com.).....185
Dec. 5—The Messenger Dog (Dr.).....456
Dec. 7—An Accidental Agitator (Com.).....950
Dec. 7—Cocoanut Plantation (Sc.).....248
Dec. 9—Saved by the Nick of Time (Dr.).....800
Dec. 9—Soap in His Eyes (Com.).....184
Dec. 10—Her First Husband's Return (Dr.).....999

SELIG.

Oct. 31—Settled Out of Court (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 3—The Early Settlers (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 7—The Lady Barbers (Com.).....
Nov. 7—The Bachelor (Com.).....
Nov. 10—The Vampire (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 14—Mr. Four Flush (Com.).....990
Nov. 17—Gratitude (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 21—No Place Like Home (Com.).....
Nov. 21—The Dull Razor (Com.).....
Nov. 24—The Merry Wives of Windsor (Dr.)..1000
Nov. 28—The Queen of Hearts (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 1—The Stepmother (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 5—The Widow of Mill Creek Flat (Dr.)..1000
Dec. 8—In the Wilderness (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 12—A Tale of the Sea (Dr.).....1000

VITAGRAPH.

Oct. 28—Captain Barnacle's Chaperone (Com.)..994
Oct. 29—The Telephone (Dr.).....665
Oct. 29—A Day on the French Battleship "Justice" (Scenic).....335
Nov. 1—A Double Elopement (Dr.).....990
Nov. 4—The Children's Revolt (Dr.).....992
Nov. 5—On the Mountains of Kentucky (Dr.)..978
Nov. 8—A Tale of a Hat (Com.).....954
Nov. 11—The Nine of Diamonds (Dr.).....990
Nov. 12—Jean Goes Fishing (Dr.).....988
Nov. 15—Drumsticks (Dr.).....998
Nov. 18—A Modern Courtship (Com.).....
Nov. 18—The Bum and the Bomb (Com.).....
Nov. 19—Francesca Da Rimini (Dr.).....
Nov. 22—Suspicion (Dr.).....
Nov. 25—A Four-Footed Pest (Com.).....
Nov. 25—The Statue Dog.....
Nov. 26—Love, Luck and Gasoline (Dr.).....
Nov. 29—A Woman's Love (Dr.).....
Dec. 2—Jack Fat and Jim Slim at Coney Island (Com.).....951
Dec. 3—The Poacher's Wife (Dr.).....1001
Dec. 6—A Tin Type Romance (Com.).....996
Dec. 9—He Who Laughs Last (Com.).....927
Dec. 10—The Color Sergeant's Horse (Dr.).....978

THOMAS RICKETTS

Motion Picture Producer and Director

For two years Chief Dramatic and General Producer for the Essanay Company, has withdrawn from The American Film Company, and will consider proposal from responsible firm. Author and Producer of The Celebrated Full Reel One Scene Art Pictures: "Justified," "Gratitude," "The Adventuress," "Woman's Wit" and "Maud Muller," "Hand of Uncle Sam," "The Thief," "The Game." "His Only Child," "The Stolen Fortune," "A Fair Exchange," "An Advertisement Answered," etc., etc., etc.

THOMAS RICKETTS, 1262 Wilson Avenue, Chicago, Ill.
Phone Edgewater 5800

PIERO CALZABINI

Nine years' experience as Comedy Director and camera operator with Pathe Freres, Cines Co., etc. Rider in famous Italian Cavalry picture photographed by Ambrosio.

OPEN FOR ENGAGEMENT.

Address Piero Calzabini, care of M. P. World.

Independent Film Stories.

AMERICAN.

THE REGENERATION. A young couple in a country town were paying out an existence. The husband was arrogant and unbearable. The town respected him for his manly virtues. The wife was pretty and dissatisfied. Unable longer to bear the brutalities of town life, the wife deserted with a true lover. The young husband, distracted by the wife's desertion, lost his grip and gradually sank through the stages of degeneracy until he was driven from the town, a thing despised.

In desperation, and in a half-drunken frenzy, the degenerate decided upon suicide as apparently the easiest way out of his difficulties. He is seen on the edge of a desolate pier extending into the sea and swept by the gigantic waves of a storm that is rending heaven and earth, apparently as an expostulation against this unwonted sacrifice of human life. The wild and terrible appearance of his surroundings does not deter him from his desperate purpose, and with a wild shriek he launches himself into the grasping sea.

On the far-off tower of a life-saving station the ever watchful eye of one of our lifeguards notices with consternation the action of the young husband. He immediately raises an alarm and with his comrades launches the lifeboat. They struggle manfully towards the place where the would-be suicide has disappeared and eventually reaching his side, manage to rescue him from a watery grave. The unlucky and weak-minded young fellow then wanders away from the town where he has seen so much happiness.

Grovelling along the country roads, begging his food from the farmers, he came upon the vineyard home of a girl and her mother. The women were in a despondent state, because of the dissolute condition of their vines. Poverty was haunting them and they were powerless to avert it. The degenerate found a great solace in the presence of the girl and offered his services in the vineyard for his board. He was taken in and the regeneration of the vines and the man began.

A year passed and the vineyard prospered under the hand of the man and the girl. The crop was heavy, and love and happiness were in the vineyard home. The man, forgetting his past in the joy of his present, declared his love for the girl, and she gave herself to him in the purest of love.

At this point fate accidentally brought the unfaithful wife and her lover upon the scene. She was unhappy in her sinful life, and endeavored to rush into her husband's arms, but he repulsed her. The jealous wife attempted to abuse the little vineyard girl, and the husband drove her and her lover from the scene. The awakening to his strained position and the idea of his unworthiness in the life of the little girl crushed his spirit, and he bowed in anguish before the contemplation of another love lost. The soothing touch of the little girl revived him, and in the depths of her innocent eyes he found the consolation he needed. Her sweetness and purity through the agency of love had regenerated the vines and the man.

GREAT NORTHERN.

THE POACHER.—An inveterate poacher and his sons are engaged in their unlawful occupation when a gamekeeper interferes. By shooting one of the young men in the leg, he succeeds in capturing him, and takes him to his house. Here the young fellow is looked after kindly enough, and he falls in love with the gamekeeper's daughter. One evening his father and brother enter the gamekeeper's cottage and rescue the prisoner, who, however, realizes that if he is to win the object of his affections, he must give up his old pursuits. He goes to the gamekeeper and tells him of his intentions, and the older man finds him work. One day the young lover observes his father and brother shooting a deer. To save them from imprisonment, he hides the quarry, but is discovered by the gamekeeper. Desirous of saving his father, the young man says he shot the deer, but the old man will not accept his son's well-intentioned explanation, and admits that he is the culprit. On his also resolving to give up poaching, the gamekeeper forgives the father and approves of the son's addresses to his daughter.

POWERS PICTURE PLAYS.

WHEN THE WORLD SLEEPS.—James Madison has lost heavily in the stock market. His friend Wesley visits him and leaves in his care a wallet containing five thousand dollars. The wallet is placed in Madison's safe, and in the morning Madison hands the wallet to Wesley but the money is gone. Wesley charges Madison with having stolen his money. A detective is called in, and humorous situations arise from his suspicions of everybody in the household. The mystery is solved when the three men lying in wait see Madison's wife enter in her nightrobe, open the safe and place the missing money inside. Then they realize that Mrs. Madison is a somnambulist and has taken and replaced the money in her sleep. Your audiences will sit up and take notice during every minute of this film.

THE MEDICINE MAN. Sam Lane is a Western medicine faker. Some Indians chase him, capture his wagon and proceed to drink the contents of his medicine bottles. The antics of these Indians after the medicine has taken effect are too funny for words. Sam is rescued by Red Sheen, who takes him to the home of his sweetheart, Kit Thomas. Sam's shoeless manners make a hit with Kit, who throws over Red Sheen. Old Man Thomas catches Sam kissing "Kit" and at the point of a pistol makes him promise to marry the girl as soon as he brings the sheriff. Sam explains that he is already a married man and persuades "Kit" to accept Bill. When the old man arrives with the sheriff he is surprised to find the girl in the arms of Bill.

THE REHEARSAL. Mrs. Van Alton, a society amateur actress, engages Robert Harlowe to "coach" her in private rehearsal for an amateur performance. She is fascinated by the actor, who is equally smitten with her charms. Harlowe's wife learns of her husband's infatuation and follows him to the society woman's home, where she finds the pair in a love scene not in the play book. In a powerful dramatic scene the actor's wife denounces the woman, whose husband enters in the midst of the scene and demands to know what it all means. With great magnanimity the actor's wife says: "We were only rehearsing a scene," and all ends happily for both couples.

THANHOUSER.

RIP VAN WINKLE.—Rip Van Winkle, although a loving father to his little girl Meenie, and a hale-fellow-well-met with all his fellow townsmen, is being constantly scolded by his wife for leading an idle and profitless existence. Rip is also fond of the bottle, and spends the greater part of his time and money at the village tavern.

Catching him entering the house late one night after a day's carouse, his wife Gretchen becomes thoroughly angry with him and drives him from the house. In the face of a terrible storm and with only his dog Schneider and his faithful rifle to protect him, Rip wanders toward the mountains.

Here he comes across a band of Gnomes who are supposed to be the spirits of Henrich Hudson and his merry men who disappeared near the Catskill Mountains, hundreds of years before, and had never been heard of since. The Gnomes give Rip some magic schnapps to drink, and under its influence he goes to sleep for twenty years.

When he wakes, he is an old man and in ragged clothes, his dog is dead, and his rifle has rusted away. He makes his way as best he can back to the village, and his old home. But there on one knows him. He finds his wife married to another man, his daughter grown to womanhood, and most of his old friends dead and gone.

Rip, however, finally manages to prove his identity, and also to lay claim to his property, which has greatly increased in value during his sleep, and which he is just in time to save from being unlawfully confiscated by his old time enemy. Happily reunited to his family, Rip looks forward to his declining years with a spirit born of peace and solace.

THE GIRLS HE LEFT BEHIND HIM.—Jack Redfern is a young bachelor who has finally succumbed to the charms of the other sex and arranged for a dive into matrimony. At this momentous stage of his life he receives the following note in feminine handwriting:

> Dear Jack: Ever so glad to hear of your approaching marriage. It's the best thing you ever did in your life. I know. I've tried it twice. An Old Sweetheart of Yours.

Gazing into the fire, Jack dreamily contemplates the letter and tries to think which "old sweetheart" it could be.

Could it be Betty, his schoolgirl sweetheart? He conjures up a vision of her as she looked in the old days, walking slowly down the country road swinging her books on their strap. She is startled to see a fight going on further down the road. Sae runs to the scene of the combat and finds that the participants are Jack and another schoolboy. Betty rushes between them and stops the fight. Jack explains to her that the other fellow says she loves him best. Betty makes the boys shake hands, and then kisses Jack. The other boy goes off feeling blue. Betty and Jack and then seen holding hands and Jack carrying Betty's books.

The vision fades and next he dreams of Kate, his football mascot. Could she have written that startling note? He sees a corner of the grandstand at a football game, with Kate in the front row vigorously waving a college flag. Jack, a player in the game, hurts his wrist, to Kate's great grief. Heroic Kate bandages his wrist with her lace handkerchief.

Could Tootsie of the Gayety have been the writer? As Kate's vision fades, a picture of Tootsie comes before him as he saw her on the stage. He sees himself throwing her a huge bunch of violets which she fervently kisses, while he looks supremely happy.

Then a vision of Elizabeth, his fair co-ed, arises. Elizabeth and he, both in cap and gown, walk slowly along the college campus, reading from the same book. As they cross a road, an auto containing a party of visitors comes swiftly upon them, and so engrossed are they in their book that they do not see their danger until too late. Elizabeth, who is nearest the auto, is knocked down, despite Jack's efforts to save her. Jack and the autoists revive her; opening her eyes, she smiles up into Jack's face and assures him that she's all right. He assists her to her feet and gently leads her to the auto.

Then in turn he calls up visions of Clara, the Summer girl, as he suddenly left her when her father chased him off the premises; of Jeanette, the fascinating young widow who tricked him; of Helen, whom he could have married had he not met Mary, the sweetest sweetheart of them all, when he awakes to woo. His final vision is at the wedding, where, as the ceremony is being performed, he sees the group of old sweethearts waving good luck to him.

THE IRON-CLAD LOVER. Dick makes love to Bessie while Tom plays a game of chess with her father. Tom, naturally nervous, plays such a poor game that he and the old man quarrel and Tom is ordered from the house.

Next day is Bessie's birthday. Tom brings a bouquet and a box of candy. But he is turned away from the house and has the gifts thrown at his head by Bessie's father.

Dick arrives and is welcomed. Tom, in desperation, buys a suit of armor, puts it on and has himself delivered to the house as a present to Bessie. Dick finds out that Tom is inside the armor and makes life miserable for him, blowing cigar smoke through the visor and making love to Bessie. Tom, unable to stand this, tries to announce himself, but only succeeds in tumbling over and breaking a valuable vase. Bessie's pa has the "armor" thrown out.

Dick's conscience makes him tell Bessie that Tom was in the armor and they start to the rescue. They are horrified to learn that the old man has sold the armor to a junk dealer; and Dick and Bessie have an exciting chase before the junkman is rounded up, when it takes the combined efforts of a policeman, locksmith and plumber to release Tom from his iron suit.

LUX.

THE POOR STUDENT.—John Shay, the son of a widow in very moderate circumstances, decides to go to college and work his way through. Arriving in the college town, he is directed to a boarding house, but when he enters and learns from the landlady her rates, which are quite high, he explains to her his scarcity of money and starts to go away. She, however, liking his manners and appearance, proposes that he remain and act as waiter for her at meal time, in exchange for his board and lodging, and he, not being proud, accepts.

The college is a co-educational institution and at the boarding house are a number of young lady students. Among this number are Hazel Jones and Isabelle Smith, the latter, a very popular girl, but one possessing a very haughty disposition.

John imagines himself in love with Isabelle, and in order to give vent to his feelings, purchases for her out of his slim savings a bunch of violets. This he fondly lays at her place at the table. When meal time arrives and all gather at the table, Isabelle discovers the violets and, very greatly pleased, inquires of the various boys if they know who left them for her. One of the young men happened to see John place the violets at her plate and informs her of that fact. This so incenses her that she leaps to her feet and throwing the flowers angrily to the floor, proudly leaves the room, giving John a contemptuous look as she passes him.

Hazel, who has closely observed the affair, feeling a deep sympathy for John, rises and picking up the violets asks his permission to keep them. This, of course, he gratefully grants her. He then, realizing the vast difference in the character of the two girls, lets his heart go out to the one who showed him such delicately expressed sympathy.

He also realizes most fully the humiliating position he occupies at the school and decides to go away and seek his fortune elsewhere. Expressing this determination to his best man friend in the college, the friend decides to join forces with him and the two leave for the mining fields.

After great discouragement, they finally strike a rich placer, and selling it advantageously, they return once more to the haunts of men. John, now being a rich man, at once seeks out the little girl who proved a true friend. He arrives at the college in his automobile, and going to the front of the boarding house, gets out. Hazel and Isabelle happen to be sitting together on the front steps, going over their lessons. They both see John, but as he advances Hazel shrinks back, but Isabelle runs forward to greet him, having observed the style in which he has arrived. Going politely past Isabelle's outstretched hand, which he coolly ignores, he goes up to Hazel and takes timid little hand in both of his. Of course Hazel loves him—how could she help it? And how proud John's mother is of his little "co-ed" wife.

A CLEVER RUSE.—Miles Darragh and Matthew Daly are two old cronies who have reached that stage of life where, having plenty of money, they decide to take things easy and enjoy themselves. Darragh has a daughter named Maud and Daly has a son called King. King and Maud are engaged to be married, much to the joy of the two who see in the union of the two families the culmination of their fondest dreams.

One day, while the two old gentlemen are peacefully playing cards in the Darragh library, King and Maud have a violent lovers' quarrel in the drawing-room, over King's refusal to give up cig-

Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

THEATRES DESIGNED EVERYWHERE

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs

THE DECORATORS SUPPLY CO.

2549 Archer Avenue :: CHICAGO, ILL.

He knew of a man, Luigi Lombardo, who would readily undertake such a task for money, so he called on the Italian and opened negotiations.

Luigi was the unconvicted head of the Camorrists in America and was surrounded by the scum of Sicily, Calabria and Naples, which he controlled absolutely. He would stop at nothing to make money.

The bargain made, Herbert arranged to have Luigi receive Harry when he arrived at a given period lured there by a false message which he would send.

Harry was at home with his mother when the message arrived and he carefully left the house to aid, as he thought, a friend in need. Luigi's men were lurking in the shadow and suddenly pounced upon him as he stepped and carried off bound and gagged, to the lair of the gang. Then Luigi was struck with an idea. Why kill? Was there for a solitary five thousand would he could be kept alive, a prisoner, and used to blackmail the man who wanted him out of the way. So when Herbert [illegible] the Italian told him it would be far better to the [illegible] to a safe retreat to [illegible] would [illegible] to [illegible] to [illegible] to Indian Sherlock Holmes, is engaged and quietly he begins the work of investigation.

While collecting evidence on another case, Petroso happens to visit the Italian quarter and there overhears a drunken Scotch speak of a prisoner in the old ruins. He follows the fellow and discovers him to be one of Luigi Lombardo's tools. Subsequently, Petroso reaches the old ruins where Harry is incarcerated and succeeds in releasing him at the risk of his life, and, with the aid of a squad of police also arrests Luigi and his band of cut-throats.

By means of the harrowing, nerve-racking torture of the "Third Degree" a confession is forced from the weaker of the gang which is used later on to convict Luigi and send him up the river for a long term.

Petroso does not allow Harry to return home as yet but keeps him in seclusion until the night of a reception which Herbert gives to his friends in the Van Sant mansion, in spite of the widow's protest. There he declares himself the rightful heir to Harry's share of the Van Sant millions and just as his friends are about to drink his health the family attorney introduces Petroso, who tells the villain he will bring to him a man to whom he dare not repeat the declaration he has just made. Herbert's face blanches but his nerve does not forsake him until Harry is brought in and he realizes his danger. His attempt to escape is frustrated by Petroso who turns him over to the proper authorities.

Mother and son are again united and joy reigns in the Van Sant household where a few hours before only gloom and dispair existed for her.

WESTERN JUSTICE.—Excitement ran rampant around the Willouby's ranch house. Mrs. Willouby had just rushed up to the dozen or more cowboys and told them she could not find her little daughter, Hazel, and that she feared she had been stolen by the Indians. Naturally, the boys got busy because everyone loved "The Kid." A searching party was hurriedly organized and the surrounding country scoured but without success.

Meanwhile, little Hazel, clasping tightly her rag doll, had wandered away, just out of sight of the ranch house, when suddenly an Indian on horseback dashed by and snatched up the child, rushing madly on without slackening speed.

Soon they arrived at an Indian camp in the foothills and Hazel was roughly thrust inside a teepee where she cried herself to sleep.

Dancing Water, beautiful daughter of the old chief, determined she would rescue the pale face child and endeavor to take her back to her parents. That night, after all the braves and squaws had gone to sleep and the camp was bathed in moonlight, Dancing Water noiselessly drew aside the canvas walls of Hazel's prison and crept inside where she found the child slumbering peacefully, her doll clasped tightly to her breast. Shaking her gently the Indian girl succeeded in awakening Hazel without being overheard by the guard outside and then quietly led the child outside and away while the camp slept on. They ran until Dancing Water realized her little companion could not keep up the pace longer then she bravely carried her until she, too, became exhausted and they stopped to rest. But one of the Indians from the camp was on their trail and soon overtook them. Dodging from tree to tree he was almost upon them when a trapper appeared from another direction, followed by a number of cowboys from the ranch, who were still searching for Hazel, when the redskin decided to retreat.

Meanwhile, the happy Mother Willouby was alternately laughing and crying over the child in her arms. When the excitement had abated sufficiently for intelligent conversation, little Hazel was asked to tell the story of her capture. Soon the assembled group awoke to a realization of the great wrong they had done Dancing Water as the child told how she had rescued and protected her and was about to bring her home.

Mounting their horses, the cowboys dashed off for the Indian camp hoping to reach there in time to prevent the torture they knew too well would be inflicted on the squaw who had thwarted their plan of revenge on the whites.

They arrived just in time, for Dancing Water, who had been brought in by the Indian who had trailed her, had been sentenced to death by fire and a swarthy redskin was just about to apply the torch. After a sharp and decisive battle the girl was rescued and taken back to the ranch house where she was given a home by the Willoubys.

ATLAS.

BROTHERS.—The last wish of a dying mother to her fatherless boys, both of tender years, was that they always treasure her memory and try to live as she had taught them, to be honest, truthful and manly. She bade them take a photo of herself, the only one she had ever owned, and cut it in two, each of the boys to retain one half. Then she passed away and the boys began their struggle with the world, friendless and alone.

Years come and go until we take up the thread of the story again. Here we have a picture of plenty and prosperity on one side, enjoyed by the younger brother who forged ahead and made for himself a fortune and fame, and the dregs of degradation, the depths of sin on the other, in which the elder brother played a prominent part.

In a low gambling den, reeking with vice and filth, a game was in progress. In stalked a roughly dressed, drink bedoddened wreck of humanity and staked his last dollar on a card, and lost. Then, from an inner pocket he drew a gold watch and chain and presented it for a loan. Through his dust at his back stepped a policeman accompanied by a man who identified the man at the table as the one who stole his watch. Well, he was caught with the goods and sent up for a year, which was reduced three months by good behavior, and he was released to again prey on society. And this was the elder brother.

The younger brother had just closed a successful business deal, netting him many thousands and he was returning from the office in a happy mood. Passing a beggar on the corner he stopped long enough to take a ten dollar note from a well-filled wallet and dropped it in the outstretched hand and then hurried home to a warm fire and the loving wife and child who awaited him.

The beggar looked in amazement at the crisp, new greenback in his hand. Surely, a man who carelessly gives away large sums to beggars on the street must be very wealthy, he thought. Why should he have plenty and another suffer poverty, was the trend of his thoughts. So the beggar followed the other man and learned where he lived. That night, the younger brother's butler came into the library where he sat, after the family retired, and excitedly told him there was a burglar in the house. Cautioning him to remain silent, the man of the house secured his revolver and secreted himself behind a screen to await developments. Soon the folding, glass doors were pried open from without and a man stepped in to face a drawn revolver and hear the command: "Hands up!"

While they were waiting for the police to come, the burglar sat by a center table cursing his fate. Suddenly his eyes rested on a half-picture leaning against the reading lamp. Reaching in his pocket he brought to light a piece of dirty newspaper wrapped around some object within. Unwrapping it carefully he produced something which he held beside the half picture on the table and then burst into tears. Two brothers had met again.

Outside the police were coming. It was but the work of a moment to send the butler for a lounging robe and to place the burglar in a comfortable chair with a lighted cigar in his mouth. When the police came they were told the burglar had escaped.

Anyway, the bad brother changed his ways and the good brother placed him on his feet. On the first anniversary of his marriage the bad brother, now good, held a little reception but he refused to join in the toast drank to his health.

ECLAIR.

THE BOWLING CRAZE.—Jack becomes extremely interested in a game of bowling, and after watching for a considerable length of time, feels a strong desire to participate in the game creeping over him. He begs to be allowed to join the contest, but he is so wonderfully awkward, and makes such fearful blunders that they speedily turn him out. However, our valiant friend is not discouraged, and he immediately sets to work to train himself. Before very long he becomes a first-class bowler the craze has seized him, and has accomplished its work. The proud Jack then presents himself once more to the players who so unceremoniously threw him out of their game a short time before, and astonishes them by beating them all to smithereines! Thus Jack becomes a victim of the bowling craze, and won for himself the illustrious title of "Napoleon of the Bowling Alley!"

OUR DEAR UNCLE FROM AMERICA.—Uncle Durand from Cincinnati, an eccentric old fellow, is expected by his nephews. As they are called away from home very unexpectedly, they instruct their servant, Baptist, to look after the comfort of their uncle in every possible way until they return, in case he should arrive in the meantime. Shortly after the young men have departed there is a ring at the bell; Baptist immediately concludes that it must be Uncle Durand, and hastens to the door. There he finds a very delapidated looking tramp—"Ah, yes," muses the anxious Baptist; "this must be he, for they told me he was a queer old fellow!" Accordingly, the old servant ushers the Beggar in and shows him every attention. The nephews return, and notwithstanding their surprise at the unusual attire of their millionaire uncle, they put it down to his eccentricity, and treat the imposter with all kindness and consideration, and make all as pleasant as possible.

In the midst of the merry-making, however, the real Uncle Durand makes his appearance, and is astonished to find another receiving his honors. At first he becomes furious, and gives chase to the now frightened tramp. In the end, however, as old Uncle is at heart one of the kindest and noblest of men, he forgives the imposter, and sends him away with a present of such goodly proportions that the tramp can scarcely believe his eyes! And then, when all the complications have been explained, Uncle and nephews settle down to a real jollification.

LUX FILMS.

WHAT WILL IT BE? Little Jim is miraculously born, and even in his early days walking is considered out of date, and Jim is provided with a tiny cycle. At school our hero is undoubtedly the worst boy, and his pranks are at once the despair of his teacher and the delight of his school mates. When he arrives at man's estate, Jim becomes a soldier, where his lunatic propensities are not appreciated. He tries the more prosaic occupation of a house decorator, and in double-quick time the walls of a house were repapered, furniture moved in, and a cozy home provided. Jim at last falls in love, and discarding the old-fashioned, if more romantic methods, proposes by telephone. He is accepted, the happy day arrives, and Jim, with breathless haste, is married. Naturally enough the family are even more precocious than himself, and Jim looks on at their peculiar antics with a benignant smile. Age comes rapidly, and we see Jim developing beard and whiskers at seventy, while at the age of 100 his lunatic appendage becomes quite patriarchal. Finally we see him carried out of the house, and keeping up his reputation as a hustler to the last, Jim departs in an aeroplane.

CHAMPION.

THE SHERIFF AND THE DETECTIVE.—A continuous series of robberies were baffling the population and the sheriff of Elk Lick, in that they were perpetrated by a bold masked bandit upon travelers on every highway.

Coincident with this situation, the arrival into town of Howard Beechwood is viewed with suspicion by the sheriff and with ill favor by the townfolk. Sheriff Smith and Beechwood are antagonistic from the start and the constant sleuthing of the former is regarded as discreditable and accusing to Beechwood, the Easterner.

Incidentally the lone sympathizer with the Easterner is the sheriff's daughter, and her interest becomes so apparent as to cause uneasiness to Arthur Simpson, a young rancheman, who will not brook interference from an outsider. Determined to nip the probable attachment in the bud, he proposes to her and is surprised at her refusal, even when his suit is favorably countenanced by her father, the sheriff. Simpson angrily denounces the Easterner as being the masked outlaw, and his sentiments are upheld by the sheriff, but the girl is adamant and in turn shows him the door.

After interviewing the banker, the sheriff engages the services of his daughter as an aide in the capture of the alleged bandit. Beechwood, with the instructions to casually acquaint the Easterner of the fact that money is to be sent from the bank in a buckboard accompanied by one man instead of the usual escort. At the deliverance of this remark, she notes with failing heart the sudden pallor depicted on his face.

The next morning the buckboard leaves the bank whereupon Beechwood stealthily usurps the driver's place, and escorted by two deputies for he is a secret detective with orders to bring the desperado to justice drives furiously off.

At the same instant the sheriff, heading a posse is lying in wait for the suspected bandit, who suddenly appears at the approach of the buckboard and fires a halting shot. He misses his mark and is himself caught by the return fire of the detective.

Meanwhile, Ruth regretting her share in the entrapment, is riding toward the buckboard with the object of warning young Beechwood, and is just in time to see the Easterner shoot the bandit. Realizing that their suspicions were unfounded she hastens to uncover the masked bandit, only to be stopped by the detective who believes that it is no other than her own father—the sheriff.

But the sheriff and posse, having heard the exchange of shots hurriedly arrive, and the situation being cleared, both men make up with a hearty handshake.

But who is the masked robber? With one accord they approach the prone figure in the roadway and turning him over, tear the mask from his features and discover Arthur Simpson.

The next day she found herself locked in. However, her coronet braid on the bureau gave the girl an idea. With her clothes she quickly made a dummy for the bed, arranged the hair to peep from under the coverlet and got behind the door—then, as her father entered carrying her breakfast, she slipped out, ran through the cellar and made for the hollow tree, where she found Lee awaiting her. Laura would not consent to be married at once, but agreed to write her father a note declaring she would commit suicide. Lee, note in hand, hurried off to the house.

Here he found Nathan and Roger discussing the young woman's disappearance. Breathlessly they ran to the tree and cut the rope already fastened around her neck; then, while Roger hastened away for water to revive the fainting girl, Lee pierced his heart with a pasteboard knife. But his shout of laughter, as Laura innocently turned the bucket of water over his rival, opened the old man's eyes, and in a twinkling he was chasing the merry rascal.

Nothing daunted, however, Lee set about engaging the toughest looking men in the vicinity to waylay Laura, her father and Roger as they started for prayer meeting. In the midst of the disturbance, Lee, the conquering hero, would rush up, knock each ruffian down (for which they were to get an extra fee), and receive the old man's congratulations with his consent and blessing to their marriage.

This scheme worked better than even Lee had planned, for just as the father was humbly offering his apology and blessing the happy couple

JONES Duplex Check GATE

THE BEST WAY TO COUNT YOUR PUBLIC

This cut is from a Photograph of the Duplex Check Gates installed in Erie Station of the Hudson Tunnels.

Nearly 1,000,000 persons have passed through them this year. If it will work there, it will work in your place.

Perfect Count Smooth Operation

Manufactured by

JONES Change Register Co.
INC.

18 Broadway :: NEW YORK

W. E. Greene Film Exchange, Inc.

The oldest and largest Independent Film Exchange in New England

Mr. Exhibitor: When you see your receipts drop, call on us

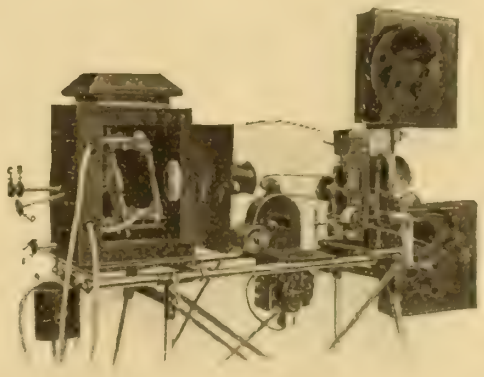
If you are unable to call, drop us a line and we will convince you that our service is the service you want to increase your business

Don't forget the name and address

W. E. Greene Film Exchange
INCORPORATED
228 Tremont Street Boston, Mass.

The "STANDARD"

THE MACHINE THAT GIVES RESULTS



FIREPROOF—FLICKERLESS

Two hundred sold in New York City alone during past few months. Gaining popularity daily. Now in use in majority of largest and best Theatres in this city. Follow their example and you can make no mistake.

Write for Illustrated Catalogue—Dept. W.

AMERICAN MOVING PICTURE MACHINE CO.
101 BEEKMAN STREET :: :: NEW YORK

[illegible] Alice ... read a ... and ... Roger by ... they were ... and ... and Bill ... [illegible]

SOLAX COMPANY.

LADY BETTY'S STRATAGEM. [illegible] opens with a ... in progress ... one of the real Colonial ... Gathering ... beach and the ... dance ... the Shay ... with enjoyment and ...

Lady Bettie, a ... and entertaining maiden with a will of ... and courage to do and dare, is beset by two ... gentlemen of equal rank and eligibility. ... with both, but seems unable to make up her mind as to whom she shall finally choose.

... during ... dance, Lady Bettie ... in her boudoir. ... little niece comes running in, bringing with her a gypsy, whom she has encountered while at play. The two girls eagerly offer their hands to the gypsy to learn what the future has in store for them. Lady Constance is well pleased with what she hears. Lady Bettie is told that one of her two lovers seeks her gold alone. Angrily dismissing the gypsy, Bettie broods over what she regards as a slight to her charms, and finally conceives the idea of disguising herself as a man and find out for herself. Her sister tries to dissuade her, but in vain. The self willed young lady, disguised as a Continental officer, starts out on her mad escapade.

Boldly entering the tavern of the Blue Hen, where the nobles were wont to assemble, she quickly finds herself in a whirlwind of action which takes her through a succession of astonishingly amusing adventures, culminating in her discovery that one of her lovers is a villain. In angry resentment of a remark made by him, reflecting upon herself, Lady Bettie slaps his face and finds herself involved in a duel.

The result of the encounter, how Lady Bettie is extricated from the perilous position in which she finds herself, how true love finally triumphs, how villainy is overcome is charmingly set forth by a succession of charmingly interesting comedy

NESTOR.

THE CONQUERING HERO.—Why his daughter, Laura, should so stubbornly prefer Lee Howard to wealthy Roger Elkins, Nathan Bradford was totally at a loss to understand. He had forbidden Lee the house and threatened to disinherit his daughter, yet he feared they might elope at any moment.

This, however, Roger Elkins volunteered to prevent by appointing himself body guard to the young lady whenever she left the house. Indeed it was in this manner that he found their improvised post office in the hollow of a tree, and, from their letters, discovered that the elopement they had feared, was actually planned for that night.

At the appointed hour, Nathan and Roger secreted themselves in the bushes near the girl's window. Nor did they move until Lee had the ladder in place and Laura was half way down; then they crept out safely while the old gentleman brought his cane down upon what he supposed to be Lee's head. It proved, nevertheless, to be Roger's, for the other had observed the angry father in time to get out of the way and call Laura to hasten up the ladder to her room.

THIS WEEK'S PROGRAM OF INDEPENDENT FILMS.

Monday, December 5.

American—Vera, the Gypsy Girl (Dr.) 930
Eclair—The Price of a Sacrifice (Dr.) 833
Eclair—The Laundry Girl's Good Night (Com.) ..82
Imp—Aspirations of Gerald and Percy (Dr.)..995
Yankee—In the Czar's Name (Dr.) .....

Tuesday, December 6.

Bison—A Sioux's Reward (Dr.) .....
Powers—The Medicine Man (Com.) .....
Powers—The Rehearsal (Dr.) .....
Thanhouser—Rip Van Winkle (Dr.) 1000

Wednesday, December 7.

Ambrosio—The Tell Tale Portrait .....
Ambrosio—Tweedledum Learns a Tragical Part (Com.) .....
Atlas—Nature's Nobleman (Dr.) .....
Champion—Hearts of the West (Dr.) 950
Nestor—The Conquering Hero (Dr.) .....

Thursday, December 8.

American—Two Lucky Jims (Com.) 955
Imp—'Twixt Loyalty and Love (Dr.) 990
Itala—A Soldier of the Cross (Dr.) .....

Friday, December 9.

Bison—A Brave Western Girl (Dr.) .....
Lux—What It Will Be (Com.) 491
Lux—And She Came Back (Com.) 452
Solax—Lady Betty's Strategy (Dr.) .....
Thanhouser—The Girls He Left Behind Him....
Thanhouser—The Iron Clad Lover .....

Saturday, December 10.

Columbia—(Title Not Given)
Great Northern—The Poacher (Dr.) .....
Itala—Prolishead Knows How to Take Precautions (Com.) .....
Powers—The Ride to Death (Dr.) .....
Reliance—A Dispensation (Dr.) .....

INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES.

AMERICAN.

Nov. 21—Starlight's Devotion (Dr.).....960
Nov. 24—Nothing But Money (Com.).....740
Nov. 21—A Big Joke (Com.).....220
Nov. 28—Regeneration (Dr.) .....
Dec. 1—A Touching Affair (Com.).....
Dec. 5—Vera, the Gypsy Girl (Dr.).....930
Dec. 8—Two Lucky Jims (Com.).....955

ATLAS.

Nov. 2—Turning of the Worm (Dr.).....
Nov. 2—That Dog Gone Dog (Com.).....
Nov. 2—That Doggone Dog (Com.).....
Nov. 16—The Hand of Providence (Dr.).....
Nov. 23—Cast Thy Bread Upon the Waters (Dr.)
Nov. 30—Saved by a Vision (Dr.).....
Dec. 7—Nature's Nobleman (Dr.).....
Dec. 14—Brothers (Dr.) .....

CAPITOL FILM CO.

Sept. 17—Round Trip $5.98 (Com.).....
Sept. 24—Bill Mason's Ride (Dr.).....700
Oct. 8—All's Fair in Love and War (Dr.)....
Oct. 15—A Shot in the Night (Dr.).....
Oct. 22—The Locket (Dr.) .....

CHAMPION.

Sept. 28—A Western Girl's Sacrifice (Dr.).....900
Oct. 5—The Cowboys to the Rescue (Dr.).....900
Oct. 12—How the Tenderfoot Made Good (Dr.).950
Oct. 19—Stolen by Indians (Dr.).....950
Oct. 26—Doings at the Ranch (Dr.).....950
Nov. 2—Caught by Cowboys (Dr.).....950
Nov. 9—The Ranchman and the Miser (Dr.)....950
Nov. 16—The Way of the West (Dr.).....950
Nov. 23—Let Us Give Thanks (Dr.).....950
Nov. 30—The Indian Land Grab (Dr.).....950
Dec. 7—Hearts of the West (Dr.) 950
Dec. 14—The Sheriff and the Detective (Dr.)..950

COLUMBIA.

Oct. 15—Tracked Across the Sea (Dr.).....
Oct. 22—Breaking Home Ties (Dr.).....
Oct. 29—In the Web (Dr.).....
Nov.12—The Heroine of 101 Ranch (Dr.).....
Nov. 19—Oklahoma Bill (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 26—Stage Coach Tom (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 3—The Cattlemen's Feud (Dr.).....

DEFENDER.

Oct. 13—The Tale the Camera Told (Com.).....
Oct. 20—The Heart of a Cowboy (Dr.).....
Oct. 27—A Clause in the Will (Dr.).....
Nov. 3—Cohen's Generosity (Com.) .....
Nov. 10—The Last Straw (Dr.).....
Nov. 17—The Education of Mary Jane (Dr.)..
Nov. 24—Forgiven (Dr.) .....

ECLAIR.

Oct. 31—Little Mother (Dr.).....635
Nov. 7—The Resurrection of Lazarus (Sc.).....645
Nov. 7—Religious Fetes At Tibet (Sc.) 330
Nov. 14—Ginhara, or Faithful Unto Death (Dr.).720
Nov. 14—The Devil's Billiard Table (Com.)....270
Nov. 21—The Exiled Mother (Dr.) 920
Nov. 28—The Wreck (Dr.).....565
Nov. 28—A Difficult Capture (Com.).....380
Dec. 5—The Price of a Sacrifice (Dr.).....833
Dec. 5—The Laundry Girl's Good-Night (C.).....82
Dec. 12—The Bowling Craze (Com.) 445
Dec. 12—Our Dear Uncle From America (Com.) 470

CINES.

Eclair.

Sept. 23—Tontolini as a Ballet Dancer (Com.)..236
Sept. 30—Giovanni of Medici (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 7—Giorgione (Dr.) 1000
Oct. 14—The Mad Lady of Chester (Dr.).....965
Oct. 21—The Last of the Savelli (Dr.).....800
Oct. 28—Tontolini Is in Love (Com.).....480
Oct. 28—The Pretty Dairy Maid (Dr.).....480
Nov. 4—A Wooden Sword (Dr.) 800

GREAT NORTHERN.

Oct. 29—Who Is She? (Dr.).....
Nov. 5—The Jewel Case (Dr.) .....
Nov. 5—A Fatal Picnic (Com.) .....
Nov. 12—World's Wrestling Champions.....
Nov. 12—Mother-in-Law Arrives (Com.).....
Nov. 19—The Diamond Swindler (Dr.).....
Nov. 26—Kean, or the Prince and the Actor....
Dec. 3—The Birthday Present (Dr.).....
Dec. 3—The Ohami Troupe of Acrobats (Sc.)..
Dec. 10—The Poacher (Dr.) .....

IMP.

Nov. 17—Fortune's Wheel (Dr.).....990
Nov. 21—Their Day of Thanks (Dr.) .....
Nov. 24—The Country Boarder (Com.) .....
Nov. 28—The Revolving Door.....
Dec. 1—A Child's Judgment (Dr.).....
Dec. 5—Aspirations of Gerald and Percy (Dr.).995
Dec. 8—Twixt Loyalty and Love (Dr.).....990
Dec. 12—Faithful Max (Dr.) 500
Dec. 12—A Clever Ruse 500
Dec. 15—The Poor Student (Dr.) 1000

LUX.

Nov. 18—Bill as a Lover (Com.).....462
Nov. 18—Bloppo In Search of the Black Hand (Com.) 468
Nov. 25—In Friendship's Name (Dr.).....901
Dec. 2—Bill as an Operator (Com.).....485
Dec. 2—Necessity Is the Mother of Invention (Dr.) 449
Dec. 9—What It Will Be (Com.) 491
Dec. 9—And She Came Back (Com.) 452

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO. ("Bison.")

Nov. 11—Bud's Triumph (Com.).....
Nov. 15—Flight of Red Wing (Dr.) .....
Nov. 18—An Indian Maiden's Choice (Dr.).....
Nov. 22—True Western Honor (Dr.).....
Nov. 25—Cheyenne Love for a Sioux (Dr.)....
Nov. 29—The Ranchman's Personal (Dr.).....
Dec. 2—A Child of the West (Dr.).....
Dec. 6—A Sioux's Reward (Dr.) .....
Dec. 9—A Brave Western Girl (Dr.) .....

ITALA. (By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Nov. 19—An Original Palette .....
Nov. 24—Sacrificed (Dr.) .....
Nov. 26—A Chosen Marksman.....
Nov. 26—A Windy Day (Com.).....
Dec. 1—A Painful Debt (Dr.).....
Dec. 3—The Big Drum.....
Dec. 3—The Dog Keeper .....
Dec. 8—A Soldier of the Cross .....
Dec. 10—Foolshead Knows How to Take Precautions (Com.) .....

AMBROSIO. (By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Nov. 2—The Slave of Carthage (Dr.) .....
Nov. 9—A Floating Message.....
Nov. 16—Mermaid .....
Nov. 16—Tweedledum's Corporation Duty (Com.)
Nov. 23—Gounod Ave Maria (Dr.).....
Nov. 30—The Jeuda's Money (Dr.).....
Dec. 7—The Tell Tale Portrait .....
Dec. 7—Tweedledum Learns a Tragical Part .....

NESTOR.

Nov. 2—The Girl From The West (Dr.).....
Nov. 9—The Woodsman (Dr.).....960
Nov. 16—The Ranchman's Bride (Dr.) .....
Nov. 23—A Deal in Indians.....1000
Nov. 30—Valley Folks (Dr.).....
Dec. 7—The Conquering Hero (Dr.) .....

POWERS PICTURE PLAYS.

Dec. 3—When the World Sleeps (Dr.).....
Dec. 6—The Medicine Man (Com.).....
Dec. 6—The Rehearsal (Dr.).....
Dec. 10—The Ride to Death (Dr.) .....
Dec. 13—A Plucky Western Kid (Dr.) .....
Dec. 13—The Tramp Bicyclist (Com.) .....
Dec. 17—His Gypsy Sweetheart (Dr.) .....

RELIANCE

Nov. 5—Where Sea and Shore Doth Meet (Dr.)
Nov. 12—Under a Changing Sky (Dr.) .....
Nov. 19—Moulders of Souls (Dr.).....
Nov. 26—So Runs the Wat (Dr.).....
Dec. 3—When Woman Wills (Dr.).....
Dec. 10—A Dispensation (Dr.) .....

REVIER.

Dec. 14—Love's Sorrow (Dr.) 950

SOLAX COMPANY.

Nov. 11—A Widow and Her Child (Dr.).....
Nov. 18—Her Father's Sin (Dr.).....900
Nov. 25—One Touch of Nature (Dr.).....
Dec. 2—What Is to Be, Will Be (Dr.).....
Dec. 9—Lady Betty's Strategy (Dr.) .....
Dec. 16—Two Suits .....

THANHOUSER.

Nov. 18—The City of Her Dreams (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 22—A Thanksgiving Surprise (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 25—The Wild Flower and the Rose (Dr.).1000
Nov. 29—Value Beyond Price (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 2—John Halifax, Gentleman (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 6—Rip Van Winkle (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 9—The Girls He Left Behind Him .....
Dec. 9—The Iron Clad Lover .....

YANKEE.

Oct. 31—Italian Sherlock Holmes (Dr.).....
Nov. 7—Spirit of the West (Dr.) .....
Nov. 14—The Case of the Missing Heir (Dr.)...
Nov. 21—Lone Wolf's Trust (Dr.) .....
Nov. 28—The Heart of an Actress (Dr.).....
Dec. 2—Queen of the Nihilists (Dr.).....
Dec. 5—In the Czar's Name (Dr.).....
Dec. 9—Western Justice (Dr.) .....
Dec. 12—A Fight for Millions (Dr.) .....

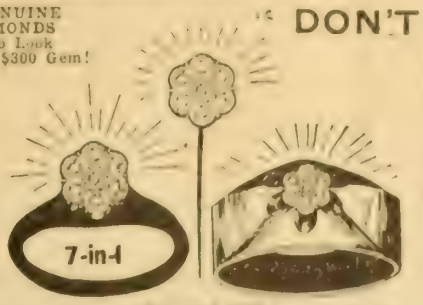
NEW SLIDES

For the Following Songs—JUST OUT

My Rose From The Garden of Love.
You Are the Light of My Life.
Where the Desert Meets the Nile.
Lou
Take Me Back To Dear Old Dixie
You Are The Light Of My Life
Put Your Arms Around Me.
Winter.
Gee-Whiz, Sweety, I'm Stuck On You.
Cowboy
That's When Life's One Grand Sweet Song.
Only One Daisy Left
Oh, That Boog-a-boo Man
Any Place Is Heaven When You are with the Girl You Love
When June rolls around with its roses, I'll roll around with a ring.
The longer we're together, the harder it is to part.
Maybe you're not the only one who loves me.
Sweet Red Roses.

DeWITT C WHEELER
120 W. 31st St., N. Y. City

7 GENUINE DIAMONDS Set to Look Like $300 Gem!



DON'T SEND A CENT

Greatest Genuine Diamond Jewelry Innovation and Sensation in Years. "A $300 flash for $30" cash.

$30 AFTER you have examined the goods in your express office!

Patented 1909.

DESCRIPTION—Each ladies' ring, men's ring, men's vest or scarf pin and ladies' earscrew is set in platinum with SEVEN PERFECT BLUE WHITE GENUINE DIAMONDS, imported direct from Amsterdam by us. The setting of platinum is firmly held in 14k gold and the work is so marvelously ingenious that the seven diamonds seem to blend; GIVING ALL THE FIRE, BEAUTY AND BRILLIANCE OF A $300 DIAMOND. Not the old, flat cluster effect, but the raised setting, TIFFANY STYLE. If you want the most wonderfully beautiful bit of jewelry on the market today at absurdly low cost, send us a postal card, chat to accept, ordering pin, stud or ring (giving size of finger with piece of string), and we will ship at once. Open the package in your express office. If not all we claim for it, keep your money, refuse the goods, and we will pay the express charges both ways. Choice of any article, set with 7 genuine diamonds set to look like one solid stone, other sizes at $40, $50, $60.

DIAMOND IMPORTERS STRELITZ BROS. EST. 1874

Columbus Memorial Bldg., 103 State Street, CHICAGO

A SWELL 3 REEL SHOW

1 Reel Johnson Training Picture

2 Reels Johnson-Jeffries Fight

(An impersonation which can be shown in any city.)
All three for the price of the fight pictures alone.

Exclusive Rights for Ohio of the Nelson-Wolgast Fight Pictures

WRITE FOR DATES AND PRICES

The Toledo Film Exchange Co.
319 Superior St., TOLEDO, O.

HALLBERG
THE ECONOMIZER

SAVES two-thirds on electric bill and makes BIG CUT on the first cost of your complete equipment.

I carry stock of all makes M. P. Machines, Opera Chairs and Supplies.

Free Catalogue No. W-50

J. H. Hallberg, 36 East 23d St. New York City

Among the Exhibitors.

St. Anne, Ill. Hugh Ross is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Columbus, Ohio. Architect Bayer is preparing plans for the erection of a new moving picture theater on West Broad street, for Al Taylor.

Woonsocket, S. D. Geo. Ryckman & Son are making arrangements to start a new moving picture theater here.

Omaha, Neb. Harry Beaumont, manager of the Parriages Theater, St. Joseph, Mo., is contemplating the erection of a new moving picture theater here.

New York, N. Y. Coleman Brothers have decided to open a new theater at Third avenue and 145th street. It is known as the Avenue Theater.

Columbus Junction, Iowa. Al and Ed Westcott have sold the Majestic theater here to Mr Knight of Muscatine, Ia.

New Orleans, La. Ed. Tylor has decided to start a new moving picture show in the French Union Hall.

Reading, Pa. Fred C. Newhard of Pottstown, Pa., has leased the Pennsburg Opera House here, and will operate it as a moving picture show.

Reading, Pa. Wm. K. Goldenberg has purchased the Palace Theater at 734 Penn street.

Springfield, Mass. W. H. Lyons will open a new moving picture theater at the corner of Oak and Main streets, Indian Orchard.

Windsor, Vt. The Lemaux Moving Picture Company is erecting a new theater at Claring street.

Lamar, Colo.—R. Z. Goodwin has purchased the family theater and took possession.

Florence, Mass. E. B. Starks and John Day have purchased the Lilly Theater here, and took possession.

Cairo, Ill. Mrs. C. Banks has purchased the Garrick Moving Picture Theater here from Moore & Jackson.

Independence, Mo. Charles Nagel is making arrangements to start a new moving picture theater in the Brown building.

Bartlesville, Okla. H. W. Pemberton will open a new moving picture theater in his building on Johnstone avenue.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Architect Frank L. Stiff is preparing plans for the erection of a new moving picture theater at East Fifth street and Central avenue for R. C. Gouldale.

West Haven, Conn. N. Lapp and F. Dimes are preparing to open a new moving picture theater at 105 Campbell avenue.

Frazeysburg, Ohio. Miss Sarah Coffman will open a new moving picture theater here.

Northfield, Minn. A. K. Wood is making arrangements to open a new theater here where will give moving picture entertainments.

Neligh, Neb. Riley & Wagers have opened a new moving picture theater here, which will be known as the Elite.

Aberdeen, S. Dak.—C. W. Gates and J. C. Jamison have opened a new moving picture theater here.

Utica, N. Y.—Thomas H. Williams is preparing plans for the erection of a new vaudeville and moving picture theater on Main street.

Continental, Ohio. P. V. Lemley has leased the Dodd building, and is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater.

Delarge, N. D. M. F. Wood is planning the opening of a new moving picture theater here.

Cleveland, Ohio. [illegible] a new moving picture theater at the corner of [illegible] and Broadway.

New London, Wis. R. Kaestner and [illegible] have purchased a moving picture show at DePere.

Waterloo, Iowa. H. J. Schmitz has sold the Jewel Theater here to C. J. Ross.

Charleroi, Pa. The National Theater Company has been organized and will operate a chain of moving picture theaters.

Rahway, N. J. Plans are being drawn for the erection of a new moving picture theater here by Irving Street.

Monongahela, Pa. The Ideal Theater has secured a good lessee due to the booking of the latest and best moving pictures.

Chicago, Ill.—The moving picture theater at 3255 North Clark street, formerly under the management of I. R. Rehms, has been sold to H. J. and R. L. Reese, who will continue to run it on the same successful way as it has been run in the past.

Washburn, Wis. W. J. Mercer, manager of the Odanah Theater, has leased the [illegible] now occupied by the bowling alley and will have same fitted up for the moving picture shows. He will have a moving picture show.

Lincoln, Ill. A new moving picture theater is being fitted up in the [illegible] on East Broadway by Edel Jones.

Haverhill, Mass. A permit has been issued for a brick front, and a moving picture and vaudeville theater built in its place for Louis B. Mayer, president of the Mayer Amusement Company.

BARGAINS BARGAINS

Powers Cameragraph, $75. Edison Kinetoscope, $65.
Motiograph, as new, $100.
Pathe's Passion Play, low price.
Cinegraph cost $150, only $85.
Electric Stereopticon, $15. Davis Stereopticon, $18.
Postal Card Projectors, $2 50 up.
Send for Sup. of Bargains in Projecting Machines and Supplies. Motion Picture Machines wanted.
HARBACH & CO., 809 Filbert St., PHILA., PA.

Exhibitors

We can supply with exclusive service of Imp, Bison, Powers, Thanhauser, Challenge, Nestor, Atlas, Yankee, American Champion makes cheaper than any other exchange. Signs and Posters—YES.

J. Frank Hatch Film Co.
Hatch Building
109 Fourth Ave., Pittsburg, Pa.

United States Film Brokers and Importers

41 Union Square West Broadway and 17th St. NEW YORK CITY

The largest dealers in new and second hand Association and Independent Films in the United States.

Second-Hand Film $5.00 per reel upwards.

New Film 4c. per foot upwards.

Cameraphone Film, new, with two sets records.

Edison and Power's Machine, like new.

All goods shipped subject to examination and partial acceptance on receipt of deposit covering express charges.

Complete lists sent free upon request.

WINNEBAGO WALTZES

A beautiful piece of music for piano, especially appropriate for motion pictures. By mail, 12 cents per copy. With each order we send professional copies of our illustrated song hits.

NUGENT BROTHER'S MUSIC CO.
KAUKAUNA, WIS.

OPERATORS' HANDBOOK, $1.50
MOVING PICTURE WORLD

DECEMBER FILM OFFERINGS

We offer for sale in our December list of films some very good bargains. All films are in good running condition at moderate prices, and if you want to have the films renovated, taking out all scratches, etc., the price will be $1.50 per reel extra.

We also have several copies of the Reproduction of the Johnson-Jefferies Fight for sale at $125.00 per copy.

CHICAGO FILM EXCHANGE
Chicago, Ill. Omaha, Neb. Denver, Col.
Salt Lake City, Utah

FILMS FOR RENT

New Films High Class Service

The Pioneer House, With 8 Years Experience and $250,000.00 Back Of It

Write To-day for Terms

EUGENE CLINE

57 and 59 Dearborn St., Chicago

In answering advertisers, kindly mention the Moving Picture World.

ADVERTISING : ANNOUNCEMENT SLIDES

Genre Transparency Company
507 N. Clark Street : : : Chicago

"Electra" Carbons

Standard for Carbon Quality

PINK LABEL

Every carbon is perfect in every detail

ELECTRA TRADE MARK

When buying carbons why pay as much or more for poorer kinds when you can get the straightest, most uniform, homogeneous, longest-burning carbons in the world. Big stock, prompt shipments.

PINK LABEL

Hugo Reisinger

Sole Importer

11 Broadway, New York

¶ Put in our Easels and Poster Frames and watch your attendance grow.

¶ We make mechanical attractions, Electric signs, or anything special in the theatrical line. ¶ Ideas developed—Low Prices—Best Work—DON'T DELAY but write to-day.

THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.
717-719 Sycamore St., Cincinnati, O.

Classified Advertisements

[Classified advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted.]

THEATER FOR SALE.

FOR SALE Moving Picture and Vaudeville Theater in a live town of 50,000 in Eastern Pennsylvania. Seating capacity 500. Best location in town. Could be changed to 10c house. Good reason for selling. P. N. I., care of Moving Picture World.

FOR SALE One of the largest Moving Picture and Vaudeville Theaters in Washington, D. C. P. O. Box 617, Washington, D. C.

FOR SALE Attractive modern Moving Picture Theater. Best location in city of 100,000, good lease, best of equipment, 250 upholstered seats. Half interest for $1,000 or the whole for $2,500, half cash. Reason for selling, other business out of city. This is a positive snap. Address P. W., care of Moving Picture World.

FOR SALE Modern, thoroughly equipped theater in city of 25,000, seats 250. Everything new. Full information upon request with reasons for selling. Address, CROUSE & KUNZ, Mansfield, Ohio.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—Educational and descriptive reels, cheap. Full particulars. Write. BIJOU THEATER, Edmonton, Alberta, Can.

FOR SALE—Power's No. 5 with spiral gear, magazine, complete, used 4 months, cost $200.00 for $115.00. Economy coil $15.00; 10 reels film at $10.00 per reel. Edison's Great Train Robbery, bargain. E. U. McFARLAND, Warren, Ohio.

FOR SALE Cheap, 200 Opera Chairs, 120 Wood and 80 upholstered. Also portable asbestos booth. Box 817, Middletown, Conn.

SITUATIONS WANTED.

AT LIBERTY First-class reliable Operator, twelve years' experience. Can furnish two best Powers machines and 30 reels good film. Low salary. Address, MOVING PICTURE CO., 37 Fairmont avenue, New Haven, Conn.

AT LIBERTY German operator wants position outside New York State. Seven years' experience with different machines. Address, ARTHUR STEELE, 205 Garden street, Hoboken, N. J.

MISCELLANEOUS.

WANTED Colored films of all kinds in good repair. Also want Cinephone talking machine and pictures. Will pay cash. IRA FENTON, Watsonville, Cal.

WANTED First-class pianist, singer and trap drummer for up-to-date moving picture theater in Calgary, Alta., Canada. Generous salaries to right parties with good references. Address, CANADIAN FILM EXCHANGE, Calgary, Alta., Canada.

Correspondence Course. Special rates to the trade, send for free illustrated catalogue.

School class meets every morning and afternoon, with F. H. Richardson of Chicago, as chief instructor. Evening classes meet every Monday, Wednesday and Friday. We positively guarantee you a $15 position.

We have a Powers' Cameragraph No. 5 in A-1 condition for $85.00 and an Edison Exhibition Model Machine for $60.00

We carry a large line of electrical supplies and furnish everything for the theatre.

F. C. TAYLOR
49 West 28th Street New York City
Phone 1405 Madison Square

Announcement Slides
Advertising Slides
Songs Illustrated

THREE STAR SLIDE CO.
Rooms 523-4
225 Dearborn Street - Chicago, Ills.

E. O. Prince T. P. Bible

Imperial Film Exchange
144 N 12th St. Philadelphia, Pa.

Mr. Exhibitor: We can give you a Commercial Film Service for the lowest prices. Write, Wire or 'Phone.

OUR

Musical Electrical Bells

(which are played from a Key-board, the bells being mounted in various parts of the house) have been a great success all over the country, and no Picture-house is complete without a set of them. We can supply 25 Bells, 2 octaves chromatic, C to C, correctly tuned to your Piano, complete with Resonators, Keyboard, Magnets, and boards, complete ready to install for $75.00.

The above is a special offer and holds good for a limited time only, so ORDER NOW and be the first in your locality.

J. C. DEAGAN
3800 to 3810 North Clark Street
CHICAGO, U. S. A.

SPECIAL ROLL TICKETS The Big Ticket. Any Printing Any Colors.

5,000	: : : :	$1.25	20,000	: : : :	$4.60	50,000	: : : :	$7.50
10,000	: : : :	2.50	25,000	: : : :	5.50	100,000	: : : :	10.00

Get the Samples Stock Tickets, 6 Cents

NATIONAL TICKET COMPANY - - - Shamokin, Pa.

FOLDING CHAIRS

For Moving Picture Shows Grand Stands, Assembly Halls, etc. In sections if wanted.

Write for Catalog No. 2.

The Kauffman Manufacturing Co.
ASHLAND, OHIO

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES

ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. No. 31

The A. H. Andrews Co.

174-176 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill. Branches in all leading cities

CHEAP

Steel Frame Theatre Chairs

ABSOLUTELY Non-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small theatres and Moving Picture shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

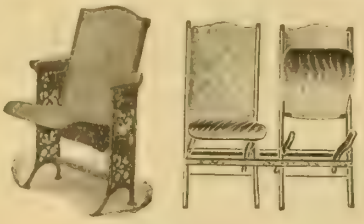
Second Hand Chairs

Also seating for Out-of-Door Use.

Address Dept. W.

STEEL FURNITURE CO., Grand Rapids, Mich.
New York Office: 130 Fifth Avenue
Boston Office: 224 Congress St., Boston, Mass.

Opera and Assembly Chairs



Most popular priced chairs on the market for pictures show use.

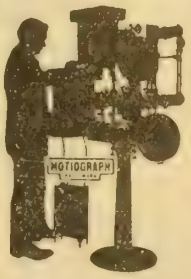
Prompt Shipments. Write for Catalogue
PEABODY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO.
NORTH MANCHESTER - - INDIANA
New York Agents—ROBERT J. EHLERS CO.
Lexington Ave and 43rd St. - New York, N. Y.

The Automatic Theatre Chair

It is a friend to the public
It advertises your theatre and makes your business grow.
It folds automatically and can be revolving, stationary or self righting.
It is the only sanitary chair.
It is a space saver, life-saver and money-saver.
It is the world's greatest theatre chair.
If you have not seen our latest models, investigate.
Write today for Circular A.

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO.
Canal Dover, Ohio, U. S. A.

FILMS FOR SALE. 50 Reels of Film $8 to $16 per Reel
Second-hand one pin Edison machine, $100 00
MAYER SILVERMAN, 105 Fourth Ave., PITTSBURG, PA



IT IS EASY TO DECIDE

Which machine to buy when there is no other anywhere near the equal of the Motiograph

When our patented double cone shutter saves about 25% of the illumination, projects a 25% brighter picture than other machines, eliminates flicker, is more convenient, and will last longer with less attention, there is but one thing to do, and that is

INSTALL THE MOTIOGRAPH

The improved mechanism and arc lamp are wonders for simplicity, accessibility and general convenience. Send for our catalogue giving Reasons Why.

Manufactured and Jobbed by ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. CO., 564-572 WEST RANDOLPH ST. CHICAGO, U. S. A.

J. H. HALLBERG, Agt.
36 E. 23d Street, New York City

EDWARD H. KEMP, Agt.
833 Market Street, San Francisco Cal.

J. F. BROCKLISS, Agt.
London, Paris and Berlin

LUCIEN PRÉVOST

MECHANICAL ENGINEER

Formerly Chief Designer of Pathé Frères

OFFICE ADDRESS, 54 Rue Philippe de Gerard, Paris
WORKS : : 25 Bd de la Chapelle, Paris

Cameras
Perforating and Printing Machines (NEW PATTERNS)
Cleaning, Measuring and Joining Machines

The Longer We're Together, The Harder it is to Part

DeWitt C. Wheeler Release, Oct. 24th, 1910

That's what they all say after using our exclusive song slide service.

25 CENTS A SET PER WEEK

Our method of forwarding your weekly supply in one consignment should appeal to you for various reasons. Write and find out.

The Largest Slide Exchange in the World

Chicago Song Slide Exchange
Sixth Floor, Portland Block
107 Dearborn Street Dept. 1 Chicago, Ill.

EVERY OPERATOR

wants the Bio Arc Screen as soon as he sees it. It enables him to get a better light, and get it easier than ever before. Send along a dollar and see for yourself. Your money back if you want it. That's fair, isn't it?

CHARLES L. KIEWERT CO.

39 Cortlandt Street, New York — 421 Frick Building, Pittsburg — 58 Plymouth Court, Chicago
114 Huron Street, Milwaukee — 195 Fremont Street, San Francisco

SILVO KURTAIN KOAT IS NO INFRINGEMENT

ON ANY PATENT

We guarantee to protect anyone using SILVO against prosecution.

FOR $6.00 YOU CAN HAVE A PERFECT SILVERED SCREEN which enables you to cut down on juice, and show a better picture than any other screen,

ONE CAN OF SILVO WILL COVER 350 SQUARE FEET AT $6.00.

Order from your Exchange or direct from us, C.O.D,

Kurtain Koat Co., : : 2107 W. Lake Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

EXHIBITORS
BEWARE!

Don't run rainstorm and scratched films in your theatre when you can get first-class films in good condition.

We have equipped a special plant where all our films are renovated as soon as scratched, and our customers are guaranteed to get their films as good as new.

We have opening for one first run customer, also for very late service.

If you are interested in this write or wire at once.
We have the following feature films:

Original Wolgast-Nelson and Nelson-Gans Fights
Custer's Last Stand
U. S. Military Tournament
Knight Templar Conclave
Reproduction of the Johnson-Jeffries Fight

CHICAGO FILM EXCHANGE

Chicago, Ill. Omaha, Neb. Denver, Col.
Salt Lake City, Utah

THE ENTERPRISE MODEL B

Portable Calcium Gas Outfit

Is the only Substitute for Electricity for projecting Motion Picture or Stereopticon views and is the

Only Satisfactory Portable Outfit

because it operates by WATER PRESSURE, IS CONSTANT, REGULAR AND RELIABLE and has no complicated spring valves to corrode, choke up and otherwise get out of order. Is patented.

"OXONE" in SQUARE CAKES is most Satisfactory for the production of Oxygen Gas. Send for particulars.

For Sale by Dealers

Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co. MANUFACTURERS AND SALES AGENTS 564 and 572 W. Randolph St. CHICAGO

TITLES SLIDES

WRITE us for samples of our plain and tinted, also NATURAL COLORED TITLES. The latter is something new and will interest every up-to-the minute motion picture man. COST NO MORE. All orders shipped same day as received. NO DELAY.

We also make all kinds of SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT and ADVERTISEMENT SLIDES. Write for our list and prices.

EXCELSIOR FILM COMPANY
3225 E. RAVENSWOOD PARK CHICAGO ILL.

5c SHOW SOUVENIRS

IMPORTED CHINAWARE—Per 100	$3.00
ALL LEATHER PURSE—Per 100	3.00
TRICK MATCH BOX—Per Gross	.75
1911 AERIAL PLANS, Latest Novelty—Per Gr.	1.25
FANCY WOOD WHISTLES—Per Gross	.75
JAPANESE TURTLE-IN-GLASS BOX—Per Gro.	.90
FANCY COLORED RETURN BALLS—Per Gro.	1.25
HORSESHOE MIRROR, Asstd. Colors—Per Gro.	1.00
SKELETON ACROBAT NOVELTY—Per Gro.	1.50
FRENCH LIP AIR WHISTLES—Per Gro.	1.25
JAPANESE 4-INCH TRAYS—Per 100	1.50
IMPORTED STONE STEINS—Per Gro.	2.00
DECEPTION WINE GLASS—Per Gro.	1.25

Terms: Half deposit, balance C. O. D.

NEWMAN MFG. CO.,
641 and 647 Woodland Ave., Cleveland, Ohio.

Champion Films

The Sheriff and the Detective

Released Dec. 14th

A real Western detective story, containing 950 feet of hair raising happenings, in which the culprit finally gets his deserts.

The detective, though not loosing track of his man, has time to fall in love with the sheriff's daughter, who proposes to aid him in his work.

Acted and photographed perfectly, and should be ORDERED EARLY.

Wednesday is CHAMP day.
Demand CHAMP every week.

SPECIAL:—Through new arrangements at our factory, we are now able to absolutely guarantee every CHAMP to be as steady as a wall painting and our new stock will stand wear like cowhide. INVESTIGATE!

SEE RELEASE DATES FOR CHAMP FEATURES

CHAMPION FILM CO.

Mark M. Dintenfass
General Manager

12 East 15th Street
NEW YORK, U. S. A.

Laboratories at Coytesville on the Hudson

CHAMP

THE CHAMP STAMP

Sold only through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company
111 East 14th Street, New York City
Live Men Are On Our Mailing List—Are You?

Ornamental :: Indestructible
Fire Resisting

THEATRE AND STAGE FRONTS
ARTISTIC CEILINGS

Designs Suitable to Any Building. Blue Prints, Suggestions and Estimates Free. Ask for Our Design Book M.

The Kanneberg Roofing and Ceiling Co., CANTON OHIO

The Cincinnati-Buckeye Film Company

$100.000.00 incorporation, operating the CINCINNATI FILM EXCHANGE, 315 W. 4th Street, Cincinnati, Ohio, and the BUCKEYE FILM PROJECTING COMPANY, 309 Arcade Building, Dayton, Ohio. Biggest Independent Film Renting Concern in the UNITED STATES today. BUYING almost the entire Independent Output. Reference: SALES COMPANY, 111 E. 14th Street, New York. If you are looking for a real Film Service, drop us a line.

The Cincinnati-Buckeye Film Co.

315-317 W. Fourth St. CINCINNATI, OHIO
309-321 Arcade Building DAYTON, OHIO

I want a rattling, good correspondent. Must know the film game thoroughly. A1 reference required. Write quick.

"GEN. FLIMCO"

Before

After

Taking a Dose of Dr. Laemmle's Plain-Truth-Trust-Killer

When I started to administer Public Doses of Plain Truth to old Gen. Flimco, he was the healthiest specimen of Trust in America. He had the cutest little scheme up his sleeve you ever saw. If he had been permitted to put it into effect without exposure, he would have had the moving picture business tied in a neat little knot by this time. But conditions are changed. As soon as moving picture exhibitors were told exactly what old Gen Flimco was up to and how to spoil his little plans, they jumped on his calloused hide with both feet and with much earnestness. Old Gen. Flimco began to lose flesh and prestige and cash. He is now a sorry shadow of his former self. All this merely goes to show what you exhibitors can do when YOU WORK IN UNISON AND HARMONY! You have the power to control this business. Use your power. Drive out every rascal now in the game. Clean up! If you feel that some of the credit for the killing of Gen. Flimco is due to me, then show how you feel by coming to me with your patronage. If I don't make good, nobody on God's green earth can!

MACHINES IN TERRIFIC DEMAND. DO YOU WANT ONE?

In the past six weeks the demand for Power, Motiograph, Edison and other machines has been something terrific. It surpasses anything I have seen in five years. I always carry a big stock of machines ready to ship. If you want one—or any accessories of any sort—place your order now.

CARL LAEMMLE, President

THE LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE

Headquarters: 196-198 Lake Street, Chicago

OMAHA, NEB. MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

The biggest and best film renters in the world

If you are in the Market for

SECOND HAND FILMS

Write to the largest and most reliable Dealers and Importers of these goods in the U. S.

International Film Traders

German Savings Bank Building

147 Fourth Avenue NEW YORK CITY

JUST A MOMENT PLEASE

Mr. Exhibitor, have you sent us your order for one of our

Film Announcement Titles

Any of the following Announcements sent by mail upon receipt of price.

That's All, Good-Night—15 ft.
Hand Colored Trick Film..... $2.00
(Same Black and White) 1.50

Entire Change of Program To-morrow—10 ft.
Hand Colored 1.50
(Same Black and White)..... 1.00

We thank you for your patronage and ask you to call again—20 ft.
Hand Colored 3.00
(Same Black and White)..... 2.00

Next Show in Five Minutes—10ft.
Hand Colored 1.50
(Same Black and White) 1.00

All that have not seen the entire Performance may remain for the next—20ft.
Hand Colored 3.00
(Same Black and White) 2.00

Any Announcement you wish made to Order at lowest Prices.

Send us an Order. Your money back if you say so.

French American Producing And Manufacturing Co.

918 Madison Street CHICAGO

ADMISSION TICKETS

Reading—5c.-10c. and ADMIT ONE
Correctly Numbered. Good Paper

Per Roll of 2,000. . . . . $ .20
10 Rolls. 1.90
20 Rolls 3.75

Dissolving Stereopticons and Moving Picture Machines, repair parts for all Machines, Carbons, etc.

ERKER BROS. OPTICAL CO.
604 OLIVE STREET :: ST. LOUIS, MO.

The Moving Picture Theatre Supply House of the West

The Mirror Screen Has Revolutionized The Moving Picture Industry

Don't take our word for it—Read what those who know say about it.

Mr. J. Austin Fynes of Riverside Drive, New York, Pioneer Moving Picture man of America, for 15 years General Manager B. F. Keith's enterprises writes: "I regard the Mirror Screen as absolutely the most important invention that has yet come forth in our business, because it will kill present criticism of dark houses. Over here in New York, an ordinance has just been put forward, making lighted theaters a requisite for license. The Mirror Screen will comply with this regulation, and I don't know anything else that will or can."

Mr. J. A. Berst, of New York City, Vice-President Gen. Film Co. and also Vice-President of Pathe Freres, writes: "I unhesitatingly endorse the Wonderful Qualities of the Mirror Screen."

Mr. Charles A. Calehuff, of Philadelphia, Pa., the Leader Film Man, says: "I consider the Mirror Screen the MOST WONDERFUL INVENTION of the MOTION PICTURE WORLD."

Mr. Wm. E. Smith, Prop. The Bijou, Fond du Lac, Wis., says: "It has increased my business easily 25 per cent. It has done all that is claimed for it and more—it has put the picture business on a higher plane. People are visiting our theater that were never inside of a picture house before.

A FEW RECENT PURCHASERS OF THE MIRROR SCREEN

T. A. Bryan, Lyric Theater, Cedar Rapids, Iowa.
Chas. Namur, Colonial Theater, Des Moines, Iowa.
M. Angel, Feature Theater, Clinton, Iowa.
Harding & Goldberg, Princess Theater, Omaha, Neb.
W. W. Smith, Grand Theater, Springfield, Mo.
Kunz Bros., Grand Theater, Springfield, Ill.
Moline Amusement Co., Moline, Ill.
Hoof & Johnson, Lyric Theater, Rockford, Ill.
Mystic Star Theater, York, Pa.
Circle Theater, Washington, D. C.
Dreamland Theater, Dubuque, Iowa.
Otto Miller, Chester, Pa.
Sabolsky Bros., Wilmington, Del.
Harry E. Davis, Milton, Pa.
Girard Palace Theater, Philadelphia, Pa.

TAKE THIS TIP:—GET WISE BEFORE YOUR COMPETITOR DOES

Motion Picture Screen Company

SHELBYVILLE INDIANA

HARRY F. BRYAN, General Agent
Room 307—160 Washington Street
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

FRANK MANNING, Eastern Agent
355 Bedford Avenue
BROOKLYN, N. Y.

F. B. BLOOMFIELD, Eastern Agent
Majestic Theatre Building
MUNCIE, IND.

UNIFORMS AND CAPS

FOR

Moving Picture Theatres

Catalogues, Samples and Prices for the Asking

James H. Hirsch & Co.
Jackson Boulevard
CHICAGO.

New Power's No. 6 Heads $82.50

(Guaranteed for One Year)

Write us about this offer and for anything else you may need in the Motion Picture Line.

GEO. M. HOKE SUPPLY CO.
81 Clark St., CHICAGO, ILL.

COMPENSARC

This Machine cuts 2/3 from your Light Bills

Mr. Manager

If you are on a 110 or 220 volt circuit and you are using a rheostat to reduce the voltage to 35 at the arc in your lamp, you are paying for 2/3 more "juice" than you are actually using. Can you afford to waste all this energy supplied from the line, over and above what you really need?

The Fort Wayne Compensarc

saves all this waste by reducing the voltage without losing any: makes a clearer, whiter, steadier light, and eliminates all danger of fires caused by overheated rheostats.

We have a little 22 page booklet "Compensarc vs. Rheostat" that we want to send you. It will tell you plainly how you can make a big saving and a better light. Send us your name and address.

FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC WORKS
1402 Broadway
Fort Wayne, Indiana

Send TODAY for our FREE descriptive booklet

Real Music That Really Fits the Picture

"MOTION PICTURE PIANO MUSIC"

FIFTY CENTS A COPY.

A Piano Book that contains descriptive Music to fit all probable Scenes, Actions, Characters, etc., shown in Moving Pictures. Composed and compiled by a Professional Pianist of twenty years' experience in Theatrical lines. Brimfull of practical suggestions for the inexperienced Pianist in a M. P. Theater. Descriptive Circular sent free upon request. Book will be sent promptly upon receipt of fifty cents. Address,

FRELINGER MUSIC COMPANY

LAFAYETTE, IND.

Drummers—Wait!

Before you buy a drum, until you let us tell you about our new Solid Shell Aluminum Hoop Orchestra Drum. IT'S THE BEST EVER. Our Drum and Trap Catalog in return for a postal card addressed to

The J. G. Richards Co.

Dept. D. Cleveland, O.

Sound Effects

In Picture Machine Theaters it is very essential that the imitations and sound effects are of the kind that can be depended upon. We make only practical and serviceable imitations that will give the exact reproduction of the original. We also manufacture Chimes, Tympani, Bells, Xylophones, Drums and accessories.

LEEDY MANUFACTURING COMPANY

1055 E. Palmer St., INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

Xylophones, Orchestra Bells, Chimes, Forks, etc. Send for free illustrated catalogue.

J. C. DEAGAN

3800-3810 N. Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

WURLITZER

Automatic Musical Instruments

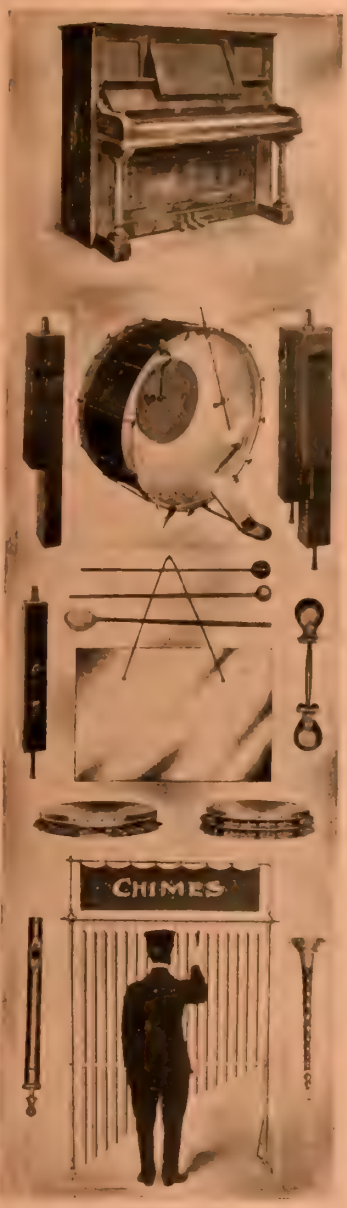
Concert Pianorchestra.

They do the work of expert musicians and reduce your operating expenses.

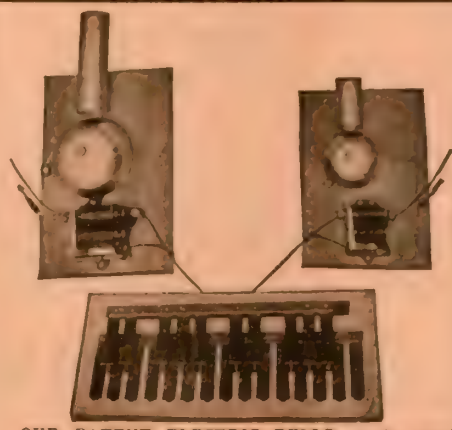
Wurlitzer is the world's largest manufacturer. We supply the U. S. Government with musical instruments. Write for big, new 84-page catalogue showing the only complete line of self-players, from a small electric piano to an automatic orchestra representing 35 musicians. Easy time payments.

The RUDOLPH WURLITZER CO.

CINCINNATI, 117 to 121 E. 4th; NEW YORK, 25 & 27 W. 32d (bet. B'way & 5th Ave.); CHICAGO, 266 & 268 Wabash Ave., PHILADELPHIA, 1835 Chesnut; ST. LOUIS, 912 Pine; CLEVELAND, 206 Prospect Ave., S. E.; COLUMBUS, O., 57 E. Main



WURLITZER



OUR PATENT ELECTRIC BELLS create great enthusiasm in Moving Picture Houses, play from a keyboard as a solo instrument, or as an accompaniment to songs. Twenty-five Bells, two octaves chromatic, including resonators, magnets and keyboard, $75.00.

J. C. DEAGAN

3800-3810 N. Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

Moving Picture Pianists

Are you "working up" your pictures? If not, why not? If so, you want some good melodramatic music. Send for free sample page of "Orpheum Collection of Moving Picture Music." Now being used and praised by many of the best houses in the country.

PRICE.....75 CENTS

Also latest cue music (series 1910) for 10 parts and piano.....$1.00

¼ discount on both numbers.

Clarence E. Sinn

1501 Sedgwick St., CHICAGO, ILL.

TO TRAP DRUMMERS

A Limited Time Offer

Special Offer { Size Shell 3 x 14 / Size Shell 3 x 15
$10.00

Solid Maple, Rosewood or Walnut, 10 fine plated thumb crew rods, Kangaroo, Angora or Slunk Calf Drum Heads.

We ship with privilege of 6 days trial

E. P. ZEIDLER DRUM CO. Dept. F. Cleveland, Ohio

Drums, Traps, and all Moving Picture Show Effects

Our New Beautifully Illustrated Catalogue now ready and will be sent free to any address upon request.

LOUIS B. MALECKI & CO.

272 WABASH AVENUE, CHICAGO.

NOW READY

Operators' and Managers' Handbook

By F. H. RICHARDSON

PRICE $1.50 POSTPAID

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

125 E. 23rd Street, NEW YORK

TO LIVE OPERATORS!

100 Free Copies

OF

Richardson's Motion Picture Handbook

This is the most practical and authoritative work ever published on the subject. It is written by a leading expert with years of practical experience. It solves the every day problems that are met in actual experience. It deals with every aspect of the moving picture business from the Street to the Screen.

We offer 100 of these books as prizes to the 100 operators sending us the best 100 letters on handling the M. P. arc lamps.

One of the foremost experts on moving picture production has told us that during a recent trip over the country, he found that less than one-fifth of the lamps were handled to the very best advantage.

We believe that all operators will welcome the opportunity of obtaining the views of other successful operators.

To promote this interchange of useful knowledge we have secured the services of an impartial expert who will comment on the best points in the best 100 letters, and these comments will be printed and distributed free of charge to ALL who compete in this contest.

The award will be made by a competent, disinterested person and will be based largely upon the thought and study displayed in the letters.

Competition Closes December 31st, 1910

Complete information regarding the terms of this competition will be furnished by

CHARLES L. KIEWERT CO.

39 CORTLANDT STREET - - - NEW YORK

Vol. 7, No. 25. December 17, 1910 Price, 10 Cents

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE ORGAN OF THE PHOTOPLAY AND ALLIED INTERESTS

NEW YORK

Make Your Patrons a Christmas Present

AND YOUR PATRONS WILL MAKE YOU PRESENTS ALL THE YEAR

THIS is the season of good-will when we show our friends our appreciation of their friendship.

Why not show your patrons that you value their patronage and want it to continue?

How can you do this?

Nothing easier; install a

"Power's No. 6 Cameragraph"

in your operating room and present the best moving pictures in the world.

Yes, when we SAY "best," we mean BEST, and any exhibitor who uses "Power's No. 6," will back us up.

LET US SEND YOU OUR CATALOGUE G. DESCRIBING ALL OUR PRODUCTS

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

115-117 NASSAU STREET, : : : : NEW YORK CITY

2 4 U

AND GOOD ONES, TOO!

THE THANHOUSER 2-A-WEEK

RELEASE OF TUESDAY, DECEMBER 20

N-o-v-e-l-t-y Spells THANHOUSER!

LOOKING FORWARD

is a film TO LOOK FORWARD TO, and to clamor long and loud for. Why? Because it's such an out and out success that REAL novelties ALWAYS have. It's a COMEDY NOVELTY, too; which makes it all the more desirable. It carries some unbeatable laughs, as, for instance, when the hero finds a suffrage war raging even in the future—but it's the women who have the vote and the men who aspire to it, and parade about with "Votes for Men" banners; and when the Lady Mayor gives her hand in marriage—by dropping to her knees and pleading with the hero to accept it. No. 169. Code Word, Forward.

Scene from "LOOKING FORWARD"

Scene from "THE CHILDHOOD OF JACK HARKAWAY"

RELEASE OF FRIDAY, DECEMBER 23

HOLIDAY SPECIAL!

The Childhood of Jack Harkaway

is a Thanhouser Holiday feature and as such you can count on a reel full of tip-top adventure, comedy and pathos. The ludicrous school experiences of the Harkaway boy appeal to your fancy as effectively as do his serious efforts, like the one he makes to head off the housebreakers, for instance. Jack Harkaway was just a real boy, with his share of a real boy's weaknesses and a share of his good points. As such, he attracts the many who like the humor and youth in their Holiday entertainment and who care for nothing so much in the film way as an old-fashioned story, well done. No. 170. Code Word, Hark.

Scene from "THE VICAR OF WAKEFIELD"

Have you put in your request for the great Thanhouser Masterpiece, released Tuesday, December 27th? Remember, this will be the prize drawing card of the month and there is a tremendous demand for it. First come first served! Get at your Exchange NOW!

The Vicar of Wakefield

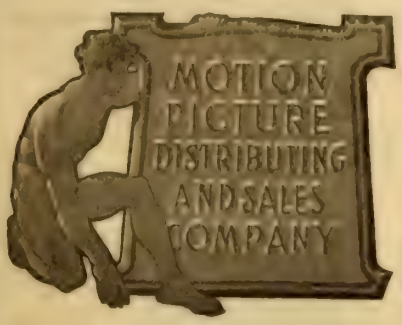
The Thanhouser Photoframe consisting of portraits of the famous Thanhouser "Stock" framed in solid oak, mission finished, 33 inches in width and 43 in depth complete with glass and easel (6 feet high) GOES TO YOU FOR $3.50 with order. This is the prize outfit that tickled-to-death exhibitors the country over are calling THE GREATEST LOBBY DISPLAY BARGAIN EVER KNOWN. For System's sake address: ART DEPT.

THANHOUSER CO., NEW ROCHELLE NEW YORK

2 4 U

AND GOOD ONES, TOO!



ITS DAYS ARE NUMBERED

With the continued and increasing co-operation of exhibitors the trust will soon cease to cast its devastating blight upon the moving picture industry. One by one its teeth are being pulled and its roars of intimidation are changing to howls of terror as its tail is twisted. Are you going to lend it your moral and financial support, or will you be satisfied with the FINEST MOVING PICTURES IN THE WORLD, selected from the following

PROGRAM

EVERY MONDAY

AMERICAN—American Film Manufacturing Company
ECLAIR—Eclair Film Company
IMP—Independent Moving Pictures Company
YANKEE—Yankee Film Company

EVERY TUESDAY

BISON—New York Motion Picture Company
POWERS—The Powers Company
THANHOUSER—Thanhouser Company

EVERY WEDNESDAY

AMBROSIO—New York Motion Picture Company
ATLAS—Atlas Film Company
CHAMPION—The Champion Film Company
NESTOR—David Horsley

EVERY THURSDAY

AMERICAN—American Film Manufacturing Company
IMP—Independent Moving Pictures Company
ITALA—New York Motion Picture Company

EVERY FRIDAY

BISON—New York Motion Picture Company
LUX—R. Prieur
SOLAX—Solax Company.
THANHOUSER—Thanhouser Company
YANKEE—Yankee Film Co.

EVERY SATURDAY

CAPITOL—Capitol Film Co.
GREAT NORTHERN—Great Northern Film Co.
ITALA—New York Motion Picture Company
POWERS—The Powers Company
RELIANCE—Carlton Laboratories.

List of BUYING EXCHANGES, December 10th, 1910

All others offering these brands for rent can supply only dupes or worn out subjects.

ALABAMA.

Dixie Film Co., 503 Chember of Commerce Bldg., Birmingham.

CANADA.

Applegath, L. J. & Sons, 145 Yonge St., Toronto, Ont.
Canadian Film Exchange, Calgary, Alberta.
Gaumont Company, 154 St. Catherine St., Montreal, Que.
Great Western Film Co., Kennedy Bldg., Winnipeg, Man.

CALIFORNIA.

California Film Exchange, 1065 Mission St., San Francisco.
Miles Brothers, 790 Turk St., San Francisco.
Western Film Company, 108 East 4th St., Los Angeles.

COLORADO.

W. H. Swanson Film Exchange, 801 Railroad Bldg., Denver.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Paramount Film Exchange, 428 Ninth St., N. W., Washington.

GEORGIA.

Consolidated Film Exchange, Rhodes Bldg., Atlanta.

ILLINOIS.

Anti-Trust Film Co., 79 So. Clark St., Chicago.
Chicago Film Exchange, 40 Jackson Blvd., Chicago.
Eugene Cline, 59 Dearborn St., Chicago.
Globe Film Service, 107 E. Madison St., Chicago.
H. & H. Film Service Co., 98 Jackson Blvd., Chicago, Ill.
Laemmle Film Service, 196 Lake St., Chicago.
Standard Film Exchange, 155 E. Washington St., Chicago.

INDIANA.

Central Film Service Co., 119 N. Illinois St., Indianapolis.

KANSAS

Wichita Film and Supply Co., 122 No. Market St., Wichita.

LOUISIANA.

Dixie Film Co., 720 Maison Blanche Bldg., New Orleans.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Boston Film Rental Co., 665 Washington St., Boston.
W. E. Greene Film Exchange, 228 Tremont St., Boston.

MARYLAND.

B. & W. Film Exchange, 412 E. Baltimore St., Baltimore.
Consolidated Amusement Co., 28 W. Lexington St., Baltimore.

MINNESOTA.

Laemmle Film Service, 400 Sykes St., Minneapolis.

MICHIGAN.

Michigan Film & Supply Co., 1106 Union Trust Bldg., Detroit.

MISSOURI.

Bijou Film & Amusement Co., 1222 Grand Ave., Kansas City.
J. W. Morgan, 1310 Walnut St., Kansas City.
Swanson Crawford Film Co., Century Bldg., St. Louis.

NEBRASKA.

Laemmle Film Service, 1517 Farnam St., Omaha.

NEW YORK STATE.

Albany Film Exchange, 418 Broadway, Albany.
Victor Film Service, 39 Church St., Buffalo.

NEW YORK CITY.

Empire Film Exchange, 150 East 14th St., City.
Exhibitors Film Exchange, 203 E 15th St., City.
Great Eastern Film Exchange, 21 East 14th St., City.
Hudson Film Exchange, 138 East 14th St., City.
Peerless Film Exchange, 94 Fifth Ave., New York City.
Wm. Steiner Film Exchange, 110 Fourth Ave., City.

OHIO.

Capitol Film Service Co., 422 N. High St., Columbus, Ohio.
Cincinnati-Buckeye Film Co., 309 Arcade Bldg., Dayton.
Cincinnati-Buckeye Film Co., 315 West 4th St., Cincinnati.
Toledo Film Exchange, 319 Superior St., Toledo.
Victor Film Service, Prospect and Huron Sts., Cleveland.

OREGON.

Ind. Western Film Exchange, Swetland Bldg., Portland.

OKLAHOMA.

United Motion Picture Co., 112 Main St., Oklahoma City.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Eagle Film Exchange, 143 N. 9th St., Philadelphia.
Ind. Film Exchange, 415 Ferry St., Pittsburg.
Philadelphia Film & Projection Co., 44 N. 9th St., Philadelphia.
Philadelphia Film Exchange, 934 Arch St., Philadelphia.

TEXAS.

Texas Film Exchange, 311 Elm St., Dallas.

UTAH.

Co-operative Film Exchange, 320 Atlas Block, Salt Lake City.

WASHINGTON.

Pacific Film Exchange, Globe Bldg., Seattle.

WISCONSIN.

Western Film Exchange, 307 Enterprise Bldg., Milwaukee.

Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co., 111 E. 14th St., N. Y City

Every IMP Film is a "Daisy"

Extra Imp! GET IT! DEMAND IT! Extra Imp!

Famous Count de Beaufort

First real, live, blown-in-the-bottle nobleman to appear in Moving Pictures. Posing exclusively for the "Imp" in a full reel entitled "The Romance of Count de Beaufort," giving dramatic incidents from his exciting life. This is an extra release—the big feature of the year! Think how sore it would make you if your licensed competitor had anything like this to offer the patrons of his house! Help us get this feature to you! All you have to do is to keep writing your exchange till you know you will get what you are writing for—the Count de Beaufort Feature Imp! It's a "daisy."

The "Imp" Christmas Release

Is entitled "The Crippled Teddy Bear" and will be released Monday, December 19th. It is a daisy! One of the prettiest stories you ever saw in moving pictures. The kind that brings a lump to the throat and then turns out happily. Watch the little girl in this playlet. You'll love her from the very start! She's a daisy!

Another "Imp" Daisy

Is our release of Thursday, December 22nd, entitled "Little Nell's Tobacco." There's a stepmother in this picture whose neck you would like to twist, but Little Neil teaches her a simple lesson she'll never forget.

First-class Camera Man Wanted at Once! Scenarios for Comedies, Love Stories Dramas, etc., Wanted at Once. Highest Prices Paid for the Right Kind of Scripts.

INDEPENDENT MOVING PICTURES CO. OF AMERICA
102 W. 101st Street, New York. Carl Laemmle, Pres.

All "Imp" Films Sold Through the Sales Co.

Caught—and Squeezed

GOOD RAW STOCK is highly essential for good films. A few weeks ago our supply of film was stopped because of a workmen's strike in Paris.

WE HAD TO HELP OURSELVES—and we did. We bought the next best brand of raw stock we could lay our hands on—quick!

Disaster followed—the film turned out to be short of requirements and up to a week ago we were kept busy making good for many reels shipped.

But It's Different Now!

We've got the best raw stock in the market, and every man who buys it can stake his neck on having a reliable article. We are back to our first love again and we're going to KEEP ON getting that film till they forget how to make it. We want our patrons and customers to feel confident that they can shout for CHAMPION FILMS in the full assurance that the difficulties and obstacles of the past few weeks have been successfully surmounted.

Take up the cry for "CHAMPS"

The stories are the same as ever—good, rattling, invigorating Westerns, the photography a la Champion

That Means the Best

Our Release for Wednesday, Dec. 21st, 1910

OF ALL CHAMPS this is the prize pippin! Was there ever a more absorbing theme written by mortal man than that of the unwavering quality of a mother's devotion? Can the art of acting more surely move an audience than when it portrays the raging, tumultuous torrent of emotions that have made the word "Mother" so dear to man?

"HIS MOTHER"

is a sermon in pictures, a beautiful pastoral of surpassing delicate execution

CHAMPION FILM CO.

Mark M. Dintenfass
General Manager

12 East 15th Street
NEW YORK, U. S. A.

Laboratories at Coytesville on the Hudson

Are you on our Mailing List?

Sold only through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company
111 East 14th Street, New York City

Columbia Film Co.

INDEPENDENT

We have withdrawn from the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Co., and will therefore sell direct to the Exchanges.

THE CATTLEMEN'S FEUD

OUR RELEASE OF DEC. 24th

is a Romance of the broad prairies of the West—of herds of countless cattle, of man's greed for pastured fields, ripening to resentment until the border is flamed to feud fury. After thrilling conflict between the Ranchers, peace finally triumphs through a union of loving hearts.

TRAPPED

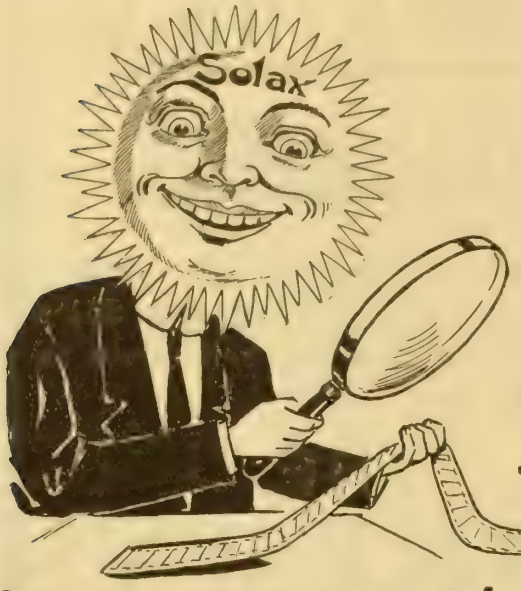
RELEASED DEC. 31st, 1910

A thrilling drama portraying an incident in the life of a band of moonshiners and full of action. Very strong in its interpretation. Acted and photographed perfectly, with the natural surroundings of the West.

This is a picture of class and should be in the service of every Exchange. Notify us if your exchange cannot supply you with our Feature Releases.

The Columbia Film Co.
301 West 37th Street, NEW YORK

Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax



Solax

STANDS THE TEST OF

"The Best Film Made"

RELEASES

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 9TH.

Lady Betty's Strategy

The hand of Lady Betty is sought by two admirers. A gypsy tells Betty that one of her lovers is false. Disguised as a Continental Officer, she becomes involved in a duel with the fortune hunting lover, but finally succeeds in extricating herself and winning her true lover's heart.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 16TH.

TWO SUITS

The man has a double, and the double has a sweetheart. Both men purchase light suits, which leads to side-splitting complications with the wife and sweetheart. The plot becomes so entangled that nothing but the police court can straighten it out.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 23D.

THE PAWNSHOP

Tony, an honest organ grinder, becomes instilled with the gambling spirit. He tries to pawn his organ and his monk "Joco" (who, by the way, takes a leading part in this story). This security being refused, his sweetheart, Marietta, offers herself as security.

How Tony frustrates a proposed burglary, and receives the wherewith to procure his sweetheart's release, is depicted in a masterly and interesting manner.

WHY?

Mechanical Perfection
Best Photography Obtainable
Careful Selection of Subject
True Interpretation

Are Some of the Reasons

WHY SOLAX

Stands the Test of

"THE BEST FILM MADE"

Every Release a Feature Film

Solax Company

Telephone 1864 Stuyvesant

Sold through 147 Fourth Avenue NEW YORK

THE SALES COMPANY, 111 E, 14th St., New York

Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax Solax

Advertising Slides

If handled right you can make your rent money out of advertising slides. We make them for every line of business from 50 cents up :: :: ::

"Campaign Slides are Vote Getters"

Slide with candidate's picture and announcement 50 cents ::

ERKER BROS. OPTICAL CO
604 Olive Street, St. Louis
— Moving Picture Theatre Supply House —

COMPENSARC

That's the device that saves Moving Picture men two-thirds on their electric light bills, and yet gives better light. Did yon see our ad last week? Well, don't look it up. Just write for our

Booklet 15018

FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC WORKS
1402 Broadway
FORT WAYNE, INDIANA. 738

SAY:

These Celluloid Advertising Buttons are Certainly Winners.

Pinned on the coat of a boy or girl, you know they stick.

Give them away at some special matinee and watch results.

This is the price on the best size with any lettering and in any color. 1¼ inch.

250 for $7.50 500 for $10.00 1,000 for $15.00

We make other sizes and novelties for souvenirs, etc.

AMERICAN BADGE CO.
141-143 W. Michigan Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

GREAT NORTHERN

GREAT NORTHERN FILMS CO. COPENHAGEN

Stands For Quality!

Good films are the life of the moving picture business. Therefore, put life into your business by using GREAT NORTHERN film productions.

Release for Saturday, December 10th

The Poacher

A Feature Film with beautiful tinted scenes and splendid action throughout

Release for Saturday, December 17th

A Christmas Letter

This film will make an instant appeal to every audience. The pathos of the story tugs at the heart strings, and the film is made notable by a wonderful child actor who takes the leading part.

Dickey's Courtship

A Comedy subject with many laughable scenes.

ALL FIRST-CLASS INDEPENDENT EXCHANGES HANDLE OUR FILMS

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO., 7 East 14th St., New York

Sold only through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company.

EVERY FRIDAY THE WORLD'S BEST—BAR NONE EVERY FRIDAY

LUX FILMS

Messrs. Exhibitors and Exchanges:

LUX Films are leaders in Europe and America.

The LUX Factory has lately completed large alterations and greatly increased its facilities with a view to still higher class productions.

You are getting the BEST if you

GET LUX

GET LUX

Release Friday, Dec. 16, 1910

Her Favorite Tune

Drama—550 Feet

How He Won Her

Comic—344 Feet

This is a dandy split reel with that excellent combination of a drama and a comedy. Just the variety and quality needed in every program. ORDER NOW.

A pretty and effective Drama that will captivate every audience with the story, staging and acting, followed by

A screaming Comedy, showing the ruse of a lover to circumvent a watchful mamma. Genuine fun that will make them roar.

GET LUX

FREE COLORED LITHOS.

See Other Pages for Synopses and Past Releases

R. PRIEUR

10 East 15th Street Phone 3427 Stuyvesant New York City

Sold only through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company.

BOOK IT NOW!
EVERY TUESDAY

MONTE CRISTO

SOON HERE!
EVERY SATURDAY

POWERS PICTURE PLAYS

The Regular TUESDAY Split Reel Treat. For DECEMBER 20th will be

JACK LOGAN'S DOG AND The Bachelor's Finish

The trouble with most dog pictures is too raw drilling. Not so here, though. Our trained mastiff's work would gladden the heart of Landseer, and he certainly knew dogs! Impressive work all through.

2 ON 1

It all comes about through the pranks of a tricky memory, and we have all experienced that discomfort. Trouble! And laughs! In bushels, droves and batallions!

ANNOUNCEMENT

With the spirit of the One of Galilee sweeping the Yuletide nearer, those of us who cannot sing "Gloria In Excelsis" at a shrine in Bethlehem must needs remember the Christmas message wherever we are. In keeping with the season, we shall release, on SATURDAY, DECEMBER 24th,

"A FATHER'S LOVE"

A Story that will awaken the proper sentiment in all its tenderness.

THE POWERS COMPANY

241st Street and Richardson Avenue - - New York

SALES COMPANY SOLE DISTRIBUTERS, 111 East 14th Street

Get Our Photo Frames with REAL Photographs For Lobby

ECLAIR FILMS

A Beacon Light to the Exchanges!

SOONER OR LATER both the Exchanges and the Exhibitors will look to ECLAIR to Insure the Attainment of the BEST! Why Not Get The Start By Being An "EARLY BIRD?"

FOR DECEMBER 19th

A Stupendous Production—A Comedy-Drama and a Farce-Film IN ONE REEL!

"THE CHILD OF TWO MOTHERS"

LENGTH, 545 FEET

One of those Deep-Reaching Dramas of Maternal Love and Sacrifice; Perfectly Enacted—Through "Eclair" quality!

"THE MUSEUM OF SOVEREIGNS"

LENGTH, 400 FEET

One Huge Joke from Start to Finish—Prompted by the Tremendous Success of our Film, "The Sculptor Who Has Easy Work." ORDER NOW

Eclair Film Company

NEW YORK: 31 East 27th Street
CHICAGO: 35 East Randolph Street

Sold only through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company.

Real Music That Really Fits the Picture

"MOTION PICTURE PIANO MUSIC"

FIFTY CENTS A COPY.

A Piano Book that contains descriptive Music to fit all probable Scenes, Actions, Characters, etc., shown in Moving Pictures. Composed and compiled by a Professional Pianist of twenty years' experience in Theatrical lines. Brimfull of practical suggestions for the inexperienced Pianist in a M. P. Theater. Descriptive Circular sent free upon request. Book will be sent promptly upon receipt of fifty cents. Address,

FRELINGER MUSIC COMPANY

LAFAYETTE, IND.

Drummers—Wait!

Before you buy a drum, until you let us tell you about our new Solid Shell Aluminum Hoop Orchestra Drum, IT'S THE BEST EVER. Our Drum and Trap Catalog in return for a postal card addressed to

The J. G. Richards Co.

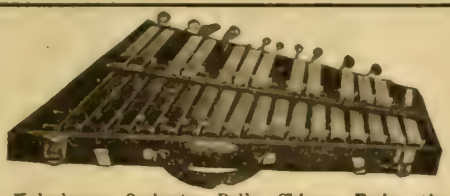
Dept. D. Cleveland, O.

Sound Effects

In Picture Machine Theaters it is very essential that the imitations and sound effects are of the kind that can be depended upon. We make only practical and serviceable imitations that will give the exact reproduction of the original. We also manufacture Chimes, Tympani, Bells, Xylophones, Drums and accessories.

LEEDY MANUFACTURING COMPANY

1055 E. Palmer St., INDIANAPOLIS, IND.



Xylophones, Orchestra Bells, Chimes, Forks, etc. Send for free illustrated catalogue.

J. C. DEAGAN

3800-3810 N. Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

WURLITZER

Automatic Musical Instruments

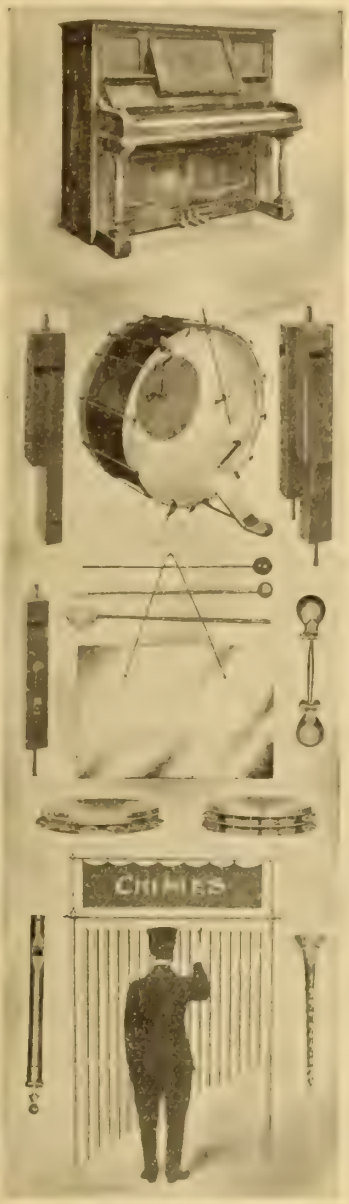
They do the work of expert musicians and reduce your operating expenses.

Wurlitzer is the world's largest manufacturer. We supply the U. S. Government with musical instruments. Write for big, new 84-page catalogue showing the only complete line of self-players, from a small electric piano to an automatic orchestra representing 35 musicians. Easy time payments.

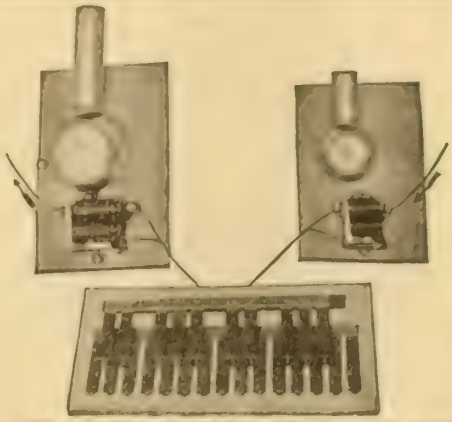
Concert Pianorchestra.

The RUDOLPH WURLITZER CO.

CINCINNATI, 117 to 121 E. 4th; NEW YORK, 25 & 27 W. 32d (bet. B'way & 5th Ave.); CHICAGO, 266 & 268 Wabash Ave., PHILADELPHIA, 1835 Chesnut; ST. LOUIS, 912 Pine; CLEVELAND, 206 Prospect Ave., S. E.; COLUMBUS, O., 57 E. Main



WURLITZER



OUR PATENT ELECTRIC BELLS create great enthusiasm in Moving Picture Houses, play from a keyboard as a solo instrument, or as an accompaniment to songs. Twenty-five Bells, two octaves chromatic, including resonators, magnets and keyboard, $75.00.

J. C. DEAGAN

3800-3810 N. Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

Moving Picture Pianists

Are you "working up" your pictures? If not, why not? If so, you want some good melodramatic music. Send for free sample page of "Orpheum Collection of Moving Picture Music." Now being used and praised by many of the best houses in the country.

PRICE.....75 CENTS

Also latest cue music (series 1910) for 10 parts and piano.....$1.00

¼ discount on both numbers.

Clarence E. Sinn

1501 Sedgwick St., CHICAGO, ILL.

TO TRAP DRUMMERS

A Limited Time Offer

Special Offer { Size Shell 3 x 14 / Size Shell 3 x 15
$10.00

Solid Maple, Rosewood or Walnut, 10 fine plated thumb crew rods, Kangaroo, Angora or Slunk Calf Drum Heads.

We ship with privilege of 6 days trial

E. P. ZEIDLER DRUM CO. Dept. F. Cleveland, Ohio

Drums, Traps, and all Moving Picture Show Effects

Our New Beautifully Illustrated Catalogue now ready and will be sent free to any address upon request.

LOUIS B. MALECKI & CO.

272 WABASH AVENUE, CHICAGO.

NOW READY

Operators' and Managers' Handbook

By F. H. RICHARDSON

PRICE $1.50 POSTPAID

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

125 E. 23rd Street, NEW YORK

Revier Motion Picture Company

NOT IN ANY TRUST, BIG OR LITTLE

TRADE

MARK

NOTICE We will make our first release Dec. 21st instead of Dec. 14. Don't forget the date

1st RELEASE WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 21st

LOVE'S SORROW

Length Approximately, 950 Feet

A Western story beautifully portrayed; beautiful, steady photography. The stage coach used in this film is the original old bullet and arrow scarred one used between Cheyenne and Salt Lake in early days and in which Brigham Young and other notables frequently rode.

2nd RELEASE WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 28th

Thoughtfulness Remembered by the Ute

Length Approximately, 950 Feet

An Indian story superbly filmed, magnificent scenery.

Four Colored Lithos Free

Wire Your Orders to

A. J. CLAPHAM, Sole Selling Agent, 12 E. 15th Street, N.Y. City

Offices: Majestic Theatre Building H. REVIER, President

Salt Lake City, Utah

FACTORY: Sugar House Station

Fairness to All, Privileges to None, Correspondence Solicited

KINEMACOLOR

(URBAN-SMITH PROCESS)

The brilliantly illuminated Kinemacolor pictures are pictures no longer, but realities in the actual colors and tints of Nature.

No artificial coloring approaches their beauty.

We are still inviting negotiations for exclusive territorial rights.

The Kinemacolor Company of America

Executive Offices and Factory

ALLENTOWN - - - PENNSYLVANIA

Upon appointment, we make private demonstrations at Allentown, Pa., or at our New York City office, 516 Fith Avenue, corner 43rd Street.

WHY ATLAS FILMS ARE POPULAR

You have noticed many long film subjects showing only a common-place incident, stretched out and padded here and there to make a thousand feet. We can buy a raft of such stories for a song.

Note the Difference in ATLAS Films. Real, meaty plots, characters that are not artificial; every scene carefully selected and studied To Mean Something in its action and a proper regard for details which eliminates the "staginess" so common in moving pictures.

WE'RE MAKING BETTER FILMS and you ought to investigate.

Coming December 21, ON WEDNESDAY

A FILM PORTRAYING THE POWER OF THE "THIRD DEGREE"

The ARM of the LAW

A startling mystery-story in the life of Dan. Denton, detective. A film-narrative of daring deeds and hazardous exploits with settings distinctively novel and unusual.

Superb Five-Color Posters for All Atlas Releases

Write for Bulletins Book Atlas Films

ATLAS FILM COMPANY

10 East 15th STREET - - - NEW YORK CITY

Again—"Yankee Doodle Dandy"

READ THIS WIRE

WM. STEINER, Washington, D. C., 12-3
New York, N. Y.
Accept Congratulations on QUEEN OF NIHILISTS
Subject and Cast GREAT.
Marcus Notes' Theatre

WE COULD SHOW A DOZEN MORE, just as strong. Everybody Tickled and glad to tell us. Everybody fighting to win our $25.00 advertising prize on the above film. Contest Closes February 1st.
Write for Posters and Photos

UNCLE SAM FILMS — MADE BY YANKEE FILM COMPANY NEW YORK — TRADE MARK

TWO CORKING GREAT RELEASES COMING

FRIDAY, DEC. 16th. A Yule-Tide Film Story

The Old Miner's Doll

With little Helen Anderson, the wonderful child actress in one of her strongest roles.

A Film for Every Day—and Xmas.

MONDAY, DEC. 19th. Another Great Russian Drama

A Ward of Uncle Sam

The story of an American's fight for freedom in far-off Russia, backed by Uncle Sam's fighting ships.

A Big Story Full of Real Action

EXHIBITORS TAKE NOTE If, for any reason, you have not received a copy of our weekly, THE YANKEEGRAM, drop us a postal at once. The next issue is especially important. It tells about a plan to advertise your theatre. Send for it to-day.

YANKEE NEW AND BETTER POSTERS YANKEE-GETTING-BETTER-FILMS

YANKEE FILM CO., 344 East 32d St., New York

Telephone 6170 Madison Square
Write Your Order to the Sales Company

GNOME MOTION PICTURE COMPANY
S. W. Corner Park and Tremont Aves.
NEW YORK CITY

Moving Picture World

THE WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING COMPANY - 125 E. 23d Street, NEW YORK
(Beach Building) Telephone call, 1344 Gramercy

EDITORS: J. P. CHALMERS, THOMAS BEDDING, F. R. P. S.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Post free in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rica and the Philippine Islands.

ADVERTISING RATES: Whole page, $60.00; half page, $30.00; quarter page, $15.00; eighth page, $7.50; one inch (3¾ in. wide), $3.00; one inch (2¼ in. wide), $2.00; classified (no display), 3 cents per word.

TIME DISCOUNTS: 5% two or more insertions, 10% three months order, 15% six months, 20% twelve months.

WESTERN OFFICE: 160 Washington Street, (Post Building, Chicago). Telephone Main 3145.

Entered at the General Post Office in New York City as Second-Class Matter.

Vol. 7 DECEMBER 17, 1910 No. 25

Summary of the Week.

An Appeal to the Exhibitor and to the Public.....1398
The Moving Picture Convention.....1398
The Indian and the Cowboy.....1399
Managerial Stupidity.....1400
Richardson: His Life and Intentions.....1401
Picture Personalities—Mr. Maurice Costello.....1402
"Man-About-Town" Advocates Parcels Post.....1403
Construction and Decoration. By John M. Bradlet.....1404
Music for the Picture. By C. E. Sinn.....1405
Trouble Department. By F. H. Richardson.....1406
Chicago Notes: A Gaumont Masterpiece.....1411
The New Publicity.....1412
Kinemacolor Dramatic Pictures.....1413
The Friese-Greene Color Process.....1413
Baltimore Exhibitors Banquet.....1413
Comments on the Films.....1416
Springfield, Ill., Picture Shows.....1420
In the Mississippi Valley.....1421
New England Notes.....1423
The Moving Picture Plot. By Henry.....1423
Letters to the Editors—About the Films—Monotony of the Program—The Key of Life—Scenarios—Clean Films—World Ads. Produce Results—Boosting the Show Through the Pictures.....1424-1425
Licensed Release Dates.....1429
Independent Release Dates.....1434

NOTICE.

The new Western offices of the Moving Picture World, Rooms 307-309, Post building, 160 Washington street, Chicago, are now ready to receive World readers visiting Chicago. Mr. John M. Bradlet, Western representative of the World, will extend to every one a cordial welcome. They will find a complete file of manufacturers' catalogues and a bureau of information on films, theater construction, materials and supplies. They will also find desks and stationery for their correspondence, the services of a lady stenographer and a polite messenger boy to act as their guide or go their errands. We invite every exhibitor or person interested in motion pictures to make our Western office their headquarters when visiting Chicago.

HANDBOOK OF MOTION PICTURE PROJECTION

By F. H. Richardson.

Cloth bound, $1.50. Postage free.

The Picture of the Future.

ORTHOCHROMATISM AND WHAT IT MEANS.

On former occasions when discussing the necessary qualities which the moving picture should have, we have pointed out the importance of orthochromatism for securing those qualities. An ordinary film exposed and developed in the usual way is incapable of correctly rendering the tone values of an original, whether it be an interior or an exterior scene, simply in virtue of the fact that the silver salts which form the emulsion are not equally sensitive to all the spectrum rays. The result is falsity of tone rendering. You have yellow represented darker than it appears to the eye, and blue represented lighter in the picture than it exists in nature. In other words, to put the matter more simply, the lights and shadows of an original are not correctly represented in their true depths or monochrome renderings in the positive. The picture, then, is untrue to nature.

Orthochromatism would change all this. It would represent the yellow as comparatively light instead of comparatively dark. It would represent blue comparatively dark instead of comparatively light. In other words, the monochrome values, absolute and comparative, of the picture would be true to nature. You would not have such a thing as a white sky, as no such thing exists in nature. The golden hair of a woman would not be represented as dark, and so on, through the various scales or tones of the original picture.

When we first pointed out the value of orthochromatic films for moving picture work, the ignorant, of course, smiled at us. And it is a curious thing that the minds in charge of every moving picture publication outside the MOVING PICTURE WORLD are absolutely ignorant of the technique of the subject! Not one of them either knows what orthochromatism means, or could define it. Yet, we have the sorry spectacle of these people, both in the theatrical press and the moving picture press, posing as authorities on the subject.

We are moved to write this article because we perceive that in the well-edited pages of our English contemporary, "The Kinematograph and Lantern Weekly," one or two expert writers and experimentalists have pointed out the value of orthochromatic celluloid films for getting accuracy of tone rendering in pictures, or rather of making the photograph true to nature or the original. Orthochromatizing a film simply means bathing it in a weak solution of one of the well-known aniline dyes such as eosin or erythrosin. Expose the film behind a yellow screen, develop it somewhat carefully, and the result will be that your negative will give you a photograph truer to the tones of the original, than a plain or non-orthochromatic film gives. That is all that is to it.

Orthochromatism, that is, correct tone rendering, is, therefore, the basis or should be the basis of the picture of the future—the pictorial moving picture, not the merely photographic moving picture—the black and white or soot and whitewash, that every American manufacturer, almost without exception, is content to put on the market. As we said in former articles on this subject, the only really pictorial moving picture proceeds from the Paris firm of Gaumont. Mr. Kleine, their agent, is very lucky in this respect. We believe that these pictures are made by means of orthochromatic films—they are so very true to nature. Eclair, too, makes pictorial moving pictures, so that the Independent side has its prize product.

We hope that before long all the manufacturers in this country will be using orthochromatic films in the making of their pictures. This is a secret which we are giving away, free, gratis and for nothing. It is, or should be, we think, to any intelligent manufacturer worth many thousands of dollars. We are presenting it to him for ten cents, that is the price of a single copy of this paper.

An Appeal to the Exhibitor and to the Public.

The appearance of the advertisements of certain prominent film manufacturers in the daily newspapers would seem to indicate a desire on their part to favor the open market. On page 1412 we print a reduced fac-simile of an 8-inch double column advertisement which is appearing in several Western newspapers. What is to prevent any or all of the score of manufacturers in this country from advertising their particular brands in the same way? What would be the logic of this form of publicity if the exhibitor is not free to demand and obtain the picture asked for by his patrons? But the exhibitor is tied down to what his exchange chooses to furnish and the exchange is tied down to standing orders, i.e., they must take all the output, good or bad, or lose the standing order discount.

How long is this stupid state of affairs to last? How much longer will the exhibitors of the United States be content to place themselves in a false position with the public, whose five and ten cents support their theaters, upon whom they live, upon whom the renters live, upon whom the manufacturers live? How much longer will the exhibitor occupy the humiliating position of being unable to buy pictures where he chooses, to show what pictures he likes, when he likes, and as he likes? How much longer will he make the degrading admission to his patrons that he cannot give them as good a show as he likes, because somebody else won't let him? How much longer will he allow his business to be conducted for him by somebody else?—to jeopardize the very existence of that business, to stand in an apologetic attitude towards the public, that great public which is willing and anxious always to support the picture shows, and which if it cannot get them is liable to ruin the exhibitor by severely staying away from his house?

For the good of the business, in the interests of the public, and in his own interest, it is time that he should exercise his birthright of independence. We call upon every exhibitor in the United States who reads this article to assert his right to conduct his moving picture theater himself; his right to buy in an open market; to buy where he likes, show what he likes, as often as likes, and as long as he likes; to pick and choose his own exchanges; to pick and choose his own pictures. We call upon him to be absolutely, finally and irrevocably independent; to be master in his own house; master of his own business; and, for the first time in the history of the business, to constitute himself a friend of the public, instead of a mere apologist for what somebody else wants him to do.

We make this appeal with a full sense of our responsibility. The future of the business rests with the public, but reposes immediately in the hands of the exhibitor. There are a variety of manufacturers to choose from. There are twenty or thirty of them already in the business, and others are waiting to come into it, with unlimited capital at command. So, too, with the exchanges.

The moving picture business should be free. The public want it free. The man to make it free is the Exhibitor. Let him insist upon freedom! The public will support him. We are for independence in the best sense of the word, but we are for independence with a small "i". No matter what has been said or done to the contrary, the MOVING PICTURE WORLD has always stood for the benefit of the business as a whole. The exhibitor in his fight for freedom shall have the undivided and hearty support of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD, which is the only paper in touch with exhibitors all over the country. We should like to hear from our exhibiting friends on this question of freedom of choice in their programs. Meanwhile, strange as it may seem, we have before us a couple of letters from exhibitors expressing their entire satisfaction with the service they are obtaining from the General Film Company. As one puts it: "I have no trouble in obtaining from the General Film Company branch with whom I deal any special subject asked for, no matter how old." And this is as it should be.

The Moving Picture Convention.

ATLANTIC CITY MEETING, JULY, 1911.

The first Moving Picture Convention of the United States will be held next July at Atlantic City. We repeat, for the edification of all and sundry: The first Moving Picture Convention of the United States will be held next July at Atlantic City. Since we started to write about this subject several months ago, our ideas have won commendation from all branches of the moving picture business: manufacturers, renters, exhibitors and others have personally assured us of their sympathy in the matter, have acknowledged the need of such a gathering representing the whole of the industry, and have promised to be present. So we ask every manufacturer, every renter, every exhibitor to keep the date and place of the first Moving Picture Convention in mind, namely Atlantic City, July, 1911.

We may say that, in collaboration with several of the most powerful people in the American moving picture trade, we are busy drawing up the constitution of the Moving Picture Convention with suggested list of officers, their duties, together with a program of the first meeting. This work will be completed in due course, and when it is completed we will announce it to our readers.

It is unnecessary to dilate any more upon the needs of the Moving Picture Convention. This we have already done in former issues. Our present object is to redeem the promise made at the conclusion of our third article on the subject, namely that we should revert to it time and again as opportunity offered. Opportunity offers now.

The Indian and the Cowboy.

(By One Who Does Not Like Them.)

The only cowboys I have ever seen, scouted across the ranch of Fourth avenue, New York City. They belonged to the Buffalo Bill show. They loafed about the entrance of the Madison Square Garden, and varied this uninteresting performance by absorbing drinks at the saloon opposite. "If you ask me I will tell you" that I became aware of the latter circumstance because I casually went into said saloon for a little light refreshment myself. There it was that I saw the only cowboys I have ever seen, or, for that matter, ever want to see.

It must be nearly two years since I incurred obloquy by referring to Indian and Cowboy pictures photographed in "the peaceful wilds of New Jersey." When this classic phrase was first printed, I got myself disliked for voicing a feeling that is common in the film world and amongst the general public that there are too many of these Indian and Cowboy pictures. Even if Indian life were all we are asked to believe it is; even if Cowboy life were the ideal state of things that the pictures seem to show them to be, then we should have too many of these subjects. But as Indian life neither to-day nor yesterday is or was what Longfellow would have us believe it to be, and as Cowboy life is not, cannot and never will be at all romantic or picturesque, I again submit that there are far, far too many of these pictures. I am writing, of course, in the interests of the manufacturers whom I want to see sell many more pictures. Also, in the interests of the public, who are tired of this plethora of Indian and Cowboy subjects. Don't tell me that these things are made for small people. Don't tell me that small people like them. Don't make any excuses. The subjects are put out in sheer ignorance of the condition of things with the general public. The public, amongst whom I have made as many inquiries as any other man in my position can possibly make, looks upon these Indian and Cowboy subjects with a mixture of amusement and toleration. They are weary of them although they endure them.

By "the public" I mean educated, intelligent people—adults and juvenile. To-day the small boy of ten or twelve is infinitely the mental superior of the small boy of ten or twelve of twenty or thirty years ago. You are not going to fool him with these Deadwood Dick, Red Eagle, Cowboy themes! He knows better. He can read the newspapers. He is obliged to go to school. The swift progress of modern life leaves him with few illusions. The "West" has no glamor for him. So, while he may laugh at and appear interested in their Indian-Cowboy themes, you don't fool him. He tolerates them. In his eye there is neither glamor nor heroism in Indian or Cowboy life. Indeed, if he could express his young mind as freely as I am expressing mine, he would probably say that Indians and Cowboys are nasty, dirty, uncomfortable, unpleasant people of whose society he is not particularly anxious to take advantage.

What the intelligent small boy of ten or twelve thinks, but cannot say, is thought and said by millions of adults, who frequent these moving picture theaters. I have not heard millions talk, but I have heard scores of people who are staunch patrons of the moving picture theater, object to the pictures of Indian and Cowboy themes which are still shown on the screen. I am not American, as the editors of certain house organs are fond of telling their limited circle of readers (I never said I was by the way) but I am happy in the friendship of many educated American-born people all over the country, and I am quoting them when I say that the persistence and insistence of the manufacturers in these Indian and Cowboy themes is a serious danger to the business. People could do with less of them. There is little or no variety in Indian life as Fenimore Cooper depicted it, as Mayne Reid depicted it, and as it is shown on the screen. As Longfellow showed it in his poem of "Hiawatha," it probably never existed. Hiawatha is pure poetry, if not poesy. At any rate it is highly imaginative.

So with the gentle Cowboy. Even as he is shown in the very best moving picture, there is nothing particularly attractive about this gentleman. Certainly he rides a horse very well, masters the bucking broncho, chases cattle and all the rest of it, but for the life of me, I cannot and never could make out what there is particularly pleasant, agreeable or heroic in the life of these children of the ranch. But, then, I am city bred. So for that matter are most of us nowadays, and that is why I suppose I and we do not appreciate these crude picture presentments of the ugly life of the Indian and the Cowboy. I say ugly and I repeat ugly. Even at its best, according to modern ideas, Cowboy and Indian life must have been very unpleasant. Myself I would rather live in an apartment on Riverside Drive, any day, in preference to existing amongst the Cowboys. I like comfort, cleanliness, elegance and refinement; so do most people. But none of these things are shown in these Indian or Cowboy films. They are just ugly, dull, stupid, unpleasant and not at all ennobling themes.

To the plea that exchanges call for these subjects, there is the obvious retort that exchanges must be very unintelligent or stupid people. The like remark applies to the exhibitor. We are without evidence that the public insist upon these things. Of course, if children demand them, it is very difficult to resist supplying that demand, but surely a business such as this, cannot expect to indefinitely prosper by simply satisfying the demands of children. We want to attract and retain the support of educated adults. We are, I think, rather repelling that support by these stupid Indian and Cowboy themes. That is why I am writing this article; to suggest to the makers of these pictures the wisdom, if not of cutting them out altogether, of diminishing their output. There is such a wealth of more suitable, much more dignified, much more agreeable subjects than these Indian and Cowboy nonsense that I am astonished at the apathy of the film makers in this matter.

BUILDING CONTRACTORS.

F. G. Spencer, amusement promoter, St. John, N. B., Canada, wants to hear from architects or firms who will undertake the building of theaters costing from $20,000 to $25,000 each. Other inquiries of a similar nature have reached us and we would like to have the names and addresses of reliable building contractors in this line.

BALTIMORE OPERATORS MAKE MERRY.

The first grand ball of the Moving Picture Operators' Protective Union, No. 181, I. A. T. S. E., takes place at Maennorchor Hall, 410 West Lombard street, Baltimore, at 8.30 P. M. Tickets, 25 cents. The secretary, Arthur Stewart, 858 Columbia avenue, will be pleased to hear from friends of the Union.

Waverly, N. Y.—C. B. Cowles, proprietor of the theatorium, has leased the storeroom at 422 Fulton street for a term of years, and is remodeling same into a high-class moving picture theater which will be known as the Lyric. It will be completed about December 15. After that time the Theatorium will be closed.

Managerial Stupidity.

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

Theatrical managers are notoriously behind the times. This is an age of swift evolution. The country is filled with fine schools, it supports more colleges than all the rest of the civilized world combined, the circulation of superior magazines runs up into the millions, the news stands are piled high with periodicals appealing to cultivated taste, the popular demand in all arts is for productions of merit, but the average theatrical manager refuses to read the signs of the times and continues to wallow in the mire of past ignorance and prejudice. He is the only wise guy, and the audience is an unthinking mass. He still smiles and nods his head significantly, as much as to say "I told you so," when a few of the noisy uncombed and unwashed in the audience clap their hands and stamp their feet, unaware that those who go seldom are the easiest amused, while the great solid patronage, those who go often, escape notice because they enjoy in an inconspicuous way. The boisterous element in every audience is really only a small per cent. of it, and anyone but a theatrical bonehead knows that the noise-boxes do not furnish enough support to pay the rent.

In illustration, take the case of one of the most experienced managers in New York City.

His theater is admirably located, it is well suited to the purposes of a mixed entertainment, it is quite as comfortable as it is convenient, the attendants are handsomely uniformed, and the selection of vaudeville acts is so good that his place should be one of the most popular resorts in the city, but he has vacant seats when other, similar theaters are filled at the same price to their utmost capacity. One-half of his bill is presented as though he realized that his patrons would be among the best of their kind in the metropolis.

All goes well while the lights are turned up.

The moment the lights are turned down, no "cheap and nasty" on Manhattan isle presents a worse bill. The regular pianist is relieved by a nice little girl who smiled at you when she took your ticket stub. This nice little girl can play four pieces on the piano in one key with the right hand and another with the left. She can and she does. She plays her four pieces for four pictures, four times a day, six days in the week, and manages to get through them correctly about as often as you pick up money in the street. No one blames the little girl any more than we would blame a hand organ grinder substituted by a manager for the regular orchestra of a theater, and, for that matter, her discordant strumming is on a par with the rest of the picture exhibition. In the rear of the auditorium, an operator of some kind struggles with a projector of much the same kind and treats us to the novelty of a floor and ceiling meeting in the middle of a picture. At other times, we get a few blank pages in the middle of the book, while the characters in the pictured play jump from R. I. to L. U. E. with marvelous agility. The films are streaked punk of the rainstorm kind and are thrown on a screen hung like a wet sheet on a clothesline.

I suppose that the manager thinks the light of human intelligence goes out with that of the hall, but most of us feel like the little boy whose mother took him out under the iure of going to the circus and landed him in a dentist's chair.

The manager of that show is not fooling anybody but himself.

He may think he is cutting expenses, when he is cutting out what draws dollars into the box office. The steady patrons know the difference between early releases and the junk he is showing and go where the manager gives careful study to both parts of his performance. This particular theater could easily draw a high class of patronage under intelligent management, and no good reason exists why the best class of people should not attend well-handled picture shows all over the country.

In the course of time, the photoplay will be the little opera of the people, but prime requisite will be good and appropriate music.

It is very generally recognized that most of the music provided is as out of place the wrong accompaniment to a song would be in a variety entertainment, but the patrons of picture shows are patient and hopeful. The change will come when exhibitors do some good, hard thinking.

By way of a start in intellectual exercise, give some consideration to the fact that grand opera is not much more than a grand pantomime with the story told so clearly by action that the sense of it can be caught by the eye while the ear is charmed. The words of grand opera can seldom be heard distinctly and still less understood. Most of us pay small attention to the printed libretto, although it is the supporting structure of the musical drama and should be read before the opera is seen and heard. The emotion conveyed is not exactly that set forth in the music, that method of expression is too vague and comprehensive, but it stimulates emotions aroused by the situation, by the series of events, by gestural and facial expression, just as in moving pictures. In both cases, words are not absolutely essential, but the right sort of music is essential to complete enjoyment of the drama. The music of the opera is not sacrificed to the drama, but is supported by it. The pictured drama is not sacrificed to the music, but is so powerfully influenced by it as to become wonderfully effective or absolutely repelling according to the accompanying tone picture.

No doubt exists that managers want to fill their theaters with the best sort of patrons, but the wonder is that they seem to act as though they wanted to repel rather than attract the best patronage, for the surest way to drive away those who can well afford to go elsewhere is to jar them with music that no living being would pay a cent to hear on its own account. The pictural drama can be made more realistic than the one in which we are treated to the spectacle of a healthy prima donna singing her very best when dying from exhaustion. In the photoplay, she dies to rag-time.

If you want to make a success of the picture exhibition, insist on getting fresh reels of the best class of plays produced, show them in flickerless presentation on a suitable screen and serve with them the most appropriate if not the most delightful music you can procure, and charge accordingly.

Appeal to the highest, not the lowest, class in your community, and the others will give almost the same support they do at present.

Frank Winch, for several years New York manager of the Billboard Publishing Company, has resigned. Mr. Winch leaves for San Francisco December 9, to attend to the settling up of a personal estate. After that he will return to New York, where he will be identified with a well-known enterprise.

Richardson: His Life and Intentions.*

A Review by Thomas Bedding, F.R.P.S.

*Motion Picture Handbook. A Guide for Managers and Operators of Motion Picture Theaters. By F. H. Richardson. Published by The Moving Picture World, 125 East Twenty-third street, New York City. Illustrated, 180 pages. Price, $1.50.

In the Moving Picture World of November 26 and December 3, I reviewed a book in two volumes, and of many hundreds of pages, which professed to deal with the life of the alleged "inventor" of the moving picture, the "founder" of the nickelodeon and the "master impresario of his age"! It was conclusively shown that Mr. Edison, upon whom these distinctions were cast by the authors of the book, was not entitled to them, and that beyond being the owner, by judicial courtesy, of some moving picture patents, Mr. Thomas Alva Edison has had practically nothing at all to do with moving picture progress, whatever his other claims to fame or notoriety may be. In this connection Mr. Edison has been clearly proved to be tres petites pommes des terres, indeed. [If he so wishes, I will translate this phrase for the benefit of the editor of the house organ of the Edison licensees.]

To my mind Mr. Richardson, the author of the book now under review, has done vastly more, and is doing vastly more, for moving picture progress than his coworker, Mr. Edison. I regard Richardson as nothing less than a martyr. Edison is pocketing huge royalties, the proceeds of an alleged patent. Richardson, both in these pages, in his handbook, and by his tongue, is doing his level best to promote the cause of moving picture progress by going to the root of matters. And the root of matters in the moving picture field is the moving picture operator.

It is a truism to say that the moving picture business of the world rests for its success upon the shoulders of the operator, individually and collectively. The finest pictures, the finest theaters, the finest machinery—the finest everything that can be provided in the outfit are useless, if the man behind the gun is not up to the work. Unfortunately, in far too many cases, the man behind the gun is inefficient, due either to congenital stupidity, carelessness, ignorance or some other cause. Anyhow, it comes to this: when the operator is not the man for the job, the picture suffers, the public is disgusted, the moving picture manager or exhibitor loses money, and the business is harmed.

Mr. Thomas Alva Edison might possibly be deserving of some part of the sickly laudation which has been heaped upon him if he had done half what Richardson has attempted to do, namely, to put moving picture operating upon a practical, scientific, workable basis—to convert a heterogeneous body of empirics into men who understand their work and take an interest in it. This is the gravest problem in the moving picture field to-day. The paltry squabbles between trust and Independent manufacturers, exchanges and exhibitors, and picture men and the public, sink into insignificance when compared with the importance of ensuring decent operating in the theater. To ensure decent operating in the theater is the object of the Motion Picture Handbook. This, as the preface states, is written in matter of fact style, so that even the meanest of intelligences can understand it. The book naturally divides itself into three sections: the electrical, the mechanical, the manipulative. Its scope will be sufficiently clear from the headings of some of the chapters—"The Source of Light;" "Wiring;" "Resistance Devices;" "The Operating Room;" "Lenses," etc., etc. The information with regard to the management of the current is singularly full and lucid, and is alone worth the money asked for the book. The practical details are practical. By this I mean that, unlike far too many textbooks that are foisted upon the public, the Motion Picture Handbook comes from the hands of a man accustomed to handling the things he writes about. It is unnecessary to say that Richardson, besides being a teacher and preceptor, is also a practitioner, for he daily handles the machines and tools of which he writes in his book.

The best thing that every theater owner, every manager, every operator in the United States, if not the world, can do, is to get a copy of this book and read it carefully through and profit by it. If this be done, then the moving picture business will be given a huge fillip. We shall have better projection, or rather, we will have intelligent projection, which is the same thing. I look to this little book to diffuse much needed knowledge amongst operators and managers. That is the point: it will help these people show better pictures and thus present the picture in a better aspect to the public. That being done, as I have said before, the business generally will be advantaged.

Richardson's intentions certainly entitle him to as much praise as Edison's alleged inventions. In a year from now I shall expect this little handbook to have had such a beneficial effect on the business that licensed and Independent manufacturers, renters, exhibitors and others will invite Richardson to a banquet at the Plaza, just as they did Mr. Edison about a year ago, and present Richardson with a massive silver cup, the same as they did Mr. Edison. The only difference between the two men is that Edison did little or nothing to warrant the presentation, while Richardson is doing his level best to qualify himself for any number of pieces of gold or silver plate.

"LIGHT HOUSE" FILMS ARE SHOWN.

Moving pictures in a lighted auditorium have been brought to a high degree of perfection in some of the Keith houses, by S. L. Rothapfel, who has lately been placed in general charge of projection in all of the Keith & Proctor houses. Mr. Rothapfel is known to our readers as a contributor to the Moving Picture World. He hails from Forest City, Pa., where he has a theater of his own, in which he worked out his theories of "light house" projection, and put them into practice before bringing them to the attention of Keith & Proctor in particular, and the trade in general.

Speaking recently to an interviewer in Cleveland, where he was installing his system in the Keith Hippodrome, Mr. Rothapfel is quoted as saying: "I hold no patents on this device, for what I have done is simply to apply certain laws regulating the projection of the light's rays in a way of my own. What I have accomplished is by means of very powerful lenses, a new way of directing them on the screen, and then a chemical application to the screen that absorbs the light so that instead of the light hitting the screen as a ball would a brick wall it is absorbed and all the rays like those you see around a street light at night are brought to the center. But each room requires a different treatment of all these elements. My protection lies in knowing how to do that. You can't patent an idea, you know. You have to patent an article. But Mr. Edison says patents are no protection, so I am not worrying on that score."

It may be of interest to our readers to learn that in connection with their new system of "Lighted House Picture Projection," which Keith & Proctor are installing in all their theaters, a Motiograph, 1910 Model, has been installed in the Fifth Avenue Theater, New York. This has been in operation for the past two weeks and in connection with the "new system" has aroused the most favorable comment. Mr. Hallberg, the Motiograph Eastern agent, also reports that he has received orders for the equipment of seven other Keith houses with similar apparatus.

Picture Personalities.

Mr. Maurice Costello. (Vitagraph Company.)

In an article in the Moving Picture World a few weeks ago, we referred to the interest which the public is taking in the personalities of the leading moving picture actors and actresses seen on the screen. Place aux dames. As our pages have evidenced for many months past, the leading ladies of the various moving picture plants, alike in respect of their personal charm and their acting abilities, have created great interest amongst our own readers, as well as amongst the general public. Of course, the actor, as we admitted a few weeks ago, was bound to come into his own. He is coming into his own. He is sharing popularity with the actress. Just as much interest attaches to the leading man of a moving picture company amongst the fair sex, as attaches to the personality of an actress amongst men. Of the popular leading moving picture man, Mr. Maurice Costello is a type. A native of Pittsburg, Pa., his early stage experiences were gained in vaudeville. Vaudeville is a good training ground for the future actor or actress. So it has been in Mr. Costello's case, for, subsequently he filled leads in a number of well-known stock theatrical companies in various parts of the country, including New York City. He was so successful on the ordinary stage that his work attracted the attention of the Vitagraph Company, who secured him for stock. He now plays moving picture leading parts in the Vitagraph Life Portrayals, and is popular with those with whom he is associated as well as with those who see his counterfeit presentment on the moving picture screen. People call him "Dimples" in recognition of his good nature. Mr. Costello is still fortunately a very young man, and as he has a handsome stage presence, and is a finished and experienced actor, he probably has before him, and we at any rate hope and believe that he has, many years of successful work in the picture drama.

It is a matter of no little surprise to me that the parcel post question now receiving so much attention in many different quarters is barely thought of by the moving picture people. They apparently do not realize that they have any interest in the matter at all. Excepting the mail order, general store, newspaper, printing, advertising and a few other lines of business none could be more favorably affected by the enactment of a parcel post regulation than those engaged in the moving picture business, and if they give the question thought for a few minutes they will soon be devoting hours to exert their own influence, as well as soliciting that of their friends, to induce the Congressmen and other representatives at Washington to take steps towards providing a parcel post service in the States.

* * *

I asked an exchange manager yesterday what he thought of the issue. He replied he was too busy to think of political issues; that it took all the time he could give when not eating or taking a few hours sleep to frame up a service that would stop his customers' kicking. He declared that life was almost unbearable and what people call sleep was in reality, to him, an intermittent nightmare. As soon as he closes his eyes, he said, the exhibitor appears before him like some fierce-looking gnome, gesticulating wildly, throwing reels of films out of boxes and behaving in a most threatening manner.

* * *

With the sincerest sympathy I proceeded to assure the exchange man that my observations had convinced me that his state of mind was fully warranted, but I secured his consent to momentarily forget his troubles and allow me to point out to him where he and all other men in his line of the moving picture business, as well as the exhibitors, especially those located at distances from the exchanges, are very much concerned, or ought to be, in the parcel post question. The amounts paid out by these people for expressage on films, posters, parts of machinery and other accessories of the business is enormous. It is proposed to enact a law similar to that now in existence in the foreign department of the post-office, where parcels up to eleven pounds in weight may be sent through the mails from one point to another in the United States. It is not necessary for me to delve into statistics or make comparisons. The brief statement of what is proposed should be sufficient to impress upon the minds of the people I have referred to the importance of prompt and decisive action.

* * *

Some people have said that if a domestic parcel post would be such a good thing it should go through without any concerted action. They do not seem to think that any campaigning is necessary—but it is, and very much so. All the express, railroad and other carrying companies of the country are in united opposition to the proposed law, always have been and always will be. They see plainly that if Uncle Sam undertakes to carry parcels there will be a big drop in their receipts. The issue can therefore be boiled down to this: Is the welfare of the people at large to be subservient to the financial interests of the carrying companies? And those engaged in the moving picture business are very much in evidence. Let the managers of film exchanges in Pittsburg, St. Louis and San Francisco sit down for a few moments and figure the amount of expressage they pay each week on films received from the manufacturers and on films returned to them by out-of-town exhibitors. Then let them compare the figures with what it costs to get the same amount of film by parcel post from foreign countries into the United States. Try it once and you will be confronted by a genuine thriller.

* * *

A colored woman figured in a somewhat sensational moving picture episode on one of the main thoroughfares in New York City one night last week. She presented herself at the box office of a nickelodeon about fifteen minutes before the show was to close for the night and demanded a ticket of admission, offering, of course, to pay for it. The rather solicitous ticket seller declined to comply, stating that the show would be over in a few minutes and she would practically be wasting her money. The lady of color did not see the matter in that light and insisted on seeing what she could of the pictures. The ticket seller unwisely persisted in his refusal and the woman assumed that he was drawing a color line, whereupon she wielded her parasol with damaging effect, smashing the plate-glass of the ticket office windows and the hat of the ticket seller. When a policeman seized her she dropped the parasol and substituted a hatpin as a weapon. It took several men to hold the woman while she was being disarmed. She eventually landed in the workhouse.

* * *

The incident can be looked upon from many points of view. Some may consider it humorous, others may take it quite seriously. One point will bear serious consideration. A diplomatic ticket seller is as essential to a theater as anything else required in a well-regulated place. The woman referred to was evidently under the influence of drink and the ticket seller did not deem it wise to allow her to enter the place. In this respect his judgment was good and it was equally so when he did not give her the advantage of a ticket of admission and leave the matter to the man at the door. But he did not follow it up with a proper exercise of diplomacy. He had many ways for avoiding argument such as must have been indulged in to provoke the attack. Colored people are very sensitive on matters bearing upon the color line and doubtless this particular woman, being in an intoxicated condition, looked upon the ticket seller's statement as a subterfuge. The fact that a show has but a few more minutes to run is no excuse for refusing to sell a ticket of admission when the box office remains open, the ticket taker is at his post, and admissions have not been cut off on account of no more accommodations, or some other good reason. This colored woman no doubt felt, as any white person would feel under similar circumstances, that while the theater and box office were open and she tendered the price of admission she was entitled to a ticket. After being informed that the show was about to close it was her privilege to decide whether she should go in, or hold the ticket for some other time.

* * *

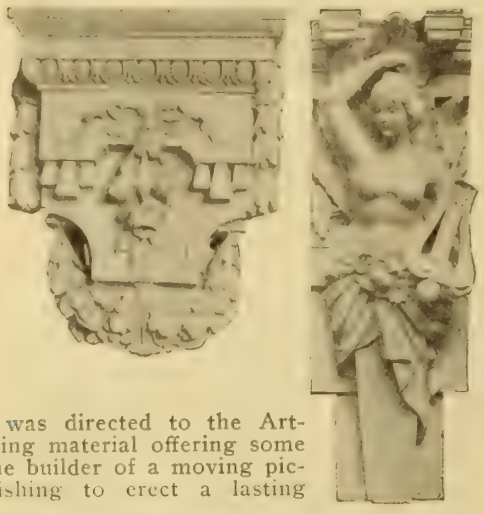
A foreign newspaper man who is visiting in this country and doing special work for some of the newspapers has come forward as a champion of the moving picture houses, combating the theories and allegations so frequently made of late by some exceedingly sensitive people regarding the moral aspect of the places and pictures. His article in a recent issue of the New York "Sunday World" is so much to the point that it will bear space here. The writer stated: "In my walks about town—and I have been in several sections of your wonderful New York—I have visited places of amusement. The small shows where pictures are made to play living scenes on trembling linen appeal to me as showing the national character. What a difference between New York, Paris and Berlin in these shows! It makes a man whose nerves are not spoiled glad to see how decent your pictures are. The visitors were of the better class and the amusement clean and humorous." That's a homer, isn't it?

Hartshorne, Okla.—The Bell Amusement Company have bought the moving picture theater at Hartshorne, Okla., and are running pictures and vaudeville. This company will buy or install several theaters in this district. L. L. Mumaw is manager.

Among the Christmas holiday pictures will be the Champion Film Company's "Golden Gates," a 950-foot melodrama, released Wednesday, December 28. It will portray the reunion of a family on the eve of Christmas, after a separation of twenty years. We have the assurance of Mr. Dittenfass that this will be a feature something out of the ordinary and likely to be in great demand. If your exchange will take a tip from the manufacturer he will get his orders in early. Full synopsis in next issue of this paper.

CONSTRUCTION DECORATIONS

"Artstone," Its Possibilities and Advantages.



My attention was directed to the Artstone as a building material offering some advantages to the builder of a moving picture theater wishing to erect a lasting building.

Artstone is a manufactured stone composed of the best weather-impervious materials, put together under strong pressure and left to harden under natural conditions. It is a stone which will stand the test of time and weather and upon which fire has but little effect.

As to durability, the manufacturers of Artstone can show a building erected in the year 1874, in which the Artstone trimmings, after an exposure of thirty years to all sorts of weather, have been found in perfect condition.

This proof of durability should not surprise us, as the buildings of the ancients fully demonstrate the superiority of concrete over natural stone for lasting qualities. Concrete stone, which was used in their buildings in connection with natural stone, is to-day in a better state of preservation.

The uses and necessities of concrete have been thoroughly demonstrated in the building work, and the rapidly increasing demand for this class of material shows that what was formerly considered an experiment and heartily condemned by those less progressive, promises to be the greatest factor in building construction for the coming decade.

With Artstone on the market, a material of merit, equal in every way to the natural stone, why pay the high price of cut stone work? Artstone fills a much needed want, saving from 30 to 50 per cent. of the actual cost of natural cut stone.

Perfect and artistic ornaments can be obtained from Artstone, and this at a smaller cost and more durable than plastic decorations; as Artstone will not absorb the rain and dirt, the ornaments and the trimmings will remain clean and not require a new coat of paint every season.

The few following cuts loaned us by the manufacturers of Artstone will show in a certain measure what decorations can be obtained by this new process.

PLASTIC ORNAMENTS.

When, in a former article, I condemned the too free use of gingerbread decorations for moving picture theaters, especially for the exterior work, as being too easy nests for the dirt flying from the street, some decorators had an idea that I was opposed to plastic relief ornaments.

I am far from injuring the decorators, as, if the exhibitors want to follow the advice given them in these columns, they will build more artistic theaters and the decorators themselves will find more profit, furnishing higher class ornaments than a lot of cheap stuff, made by the yard, if we can use such an expression.

The following photograph of the Lyceum Theater, Cottage Grove, Chicago, is a good illustration of my argument. This front has not the amount of cheap gingerbread decoration making the average moving picture theater hideous, but, if the quantity lacks, the quality is far above the general run, and the exterior of a four-story building, covered with cheap plastic ornaments, would not pay the decorating bill of the Lyceum Theater. There is more money for the decorators in the heavy cornices of the Lyceum, in the capitals and bases of the columns, in the figures standing between the said columns, in the figures of the arch, etc., than there would be if the building was covered with what is generally termed "gingerbread decorations." If the columns, cornices, figures, etc., gather the dirt of the street, they are not such bad dirt nests as the small plastic relief ornaments of the gingerbread style and if even they gather the dirt, they can be more easily washed as they offer larger surfaces and not a multitude of small delicate ornaments to break like glass, under the hand of the cleaner.

A theater like the Lyceum is costly, but cheaper in the long run than a theater that has to be retouched every few months, and is a far better investment, as it improves the locality and is a real attraction. The gingerbread decorations are as vulgar as the words "Bijou Dream" or "Dreamland." In every town you find a moving picture theater called either the "Dreamland" or the "Bijou Dream," and in every town you find a building covered with cheap decorations, devoted to motion pictures.

As Mr. Geo. K. Spoor, of the Essanay Company, had a contest to find a new name to designate a moving picture theater and to replace the abused names "Dreamland" or "Bijou Dream," is it not time that we would discard the cheap plastic relief ornaments for something more artistic?

We have exceptions, as Baltimore is full of new original names and decorations: "The Blue Mouse," "The Red Feathers," "The Black Cat," "The Red Moon," etc. Baltimore has also some very original decorations and the Monumental City is nearly free of the cheap, gingerbread class. The Blue Mouse has a very rich exterior and lobby of a particular design and, with its dark colors, has the appearance of rich ornaments carved in solid blocks of hard wood. The Grand is another theater departing from the general rules of too much cheap plastic relief ornaments painted in light colors.

Still there are men who have no taste for anything artistic; they will enjoy a cheap chromo picture with flashy colors, as well as they would a Rubens. We find such men in the moving picture field. Some of them are satisfied to display a couple of posters in neat frames on easels, while others cannot get enough posters to nail on the walls, against the ticket office, etc.

I had a striking illustration of it in Cincinnati, Ohio, where I found four theaters, side by side, on West Fifth street. While three of them made a good appearance, one was a discordant note. The Sun, the Colonial and the Alhambra have their posters neatly framed and make no abuse of them, while the Lubin Theater was so covered with posters, nailed everywhere, that the decorations of the lobby and of the ticket box were hidden from view.

There is no excuse for the manager of the Lubin, except poor taste, as Cincinnati is the home town of the Newman Manufacturing Company, the manufacturers of very tasteful brass frames and brass easels.

What has been said on posters, can be repeated on decorations. The Lubin is the only theater on Fifth street, of the gingerbread style, and has lots of it, from the sidewalk to the roof. Although the house has just received a new coat of paint, it compared very unfavorably with its neighbors, the Alhambra and the Colonial. The Alhambra has less plastic relief ornaments, but I warrant to say that the decoration of the Alhambra is more expensive than the cheap decorations of the Lubin and yielded a better profit to the decorators. Every detail in the decoration of the Alhambra is artistic and had to be made specially for the house, while the cheap ornaments of the Lubin are to be found in any shop at so much a yard. The Alhambra is pure Moorish style, involved a good deal of work, and it is in this kind of work that the decorators can make money and a name—and the exhibitor or owner of such a tasteful house is sure to reap good profits. The Colonial has an extra wide lobby and, while marble figures much in the decoration, the friezes, cornices and other such plastic relief ornaments are of an artistic character.

Manager Ernest Buchwald, Ballinger, Tex., writes: "Dear Sir—Your article, 'Music for the pictures,' in the Moving Picture World is very interesting and of great value to piano players as well as to managers and I wish to congratulate you on same and hope you will keep up the good work. For the past seven years I have made a special study of playing for moving pictures, and my experience is this: it is nearly impossible to use an orchestra for moving pictures, as I experimented in my own house, and the nearest and best results was with piano and traps . . . Whenever it comes to the point where managers realize the value and necessity of good music, it will mean more money to all parties interested—musicians, managers and manufacturers. I have more than trebled the receipts of a moving picture theater with big opposition, one house playing vaudeville for the same price of admission, the other being an airdome with the best location in the town. How was it done? Just simply showing good pictures and playing the proper music for them."

Thanks, Brother Buchwald, for your kindly appreciation of my humble efforts. I have quoted your letter at some length because it backs up by actual experience what the World has always advocated, viz.: that good and appropriate music for the picture is of financial value to the house employing it. Why not? It means a better show, and, other things being equal, the best show gets the money. As to the relative value between the orchestra and piano, that is a matter of opinion. Yours is based on your own experience and you are certainly entitled to it; but my experience (in both lines) compels me to believe otherwise. I had intended taking up this matter of orchestra work in a later article, and shall probably do so anyway, but a few words now won't come amiss.

In the first place, there are more ways than one of fitting music to the picture. I presume you refer to "impromptu" playing, improvising—"making it up as you go along." It's a good method, too, providing you have a good pianist with a talent in that direction, but many of us are not so endowed. I have nothing but praise for the genius who can at sight improvise music to fit the picture, to an extent he (or she) is a composer, and I agree that it would be difficult (though not impossible) for an orchestra to work along these lines. Now, so far as I have observed, the impromptu pianist starts his picture with something non-commital—a waltz, possibly—and watches the picture until there is "something doing;" then he changes his music to suit the action—abruptly, if necessary. This is correct, of course. When the action changes, he changes with it; when the action subsides and the story runs quietly, the pianist drops back to his waltz or whatever it was, or plays something else of a similar neutral character, until the action again calls for a change. Correct again. That's all there is to the proper working up of a picture so far as the music goes. (The sound effects supply the balance.)

As an illustration, let us suppose his first change of music is to a pathetic number, and on the spur of the moment he improvises a beautiful theme. Well and good; I've often heard it done. But the best of impromptu players may repeat themselves occasionally. Why not? If the number is attractive and he happens to remember it, why shouldn't he apply it to a similar scene next week or next month? And if he shouldn't happen to feel in the humor to improvise a fitting number on the spur of the moment, but happened to think of a little theme that somebody else wrote, why not play it if appropriate? If a storm scene is shown he can improvise if he wants to, or he can play the storm from "William Tell," if he knows it. That is pretty good descriptive "storm music" and there are other numbers which will also answer the purpose—often better than you can improvise on the spur of the moment. Do you see what I am getting at? The best of improvisors may call occasionally on other works than their own, and the more credit to them for doing it. No good moving picture pianist will despise a good library whether he carries it in his memory or keeps it on a convenient shelf. And if he doesn't improvise at all, he can depend altogether on such a library, and do good work, too. I have heard it done. The difference lies here: if he hasn't a sufficient story in his memory he must reinforce it from the shelf at the first opportunity—and that should be at the end of the first show. I know there are a few managers who must on the piano being heard incessantly, through the intermission as well as through the pictures, but this is thoughtlessness on their part sometimes. Those who look on the music as a "ballyhoo" don't care to have their pictures worked up, anyway. Music in the intermission doesn't interest the average audience particularly, and some consideration should be given the tired fingers and brain of the musician if he is to do good work. Pardon the digression. We will say that during the first show the pianist has decided on the most appropriate music in his stock for the subjects to hand—of course he must know his library, but a little practice cultivates a good memory—and selects the proper numbers during the intermission. He must keep it in such systematic order as to be able to find it readily. After that it is mostly a matter of turning over the leaves. I grant you he will not read difficult music at sight and keep both eyes on the pictures, but even with a passing knowledge of his music he can give sufficient attention to both and he don't need to repeat himself oftener than the average impromptu worker—and I say this with all due respect to the latter. Now you see what I am driving at.

There are more ways than one of fitting a picture musically and I have mentioned two. The latter is a practical way for an orchestra to work. Each has its advantages. Each has something which the other has not. The impromptu pianist progresses from one theme to another by means of modulating chords and connecting phrases, thus forming a pleasing continuity which is difficult for an orchestra to simulate, though again I assert this is not altogether impossible. On the other hand, the orchestra has the advantage of instrumental coloring which is so valuable in descriptive music and sound effects.

But after all, your final results depend entirely upon the musician. He must take a lively interest in the work (which is fascinating once you get an insight of it) and try, try, try. And this, as you know, applies to the piano player as well as the orchestra leader.

Another thing: Not all pictures call for a musical setting of constantly changing themes; this applies mostly to dramatic pictures, and often of these one or two long numbers will suffice through the entire picture, maybe broken with a melodramatic number or two. Here standard music is certainly as satisfactory as the most gifted improvisation, and the orchestra can interpret that as well as the pianist. Scenic pictures demand music suggesting the countries represented—plenty of that on the market. Many industrial as well as other pictures do not admit of special treatment and are usually filled by a concert number of some sort—all the way from a "rag" to an overture. A varied musical program helps the show when it does not detract from it, and I believe interesting musical numbers should be included where they do not hurt the picture. In this, again, a good orchestra is more satisfactory than a good pianist.

I append a suggestion for working up a recent release, "The Lad from Ireland" (Kalem). It includes all standard stuff which can be handled equally well by either orchestra or piano.

"Killarney" till he meets sweetheart, then—
"Believe Me if All Those Endearing Young Charms" till sub-title ("Out of my heart forever") then—
"Come Back to Erin" till arrives in America, then—
"Girl I Left Behind Me" till election scene, then—Lively music, soft, increase to loud till change, then—
"Kathleen" till change, then—
Waltz till he shows letter, then—
"Come Back to Erin" till train is seen, then—
"Killarney" till interior of cottage (eviction scene), then—
"Believe Me if All, etc." till he enters cottage, then—
"The Harp that Once Through Tara's Hall" softly, swell at finish.
(Or can play "Believe Me if All, etc." until flag staff appears, then "Wearing of the Green" for finish.)

At another time I want to go into this matter in more detail.

The Handbook.—San Antonio, Tex.; Battle Creek, Mich.; Portland, Me.; New Orleans, La.; Jacksonville, Fla.; St. Louis, Mo.. Chicago, Ill.; Dubuque, Ia., and others requesting information as to contents of the Motion Picture Handbook. Replying, I cannot do better than to quote the Table of Contents. Bear in mind, this is not the Index. The Index covers three full pages. The Table of Contents is as follows:

THE SOURCE OF THE LIGHT.—The Current, Direct and Alternating. Definition of Electrical Terms. How to Make Calculations. Rule of Thumb.
WIRING.—Insulation. Permanent Wiring. Wire Gauge Table. Lamp Consumption Tables. Switches. Switchboards. Exit Light Circuits. Stage Switchboards. Fuses. Wire Systems. Series Multiple. High Potential Alternating System Meters.
RESISTANCE DEVICES.—Rheostats. Transformers. Mercury Arc Rectifier. Motor Generator Sets.
THE OPERATING ROOM.—Fittings for Operating Room. Tools. Operating Room Switches. The Lamp. The Lamp House.
LENSES.—Finding the Focal Length of Lenses and Finding the Size Lens Required to Project a Given Picture at a Given Throw. The Spot. The Principles of Optical Projection. The Selection of a Lens. Adjustment of Light. Condenser Breakage.
CARBONS.—How Carbons Are Made. Setting the Carbons.
The FILM.—Proper Care of Film. Patching Film. Wet Film. Removing Emulsion. Leaders, Inspecting. Film Jumping. How Film Is Made. Speed. The Throw.
MACHINE HEADS.—Cleaning and Oiling. Repairing. Adjusting Intermittent Gear. Setting the Shutter, etc.
The Edengraph. Edison. Lubin. Motiograph. Pathe. Power's. Standard.
MISCELLANEOUS.—The Stereopticon. Song Slides. Slide Carriers. Pedal Fire Shutter. Electric Meters. How to Read Meters.
The Curtain. Effect of Daylight and House Lights on the Picture. Illuminating the Auditorium. Ventilation. Seating. Music. Bell Wiring.
LOCATION AND MANAGEMENT.—Selecting a Theater Location. Selecting a Small Town Location. Employees. Advertising. Film Service. Changes. Tickets. Vaudeville. Travelogues and Other Lectures.

* * *

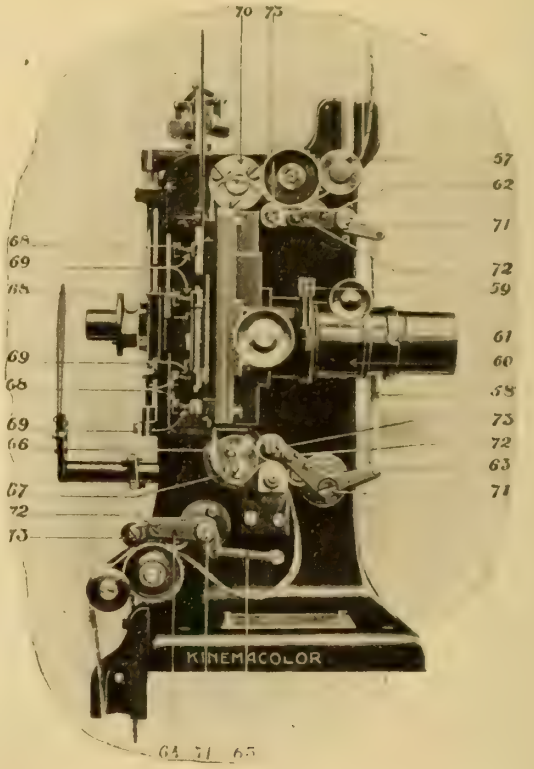
The Kinemacolor Machine.—Chicago, Ill., writes as follows: "I would like to have such information as you are able to give concerning the Kinemacolor machine. I believe that is the correct name." Anyhow, the machine I mean is the one which projects pictures in natural color—the Urban-Smith patent. I have a suspicion that our manager will put natural color pictures in, in the near future, and I want to become posted."

Your request, Chicago, is quite reasonable, although a full compliance with same would require more space than can well be devoted to this particular subject at this time. The Kinemacolor machine is quite similar, in a general way, to other projecting machines, though much more heavily built, so heavily, in fact that it is practically necessary to run it with a motor. The intermittent movement is effected by what is known as the "beater" movement, the same as is used on the Gaumont machine, a few of which have been used in this country. I present herewith a cut of the operating side of the Kinemacolor machine, together with an explanatory index:

Figs. 66 and 67 are the rollers constituting the intermittent movement (beater movement) and performing precisely the same work done by the ordinary star and cam. Fig. 67 is the large or main beater roller (dog, it is called,) while Fig. 66 is the small or secondary beater roller, the office of which is to start the film an instant before the main beater impacts, thus lessening the shock, since the speed of the intermittent action of the Kinemacolor machine is exactly double that of the ordinary projector. In other words, it moves film at twice the ordinary speed, this by reason of the fact that it requires the exposure of two pictures to make one complete exposure, one of these being shown through the red color screen and the other through the green, the two blending together forming the complete reproduction of natural colors. On top of the machine you will notice the governor, which is very heavy and massive. You will also note the great size of the various sprockets and the fact that each one has two idler rollers in addition to which the top and lower sprockets have a third or guide roller. I believe a close examination of the picture herewith submitted will give you a very fair idea of the machine. The whole machine has been built with a view to the demands of high speed (necessary on Kinemacolor work) though by the removal of the color screen the machine may be used as an ordinary projector for regular black and white film. The wing that sticks out on the left hand side is the automatic fire shutter which protects both the gelatine color screens and the film. The shutter for black and white work, —that is to say, for ordinary projection—is placed on the same shaft and occupies the same position as the color screen which latter is removed for that kind of work. Before threading the Kinemacolor machine, see that the magazine spindle carrying the upper reel is lubricated with a little vaseline. It is necessary that this reel revolve freely, else the hard pull of the top sprocket, as the diameter of the reel decreases, will cause injury to the sprocket holes of the film. The tension springs and gate must be kept scrupulously free from the dust which accumulates very rapidly by reason of the static electricity generated by the rapid movement of the film. This static action is quite strong in the Kinemacolor work and dust is rapidly attracted. Very close attention must be paid to the tension springs, or "pressure bars," as they are called. It is not necessary that the Kinemacolor film should require much, if any, more tension than ordinary film, and any undue tension would provoke trouble. Set your tension springs just so they will stop the film without any jumping of the picture on the screen. With the necessary rapid motion, if you get these springs, or pressure bars, a little too tight, you are very likely to injure the perforations of the film, as well as pull patches in two.

The film loop above the gate should not be too large, but just sufficient to give the bend about as shown in the picture. Anything more than this is too much. The bottom loop, on the other hand, should be as large as possible, up to the point where the film strikes the base casting. The film should be wound on the top reel with the emulsion side

57—Top sprocket guide roller
58—Sprocket rollers tension spring
59—Lens jacket capstan screw
60—Lens jacket
61—Lens locking screw, to secure the lens—which is a free fit in the jacket—at any distance from the exposure hole
62—Top sprocket pressure rollers, complete All pressure rollers are mounted in cradles, which give to each roller the required freedom of lift.



63—Main sprocket pressure rollers, complete.
64—Take-up sprocket pressure rollers, ,,
65—Take-up rollers tension spring.
66—Secondary dog roller, set at a radius to minimise the blow of the main dog roller
67—Main dog roller.
68—Gate tension adjusting nuts
69—Gate tension springs
70—Feed sprocket driver spur bearing.
71—Pressure roller fulcrum screw
72—Pressure roller cradle pin.
73—Pressure roller cradle screws

"in," and the reel in the top magazine should run clockwise, the lower or take up reel running in the opposite direction, the film being wound with the emulsion side out. Careful attention should be paid to the take-up tension, which should be only tight enough to revolve the reel at the end of the run.

In setting the shutter, under no circumstances must white light be allowed to show on the curtain. When the obliterating shutter is open either the red or green gelatine must be visible. In the color screen you will see small triangular openings through which passes white light. These openings are only for the purpose of securing lightness of construction. In handling Kinemacolor films it is of great importance that care be exercised, since while scratches will show in the ordinary black and white film, the damage is greatly magnified in the Kinemacolor. You must exercise care to keep the Kinemacolor films moist and pliable. In patching the Kinemacolor, light colors are not joined together; that is to say, a red is not joined to a red or a green to a green. By way of explanation, let me say that in Kinemacolor film one picture is green and the next one red; the next green, and so on. The red picture has no designating mark, but the green picture is marked on each side with a green ink line. After a little practice, however, you will be able to distinguish the difference between the two colors by merely looking at them, since a picture including a sky would usually be lighter in the green and darker in the red. In making a patch, the clear line across the film where the emulsion has been removed, must always be adjusted to come exactly between the two pictures that are being connected.

In using Kinemacolor you will find one of two things necessary. Either you will have to have a very moderate sized picture or else use a very much larger amperage than with ordinary film. For a picture 15 feet wide you will probably find it necessary to use as much as 75, perhaps 85, amperes D. C., using ¾ or ⅞ cored carbon above and a somewhat smaller solid carbon below. For A. C. use two ¾ or ⅞ inch cored carbons and all the amperage you can handle.

Any good dead white curtain is excellent for Kinemacolor projection.

And now let me caution you, Chicago, particularly on one point. Kinemacolor projection is a high speed machine and you must use a good grade of oil. You should lubricate the machine frequently and sparingly, carefully wiping off all surplus oil, since otherwise it will get thrown off with probable damage to the film.

I believe this covers the main points of the subject, but if I have overlooked anything, please write me again.

* * *

An English Lamp.—When Baxter Morton, general manager of the Nicholas Power Company, went to England recently he sent back a couple of typical English projection lamps, lamps such as are used in England, Germany and France. I believe a little description and a glimpse of these lamps will be of interest to our readers.

In the first picture the editor of this column is seen holding one of the lamps. By comparison you can see something of its size. It looks, indeed, like an embryo battleship. The extreme height is 13 inches. Its extreme length from the front carbon holder to back regulating hand wheel is 16 inches. The rack bar posts are ⅝ inch in diameter, and the main post 1 inch in diameter. The carbon lamps are ⅝ multiplied by 1 inch, or about 3⅜ inches, in length. The length from front of top carbon arm to back of regulating wheel beside the asbestos cable is 11 inches. The bolts holding the carbon clamps are ⅜ of an inch in diameter. The insulation is very heavy.

View No. 2 is the top of the same lamp looking down, showing the top carbon arm; while view No. 3 shows the general construction. These lamps are made to carry up to 100 amperes of current and, amazing as the statement seems, Mr. Morton informs the writer that many operators use 80 and 90 amperes of current with a ⅝ cored upper and ½ inch solid lower carbon. This seems incredible, yet he assures me it is the fact. The condensing lenses used are only 4 inches in diameter, instead of 4½, as is our practice. In many instances, instead of two plano-convex condensing lenses, a plano-convex and a bi-convex condenser is used. Whether or no this is an advantage I am unable to say.

Another peculiar thing of which Mr. Morton informs me is that in Germany they have what is called a "double" lamp house; that is to say, instead of the lamp house sliding over to the stereo lens, the lamp house is built double and the lamp slides over inside of it. This seems to me to be a most excellent scheme, since it enables one to have two sets of condensers, one to fit the moving picture lens and the other of longer focal length for the stereo, which would be, in my opinion, a very decided advantage. When space permits it is my intention to give you further description of some of the peculiar things in operating practice and appliances in the old countries. The above photos are had by courtesy of H. B. Coles, general sales agent of the N. Power Company, who took them.

* * *

As to Laws.—Kingston, N. Y., asks the following: "When did the law go into effect requiring all manufacturers and users of moving picture films to use only N. I. film? If this is the law, is it for the State of New York or only for certain cities, and are all film manufacturers using N. I. film? What is the character of the composition they use to renovate films and is it highly inflammable?"

So far as the writer knows, there is no such law. No, very few of the manufacturers are using N. I. film stock. If there is any law of that kind it is merely a local city ordinance.

As to the composition used to renovate film, it is a secret preparation, which I, therefore, of course, cannot give you.

* * *

From Dixieland.—Armas Durio, Opelousas, La., writes in, ordering a set of the gelatine slides, and says: "I am operating one of the best photoplay theaters in this State, strictly photoplays and nothing else. Have used licensed films for thirteen months, but am changing to-day to Independent."

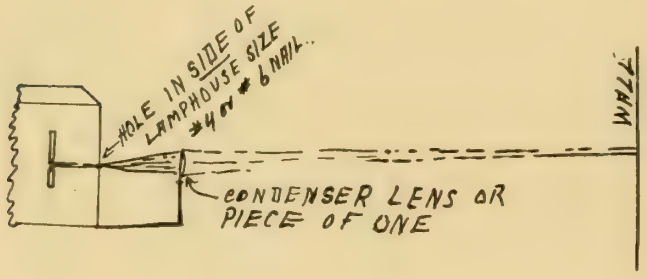
Glad to know you are sticking to the pictures, Opelousas, and trust your projection is all that it should be. Glad to hear from you at any time.

From Far Off Washington.—W. B. Hamblen, manager Orpheum theater, Colfax, Wash. (moving picture operator and machine expert), contributes the following: "I am hungry to see each and every one of the Worlds, and read them almost from cover to cover. I have put in nearly eight years at the side of a moving picture machine, two years of which have been in the service of one house in this town. I am not a member of a union, but 'them's my principles,' teeth and toe nails, though I have had no opportunity of joining the ranks of organized labor. I am not working at present, simply because the house changed hands a short time ago and I will not labor as cheap as the new owners desire me to. I have not only run machines, but have studied them. Only recently have we had a Trouble Department to turn to when things went wrong. Prior to the advent of the Department we had to be entirely self-dependable and blunder along finding out things for ourselves. I have found the Department to be of great assistance, though I have had many a hearty laugh at some of the ideas advanced. In the past I have at times had a helper in the operating room and have let him run the machine under my guidance, and after a week or so have had the gentleman report to the manager that he knew as much about running the machine as I did, and on two occasions I was let out on that very account. So far as I am concerned, I do not believe any man should be licensed as an operator unless he be thoroughly competent and able to prove his ability to project pictures properly, repair his machine, keep everything in such condition as to avoid breakdowns and vexations of that kind. In closing let me say that I am one operator who is interested in the field of his labor and looks upon matters from your own standpoint, also who wishes you success in your undertaking to elevate and improve projection."

Your views, Friend Hamblen, are correct. I had a good quiet smile over the helper taking your position. That is the trouble with projection to-day, too many men in charge of operating rooms who ought to be holding down the job of helper, and still others in charge of the operating room who really ought to be employing their talents at shoveling coal, driving a dray or some other equally complicated task wherein they would have opportunities to display the height and depth of their brain power. This is a condition, however, that is only natural, when you consider the enormously rapid growth of the moving picture business. It is a condition I am bending my humble efforts to eliminate and it is a condition which, I think, in the comparatively near future, will be eliminated. At least, I hope so. Let me add, however, that there are very many men of mediocre ability now in charge of projection plants who will in time become really excellent operators, because they realize their lack of knowledge and are studying to remedy it. The coal shovel artist I spoke of is the man who possesses practically no projection knowledge and is making no effort or endeavor to improve matters. With that particular animal, I have no patience whatever.

* * *

Projecting the Arc.—From Portland, Ore., comes the following: "I would like to describe to you a little trick we have been using here in Portland. It may be an old scheme in the East, but we have never seen it mentioned in the Department and will, therefore, try my drawing ability and see if I can make it clear to you. If it is a chestnut, just throw it away, but if you think it will be of any benefit to the brother operators, publish it.



"Here is a chance for some experimenting with the condenser proposition. One lens will reproduce the arc on the wall upside down and backwards, while two straighten it out. With the above it is possible to hold a steady light all day long without a shadow. In case the wall is too far away hang some kind of a small screen from the ceiling a few feet away from the lens."

We thank you, Portland, for submitting the idea. It is in effect the old "pin hole in the lamp house wall" plus a condensing lens. The condensing part of it is a new one on me.

Condenser Breakage.—F. E. Devlin, owner and manager Family Theater, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., sends in for a Handbook and says: "If we get as much satisfaction out of the book as we do from the column, we will be more than pleased. Can you tell us why we break so many condensers on our Power's No. 6? We have watched the column and have done everything we saw or heard of, without avail."

That is a hard proposition, Neighbor Devlin, a hard one indeed. Unless your condenser casing has ventilating holes in it, I would recommend that you punch two holes about ¼ inch in diameter in the bottom and two of the same diameter in the top of the condenser casing. In some of the Power's No. 6 lamp houses there are no ventilation holes, which was, I believe, a mistake. It may be possible that you are using a very short focal length of condenser which brings the arc up quite close to the lens, thus causing excessive lens heating. Try two 7½ condensers; that is to say, provided you are not already using them. You might also try placing your condensers in cold water and bringing them to a boil, letting them boil for half an hour or so, or bake them in an oven. Personally, the writer does not think it does any good, but many think it does, and you might try it out. I would also recommend that you keep the top of your lamp house hood thoroughly clean, so that the ventilation is open and free. Otherwise, there is likely to be excessive heat inside the lamp house.

* * *

Film Cement.—R. W. Freeland, manager Gem Theater, Harbor Springs, Mich., writes as follows: "Friend Richardson—Our formula for making N. I. film cement is as follows: 1 pound acetic ether (ethyl acetate), 1 pound acetone, 14 feet of N. I. film with emulsion washed off. Use scraps of film and wash off emulsion in hot water.

"Common factory, stretched over a frame and calcimined two coats, makes a good curtain. Should it sag, springle water on the back side."

We are certainly thankful to you, Neighbor Freeland, for the film cement formula and I am sure that thousands of our readers will appreciate your kindness in providing it. I would suggest that the emulsion may be more readily removed by adding some ordinary washing soda to warm water. Let the film soak a few minutes and the emulsion will readily wash off.

By "factory," I presume you mean common cotton cloth, for which "factory" is the trade name. Frankly, I do not think much of the proposition. I believe a good grade of bleached muslin sheeting would make a better curtain. However, the sprinkling stunt to tighten the curtain is something I had not thought of. Many thanks.

* * *

Losing Lower Loop.—Tamaqua, Pa., writes as follows: "The Trouble Department is the first place I look when the World arrives. I notice quite a number of operators experiencing trouble losing the lower loop. We are using a Power's No. 5 and had the same trouble, but it was not the machine's fault. The spring holding the take-up sprocket idler in position sometimes becomes weak so that when a thick splice passes through the machine it causes trouble. If the spring is good and strong it will hold the film in place while the splice is passing over the take-up sprocket, providing the roller is set right. We are using a Hallberg D. C. economizer or motor-generator, set on 110 volts, and we get excellent light. I wish to install another machine. Will you kindly tell us whether two lamps thrown on at one time will affect our economizer? Would the load be too heavy for the machine, or would both lamps burn dim? Enclosed find check for another year's subscription to the World. I am a little in arrears, but please do not miss a single number."

Many thanks for your comments on the take-up matter. Your strong spring idea is perfectly correct, provided the roller be set away from the sprocket by about twice the thickness of the film; otherwise a stiff spring would aggravate the trouble. As to the economizer, you could only turn one lamp on it at a time. If you attempt to operate two one will be automatically extinguished when the other is turned on. We are, of course, glad to know that you like the World and the Trouble Department.

* * *

A New Use for Moving Pictures.—The Denison (Texas) Trades and Labor Council gave a free photoplay show in the O. R. C. Hall, on November 24, to which everybody was invited. The entertainment consisted of suitable moving pictures and stereopticon illustrations of the various union labels, the various unions affiliated with the Council contributing to the expense of the entertainment.

* * *

Films Wanted.—R. M. Campbell, Pacific Coast Film Exchange, Los Angeles, Cal., writes: "It seems we all have to depend upon the Moving Picture World for information in all lines of the moving picture business. Will you kindly inform me through the Trouble Department where I can buy some of the old Cameraphone talking picture films?"

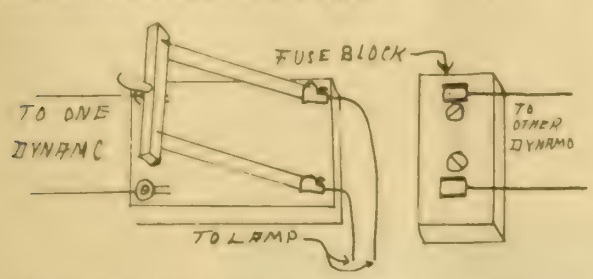
The old Cameraphone films are all owned by The Champion Film Company, 12 East Fifteenth street, New York City, of whom you can doubtless purchase such films as you desire.

* * *

On Polarity Changing.—San Francisco, Cal., writes: "As regards article on page 1186, November 10 issue, entitled 'Polarity Changing,' why not take fuse block and turn clips around and make connection same as D. P. D. T. switch, as per enclosed sketch. If the fuse clips are set wider than the switch the use of a drill would quickly remedy them so that the blades would meet the clips."



I was quite a little puzzled for a few minutes, 'Frisco, to understand what you were driving at. I see, however, that you mean to have the fuse clips act as receivers for the switch blade on the lower throw. Your idea is all right and is really very ingenious. But why use the fuse clips at all? Why not use just a plain double throw switch? It would be much better, in my judgment. We are indebted to you for your kindness in sending in this excellent idea.

* * *

Aluminum Paint.—Portland, Ore., writes: "I enclose money order for $1.50. Mail me Operators' Handbook as soon as possible. I class myself as a thorough "picture fan" and have all the faith in the world that the motion picture theater and the motion pictures will reach a far higher level than they at present occupy.

"I am not a believer in vaudeville. As a rule the average vaudeville stunt pulled off in a motion picture house is rank, it costs the exhibitor a lot of money and eventually will disgust the public to such an extent that they fail to patronize the theater as often as they would if high class pictures and appropriate music were offered. I have tried it and found that vaudeville doesn't pay. Up to a month ago I had been using a plain muslin curtain calcimined. Desiring more light on my pictures, I painted the curtain with aluminum paint. This resulted in the picture being much brighter, but the brush marks show very plainly on the curtain especially if I am running a film that has a light background. The picture also shows a good deal more flicker (I am using an Edison Model B) to overcome this I am obliged to increase speed of machine to such an extent that the figures on the curtain move in an unnatural, jerky manner. The figures also appear to move behind a gauze or very thin netting. Is this due to reflection? Is it possible to calcimine over aluminum paint and hide the brush marks? I think the plain curtain gives the best picture. What would you advise? Am using A. C., 75-foot throw. Would like to know what causes some parts of film when thrown on curtain to show light flashes when the arc is burning steadily. If space will permit kindly publish this under Portland, Ore."

Like yourself, Portland, I believe the motion picture theater and the picture itself are still what might be termed in the embryo. I believe that eventually they will reach such a plane as will, by comparison, cause us to regard the present efforts as but child's play. As to the aluminum paint, any reflecting curtain increases the flicker; the remedy is to get a flickerless machine. It is the refraction (or reflection) of light which causes the picture to appear as behind a gauze. Yes, I believe calcimine will cover the aluminum all right, though I am not quite certain about that either, never having experimented. Maybe it won't stick. I would advise you to get a plain white, good grade, muslin bed sheeting, as wide as you can get (it can be had in cities 100 to 108 inches in width). Get enough cloth for two curtains and stretch it over your aluminum screen. Once a month take the screen down and have it laundered. I believe you will find this will give you an entirely satisfactory picture. The light reflected by the aluminum screen behind the cloth will possibly add somewhat to the brilliancy of the picture without otherwise marring the effect. The flashes are what is called a "travel ghost," due to flutter being set among or else too coarse.

The Shutter Problem.—Brooklyn, N. Y., submits the following: "A and B Theaters No. 1 outside shutter on A. C. and has trouble with a flaring light on the picture. B suggested using a two-wing Universal shutter. A did so and the flaring disappeared. A claims that he gets more light with the two-wing than with the three wing. B says it makes no difference. Which is right?"

A is right. By reference to the article, "Shutters," in another part of this week's department, you will readily be able to figure the thing out for yourself. The "flaring" you speak of was doubtless due to excessive speed which brought the blades of the three-wing shutter in to synchronism with one side of the alternations of the current.

* * *

An Advertising Scheme.—Springfield, Vt., contributes the following: "Shortly after I wrote you I discovered the trouble was in the cam-pin, which had become flattened thus allowing too much play in the star slot. As regards keeping the sprockets clean, you mentioned that quite a while ago and I took the hint and invested in a toothbrush. In the issue of November 20, page 1230, John Blohm, Chesley, Ont., speaks of reflecting a picture to a wall across the street by means of mirrors. We tried this out, but couldn't make it work. We have an old machine, however, which we turn around so as to project a picture on a big brick building opposite the theater. It works fine and we have larger houses than ever before. Many thanks for the idea."

Thus again is the value of the Department demonstrated. Its real editors are many, consisting of every manager and operator who from time to time contributes. It not only gives you the benefit of such advice as I myself am able to offer, but it brings forth, for the mutual benefit of all, the ideas of hundreds of operators and managers scattered all over the United States and Canada. Such ideas as the above, which was called forth by Neighbor Blohm's original idea, are of decided and distinct value, and their dissemination in no shape or manner injures him who has the enterprise to set them forth for the benefit of his fellow operator or exhibitor.

The cam-pin trouble Springfield speaks of will be found under subject entitled "Picture Jumps," page 1288, December 3 issue.

* * *

Machine Trouble.—Toronto, Can., sets forth his trouble as follows: "There is something the matter with my Edengraph machine, and after trying about everything under the sun to overcome the difficulty, I now apply to the Trouble Department for help. When the machine is in motion it runs very hard, except when I hold the gate open, then everything is lovely. I notice at times when the machine is running the intermittent sprocket backs up a little. What causes it, and how can I adjust same. I also find that I crack a great many condensers. I use 250 volt D. C., that being the only voltage in the district. It is always the condenser next the light that cracks. I have two rheostats in series and one of them always becomes red and the other barely warm.

"Find enclosed $1.50 for the Handbook, which I think will be very valuable to me."

As to the machine running hard except when the gate is open, that would indicate that your tension springs were set altogether too tight, that the film is under considerable pressure somewhere behind the gate or (most probable) that the spring shoes bending around the intermittent sprocket set too close to the sprocket. The latter is in all probability where the trouble lies.

As to the intermittent sprocket backing up when the machine is running, you will have to send me further information. I do not see how you can tell whether it backs up or does not back up, when the machine is running. If there is much lost motion in the intermittent sprocket you had better write the Kleine Optical Company, 42 State street, Chicago, for instructions. Instructions how to adjust the star and cam of the Edengraph would take up more space that I can spare. The Edengraph intermittent runs in an oil-tight casing and it is quite a job to get at it. If you have one of the Handbooks, you will find the process fully described on page 116. It reads as follows: "Remove flywheel and governor, as before described. Remove lens holder on operating side of machine. You will now see the heads of three large flat screws on operating side of machine. Remove the lower one and pull out the shaft and gear it holds. Take off the lower (take-up) sprocket and pull out the spindle. Remove the collar on crank shaft and pull shaft and gear out. Now look inside the machine and just to one side of the intermittent oil casing you will see a large flat screw head with another immediately below the casing. Remove these and you can pull out the whole casing, tapping lightly on the center of the intermittent sprocket, if necessary, to start it. Be very careful that you do not injure the intermittent sprocket teeth on bottom of aperture plate tracks as you pull casing out. To take up lost motion between star and cam, remove cover of oil casing and in top edge of casing just over the shaft will be seen a small set screw. This screw holds the star shaft bushing which extends through the casing and clear out to the sprocket and is eccentric. Loosen the screw and turn the bushing to eliminate lost motion between the star and cam."

As to the rheostat matter, I should say that one of your rheostats has considerable smaller wires than the other, wire of too small diameter for the amount of current passing through. The remedy is to get a rheostat having wire of larger diameter. Very likely one of the rheostats has 3½ milimeter wire, whereas the other has only 3¼.

* * *

The Right Spirit.—B. E. Dawson, manager of the Wascenic Theater, Waseca, Minn., writes as follows: "Having derived much benefit from the Department, I wish, in my own humble way, to help and, if possible, to do unto others as we have been done by. I notice several are having trouble with the film jumping up and down and sidewise. We experienced the same trouble with our Edison one-pin machine. We put in new springs, also aperture plate, but it did very little good. Close examination revealed the fact that the little guide rollers at the top of the aperture plate were worn down quite small and did not hold the film out level with the aperture plate, so that each time the intermittent sprocket moved the film, instead of going down smooth over the aperture, would pull out on the springs. This happened when the intermittent moved, and when the movement was done and the strain removed from the film the springs would push the film in the space against the aperture plate tracks. This kept the film working backward and forward all the time. It no sooner was shoved in place by the springs than the intermittent would act again and you can readily see this would cause jumping on the screen. We had a jeweler enlarge the diameter of the two guide rollers and there was no more jumping. Where a picture is out of focus on one side, try turning the lens in its barrel."

Well, Neighbor Dawson, you certainly have sprung a new one—new to me, at least. It has never occurred to me that the size of the guide rollers at the top of the gate would make any material difference. I don't remember just how those rollers are placed on the Edison machine, but on the Power's the same result you attained by enlarging the rollers would be had by bending the top of the gate in or out a trifle. Friend Dawson's idea is to have a film pulled down perfectly straight from the top idler until it strikes the tension springs. Those who have troubles of this kind should take note and experiment. Many thanks, Friend Dawson, for the idea. I'm afraid, however, your tension springs must have been pretty weak.

* * *

Those Drawings Again.—W. S. Turnpaugh, Fort Worth, Tex., sends in for a Handbook and proceeds to hand Friend Foley a little bunch, as follows: "I wish to reply to J. A. Foley's answer on wiring diagrams (page 1296, December 3 issue). In one way he is just and also correct, and I thank him for calling my attention to the position of my rheostat in relation to the switch. In another way, however, my drawing is correct. He evidently overlooks the fact that the National Underwriters' Code requires a main entrance switch to be placed immediately upon the inside of any building which is being wired; also that if I were to use the three-pole switch I would have, in fact now have, a main entrance switch and 125-ampere knife fuses. I also have a switch and 100-ampere knife fuses on machine circuit, and on my picture I have 75-ampere knife fuses and a switch to control the arc. I should like to ask Friend Foley where he got his idea of setting carbons. The editor of this Department has repeatedly illustrated the correct method of setting carbons and every operator in Fort Worth can set his carbons and set them correctly, too, thanks to the instructions received through the Department."

Friend Turnpaugh is correct in calling Neighbor Foley down about his carbons. The jack-knife set shown by Mr. Foley in his drawing is absolutely out of date, and in every way bad; I would cheerfully recommend to him that he mend his ways, if he is setting his carbons after that fashion. Let me caution Neighbors Turnpaugh, Foley and all others to receive criticisms made by one another good naturedly and with good grace, as I believe you all will, and as you all have so far, and I believe will in the future. I think Friend Turnpaugh's rheostat could have been on the other side of the switch and still have observed the Underwriters' rules.

Color Schemes.—Memphis, Tenn., writes: "We are about to redecorate our house. We would like to make the decoration in three colors. Will you kindly tell us which colors best harmonize?"

Dark red, medium green and light red make a pleasing combination which thoroughly harmonizes, as does dark green, a reddish salmon color and buff. Yellow green, that is to say, a yellowish green, purple and canary yellow are also primary and harmonious colors. Any one of these three combinations you will find to be pleasing to the eye.

* * *

Chicago Laws.—The editor is in receipt, by the courtesy of Wm. H. Havill, city examiner, moving picture operators, 117 Market street, Chicago, Ill., of a copy of the 1911 form of application for license as moving picture operator. Also a neatly printed little book containing the laws regulating moving picture theaters and moving picture operating rooms in the city of Chicago. The application blank is the best we have ever seen and reflects distinct credit on the Chicago Board of Examiners, particularly in that it makes the licensing of inexperienced men almost an impossibility. It requires that the applicant state fully where he received his instructions in operating, the length of time of instruction, the name of the different machines he has operated, the length of time he operated or assisted in operating each one, with the name and address of his employer in each instance and the license held, if any. It also requires that if the applicant has been examined in any other city, the date of examination, the city and State and the result must be given, all of which is, in the writer's judgment, most excellent and should be adopted in New York City, as well as in all other cities. The codification of the laws in a little book is something the writer kicked and kicked good and strong for while he was in Chicago, and he intends to bring about something similar in New York City, if it is possible. It is neither fair nor just to make a man subject to a lot of laws and rules and then make it practically impossible for him to find out or ascertain what these laws and rules are. It is nothing but right and just that he should be informed fully as to the law, and the publication and distribution of a small book containing all laws affecting operating rooms and moving picture theaters is something the officials owe to all operators and exhibitors in the various cities. Hats off to Chicago's Board of Examiners.

* * *

Poor Wages.—A. J. Walden, manager Walden's Electric Shows, writes (en route) from Union City, Tenn., as follows: "This section of the country is the poorest for projection that I know of. I refer particularly to the small towns. Low wages is the rule and less to work with than anywhere else I have ever been. I have a nice little outfit and get a fine picture, but am anxious to learn more of my chosen business. I am enclosing money order for Operators' Handbook. I have been in the picture game for eight years, but will say that nearly every time I run a machine I learn something new. I have found the Department a great help and extend to yourself and our brother operators who contribute my heartfelt thanks."

Glad to hear from your, Friend Walden, but sorry to hear so poor a report from Tennessee. Matters, no doubt, will be improved as time goes on, but that, of course, isn't very encouraging just now.

* * *

The Right Dope.—Coffeyville, Kan., writes: "In the issue of November 26 your answer to Burlington, Ia., is the best I ever saw. You were certainly making a correct guess, and I will bet $10 to the hole in a doughnut that Burlington is not paying his operator a weekly salary sufficient to buy a jacksnipe a square meal. You should have had that article on the front page of the World and sent a copy to every manager in this part of the country. The good Lord knows the poor operators in this locality are certainly on the cheap list. I know of one manager in this town who has had a dozen operators in the last year. He curses the film exchange on account of the bad pictures, but the fault is really in his operators who were nothing but cheap boys. I think some of the managers will wake up before long and realize that money invested in a good operator means increased receipts at the box office. I am a member of the I. A. T. S. E., Local 176, and am a constant reader of the Trouble Department. Without it I am lost. I wish you all kinds of good luck, a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year."

Sorry to hear such a report from Coffeyville. I was in Fort Smith a few years ago and circulated around that country considerably. At that time the projection was about as bad as it well could be. I take it from what you say that it is not materially improved. Too bad, Coffeyville, too bad. The manager who tries to save money at the expense of poor projection is not what I call a manager. My name for him is a mis-manager.

Chicago Notes.

A GAUMONT MASTERPIECE.

It is a pleasure for me to announce the coming release of "Herod and the New Born King," a Gaumont production, a real masterpiece. The subject is an old Biblical theme that has already been presented to the public, but this Gaumont production eclipses all that has been attempted in this line. While churchgoers will be pleased at a production depicting the birth of Christ in a truthful manner, without exaggerations or blunders, men and women not believing in religion will admire the film as one of the finest specimens of stagecraft and of photography.

This was the first time in my life that I had the pleasure of seeing a perfect vision of an angel and this with the best light effects. The last scene, the one represented in the following cut, is a real master in every sense of the word. It would be impossible to find a more beautiful composition, with such admirable light effects and of such superior photography. As the last scene is on the screen for fully fifty feet of film, with no motion on the part of Joseph and of Mary, and only a few occasional moves of the head of the donkey, this last scene does not look like a motion picture but more a "Tableau Vivant," while some persons would imagine themselves standing in an art museum in front of a celebrated painting. This last scene is art, pure and simple, and will remain engraved in the memory of every person lucky enough to have a chance to gaze upon it.

Scene from "Herod and the New Born King" (Gaumont).

At first I thought that I would have much to say on the numerous scenes, each one being a masterpiece in itself, but when the last scene flashed on the screen, everything else was forgotten. The scene of Herod and the woman, is also a rare specimen of fine sharp photography and very clever acting.

The stable looks like a stable, and did not look as if it was built of painted canvas. The animals housed in the stable are not mere skins thrown over some dummies. The kings look their parts and the presents offered to the child Jesus show that they are real royal tokens. The caravan with its loaded camels gives the typical color of the times and customs of the epoch.

There is another scene that I cannot pass over in silence, as it is also a beauty even in its great simplicity. It is the flying trip to Egypt. Joseph leads the donkey on which is seated Mary holding the child Jesus. This production is sure to please everyone, and although a religious picture, it is minus those long faces and false beards made of cotton, so common in other religious productions. It is rich in details and produces the most pleasing sensation.

These are the films that can save the future of the industry.

"The Closed Gate" of Gaumont is also a very simple, well-told story, everything is very natural, the photography is remarkably fine and the little tot plays her part very well. The scene of the little girl feeding the swans is very touching, she is so childish and at the same time so unconcerned in her work. You feel a chill in your back when you see the little tot, ignorant of all danger, passing under the railroad gate and crossing the tracks, when a train is seen at a distance speeding for the crossing.

At the same exhibition I was shown a Biograph, "His Sister-in-Law." Good technically, but entirely too much drawn out and with not sufficient interest to warrant a full reel.

J. M. B.

WITH THE MUSIC MAKERS.

On another page of this issue appears the advertisement of the Deagan Cathedral Chimes, manufactured by J. C. Deagan, 3800 North Clark street, Chicago; a musical novelty that has made an instantaneous hit all over the world. I am not stretching a point, either, when I say that, for there are no territorial boundaries for the sale of "Deagan" instruments, as there is none to the circulation of the Moving Picture World. I had the pleasure of visiting the Deagan factory recently, and was escorted through the various buildings, from cellar to garret, by J. C. Deagan, Jr., the active manager of the concern. Needless to say I became greatly interested in watching the process through which the various instruments pass to completion, from the selecting of the wood and bell metal to the inspecting and tuning department.

A medley of "musical noises" greets one at every turn; orchestra bells, marambaphones, xylophones, musical bells, chimes, every conceivable novelty instrument is being made, and made right. "That's the secret of our success" said Mr. Deagan; "every instrument is rigidly inspected before shipping, and we never slight the quality of material or workmanship." But about the cathedral chimes: the set is composed of four tubes, of delicate tone, delicately finished, which, on being struck with the various mallets that accompany the set, give forth a very sweet mellow tone, most pleasing to the ear. Chimes and church bells can be perfectly imitated, and what makes them of great value to picture theaters—they can be used for sound effects in connection with almost any picture released. A good trap musician can secure the effect of any desired bell with proper manipulation on the four tubes. The price is the only "cheap" thing about them, and every exhibitor who desires his trap man to play the pictures should invest in this valuable instrument. At the present time the different departments of the Deagan factory are housed in separate buildings, but a new factory is in the course of erection, which, when completed, will greatly facilitate the output of this very busy "music shop."

J. C. K.

TO THE OPERATORS.

Thanksgiving Day in Chicago was a speed contest for the moving picture operators on Madison street, as if the managers had offered a fat turkey to the operator who could turn his crank the fastest. It was awful. At the Boston the figures on the screen appeared as jumping mechanical dolls. At the Pastime, when a Kalem film was on the screen, the horses were seen flying like the little tin horses of a horse racing toy. Although I have always been opposed to vaudeville, I must confess that the acts of the evening were welcomed, a real relief to the eyesight.

Is it not funny that they would not hurry up the vaudeville acts as they do the pictures? If the greedy managers who, on Sundays and holidays, want to crowd a one hour show into thirty minutes had their say, they would urge the vaudeville actors to put a little more speed in their acts, but the actors are not willing to jeopardize their future by spoiling their acts with too much speed. An actor is in a position to say to Manager X———: "I am here for three days, I must retain my reputation if I want other engagements and I am not going to ruin my reputation to oblige you."

The Operators' Union is very strong in Chicago and if the operators were to refuse to turn the crank at high speed the managers would have to either close their places or give a decent show.

It is up to you, Mr. Operator. Are you in the business to stay? If so, you want to save the future of motion pictures and please the public. Refuse to turn the crank above normal speed. You can do it—do it for the sake of the future of cinematography.

J. M. B.

"WHAT BECOMES OF THE TITLES?" ALMOST ANSWERED.

While wandering around looking for "the missing titles" the other afternoon, I stopped in at the plant of the French-American Producing Company, 918 Madison street, and although I didn't find the "missing ones," I found this company busily engaged making new ones for the various exchanges throughout the country, yes, and even for the "General." Mr. Shackelford, the manager, showed me a big stack of orders from practically every State in the Union; one from as far as Australia, and with a big smile he commenced to kick about the results he obtained from his ad. in the World. "After the first insertion," he stated, "I was compelled to hire more help to get the numerous orders out on time, and now they are coming in so fast that we are working night and day."

Besides ordinary release titles, the French-American is making a large line of film announcement titles, both black and white and hand-colored, which seem to be making a hit with the exhibitors. Trick and disappearing announcement titles are among the novelties Mr. Shackelford is placing on the market, and the idea is a very clever one. The French-American plant is complete in every detail; the various processes of the work are interesting to watch.

On leaving, Mr. Shackelford told me to continue his ad., "but," he added, "don't ask 'what becomes of the titles' in your next issue, for the exchanges respond so rapidly I can't keep up with my orders." I guess that "will help some."

J. C. K.

"THE NEW PUBLICITY."

"If some exhibitors received from their exchange the reels that they call for, they would put themselves out of business in three months.

"The essence of every program should be variety, in spite of which we know of exhibitors who call for all wild Western subjects or Indian subjects. We also know of exhibitors who call for complete and continuous programs of the same make of films.

"The more highly spiced a certain dish may be the less often it can be eaten. We can drink water with every meal year in and year out, but no man can eat thirty quail in thirty days. The more highly spiced the film the greater hesitancy there should be in giving audiences an overdose."

The above sensible advice appears in "Film Progress," issued by George Kleine, of Chicago. An intelligent choice of films by an exhibitor conduces to the success of his business, unquestionably pleases the public and holds their patronage.

But, oh the irony of fate! Mr. Kleine is a member of a combination which limits the choice of the exhibitor, as Mr. Kleine very well knows. To be consistent, Mr. Kleine should throw off the shackles that bind him and give the exhibitor, on whose behalf he is so solicitous, an opportunity of making up his program when, where and how he pleases. This would ensure the exhibitor a choice of many manufacturers, other than those which Mr. Kleine represents in this country, and other than those with whom, and with which, he is in league for the purpose of limiting the choice of the exhibitor.

Mr. Kleine, however, proposes to add to the confusion of the exhibitor by inciting the public to still further add to his perplexity. No doubt, "if some exhibitors received from their exchanges the reels that they call for, they would put themselves out of business in three months." But, why does Mr. Kleine spend his good money in attempting to bring about a worse condition of things than that which at present exists? Mr. Kleine is printing large advertisements in Chicago and other newspapers, drawing the attention of the general public to his pictures. Some of the other Chicago manufacturers are doing the same, i. e., trying to persuade the public to take an interest in the pictures of individual manufacturers, and of inciting the public to induce the exhibitor to call for Kleine, Selig, or Essanay pictures. We cannot discover any other motive for Mr. Kleine and his Chicago friends spending money in a very lavish fashion in general newspapers.

KOSMIK FILMS TO PATRONS OF MOVING PICTURE THEATERS
Kosmik moving pictures are approved by the National Board of Censorship, and noted for perfect photography, finished acting, sustained interest and refinement.
Each week Kosmik Films invade the fields of travel, comedy and drama. The following strong products become available to theaters throughout the country, on these dates:
SATURDAY, NOV. 26, 1910
SAMSON'S BETRAYAL
A Colored Biblical Drama
Delilah learns the secret of Samson's strength, which lies in his hair, and she causes a man to shave off the seven locks of Samson's head. And for the betrayal was Delilah paid by the Philistines eleven hundred pieces of silver.
GAUMONT
CALINO Travels As a PRINCE
A Picture Comedy
Calino, by using his master's ticket, makes a cruise during which he attempts to act the part of the nobleman. His signal failure is wonderful to behold.
GAUMONT
TUESDAY, NOV. 29, 1910
THE FLAT NEXT DOOR
A Picture Comedy
In which Mr. Youngman and Mr. Oldman are seen in bitter rivalry. Oldman becomes a hero and wins a bride.
GAUMONT
TARABOON on the RHONE
A Travelogue
Scenes in the Sunny South of France. A trip worth while to every lover of travel and knowledge.
GAUMONT
WEDNESDAY, NOV. 30, 1910
THE RETURN AT MIDNIGHT
A Picture Drama
The hero is driven from home because of his love for a poor Gypsy girl whom he marries. Hardship drives him to return to his father, who forgives him.
ECLIPSE.
RAMBLE Through CEYLON
A Travelogue
Elephants in their native element. Elephants working with almost human intelligence, dragging, pushing and carrying huge timbers. Elephants disporting in a stream, rolling about in the mud and spouting water through their trunks.
ECLIPSE.
SATURDAY, DEC. 3, 1910
LURED BY A PHANTOM
A Colored Picture Drama
A beautifully colored film telling the touching story of a melancholy ruler whose vision of his lost sweetheart leads him to the throne of the Supreme Ruler.
NACNY'S Wedding Trip
A Picture Comedy
Introducing a furious ride on the back of a mad bull. Danger and comedy combined to produce laughs and thrills.
GAUMONT.
Ascertain from your local theaters the days they usually show our subjects, so that you will not miss any of these masterpieces.
If you are interested in our picture stories send name and address, for advance descriptive bulletins.
GEORGE KLEINE, 52 State St, Chicago, Illinois

Copy of advt. appearing in Western daily newspapers.

Suppose the public are influenced by these appeals, what is the result? Simply that the exhibitor would be in a worse case than he is at present. Exhibitors do not keep pictures in stock like the vendors of candies or shoes or sugar-coated pills; they have to obtain them from their exchanges. Suppose, then, these Chicago advertisements have the desired effect, the exhibitor will be asking for nothing but Kleine, Selig and Essanay pictures. A very good thing for the three manufacturers named but a very bad thing for the variety of the programs—and variety is the keynote of the success of the photoplay.

We sincerely believe that the manufacturers alluded to are throwing their money away by inserting these large advertisements in the general press. We hope we may be wrong in this, and that, to the contrary, it will have a beneficial effect upon their own sales and upon the business in general.

It points to one conclusion, however. Since the licensees of the Patents Company were persuaded to confine their trade advertising to the house organ referred to in these pages last week, their sales suffered accordingly. As that pathetic sheet neither voices nor influences public opinion, these manufacturers now seek to gain publicity and prestige through the legitimate channels of the unbiased newspaper.

The fettered spirit of independence rattles its chains. If it cannot be free it can at least make a noise.

THE FIRST KINEMACOLOR DRAMATIC PICTURE.

(From "The Kinematograph and Lantern Weekly," November 24, 1910.)

We confess that the advance which has been made by the Kinemacolor process in the last few months came as a surprise to us when, a few days ago we sat for over two hours in Kinemacolor Building watching first prints being put through, under Mr. Urban's careful and critical scrutiny. It would not be desirable to reveal all the "secrets of the prison house," but this we will say, the trade will soon have a shock, and so will London, when Kinemacolor's permanent home, to which we referred last week, is established. It is not too much to say that initial difficulties, such as fringing, and red and green flickering, have been overcome. All that is required to avoid these defects is ordinary care on the part of the camera operator.

"What will happen to black and white?" we murmured to Mr. Urban as we gazed at travel pictures which we forgot were pictures, the sun shone so brightly, the green leaves fluttered in the breeze, and the distant prospect unrolled itself to our gaze, greens fading into browns and greys and purples right away to the horizon as it would if we were standing on some breezy hilltop gazing out upon the country at our feet.

"I'm not greedy," was Mr. Urban's reply (or words to that effect). "Others may come in and take up a manufacturer's license. I only want some recompense for all the trouble I have taken, and there has been a good deal, I assure you."

Then came the first Kinemacolor dramatic subject, but of the plot we retain but a hazy recollection, we were so enchanted with the beauty of the scenes before us. Assuredly the painter may soon "shut up shop;" portions of this film would not disgrace the walls of the Royal Academy, if they could be reproduced and placed there. The title of the story was "By Order of Napoleon," and in the first scene a party of gaily uniformed hussars rode up to a fine old mansion on which they had been billeted. The difference between this opening and the first scene of any black and white film is almost indescribable. We did not feel we were looking upon a piece of animated photography; we forgot to look for good photography or bad. No, the effect was of reality; this scene—the house, embowered in green trees waving in the breeze, its ancient walls (the identical hue of stone), adorned with Virginia creeper, the brightly caparisoned soldiers, with their flashing breastplates and splendid uniforms, their well-groomed horses with shiny, glossy coats—all gave the impression of actuality, an impression heightened by the depth and stereoscopic quality of the picture.

And then we went indoors. The soldiers sat and lounged on the beautiful rosewood furniture and we felt we were there too, taikng note of the handsome appointments of the room. We were transported thence to a sterner scene. Napoleon, surrounded by his officers, ordered one of them, as part of the plan of campaign, to blow up a bridge, and the soldier rode off to execute his mission. We watched him go, and shared with him the glorious sunshine and the smiling countryside (forgetting November and Wardour street!). But events are happening in this new world whose beauties we are exploring. Two soldiers on the other side fire on our gallant rider and wound him. He dismounts to bind the injury, and our eyes wander off to the surroundings. We notice the yellow stubble—relic of the recently harvested corn—and the Autumn tints just making their appearance on the trees.

But our space is almost finished, and the story passes through several more scenes. The officer succeeds in his purpose, blows up the bridge, and on his way back calls on his lady love. Their embrace is observed through a telescope by one of Napoleon's officers. Napoleon's attention is called to the matter, and he orders the officer to be arrested for supposed breach of duty. Explanations are made, and Napoleon, fully satisfied, joins the hands of the lady and her love, and pins a medal to the gallant officer's breast. The whole of these scenes are wonderfully real, flesh tints, the color of the lady's auburn hair, everything is as natural as life, and the impression we have is that of gazing through a window upon an actual scene.

THE FRIESE-GREENE COLOR PROCESS.

(From "The Kinematograph Weekly," November 24, 1910.)

At Pendleton's Picture, Co-operative Hall, Crewe, on Thursday last, Mr. Friese Greene gave a display of his system of natural color animated photography.

The pictures were shown during the ordinary program, an announcement being made from the platform that a picture in color of Mr. Friese-Greene's son signalling with colored flags, taken six years ago, and one as recently as two months ago, would be shown. These films it was explained, were taken in the laboratory, and the commercial results of Mr. Friese-Green's labors would be submitted in about a month's time.

In the six-year-old picture three colors apparently were employed and the machine ran at ordinary speed. The results were crude, the picture was unsteady and fuzzy, and occasionally such colors as there were would disappear altogether.

The two-year-old results were very much better. The subject was a revolving vase of flowers, but it was revolved so slowly as to be almost a "still" picture. There was a lack of true color in the blooms, but now and then a fine stereoscopic effect appeared.

The last, and two months old picture was again an improvement, and represented a colored ware dessert dish containing fruits. The results obtained were curiously varied. Intermittently the color rendering would appear to be very good indeed, and the stereoscopic effects produced by the dish revolving would be very pronounced, giving a beautiful, soft, and natural appearance. The unsteadiness, however was very great, and the defects it must be confessed, were largely apparent.

It remains to be seen what Mr. Friese-Greene can accomplish when he comes to do outdoor work; the films described above were the results of course, of long exposures and slow rates of speed. Whether his methods infringe any of the master patents is a matter upon which we do not feel called upon to express an opinion. That question may be left with those directly interested, It is apparent from the above account of the results obtained that progress has been made, and we wish Mr. Friese-Greene success in his continued efforts.

BALTIMORE EXHIBITORS HAVE A JOLLIFICATION.

"Everybody get together and advance the moving picture business, in the city of Baltimore, to a higher standard than ever before," was the keynote of the speeches made at the first annual banquet of the Moving Picture Exhibitors' Association of Baltimore, which was held in the great banquet hall of the Hotel Rennert on Wednesday night, November 30.

After an address of welcome by A. G. Steen, vice-president of the Association, the members, whose appetites had been keyed up to the highest point for the occasion, enjoyed a feast "fit for a prince."

Several important matters which have heretofore puzzled the exhibitors were brought up. Philip Sheck, of Pearce & Sheck enterprises, spoke upon "The License Fee." He advocates a change in the present fees, and said that a graduated scale of license fees should be established. "The small exhibitor," said Mr. Sheck, in part, "should not be made to pay $50 for a license fee, the same as a large exhibitor. The scale should be graduated according to the size of the theater. I would suggest that we band ourselves closely together and appear at the next meeting of the City Council and endeavor to have a graduated scale from $10 to $50 established."

J. Spencer Clark, the city water rent and tax collector, was also present and said that he would do all in his power to help the exhibitors out of their difficulty.

William Faet acted as toastmaster and introduced many prominent exhibitors, who delivered interesting addresses.

INDEPENDENT PROGRESS.

On the last cover pages of this paper will be seen the advertisements of two great film distributing centers, one operating in the territory around Denver, the other in the Southern States. The testimonials on page 1443 bear witness to Mr. Swanson's glowing reports of his Denver exchange. Mr. Fechtenberg, of the Dixie, sounds the correct note when he announces his weekly purchase of 24 new reels. The success that is coming to the three offices of the Dixie Film Exchange is well merited, therefore we prophecy that it will be lasting. Reports that reach us from satisfied exhibitors in the South is the best omen.

NESTOR

"Rarely Equalled—Never

GOOD FOR YOU!

No Other Film is as Good for You as NESTOR'S! If It's Good for You, It's Good for Your Patrons; And If It's Good for Them, It's Good for Your Business.

For All-round Goodness Get

"THE PILGRIM"

FOR RELEASE WEDNESDAY, DEC. 14. LENGTH, 1,000 FEET

EXHIBITORS!!!

Our claim to

"If It's a Nestor It's Good"

holds good—it will hold even better in the future—yes, in the very near future—just keep a sharp look-out for Nestor's coming releases.

Meantime remember that one Nestor—one good Nestor—is out every Wednesday. You want that one Nestor a Week—you need it—you should get it—you must get it and you can get it, if you want to—and you certainly want to—so bestir yourselves and hammer away at your Exchange till you get Nestor films.

If you love peace, go to any of the Exchanges advertised on the opposite page and you won't have to rough-house for Nestor films.

Scene from "THE PILGRIM"

"THE PILGRIM"

is such a splendid fellow that he will be called upon to repeat his pilgrimage of the Motion Picture Houses. He starts out on Wednesday, Dec. 14th, and wide-awake Exhibitors will capture Him at once.

"The Pilgrim" is a light drama with here and there a dash of clean comedy. The story palpitates with interest and rings true from beginning to end. You will be sure to enjoy it and so will your patrons—they will want to see more of the same kind—the Nestor kind—and so will you.

A word to the wise Exhibitor suffices:—

GET "THE PILGRIM" AND GET IT NOW!

Time to get on our Mailing List! Write to "Nestorlist 1002" 147 Fourth Avenue, New York

NESTOR FILMS are distributed through The Sales Company, 111 E. 14th St., New York City

COMING! "A DESPERATE REMEDY"

FOR RELEASE WEDNESDAY, DEC. 21st. EVERY INCH A COMEDY

DAVID HORSLEY, German Savings Bank B

FILMS

rpassed—Often Imitated"

NESTOR MADE BY DAVID HORSLEY FILMS

ARE YOU FROM MISSOURI?

Well; We gladly "Show" you right here and now a complete list to date of 39 Leading, Thriving, Progressive, Dependable Exchanges buying

NESTOR FILMS

Which is absolute and conclusive proof that

"IF IT'S A NESTOR IT'S GOOD"

NOTICE

How We've GROWN? We Have Not Yet Attained OUR FULL STATURE. Watch Us Grow!

LIST OF EXCHANGES:

1. Albany Film Exchange.....418 Broadway, Albany, N. Y.
2. Anti-Trust Film Exchange.....79 South Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.
3. Applegath, L. J., & Sons.....145 Yonge Street, Toronto, Ont.
4. Bijou Film and Amusement Co..1222 Grand Avenue, Kansas City, Mo.
5. Boston Film Rental Co.....665 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.
6. B. & W. Film Exchange.....412 East Baltimore Street, Baltimore, Md.
7. California Film Exchange.....1065 Mission Street, San Francisco, Cal.
8. Canadian Film Exchange.....Calgary, Alberta, Vancouver, B. C.
9. Capitol Film Exchange.....422 North High Street, Columbus, O.
10. Chicago Film Exchange.....48 Jackson Boulevard, Chicago, Ill.
11. Cincinnati-Buckeye Film and Projecting Co. 309 Arcade Building, Dayton, O 315 West Fourth Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.
12. Consolidated Amusement Co....Rhodes Building, Atlanta, Ga.
13. Co-operative Film Exchange....320 Atlas Block, Salt Lake City, Utah.
14. Eagle Film Exchange.....143 North Ninth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
15. Empire Film Exchange.....150 East Fourteenth Street, New York City.
16. Exhibitors' Film Exchange.....203 East Fifteenth Street, New York City.
17. Dixie Film Co.....503 Chamber of Commerce Bldg., Birmingham, Ala.
18. Great Eastern Film Exchange...21 East Fourteenth Street, New York City.
19. W. E. Greene Film Exch. (Inc.). 28 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.
20. H. & H. Film Service.....98 Jackson Boulevard, Chicago, Ill.
21. Independent Film Exchange... 415 Ferry Street, Pittsburg, Pa.
22. Independent Western Film Exch.Swetland Building, Portland, Ore.
23. Laemmle Film Service.....196 Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.
24. Laemmle Film Service.....1517 Farnam Street, Omaha, Neb.
23. Michigan Film and Supply Co...1106 Union Trust Building, Detroit, Mich.
26. Pacific Film Exchange.....Globe Building, Seattle, Wash.
27. Paramount Film Co.....61 West Fourteenth Street, New York City.
28. Paramount Film Co.....428 Ninth Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.
29. Philadelphia Film Exchange....934 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
30. Standard Film Exchange.....155 Washington Street, Chicago, Ill.
31. Swanson-Crawford Film Co.....723-734 Century Building, St. Louis, Mo.
32. Swanson, W. H., Film Exchange.301 Railroad Building, Denver, Colo.
33. Texas Film Exchange.....311 Elm Street, Dallas, Tex.
34. Toledo Film Exchange.....319 Superior Street, Toledo, O.
35. Victor Film Service.....Prospect and Huron Streets, Cleveland, O.
36. Western Film Company.....108 E. 4th Street, Los Angeles, Cal.
37. Western Film Exchange.....307 Enterprise Building, Milwaukee, Wis.

THIS WEEK'S ADDITIONS:

38. CENTRAL FILM SERV. CO..119 N. Illinois Street, Indianapolis, Ind.
39. GLOBE FILM SERVICE CO..107 E. Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

Why Do These 39 Exchanges Buy Nestor Films? Because If It's A Nestor It Pays!

Nestor Films Are Distributed Through The Sales Co.

ding, 4th Avenue, and 14th Street, New York

"Arms and the Woman" (Edison).—A Western story of interest, with a family complication in a stage coach hold-up that astonishes a sister and a brother, and afterward only the quick wit of the driver saves the young man from arrest. However, the film ends with everybody safe and the young man started on a better way of life, while the mother and daughter are supremely thankful for the friendliness of the driver. The scenery is interesting and the acting is quite in harmony with the subject.

"The Touch of a Child's Hand" (Kalem).—Insane because his child was killed, a father believes the only reparation is to kill the child of the man who accidentally killed his own. Gaining access to the house he is ready to murder the sleeping little one, when he reaches up and touches the man's face. The touch brings back his reason and explanations follow which are satisfactory to all.

"Who Is Nellie?" (Pathe).—A story of jealousy and the injustice done a man who was endeavoring to do something to please his wife. The Nellie was a horse, but the woman was so much obsessed with the idea that Nellie meant another woman that she wouldn't believe, even after the horse was presented to her until she actually saw the check in the hands of the stableman from whom the horse was purchased. Jealousy has been the basis of a good many photoplays, some of which are stronger dramaticaly than this.

"Falls of the Imatra, Finland" (Patha).—A colored travelogue which illustrates this little-known rapid and fall. The mechanical work has been done with ability and discretion and the audience becomes almost enthusiastic over the different effects obtained by making the exposures from different viewpoints.

"A Trip Through Ceylon" (Urban).—A travelogue of merit, presenting a series of interesting views of this island, giving pictures of the people about their daily duties and pleasures and reproducing some of the striking scenic features encountered in a journey through the island.

"The Return at Midnight" (Urban)—A French story which might be used to illustrate graphically the difference in marriage customs between France and the United States. Even though the young man is cast off because he marries the woman of his choice, later he is taken in by the father and he and his gypsy wife are made welcome. No dramatic strength is noted and the scenic qualities are mediocre.

"The Cowpuncher's Glove" (Edison).—A Western story conveying an impression of the breezy West, with its peculiar and vigorous types of humanity. While the story is strange, nothing about it seems improbable except the procuring of the keys to the jail in which the prisoner was held awaiting lynching. Perhaps it would not do to say that this could not be done, yet it does seem quite out of the usual experiences and is difficult to believe. A story may, perhaps, be accepted as something based upon a real or a possible experience, and motion pictures are more interesting when they adhere closely to the probabilities in all instances. Aside from this one point the picture is pleasing. The acting, the backgrounds and the spirit is Western enough, and all are drawn closely to fact. The romantic turn given in the last part of the film introducing the glove as the arbiter of a dispute that leads to a fight on a swaying bridge over a yawning chasm, supplies the required dramatic interest.

"Elder Alden's Indian Ward" (Kalem).—An Indian story which possesses merit in that it presents some of the important characteristics of the Indians.

"The Tale the Mirror Told" (Pathe).—A well arranged story in which a mirror plays the part of a spy. The acting of the woman when she steals the purse and afterward restores it is good. Otherwise the picture possesses little of interest.

"What a Dinner!" (Pathe).—A comic presentation of the nightmare which followed the eating of a big dinner. It is a rough-house film in some scenes, but is of the sort that seems to acceptably break the monotony of a program devoted to more serious things.

"Jack Fat and Jim Slim" (Vitagraph).—The comedians Hank and Lank in different characters. This picture takes them to Coney Island, where they make the rounds. All who have tasted of the allurements of that hilarious place will recognize the difficulties which the ill-assorted pair encounter. Those who have not seen Coney Island can rest assured they are looking upon an unusually faithfully reproduction.

"Circle C Ranch Wedding Present" (Essanay).—A lively Western comedy detailing the fortunes of a young woman who was called West to teach the cowboys on Circle C ranch the rudiments of learning. None of the cowboys fall in love with and marry her, which is a novelty in films of this type. But a young man from the East does, and the wedding present is the little teacher's mother, to whom the boys send the money to come to her daughter. The picture has many laughable scenes and one or two that stir the emotions.

"Lured By a Phantom" (Gaumont).—The story of the legendary King of Thule, the location of which has never been accurately determined, but is supposed to refer to the Shetland Islands. The unfortunate king, grieving for his dead sweetheart, gives away all he possesses and goes out to seek for her soul. The coloring is well handled and the picture has many affecting scenes and much good scenery.

"Nancy's Wedding Trip" (Gaumont).—A ride on the back of a bull affords danger, intermixed with some funny episodes. The picture has both laughs and thrills.

"The Maid of Niagara" (Patha).—A drama by the American Company based upon the legend that once each year it was necessary for the Indians to choose one of their daughters by lot and send her over the falls as a sacrifice to propitiate the spirit of the cataract. There is a love story interwoven, representing a young brave making himself a chief by his prowess and securing the consent of the young girl's father to their marriage. But when the arrow falls at her feet and the chief realizes what it means his hopes are shattered. She enters the canoe and goes over the falls. He finds her lifeless body below, and sucked under by the raging torrent finds his love in the Indians' happy hunting ground. Some of the scenic effects are exceptionally beautiful, the views of the falls imparting the impression of grandeur.

"The Preacher's Wife" (Vitagraph).—The story of a preacher who forgot the love that his profession was supposed to teach and deprived his young wife of the things for which she longed. Unable to tolerate his severity she leaves him and goes home. The lesson proves salutary and reconciliation is effected after a time. It is a heart story, but without much dramatic strength.

"A Child's Stratagem" (Biograph).—A story of unreasonable jealousy on the part of a wife who imagines her husband is devoting too much attention to other women. The best part of the picture is the way a ten-year-old girl stops the discord by going away, leaving letters that she has been kidnapped by the Black Hand. This causes the parents to forget their differences in the search for the lost child. When she returns and explains her ruse they see the folly of their quarrels and agree to live in peace. Without any semblance of dramatic crisis, the picture tells a story of domestic difficulties which can be duplicated often enough to appear real to most of those in almost any audience, consequently it will prove attractive in a majority of audiences.

"On the Mexican Border" (Lubin).—What may be termed a typical border drama, with the jealousy of a Mexican as the cause for a good deal of disturbance. A girl is carried away and tied to a post in a shanty, while her kidnapper goes out, expecting to come back and work his pleasure with her. She manages to tear a piece from her white skirt and waves it through the stove-pipe opening. She is rescued and her kidnapper is captured and would have been lynched but for the timely arrival of the sheriff. As has been pointed out before, the pictures representing girls carried away by ruffians should be kept out of every program. Such scenes are much too suggestive. Girls struggling with ruffians or carried away to their lairs smacks too much of the former methods of carrying away women whenever they chose. The restraint which led the producers to turn the villain over to the sheriff instead of showing a lynching is to be commended. So much, at least, of the old type of bloodthirsty ruffianism has practically disappeared from the screen, to the great improvement

"THE SIGN OF THE FLYING A"

AMERICAN FILM

COMEDY

The Rummage Sale

Release Monday, December 12th

A full-reel comedy. The story of a pair of twins that accompanied their mother to a Rummage Sale. It's good. It's funny. It will bring down the house. If you want comedy—get this reel.

DRAMA

The Binding Shot

Release Thursday, December 15th

A Drama worthy of a Belasco. Original. Logical. Thrilling climax. Perfect photography. Your patrons will remark on the worth of this film. Get it.

DRAMA

Her Fatal Mistake

Release Monday, December 19th

A dramatic triumph. Full of intense action. A thriller from the first foot to the last. A reel that will make the "trust house" across the street sit up and take notice. A reel you will get as near first run as possible and repeat.

COMEDY

Her Husband's Deception
A Troublesome Parcel

Release Thursday, December 22nd

Two on one reel. Both Screeches. Both comedy in its Xteenth sense. If you want to "really and trully" amuse your patrons get this film.

NOTICE

If you want the four American Releases truthfully described above booked you by your Exchange fill in your name and address below, tear out this advertisement and send to your Exchange. If you do this—you'll get them all.

NAME _____

ADDRESS _____

CITY _____

AMERICAN FILM MFG. COMPANY

BANK FLOOR, ASHLAND BLOCK, CHICAGO, ILL.

Our films sold exclusively through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Co.

MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING & SALES COMPANY

Are You Wise? Awake!
Get Ahold of this Snap

150 BRAND NEW REELS IN THE CAN AT 4c. PER FT.

The pick of Best Makers of Independent Film in the World
Comprising such Brands as Ambrosio, Itala, Cines, Lux, Aquila, Eclair, Lion, Etc.
Write immediately for our list. They wont last long. Address,

C. B. DAY, 575 11th Avenue, New York City

SPECIAL ROLL TICKETS The Big Ticket. Any Printing Any Colors.

5,000	:	:	:	$1.25	20,000	:	:	:	$4.60	50,000	:	:	:	$7.50
10,000	:	:	:	2.50	25,000	:	:	:	5.50	100,000	:	:	:	10.00

Get the Samples — Stock Tickets, 6 Cents

NATIONAL TICKET COMPANY - - - Shamokin, Pa.

of the pictures. If the carrying away of women and girls is suggested instead of shown producers will take another forward step.

"The Clever Domestic" (Pathe).—A comedy presenting a travesty upon domestic service which affords some laughs, though it proves rather destructive to furnishings.

"The Mexican Tumblers" (Pathe).—A reproduction of some of the acts of a well-known group of Mexican acrobats.

"The Widow of Mill Creek Flat" (Selig).—A comedy of the rough-house type ending in a long and hard chase, with the widow steadily gaining on her new spouse who basely deserted her.

"The Winning of Miss Langdon" (Edison).—A story by Richard Harding Davis is worked out in a commendable photoplay. It is not the first time that something emanating from the military has proved the worth of a man. In this instance the girl suddenly discovers that the man whom she has been disposed to make fun of when he proposed a number of times is, after all, more of a man than she suspected. A number of thrilling scenes tell the story plainly and ultimately lead to a wedding. The photography is remarkably clear and the picture made a favorable impression upon the audience.

"Love's Awakening" (Essanay).—The story of a false young man who forgot his country sweetheart under the influence of the wiles of a city girl, but when the city girl refused him suddenly remembered the girl he left behind him. And like many others he discovered that his memory came too late. A truer man was accepted in his place.

"A Man of Honor" (Gaumont).—Tells how a man at great personal sacrifice, even to endangering his life, saves a woman from the tongue of scandal. The mechanical effects are especially good. The story has no unusual strength to commend it.

"Prof. Schlemiel's Hat" (Gaumont).—A trick film which will afford amusement for the short time it runs. The possession of a hat such as is shown here would be worth a fortune.

"A Tintype Romance" (Vitagraph).—A seashore romance based upon the action of the dog, Jean, which has appeared frequently of late, and two tintypes, each in the locket of the other. It is a love story, with a bit of a quarrel interspersed and a reconciliation that would make the average couple open their eyes in astonishment. The film is diverting but has no claim to either literary or dramatic quality.

"The Life of a Salmon" (Edison).—An industrial subject, giving in detail the life history of the salmon. It contains one picturesque scene, where the salmon are shown jumping the falls. Few, perhaps, have ever seen the actual occurrence. But if they have not they can feel assured that the picture affords an excellent idea of it. The processes of obtaining the salmon and putting them into cans are shown and a canoe race between three rival Indian crews is interspersed by way of variety.

"Amateur Night" (Edison).—Detailing the misfortunes of a series of amateurs who supposed they had a call to be actors. The heroine becomes frightened and flees. But after her lover is thrown from the stage door because he insisted upon knowing where she is, they both run and ultimately fall into each other's arms as they suddenly round a corner.

"Rachel" (Kalem).—A melodrama based upon a supposed Russian love story in which a peasant girl and a prince become mixed up, and when she is selected to kill the aforesaid prince she is confronted by her lover. He permits her to escape, but realizing that death awaits her she kills herself when she returns to the meeting place of the Nihilists. It is melodramatic in the extreme, and while it may not be exactly improbable it is so unusual as to seem unreal.

"An Animated Armchair" (Pathe).—To see a man transformed into an armchair is not wholly new. The same thing has been done in practically the same way before, but to see the chair begin doing antics when a large woman sits in it is new. The fright they all receive is amusing, but there is a certain degree of destruction which is not entirely necessary to make the story interesting. Aside from that particular feature of the picture there is sufficient fun to keep the audience amused. But to destroy the furniture is unnecessary to the completion of the story.

"The Cocoanut Plantation" (Pathe).—A colored industrial representing the gathering, assorting and curing of cocoanuts. The operator included some side illustrations which are humorous and assist in depicting the life on these plantations. The coloring has been done with close fidelity to nature.

INDEPENDENT.

"Saved By a Vision" (Atlas).—This film is somewhat melodramatic, but none the less interesting. The acting in that portion represented in the vision is strong and the girl's frenzy is one of the best pieces of work the Atlas actors have yet performed. There is a reality to the picture that holds the audience fast until the denouement. There is a suppressed sigh of relief when they discover that it is, after all, only a vision. Then when the rich suitor appears and is promptly sent away by the girl and the former lover is accepted the audience is ready to applaud. She escapes from unpleasant consequences through this vivid vision. It is a picture which will be popular and will linger long in the memory.

"The Indian Land Grab" (Champion).—The political machinations portrayed in this film are unhappily too prevalent, but whether that portion representing the white girl following the Indian to the wilderness and there insisting upon becoming his squaw is desirable is a question. There is something so repugnant about a conception of this sort that even though the dramatic strength of the picture is admitted, there is a feeling that this isn't quite right. It is well that the girl seeks to make reparation for the wrong she has done these Indians. And to have her follow the chief to his home with the paper guaranteeing the integrity of the tribe's lands is good, but it would be better if the story stopped there. It would improve it to leave off the rest of the picture. Perhaps she did love him. But there is an inseparable racial gulf which it is repugnant to see crossed. Better change that portion. It would then make an excellent picture.

"Valley Folks" (Nestor).—The charm of this picture lies in the rendering of what seems to be scenes among people one may have known. The shadows which come into the lives of friends can find here a counterpart. The appeal of the baby as he looks into his grandfather's face has probably been seen by more than one in each audience. And there is manifest rejoicing when the grandfather receives his daughter and her child to his embrace, mentally vowing that never again shall they be separated from him and never again shall they know suffering or want if he can prevent it. There is something inexpressibly touching in these domestic pictures which appeals to the heart of every audience. The homely experiences of life are familiar to all and when they are well acted, as they are in this film, they produce a profound impression.

"Bill As An Operator" (Lux).—A comic showing what would happen if the operators of the machines did not attend strictly to business. Bill was considerably interested in a young woman near his booth. The result of this interest, which necessarily took his attention from his work, is reflected upon the screen.

"Necessity is the Mother of Invention" (Lux).—A comedy illustrating how two impecunious people succeeded in raising money when they were down to their last penny. The dummy which appears in the role of beggar had an interesting experience, but it was finally returned to its owner where it is presumed it was permitted to rest in peace. The comedy is lively and cannot fail to be a laugh producer.

"What is to Be Will Be" (Solax).—A story of misdirected, or, rather, misapplied love. Lovers are separated and the girl marries another. Long afterward the first lover returns, but despite the promptings of her heart she concludes to remain with her husband. The title clearly expresses the purport of the picture. There is a strong dramatic climax when she is making up her mind what to do. The drama is well acted by the players and the photographer has done equally well in preparing the piece for presentation.

"The Conquering Hero" (Nestor).—While this film contains interesting points, it must be admitted that it falls below the average Nestor release and to that extent, at least, is unsatisfactory. The elopement is planned and is interrupted. That is about all there is to it, and the principal interest attaches to the fact that the girl and her fiance are successful in eluding her father and his emissaries after all.

"John Halifax, Gentleman" (Thanhouser).—This well-known story is rendered into a motion picture in a way that will please the most exacting. The tale itself is simple, representing a young man who rises by dint of hard work to the head of his employer's mills and falls in love with the owner's daughter. After vicissitudes the couple are permitted to marry. It is a common enough story, only this novel had the merit of being one of the first to present this type of tale. The picture proves that a good rendering of even an old story is attractive. The audience apparently delights in the character of John Halifax. He is quite as good on the curtain as he is in the book, and there he has always been a favorite. The different parts are played to perfection. The character of the daughter and the ill son are both faithfully reproduced and seem to live before the audience.

"A Child of the West" (Bison).—This is much better than some of the Western pictures put out by this house have been. The improbabilities are not as glaring and the effort of the producer has evidently been directed toward the reducing of the features which have sometimes appeared rather out of place. That this company can produce good pictures of the West has been demonstrated before and this one will go far toward making this fact seem all the more conclusive. The acting and photography both help in the development of the story and there are numerous situations of interest in the film which will assist in increasing its attractiveness. The most glaring fault in Bison pictures hitherto has not been in the acting or in the settings, but in the improbability or sameness or inaneness of the story. The producer seems to have done the best with the material at his command, but the factory end of matters, even to the editing of the film, has hitherto shown no signs of improvement. "A Child of the West" shows a step in advance which it is hoped will be continued.

"The Cattlemen's Feud" (Columbia).—A strong story of the Western plains, interwoven with the cattleman's greed for land and additions to his cattle. It ends in one of those feuds which have sometimes annihilated neighborhoods, but in this instance the misunderstanding is settled by the union of loving hearts. The play is strong in those characteristics which generally mark a Western drama. And the audience follows it with the closest attention throughout. When well done a play of this type is always interesting and in this instance the actors have correctly interpreted the characters they are supposed to represent. The photography is of equally high standard, while the setting selected is of the kind that helps in the interpretation of the picture.

"The Birthday Present" (Great Northern).—Every mother will feel a sympathy with this picture which it will be hard to explain. It is the story of a little girl who is stolen from her parents and after much abuse and suffering is restored to them upon her mother's birthday. The acting of the child is as good as anything of the kind seen recently, while the other characters are equally good. The cruelties to which the little one is subjected will arouse the sympathy of any audience.

"Ohami Group of Acrobats" (Great Northern).—An excellent picture of a remarkable trio of performers. Some of their acts are extremely sensational and will arouse vigorous applause when they are successfully accomplished.

"When the World Sleeps" (Powers).—This picture might have been a reproduction of one of the weird tales of Poe. It has a series of stock speculations accompanied by suspicion as an introduction to some manifestations of somnambulism. The latter is a good bit of acting, depicting graphically the curious performance of one who walks in his sleep. The picture abounds in surprises and will hold the attention of the audience by the peculiar fascinations which accompany an illustration of something not thoroughly understood. The players have performed their parts with sympathy, while the photographer has done his share toward producing an altogether satisfactory film.

"When Woman Wills" (Reliance).—A drama of some power, holding a measure of human interest sufficient to maintain the interest of the audience. The picture is acted with sympathy and there is little to complain about in the mechanical work.

"The Big Drum" (Itala).—A play with the usual characteristics of the Itala productions quite manifest. On the same reel with it is "The Dog Keeper," another Itala film which has some merits worth considering.

"The Price of a Sacrifice" (Eclair).—A love story, intermixed with a gambling debt and an attempted robbery to pay it. To please her father a girl engages to marry a man she doesn't love and then to save the honor of herself and her fiance the man she does love assumes the responsibility of an attempted robbery, allowing the guilty man to escape. That is the complication. But pressed by other creditors the guilty one returns, confesses his complicity in the robbery, releases the girl from her engagement and goes away, leaving her to marry the man she loves. That is the story and while it possesses no strong dramatic points it tells a plausible story in a satisfactory way and indicates some of the difficulties into which men may be plunged unwittingly. The actors have made the most of their opportunities and the photographer performed his part well. The picture is satisfactory, without containing any of those strongly emotional scenes which characterize some films.

"The Laundry Girl's Good Night" (Eclair).—It is indeed a novelty to endow a plain, every-day laundry with life and set it to performing all sorts of fantastic stunts for the delectation of the laundress. But this is what has been successfully done in this film, and despite the peculiarity of the theme it makes a rather pleasant show. True, not everybody would care to see their shirts, collars and cuffs suddenly come to life and begin a series of dances, but in this particular instance it is amusing and serves to while away a few minutes very pleasantly.

"The Aspirations of Gerald and Percy" (Imp).—The Hallroom boys appear in a new role as would be performers in a theater. After losing their positions in the store they undertake a turn in a theater with exceedingly humorous and disastrous results. The variety and number of the things hurled at them are alike surprising. Their enlistment in the army resulted in desertion for which their old friend Tony suffered until the officials were convinced of his innocence. But he succeeds in obtaining redress from the gay youths and leaves them attired in a barrel. There is a good deal of humor in this film, humor of a kind that goes deeper than the mere surface of things. It represents something of the impossible aspirations of a great many young men, and probably young women, too, in the every-day world of the city. While it looks humorous upon the screen, instances could be cited by almost everyone where certain ones among their acquaintances were possessed with the same ideas. Indeed, the writer heard one woman sitting near him whisper to to her neighbor that the dramatic attempt reminded her of someone whom they both evidently knew. When a thing like that occurs the producer is getting close to the actual life around him and is, therefore, making films which are better than the ordinary run of those which are pouring from different studios.

"In the Czar's Name" (Yankee).—A graphic representation of how riots may be incited in Russia which are so disastrous to the Jews. The acting and the setting are alike realistic, though it seems somewhat improbable that the couple who enact the parts of hero and heroine could manage to secure the escape of the condemned family. This does not, however, materially injure the impression created by the story. After the vicissitudes of the Russian experience the audience is disposed to rejoiced with them when they arrive in America and prosper so that they can in time visit the President. The film promises a strong interest which is difficult to describe, yet can be felt as the picture runs. There is a peculiar fascination about anything which illustrates events in the mysterious realm of the Czar, and this one is no exception to the usual run of such pictures. As a type this one undoubtedly indicates with reasonable accuracy what actually occurs in that oppressed land.

"Rip Van Winkle" (Thanhouser).—Probably the story of Rip Van Winkle as told by Washington Irving will always be a delight. Surely the Rip Van Winkle, as depicted by the late Joseph Jefferson, will linger long in the memory of those fortunate enough to have seen it. Unquestionably, however, the third in the list of delights is this film from Thanhouser which tells the story over again in much the same way that Jefferson told it. The Rip of Jefferson and the Rip of Irving are two different persons, though both do substantially the same things. Maybe another can be added in the actor who performs the part so acceptably in this picture. The same situations are worked out, but there must be some difference since the scenes lack the spoken words. But the story is followed with fidelity to the original. There is Rip, his dog Schneider, Meenie and the scolding Gretchen who drives Rip out after a particularly flagrant bit of delay at the tavern. The picture is dramatic because the story it tells is dramatic. The actors have only to perform their parts and they make the drama. It is a good piece of work from every standpoint. The actors have entered into the spirit of the story and have depicted it with close adherence to the facts as they are related in the original. The stage manager understood what was required to make the background appear natural, while the photographer handled the camera with full knowledge of the requirements.

"Hearts of the West" (Champion).—Whether or not a young man should feel ashamed of his parents is well shown here. When he was in trouble they were the ones who befriended him. And he showed his manliness afterward by refusing to go with his false friends. A simple, direct story, filled with the heart interest which is present in actual life. There is something about this film which will remind more than one in each audience of something similar they have seen before. This always increases the interest and develops a feeling of appreciation which a well acted piece, no matter what its subject, but carrying no heart interest, excepting what is simulated, can offer. The actors have done their work with sympathy and the photographer is to be commended for his efficient work.

American Film Mfg. Co. Poster.

Attention Film Exchanges

FILMS FOR SALE

300 reels at $5.00 per reel and up Send for lists

ADDRESS—DEPT. E

J. WILSON :: 138 E. 14th Street, New York City

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., PICTURE SHOWS.

By Frank H. Madison.

In the investure and operation of the new Vaudette of Springfield, Ill., W. W. Watts of that city is moving toward that stage of showmanship which the allies of the moving picture industry and science hope and are confident will be attained. Defects, of course, are apparent. More than that, they obtrude because of contrast with the smoothness of an otherwise deserving and compelling enterprise.

The old Vaudette was handicapped by lack of room but Watts was fortunate enough to secure a lease on the adjoining building and with a good deal of work the two were thrown into one large room. Now he has forty feet frontage on South Fifth street, within a stone's throw of the city's vortex, yet not too close to peril the attendance. The front is in simple taste, a few ornaments giving a white ground artistic relief. The lighting scheme is striking but not flashy and at night it is easily the illumination premier of this well-lighted and much-traveled thoroughfare.

Two and occasionally three well-framed easels and a businesslike booth for two ticket-sellers make up a real lobby. Ticket-taker and the approach to the balcony stairway are hid from the rest of the first floor by heavy draperies. Attendants are uniformly courteous in finding seats and answering questions for the stranger. The decorators were not restricted in the use of colors in the interior, the color scheme being elusive, but the general effect is not discordant. Despite broad aisles, plenty of standing room in the rear, more than capacity for the orchestra and two pretty proscenium boxes the first floor should seat approximately 500 persons or over.

After making room for the operator's booth on the balcony there are seats where forty persons can see perfectly. The rest of the gallery is not used but the overflow patrons can be assured as good a show as those on the main floor. A stairway at either side assures safety. The pictures are thrown from a fairly good angle as the booth is located at the extreme left hand side (facing the screen) of the balcony. As a consequence the screen is set at a similar angle on the stage but the view appears good from all parts of the house. There was not a balk upon the part of operator or machine in presenting the Urban-Eclipse drama, "Secret of the Cellar," and the scenic "Trip Through Edinburgh," by the same maker, and the Vitagraph comedy "Captain Barnacle's Chaperone." My personal regret was shared by my fellow-patrons when the trap-drummer trespassed upon the provinces of the slap-stick vaudeville in an attempt to follow the picture. It was the tenor of remarks that, aside from the shock of it and the ridiculousness of it, few evinced any great sensations when, as the young lover playfully chucked the chaperone under the chin, the sandpaper was used with telling effect. Nor did the auditorium enthuse when the producer had ordered an exchange of kisses blown from the finger tips the interpreter of martial music kept tally with the tom-tom and finished in that delicately unhumorous manner preferred by the stage Teuton in announcing his fall. At other times in the performance he was under restraint and dutifully accompanied the pianist in a series of symmetrical and concerting strains. There was a good voice under control of the young man who offered an unillustrated refrain of the class a certain amusement publication is attacking in its attempts to purify the song circles of the country. Little if any reception. Conceding that we have not acquired the taste for playful drumnastics and pointing to the "anti-naughty words in songs in theaters" passed by the Springfield City Council to justify our frown at the ballad, we are agreeing that Mr. Watts and his industrious helpmate, Mrs. Watts, are doing a good deal to raise the standard of the business and patrons undoubtedly get their five cents' worth manyfold.

The Young Soldier of Fortune tapped my elbow as I entered Mr. Watts's other place, the Savoy, on South Sixth street and stood with me until some well-satisfied patrons had finished their entertainment repast, and went out leaving no apparent gap in the crowd. The Young Soldier, not yet turned twenty, but with more than that many thousands of miles to his credit, was under the spell of the picture show and I was curious to watch him further. The transformation from the restless spirit that had verified already indisputable tales of hobo life through some twenty states, of months at sea as galley-boy, of a laborious passage to Hawaii and of uncharted roving was striking. I wanted his opinion on the picture show. Tired Business Man, the Matinee Girl, the illiterate immigrant, the deaf wards of the state had all undergone analysis but here was a new type. The Young Soldier of Fortune was preternaturally subdued. The first picture was Kalem's southern chivalric "For a Woman's Honor." Women had formed a strange part in the vocabulary of the Young Soldier and none of the Bohemians whom he had served in his intermittent labors had bothered to test his mask of pseudo worldly wisdom. But I was satisfied with his silent acceptance of the pretty sentiment. When that attractive personality and naive genius of his is domesticated turning people toward him in respect for applied ability why not give the moving picture credit for it just as much as the deerers of the photoplay do when a filmed view of the West answers the cry of a boy from a so-called home that must be remiss in its strengthening ties. A Lubin comedy "Archie's Archery" mildly pleased us as well as the crowd while the "Romance in the Rockies" appeased the appetites of the Western story lovers. A violin and a piano furnished the music and there was an encouraging disposition to follow the picture. Not quite sure of my unbiased judgment of a tenor voice which had developed alongside me in my native city, I hesitated and in that second the crowd began its approval of an unaffected rendition of a song embodying a simple and sane expression of devotion.

The mirror-screen effect has put new life into this place and the projection of the pictures is high class. The house itself has a moderately ornate lobby and front and the interior is pretentious enough to induce a sense of comfort.

Managers Karzin & Mills of the money-making pioneer Casino, 021 East Washington street, apparently have been battling with a peculiar problem. Upon entering the place eighteen signs, "Don't Spit on the Floor. $10 Fine," stare at you from the walls and four times in the course of an ordinary show the warning was flashed on the screen. This theater, located at the entrance to Springfield's "Bowery" is patronized by all nationalities, yet the proprietors have not a store-room show and deserved the extended co-operation of the Board of Health in their campaign for sanitation. The lobby is not unattractive. The interior side-walls are of green, topped by mural-painting effects above a shelf-moulding. The seating capacity, approximately 225 has at times proved none too large but big buildings are hard to get on this street. The top of the screen crowds the ceiling, but this is made up by a good large picture and would be unnoticed if the operator was able to keep them steady and save the actors' their crowns.

The ticket-seller's window at the Royal, 216 South Sixth street also operated by Karzin & Mills, is paneled with various pictures of the versatile Florence Lawrence of the Imp Company and this feature of the performance is a great drawing card for a desirable class. Springfield has a great many admirers of the be-curtained title which is leading them to acquaintance with the possibilities of the Independent producers. The capacity here is slightly larger than that of the Casino and the solid colors on the walls are conducive to a restful sensation. One would need to be hypercritical to be displeased with the way the pictures were handled, for the crowd went with Laemmle's smoothly told story of "A Sister's Sacrifice" having the way well lighted and was carried along at a perfectly natural rate. "Keeping His Word," Imp, "The Jewel Case," Great Northern drama, and a "Fatal Picnic" by the same producer were equally well shown. The music was up to the standard, depending upon the pianist who left the pictures much to themselves. The song was the same questionable pseudo-composition previously offered at the Vaudette but the male voice was undeniably good and no doubt in more popular offerings is better received.

If those complete obliterations of the pictures had not taken place in the essentials of the story, the shadows which made a liberal percentage of the show at the Colonial, 512 East Monroe street, might be forgotten if not forgiven. It was a hardship to be Biographically led to a point where the girl was on the point of favoring the villain with a rose to the deprivation and discomfiture of the hero and then have darkness come upon us until the indignant and active Westerner was under restraint. Interruptions of this sort were too common in "That Chink at Golden Gulch" to be condoned. "The Cowboy's Mother-in-Law," an Essanay and a commendable accompaniment of the slides of "Keep Your Foot on the Soft, Soft Pedal," made up the rest of the program. One could not ask more in the way of distinctive interior than this syndicate house and the general appearance is inviting but the attendance is not what it might be.

"Closed for the Installation of Mirror Screen" was the sign that forestalled a conscientious inspection of The Grand, East Washington street. The American Company, Incorporated, proprietors. Previous visits to this place recall a formula of high-class lobby, front and interior, comfortable seats, satisfying projection of the best late licensed subjects, fair-grade music and the novelty of the girl whistling the chorus of the illustrated song. Patrons speak of the place in the highest terms.

In the Mississippi Valley.

The City Council of Springfield, Ill., has passed an ordinance making it a punishable offense for any person to sing in any theater or moving picture house songs with immoral or obscene words.

The Lyric, South Fifth street, Harry Loper, proprietor, recently mentioned in these columns is still handling a large volume of business due to giving the public what it wants.

G. W. Conway of Litchfield Ill., has leased the Sinclair building in that city and will conduct a picture show, announcing three reels, changed daily.

The Northern Illinois Teachers' Association, meeting at La Salle, not only endorsed moving pictures as a means to better education but the visiting instructors were liberal patrons of the picture houses in that city.

Emil Henry, owner of the Lyric at La Salle and Edward Stadler of Peru have purchased the Nickeldome at Peru, Ill., which has been operated by Miss Lucy Feurer. The place will be remodeled.

Winnebago County Sunday School officers in convention at Rockford, Ill., stopped after condemning the operation of picture shows on Sunday, and did not place a stigma upon the week-day show.

E. M. Middleton and Paul Bassham of Greenfield, Ill., have leased the Rex Theater in Carrollton, Ill., and will operate the place, Mr. Bassham acting as manager. Mr. Middleton, who is blind, is a notable figure in Illinois having, for sixteen years been director of the Greenfield band. He is also prominent among advocates of Esperanto in the United States and other countries.

Mr. and Mrs. John Karzin of the Casino and Royal Theaters of Springfield Ill., have returned from a four months' tour of Italy, France, Greece, Switzerland and other European countries.

E. F. Turner of St. Louis has purchased a half interest in the Star Theater at Clinton Ill., and "The House of Features" will be conducted by Wilson & Turner, Joaquin Wilson retaining his interest.

Technical analysis of the "moving picture eye," an affliction made popular by Sunday feature stories and poor operators, was made at the meeting of the Southern Illinois Medical Society at Centralia, Ill. The physicians with becoming dignity declared it rubbish and pointed to the equally strenuous habit of motoring.

The Gaiety at Jacksonville, Ill., has adopted the title Gaiety Photoplay Theater.

J. L. Wiley, of Wiley & Wilson, has retired from the field and Mr. Wilson is now sole owner of the Bell moving picture, at Cuba, Ill.

After fitting up the new home of the Nickelodeon in Chrisman, Ill., Joseph Fugate has removed the show from the north to the south side of the square in that city.

Illinois "press services," mostly scissors, have been exulting over a story telling how a moving picture show at Sherrard, Ill., was using so much power that the electric lights of the city failed and, after "hours of search," the entire police force located the trouble and "the Mayor" revoked the license. Sherrard is "a city" of 800 souls. A Moline paper in telling the correct story, says two amateurs from Moline leased the Sherrard town hall for four nights and, evidently not understanding how to make connections, "burned out" the power plant, causing about half an hour's darkness. In another Illinois city of 4,000, my partner, an unusually competent installation man and superintendent of the local plant, and myself, were accused of diverting all the power to our show, notwithstanding that the lights of the aggrieved were not on our circuit. They even protested to the owners of the plant that we were parasites and that the quality of light even then was diminished when a visit to our place would have shown our machine and front not turned on.

The City Council at Morris, Ill., has repealed the ordinance recently passed permitting the exhibition of sacred pictures on Sunday.

The Adair Country, Mo., Fair will be financed by means of slides. Prof. W. A. Lewis of the State Normal School at Kirksville, Mo., will visit the rural schools of the county giving illustrated lectures on the latest methods of farming and urge patrons and students to buy stock in the association.

The new picture house at Lincoln, Ill., will be known as the Star Photoplay Theater and will use some specialties. Harry Percy, formerly of the Columbia Theater, Peoria, will be operator.

F. H. M.

SCENE FROM "THE VICAR OF WAKEFIELD" (THANHOUSER).

THE THANHOUSER "VICAR OF WAKEFIELD."

Pursuing their intelligent policy of filming some of the classic masterpieces of literature, the Thanhouser Company have decided to release on Tuesday, the 27th, the film of "The Vicar of Wakefield." Oliver Goldsmith's story in stage play has been presented to the public many times and has afforded well known actors and actresses an opportunity of displaying their talents to sympathetic audiences. For "The Vicar of Wakefield" is a sympathetic story, touching upon the cardinal emotions of the human heart. We shall be interested to see what the Thanhouser players make of this moving theme. The story has great possibilities.

New England Notes.

The Broadway Theater, Lawrence, Mass., is now nearing completion. The house was built by Messrs. Mayer & Morris, who estimate the cost of their house to be $15,000. The house will seat 1,800 people and will play pictures and vaudeville.

As was hinted in these columns recently, the Gilmore Theater, Springfield, Mass., is playing pictures and vaudeville. Mike Sheedy and P. F. Shea are behind the new policy. Admission price will be five and ten cents.

Sanford, Me., has a new moving picture and vaudeville house—Leavitt's Theater. For a small town, the house is considered excellent, having been built at a cost of nearly $12,000, with a seating capacity of 1,000. Frank C. Leavitt is both proprietor and manager.

The Scenic Theater, Hartford, Conn., has changed its admission prices. Manager Loring has instituted the policy of five cents for matinee performances and ten cents evenings.

The Auditorium, Malden, Mass., is evidently doing a large business, as it is next to impossible for late arrivals to procure seats for the evening performances. Vaudeville and pictures are offered. The Auditorium is considered to be one of the finest equipped and best of any theater in Massachusetts, notwithstanding the fact that Malden is only a small Boston suburb.

BOSTON, MASS.

The Star Theater, Tremont Row, has taken out the four acts of vaudeville which have been a part of the program. Manager Appleby states that the only sure way to ascertain whether vaudeville is desired by his audiences is to make this test. He will interview portions of the audience as they leave the Star, and on the views offered him by these people the future policy of the house will be decided—as far as the vaudeville is concerned. The Star is now running four first run licensed reels, and four illustrated songs. It may be of interest to note that on the first day of the new policy, Monday, November 28, the views of the audience were evenly divided on the question.

The Theater Comique, Tremont Row, not long ago inaugurated a new policy as regards admission rates. The balcony, which was recently built and holds nearly sixty people, was offered to the public at five cents over the usual ten-cent price of admission. This plan evidently did not work out very well, as the fifteen-cent signs are no more to be seen. Four reels of Independent films, two new and two old, and illustrated songs, are worth ten cents, but competition is entirely too keen to ask a larger fee. The Comique, which had been closed for a few days, as a result of a small fire which was noted in these columns, reopened, none the worse for the mishap, Tuesday, November 22.

The Globe Theater, Washington street, has again turned one of its frequent theatrical somersaults, and is now again playing moving pictures and vaudeville, with a ten-cent admission rate. The Globe, which is under the control of the Shuberts, does not seem to make any kind of a showing when playing "legitimate" attractions. On the other hand, it has been a tremendous money-maker when playing the pictures, as it has done for the past two Summer seasons. It is not exactly known at this time just how long the Globe will remain on the side of real "popular" amusement. It is to be regretted, however, that the Globe severely injures several nearby straight moving picture theaters. The public evidently likes to go to a regular theater which is playing moving pictures and vaudeville in preference to the regular photoplay theaters, even if the shows given are no better. Everyone knows the Globe is a "lemon" as a straight dramatic house, but reports go to state that it knocked out nearly $1,000 per week clear profit when showing the cinematographs last Summer. Pictures seem to hold the upper hand—eh?

Exhibitors who remember the wholesale closings of moving picture theaters in New York and other cities will be interested to learn that there is much agitation just now in Boston over this matter. Formerly the mayor had full control over the licenses, and his decision was the sole law. This has been recently changed, and control of theatrical licenses was vested jointly in the mayor and police commissioner. Both officials had to be satisfied before any move as regards suspension or the total revoking of licenses was made. The plan now on foot is to again put the mayor alone in charge of this function. It is stated that Mayor Fitzgerald himself will bring the question up before the legislature. The outcome will be awaited by all exhibitors with interest.

HENRY.

THE MOVING PICTURE PLOT.

By Henry.

The immense strides made in the last two years by the manufacturers of cinematographs are generally accepted as true by those in touch with this line of trade. The World's New England representative wishes to go on record as stating that he believes that the plot of the average moving picture has not improved in direct ratio to the photographic and technical qualities of the films. We see altogether too many Wild West dramas—films reeking with sensational exploits. In a word, why so many dime-novel plots? We noticed with much interest that not so long ago the Edison Company released some films, the plots or scenarios of which were written by well-known writers. Also, that on several occasions the leading parts were taken by some people with a certain amount of reputation gained on the legitimate stage. The manufacturer released said films with the greatest fanfare of trumpets and general presswork. It would seem that the idea of releasing a film, acted or written by able people, was something unusual. The manufacturer seemed to be so unusually moved over this that we were forced to believe that it was the novelty of it that was at the bottom of it. In other words, manufacturers of cinematographs have not come to the point where they can bring themselves to pay for good actors and actresses, and good scenario writers, without believing that a medal is due them for their efforts. The Moving Picture World, from time to time, has had considerable to say concerning the payment for scenarios. The World clearly showed that $10 or $15 was not enough to pay for scenarios, simply because good writers cannot afford to market their products for any such remuneration. With the exception of a film here and there, we cannot bring ourselves to believe that the makers are paying any more for their plots than they were a year or so ago. The writer's careful watch on moving picture theater patrons shows that the general public is becoming just a bit bored by the continual stream of sensational melodramas that they are nearly everywhere asked to view. Not long ago we viewed a Vitagraph picture—"The Last of the Saxons." This film drew much favorable attention from moving picture theater patrons. Several managers were spoken to by their patrons, commending the film, and stating that they preferred them to the highly sensational picture. Western and Indian subjects are welcome, but we really believe that the moving picture theater has had a full share of them, and that a change would be beneficial. Some time ago, several moving picture films of regular standard plays were produced. We have noticed none for quite some time. If we may be pardoned the query—Why? I trust as soon as it becomes known that moving picture manufacturers are in the open market for high-grade scenarios, and are willing to pay for them, then will dramatic writers of repute offer their manuscripts to the manufacturers, and not before. This talk that the best writers will not sell their work for moving picture production is absurd. These people market their goods to the highest bidder, just as other business people do, and have no preference whether their stories are produced on celluloid or on the regular stage. We believe that the moving picture manufacturer is eminently able, financially, to compete with the regular theatrical producers for these high-class scenarios, and that until he does so we shall never gaze upon the almost perfect moving picture, and shall never reach the highest conception of art in motography. If the manufacturers who have invested large amounts of money in their business wish to have their business solidly and firmly built up on the only lasting foundation—QUALITY—it is high time that they "loosen up" and buy the best scenarios and plots to be procured, not the cheap and inane stories so often blemishing the motion picture. Get busy and dig down into your pockets, Mr. Manufacturer.

Letters to the Editors.

ABOUT THE FILMS.

South Boston, November 16, 1910.

Editors Moving Picture World:

Dear Sirs—I inclosed find check paying subscription for your much appreciated paper. In response to your request that your subscribers acquaint you with the opinions of the patrons of the photoplay houses, I would say that the general interest in the pictures is not as keen as it was a year ago, for the good reason that the association pictures are not as good to-day as they have been. Men who simply furnished "types" for Biograph pictures a year ago are now attempting leading roles with limited success, the dramas are not so complete and interesting nor the comedies so natural and well chosen. For instance, a month ago I had occasion to exchange a reel and by some mistake I received a Biograph, "Getting Even," almost a year old. After seeing it run (it was still in good shape) I refused to exchange it for something new, as the story, situations and acting were excellent and a treat as compared with some of their late work. And so it may be said of others. More care in the selection of good stories and the selection of competent people to fill the parts is my suggestion. Where the pictures are only ordinary an exhibitor is compelled to put on vaudeville to satisfy his patrons and unless the quality of the picture play, comedy or drama, is brought back to its former standard and improved upon, the public will lose interest in the picture and when they do, it will mean that pictures will be secondary to vaudeville in theaters that were built for picture houses. I believe that your paper can do the work of awakening the film manufacturers to the existing faults and bring about a remedy which is absolutely necessary for all concerned. Yours truly,

M. J. LYDON, manager.

MONOTONY OF THE PROGRAM.

Clayton, N. Y., November 16, 1910.

Editors Moving Picture World:

Dear Sirs—We have been using Independent films for some time and while the subjects are, as a rule, fairly good in their class, "The Usual Thing" predominating, there is apparently, in our service at least, a great lack of industrial pictures and a greater lack of comedies.

A ten weeks' run on Independent films without an industrial, nor a real comedy, and only three or four attempts at comedy, would seem to indicate a necessity for the organization of "The Comedy and Industrial Film Company" in the Independent camp. Showing two dramas and a Western every day is bound to become monotonous after a time.

We also note that the exchanges seem to be weak in their choice of the best, as we have had only one Great Northern in the run, and this was easily the finest moving picture photography we have ever seen, both in the hand-colored and black-and-white sections of the film, although, as a rule, the photography has been good throughout the run. Give us more comedy and industrials and the service will be much more satisfactory. Yours truly,

A. K. ICKER.

THE KEY OF LIFE.

Ardmore, Okla., December 1, 1910.

Editors Moving Picture World:

Dear Sirs—I am a regular reader of the World and a great admirer of good moving pictures, and especially partial to the acting of Mlle. Pilar-Morin. But oh! how could she waste her time and artistic work in such a picture as "The Key of Life." If you haven't seen it, look it up, and if you don't agree with me—"the silliest piece of foolishness." And think, 1,000 feet, or twenty minutes of time of a patron wasted.

Would be pleased to hear what someone else has to say about this reel. Yours,

LE ROY BICKEL.

MOVING PICTURE THEATER IN Y. M. C. A.

Plans for the new Young Men's Christian Association Building at Peoria, for which the contracts have been let, include a moving picture theater to be used for the entertainment and education of the members. This is one of the first of the kind in Illinois, but Shattuck & Hussey, of Chicago, who are specializing in Y. M. C. A. architecture, will supervise other buildings in the State and an extension of the plan is not improbable.

F. H. M.

A CORRECTION.

514 South Los Angeles St.,
Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 28, 1910.

Moving Picture World,
160 Washington Street,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen.—Our attention has been called to the letter by your Los Angeles correspondent, on page 1235, in reference to the consolidation of the Pacific States Film Exchange and the Western Film Exchange, wherein he states that the consolidation brings the Independent situation into the hands of Hyman and Bracket, who own the Western Film Exchange. Permit me to make some corrections.

In the first place the Western Film Company and the Pacific States Film Exchange have not consolidated and there is no likelihood that they ever will. In the second place the Independent situation is controlled by Arthur S. Hyman and Charles Prochazka, Jr., who control the Western Film Company. Mr. Brackett who is mentioned in this article, is not connected with this company in any capacity at the present time though he was formerly manager of the Film Exchange Department.

Inasmuch as there has been so much written regarding this matter the writer thought you would like to have it straight.

Yours very truly,

WESTERN FILM COMPANY,
By CHAS. PROCHAZKY, JR.,
Treasurer.

SCENARIOS.

102 West 101st street,
New York, December 5, 1910.

Editors Moving Picture World:

Dear Sirs—The Moving Picture World in a recent issue scratched the surface of one of the deepest and most perplexing problems confronting the moving picture manufacturer, when it said it hoped the time would arrive when $100 would be the average price of a film scenario instead of five, ten or twenty dollars. As a matter of fact, none would welcome that time more than the manufacturer, if I may judge from my experience with the "Imp" Company. Nothing would be so welcome to the "Imp," I am sure, as the ability to secure manuscripts which are worth $100

It may surprise the outsider to learn that since last June, the "Imp" Company has received over five thousand manuscripts—think of it, over five thousand. Of that number, only fifty have been accepted by a committee composed of the stage directors and myself. And of the fifty, I do not suppose the "Imp" will actually use more than two-thirds when it comes down to the final analysis. Where did these five thousand scenarios come from, you ask? From readers of such high-class publications as the Saturday Evening Post, Collier's Weekly, Munsey's, McClure's, the Cosmopolitan, New York and Chicago newspapers and moving picture trade papers. We advertised in magazines of this nature feeling that we could get the highest class manuscripts from their readers. Yet we actually found only fifty out of five thousand even fit for serious consideration. I don't know how many thousands of dollars it cost us to secure these five thousand manuscripts, but I can assure you we would have saved thousands had we been able to buy good manuscripts at $100 apiece without advertising for them.

Why do we reject so many manuscripts? There are nearly as many reasons for rejection as there are manuscripts, but the chief ones in the order of their importance may be summed up as follows:

(a) Hundreds of manuscripts are rejected because of their absolute lack of interest.

(b) Other hundreds have, as their basic feature, a murder, a robbery, a suicide, or a too plain reference to the underworld.

(c) Others are rejected because they are merely re-written from current plays or from films produced not only in previous years but quite recently. In other words plagiarized.

(d) Still others are rejected because they contain, as their pivotal point, some thing or things physically impossible of production. Moving picture cameras are asked to produce impossibilities too numerous to describe.

(e) And finally, many scores of them are so constructed that they would require several hundred feet each of subtitles in order to get them over.

No one can realize, unless he has had a similar experience, the vast amount of labor my corps of assistants and myself have performed in handling this volume of work, for besides the receiving, entering, reading and returning of the scripts, we endeavor to encourage our thousands of contributors into continued effort in our behalf. Wherever a contributor displays evidences of real ability, we invariably offer him helpful suggestions along the line of his work, and in several instances have purchased scripts that we will have difficulty in making available, in order to stimulate renewed endeavor on his part.

It can be seen, therefore, that we have spared neither money nor labor in our efforts to obtain good, clean, high-class, definite plots for our pictures and with what result? Fifty acceptable or semi-acceptable scenarios out of the five thousand we have received—a miserable one per cent. Are we satisfied? The answer is, that we will hail with delight the time the Moving Picture World hopes for—when scenarios, thoroughly available scenarios, scenarios that contain a heart throb or a hearty laugh, can be obtained for $100.

GILES R. WARREN,
Scenario Editor, "Imp."

CLEAN FILMS.

Editors Moving Picture World:

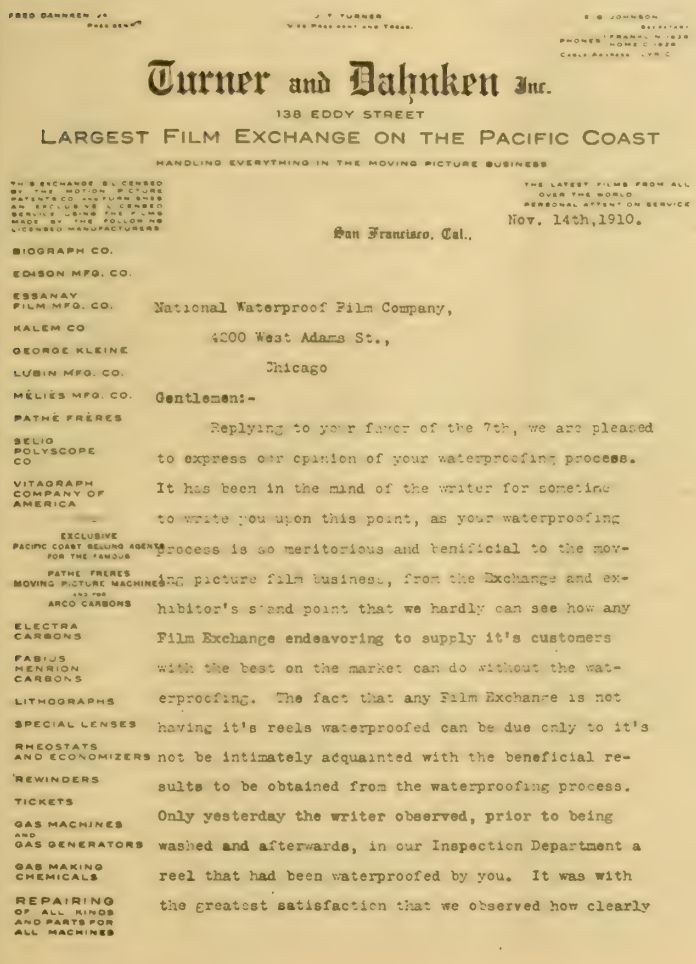
Dear Sirs—As we read in the Moving Picture World and other trade papers about "the uplift of nickelodia," the importance of cleaner moral stories, better pictures, the elimination of suggestive songs, vaudeville acts, etc., we are constantly reminded of our part in the good work.

Ours is to protect these cleaner stories and improved photographs from scratches dirt and "rain." Our process adds so much to the beauty, value and longevity of a film that the cost is economy and not expense.

Our greatest trouble has been, not to get work, but to get exchanges to take advantage of our process by occasionally washing their films after we have made them washable. A notable exception to this ignorance, laziness or what you will, is found in the exchange of Turner & Dahnken, San Francisco, one of the largest licensed exchanges in the country. These people for several months have had all their new films shipped through us and waterproofed. They have installed our film washing machinery as an adjunct to their inspection department, and have found the time (which others could not) to wash their films once a week or so with soap and water. We enclose you the letter of Turner & Dahnken. Yours truly,

NATIONAL WATERPROOF FILM CO.,
W. A. Daniels, President.

Turner & Dahnken's Letter.



Turner and Dahnken Inc.

138 EDDY STREET

LARGEST FILM EXCHANGE ON THE PACIFIC COAST

HANDLING EVERYTHING IN THE MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS

THE LATEST FILMS FROM ALL OVER THE WORLD. PERSONAL ATTENTION ON SERVICE

Nov. 14th, 1910.

San Francisco, Cal.,

BIOGRAPH CO.
EDISON MFG. CO.
ESSANAY FILM MFG. CO.
KALEM CO
GEORGE KLEINE
LUBIN MFG. CO.
MÉLIÈS MFG. CO.
PATHÉ FRÈRES
SELIG POLYSCOPE CO
VITAGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA
EXCLUSIVE PACIFIC COAST SELLING AGENTS FOR THE FAMOUS PATHÉ FRÈRES MOVING PICTURE MACHINES AND THE ARCO CARBONS
ELECTRA CARBONS
FABIUS HENRION CARBONS
LITHOGRAPHS
SPECIAL LENSES
RHEOSTATS AND ECONOMIZERS
REWINDERS
TICKETS
GAS MACHINES AND GAS GENERATORS
GAS MAKING CHEMICALS
REPAIRING OF ALL KINDS AND PARTS FOR ALL MACHINES

National Waterproof Film Company,
4200 West Adams St.,
Chicago

Gentlemen:-

Replying to your favor of the 7th, we are pleased to express our opinion of your waterproofing process. It has been in the mind of the writer for someting to write you upon this point, as your waterproofing process is so meritorious and benificial to the moving picture film business, from the Exchange and exhibitor's stand point that we hardly can see how any Film Exchange endeavoring to supply it's customers with the best on the market can do without the waterproofing. The fact that any Film Exchange is not having it's reels waterproofed can be due only to it's not be intimately acquainted with the beneficial results to be obtained from the waterproofing process. Only yesterday the writer observed, prior to being washed and afterwards, in our Inspection Department a reel that had been waterproofed by you. It was with the greatest satisfaction that we observed how clearly the detail of the reel was brought out by the washing, due to the fact that dirt, grit, grease and etc, obstructing the passage of the rays of light were removed. Barring a few minor scratches that could not possibly be prevented on account of wear and usage, the film looked like a first run reel.

It is axiomatic that the exhibitor is naturally looking for the best Film Service that he can obtain for his money and we have determined to our positive satisfaction that waterproofed, clean film brings trade.

We can only state in corroboration of our statement that we are highly pleased with the results obtained from waterproofing, that we are at the present time having all of our reels waterproofed by you folks and that we shall continue to have them so processed.

Wishing you success, we remain,

Yours truly,

TURNER AND DAHNKEN,

Per E B Johnson

WORLD ADS. PRODUCE RESULTS.

Chicago, December 1, 1910.

Western Office, Moving Picture World,
160 Washington street, City.

Gentlemen.—In confirmation of our telephone communication of this afternoon, kindly continue our advertisement in the Moving Picture World, the same as it has been running.

The results from this ad. have far exceeded our expectations; we are not only receiving inquiries, but orders from all parts of the United States, and even from Australia, and our plant is working to its fullest capacity at the present time.

Thanking you for your prompt attention, we are,

Very truly yours,
FRENCH AMERICAN PRODUCING & MANUFACTURING CO.,
By J. A. SHACKELFORD.

BOOSTING THE SHOW THROUGH THE PICTURES.

Menomonie, Wis., December 2, 1910.

Editors Moving Picture World:

Dear Sirs—I would like to say a few words that may possibly help the exhibitor, especially the small exhibitor, in advertising his house by getting in people to see his show who never attended.

Some time ago we ran "The Fly Pest" and "The Man Who Learned," and did only a fair business, in spite of heavy advertising, also giving a special show to the school professors and doctors. But there were a great many who heard about these fine pictures afterwards and were sorry they did not go. The other day the president of the local Tuberculosis Society (a branch of the State Society) asked if we could get those same films on a certain night and if we would rent our theater. We said we could, and they advertised a free show. In the meantime, the principal of the Stout Institute also asked if we could get those pictures and run a special matinee for the Stout students, about two hundred. So we arranged to give a matinee at regular prices to the Stout scholars and the Tuberculosis Society rented in the evening, free to all. It was a big success. About two hundred students came and their teachers gave talks on the war against the house fly, and the milk campaign. Also the Tuberculosis State Society sent special slides which were lectured on by the principal of the High School and several doctors. Of course, we had a great many people in the evening who never saw a motion picture, and we are sure they will come again. This same scheme can be worked right now in different cities to boom the sale of Red Cross Tuberculosis Christmas stamps.

We may also add, we are running licensed stuff, and find an advantage in taking service from the General Film Company because we can get the films we went, whether old or new.

We like your paper very much, especially your criticisms of the films, and as we always depend on your reports for good and bad pictures, trust you will continue to give as much space to the critic's report as usual.

Sincerely,
SMITH BROS.,
W. S. S.

BIOGRAPH.

THE GOLDEN SUPPER. Julian loves his cousin and foster sister Camilla, who is wooed and won by Lionel, his friend and rival. He is a witness to their marriage and after the ceremony he departs heartbroken to his own house. Utopian was the existence of Lionel and Camilla, until some time later Camilla is seized with a serious illness, and Lionel's grief knew no bounds when he heard "That low knell tolling his lady dead." "She had lain three days without a pulse all that look'd on her had pronounced her dead. So they bore her—for in Julian's land they never nail a dumb head up in elm—bore her free faced to the free airs of heaven, and laid her in the vault of her own kin." Julian learns of the death of Camilla, and hastens to the house, arriving in time to see the funeral cortege moving slowly towards the sepulchre. Following in its wake he exclaims, "Now, now, will I go down into the grave; I will be all alone with all I love." So after the train had departed from the vault, Julian enters "and at the far end of the vault he saw Camilla with the moonlight on her face: All the rest of her drowned in the gloom and horror of the vault." Bending over, he kisses her hand, and 'tis then he finds her supposed death is but as sleep, for she revives from out the trance. "He raised her softly, and wrapping her all over with the cloak he wore, bore her through the solitary land back to the mother's house where she was born." Conquering his desire, he goes to bring back Lionel, her husband. Meanwhile Lionel, grief-stricken, determines to become a recluse, going to the deserted cliffs overlooking the sea, where he secures from an old mendicant his thatched hut. After a search, Lionel is located through the meeting of the old man and the searching party. He refuses to go back as he is yet ignorant of Camilla's resuscitation, and so is taken by force. To effect a meeting of Lionel and Camilla without a shock, Julian arranges the Golden Supper, a custom in the East when a man bestowed upon his honored guest his most valued treasure, and acting upon Camilla's injunction, "You have given me life and love again, and none but you yourself shall tell him of it, and you shall give me back when he returns," Julian presents Camilla to Lionel during this supper. Lionel at first cannot realize the truth; he seems to be dreaming, but positive material manifestations awaken him to the reality. Julian's duty performed, he leaves forever.

HIS SISTER-IN-LAW.—Eva and Blanche are two orphan sisters who live with their aunt. They are inseparable, each apparently living for the other. They vow that come what will they will never separate. However, when Eva, the eldest, is betrothed to Jack, Blanche, who is but ten years old, seriously objects, fearing that Eva's marriage would surely be the means of their parting one from the other. The wedding takes place and Eva declares that Blanche shall live with her and her husband. It went well until Jack realized that Blanche was dividing Eva's attentions, and in consequence became very much annoyed, despite his endeavors to feel thoroughly satisfied with conditions. Jack finds a third person not so pleasant, and Blanche's solicitation of Eva's attentions occasions several serious quarrels, and she begins to feel that she is in the way. On one occasion, when their tiff is rather more stormy than usual, Blanche is an unseen spectator. The poor little girl now realizes the truth and then decides to go back to her aunt's house to live, leaving the following note to explain her departure: "Darling Sister—I am going back to Auntie's. I am sorry I was a bother to you and Jack. I love you both very much, that is why I can't stay. Blanche." Upon finding this note the young couple are sorry for the way they have acted towards the child, and Jack persuades Eva to go to her aunt's and bring his sister-in-law back. Blanche, however, is not to be moved, and Eva returns in grief without her. She has hardly left when Blanche changes her mind and goes back, but she soon realizes that it is not to be, for when she enters noiselessly she finds Eva and Jack in each other's embrace arguing that Blanche's absence is all for the best. This decides her finally, and making her way back to her aunt's, she enters to stay for all time. A long time after that she is told by her aunt to get ready to visit Eva. Arriving there, she finds a new playmate—a little baby girl. Her surprise is extreme when shown her little niece, and her delight is inexpressible when she is asked to remain with her sister and brother-in-law as a companion to the baby.

EDISON.

ARMS AND THE WOMAN.—Mrs. Cushing, a widow, and her two children, a beautiful daughter and a son whose inclinations are wayward, are residing in the mountains of California, where Mrs. Cushing's late husband had some mining claims. The story opens when Mrs. Cushing receives by registered mail a package containing some two thousand dollars in currency, being the total sum realized on the sale of her husband's estate in Iowa. The son has just asked his mother for a loan of money. She at first refuses him, but finally gives him some gold pieces, and he leaves the home, informing his mother that he is about to invest the money in such a way as to increase its amount. Without telling her son anything about it, in fact hiding the circumstances from him, Mrs. Cushing dispatches her daughter with the money, which has just been received by registered mail, to deposit same where she can pay some assessments for work on the mining property. The girl starts with a satchel containing the currency and takes the stage at Dutch Flat.

Meanwhile her brother has gone with the gold pieces given him to a gambling house, where he loses every cent of it. A suspicious character is interested in his losses and watches him keenly. At the critical moment he calls him aside and is talking to him very earnestly when Hank Young, the big stage driver of Dutch Flat, steps up and informs young Cushing that he had better beware of the stranger, for he doesn't like the cut of his jib. Cushing resents any interference and Hank moves away rebuffed.

We now watch the events which transpire in front of the post-office at Dutch Flat. The stage comes in with a load of passengers, who dismount, and among those who start out on the next lap of the journey is Miss Cushing, holding the bag with the money. There is some talk between the driver, Hank Young, and the postmaster about a messenger on the box, and the latter tells Hank that he will find the messenger at the next stop. The coach pulls out of Dutch Flat, and no sooner has it gone than we see young Cushing and the suspicious character trailing through the mountains over a short cut to head off the stage. When the stage arrives at the way station where the messenger was supposed to mount the box, Hank is informed by the stableman that no one is there to go with him. He tries to induce some cow-punchers to ride on the coach but they refuse, saying they have business elsewhere. Miss Cushing, who is now the sole passenger in the stage, is somewhat afraid of being alone, and the driver invites her to ride with him on the seat.

We now reach a corner of the road at a wooded spot in the mountains. Young Cushing and his friend are seen masking themselves and going to ambush in order to hold up the stage. This they do, and all seems to be going their way when Hank Young, the stage driver, recalls the fact that the little woman beside him has confided to him that there are two thousand dollars of her mother's money in the bag at her seat. He suddenly rouses himself to action, and it will be necessary to see the film to realize the way in which he put the "bad man" to flight and placed a quietus on the stage robbing aspirations of young Cushing.

The thrilling moment of the picture is when Miss Cushing discovers that one of the robbers is her brother. She tells this to Hank, and he relieves the tension of the situation in a most clever manner. Young Cushing has been badly wounded, and Hank rushes his horses back to Dutch Flat, where the sheriff attempts to arrest the man in the coach. Here Hank shows his quickness of wit by telling the sheriff that the wounded man was a passenger in the coach. For this he receives a look of tenderness and gratitude from Cushing's sister. Hank in his rough way has saved the family honor, and the last scene of the picture shows him giving young Cushing the lecture of his life and its effect upon the boy. Hank leaves with the gratitude of mother and sister and a promise from the wayward son to live in the future a wiser and a better life.

THE COWPUNCHER'S GLOVE.—The "Cowpuncher's Glove" is only another chapter in his life that is well worth reading. We are first introduced to the Western home of a father and daughter. The cowpuncher enters, and we can easily see that his heart is set upon winning the girl's affection in any way that is possible; but the girl evidently has other views upon the subject, as she does not seem particularly overjoyed at his behavior, although her father practically promises her hand in marriage upon the cowpuncher's return from the roundup. Here we are shown a glimpse of the roundup, and in the next scene we are acquainted with the fact that Jim, the cowpuncher, has not been entirely honest in his dealings and now stands in a fair way of having his neck stretched from the branch of a cedar tree by a lynching gang before morning. This information is communicated to another cowboy by his finding of a glove outside of the county jail window, in which glove is a note from the prisoner imploring the finder, in the name of mercy, to give him a chance to start life over again and be honest.

The stranger does not know the culprit, nor has he an opportunity of seeing him, but moved by the appeal for help he takes the chance, and succeeds in securing the keys of the jail and throwing them in through the barred window to Jim without either man seeing the other. The only reward he has for his service is the pair of gloves, which are initialed, in which he found the note. Slipping them into his pocket he passes on into the night while Jim, a few moments later, makes his escape without knowing whom or what his benefactor was like.

The cowboy who assisted in Jim's escape afterwards meets the girl of the first scene and wins her love. He does not know that her father has promised her in marriage to Jim until he sees a letter from the latter in which he threatens to come and take her away for his wife that very night. The young lover decides to head off his plan, and the two men meet on a swinging bridge over a dangerous chasm. Here ensues another Edison thriller in the way of a desperate fight, which only terminates when Jim discovers his glove in the possession of his antagonist and the truth is revealed to him that this is the man who saved his life from the lynching gang.

The lovers are united, and the audience will be found laughing at the quaint situation at the close.

THE WINNING OF MISS LANGDON.—Jack Norworth had one desire, one ambition, and one hope in life—to win the heart and hand of Miss Langdon. He had been born and reared in luxury and wealth, but lacked some of those finer qualities which go towards the making of a girl's ideal, such as the fancy of Miss Langdon had pictured to herself. She liked Jack. He was good company, a perfect gentleman, full of pleasant surprises, but back of it all she did not feel that he possessed just the sort of stuff that ideal husbands are made of. So, when for the fourth time he proposed to her, rather than taking it seriously, she came to the belief that it had become a habit with him rather than a desire. In fact, she would have been greatly surprised if he did not propose at least once in a fortnight.

Just after his fourth proposal the militia was ordered out on peace maneuvers (to capture Boston in a sham military operation) and Jack, being a captain, of course had to go. Far from being displeased at the prospect, however, he rather liked it, as he always did look perfectly stunning in his captain's uniform, and besides it gave him a chance to be near Miss Langdon, although this latter was not strictly in accordance with military rules. Miss Langdon had decided that he was not to hang around her home, especially while her father and mother were away, so she took it as a huge joke when she succeeded in arranging with two common soldiers of the opposing forces to capture the captain. But here she had made a serious mistake, for in this case the common soldiers were none other than two desperate tramps who had stolen their uniforms and were filling their pockets and stomachs under the guise of military orders.

But young Jack Norworth was somewhat more of a soldier than she suspected, and he at once discovered the two imposters under their military exterior. Without revealing his discovery he succeeded in getting them to let him escape and shoot at him, thus rendering him technically "dead" according to military regulations. He was thus enabled to watch the movements of these two idlers, who were shortly afterwards surprised by Miss Langdon in the act of robbing her bedroom of all its silver and jewelry.

The whole affair, which started as a joke with her, would have ended in a tragedy if Jack Norworth had not arrived at the critical moment and put up a desperate fight. This entirely changed Miss Langdon's opinion of him and she eventually placed all her future happiness in his keeping.

GAUMONT.

G. Kleine.

THE PHANTOM RIDER.—The rascal first steals a bicycle and experiences difficulty in learning to operate it, to such an extent that two gendarmes are enabled to almost capture him before he has acquired a working knowledge of the machine. With characteristic gendarme stealth, they come upon him from either side and clutch his clothing, to find that the man has mysteriously disappeared from his garments and is riding gallantly away from them.

The officers now secure a motor car and in a short time overtake him, only to again be duped in the same manner and to have their motor car stolen by the peculiar being while they are trying to recover from the shock his strange methods have given them.

When they next take up the chase they are forced to follow him over routes among the clouds, where he handles the motor car as perfectly as modern aviators do their machines. An accident finally brings him to earth in one long plunge and the force of his fall is kindly broken by the policemen, who manage to find an uncomfortable position immediately in the line of his flight.

THE CLOSED GATE.—A regiment passing through a little town receives orders to stop there for the night. Immediately lodging tickets are given to the soldiers, who distribute themselves to the various places assigned them. A handsome officer finds he is to be entertained by a young married couple. That evening at the dinner table the lieutenant relates his exploits and gains considerable attention from the wife. When the meal is finished it is necessary for the husband to go to his business, leaving his wife with the lieutenant.

The conversation between the two becomes so animated that the wife neglects to watch her little daughter who is playing in the yard. The baby makes good use of her freedom by finding egress from the yard and is soon lost in the street of the city. When the husband returned his first query was for the child, and a search is forthwith commenced.

The mother finds the baby's doll on the bank of the river and accuses herself of having been to blame for the baby's disappearance. In the meantime the child has actually narrowly escaped death several times before, as if guided by special Providence, she is seen upon the path leading to her home.

URBAN-ECLIPSE.
G. Kleine.

THE LITTLE MATCHSELLER'S CHRISTMAS.—Little Nellie can be seen gazing through the window at the passers-by hurrying through the snow and waiting anxiously for the return of her mother, who is trying to sell a few bottles in the streets to provide the bare necessities of life. The mother returns in dejection at her non-success and Nellie succeeds in getting her to let her go for a while instead. The child's efforts are no more successful and after peering between the windows of brightly lighted dwellings where Christmas festivities are in progress Nellie watches into a churchyard, through which worshippers are passing to a service. Almost frozen with the cold she strikes all the matches she has to warm her chilled fingers. At length she falls into a stupor and wakes from a dream that an angel has come to her. The vision fades, and she finds herself in the arms of a policeman, who has found her in time to save her from the sleep of death. A gentleman coming out of church has her taken to his home and the mother is sent for and provided with the means of spending "a happy Christmas."

SCENES IN BRITISH INDIA. The streets of the important city of Bombay, which is first visited, present a scene of bustle and activity unexpected in such a hot climate. Natives in simple costumes are busily engaged in their various occupations, but we do not realize what energy the Hindu is capable of until we see him with scores of his fellows, getting coal for the big liners in Bombay harbor. His agility is such that he can trot up a steep, narrow plank with a huge basket full of coal on his head.

Delhi, one of the religious centers of India, and a town redolent with memories of the Mutiny, presents a romantic contrast to Bombay. Its great temple the Jumma Masjid, is thronged with devout worshippers, and is a wonderful example of the strength and solidity of Eastern architecture. Its sombre domes and the reverent crowds kneeling in its courts form a fitting conclusion to the picture.

KALEM CO.

HER INDIAN MOTHER. The scenes are laid in the Hudson Bay country in comparatively recent years and cover the life of a Hudson Bay factor, showing him as a young man assuming his business in the wilderness and, as was common in those days, taking an Indian wife that he had purchased of her father in Indian fashion. A little girl is born of the union and the factor's life is running along ordinary channels until he is unexpectedly called back to Montreal. Here new duties absorb his attention and he soon forgets his home in the wilderness. There is a lapse of sixteen years, during which the little half-breed girl has grown up and her mother has died. A trip of inspection brings the factor back to the familiar scenes of his young manhood. There by chance he happens upon his own daughter. Impressed with her beauty and her likeness to himself he takes her back with him to Montreal, there educates and attempts to train her in the life of a white girl. She succeeds fairly well for a time, but the call of the blood is strong and one day when the floodgates of her memory had been opened she finds her own old buckskin dress, puts it on and slips away to the tribe. There she is found by her heartbroken father in the tepee of a young brave whose squaw she has become, and the white man then realizes his loss.

SETH'S TEMPTATION.—A story of "Cracker" life: a faithful picture of the poor whites in the South. A young girl of the type puts aside her "Cracker" lover in favor of a city chap who happens along to spend the Winter. At first the discarded lover cannot realize what has brought about the change in the girl, but he soon learns the real reason and maddened with jealousy starts out gunning after his rival. He chances upon him at the spot in the woods where he has made a tryst with the girl and has almost pulled the trigger which would send a rifle ball crashing into his rival's heart when his better nature asserts itself and for the sake of the girl he gives up his criminal intent. A little later on he has an opportunity to bring about the desired result in a different way. The city chap is drowning and the girl's life is also in jeopardy. The young farmer at the risk of his own life rescues both of them and when they realize the noble nature of the young man the city chap goes on his way and the girl returns to her lover's arms.

LUBIN.

AN EXILE'S LOVE.—Karl, Prince Boroslav, exiled from his country, came to America to find employment. Dusty and tired, he turned in, one day, at the gate of a handsome estate. A young man who had just returned from a ride with a beautiful girl was assisting her to alight. As he held her in his arms for an instant, he attempted to kiss her, but was angrily repulsed. The girl proved to be Betty Stevens, daughter of Colonel Stevens, owner of the estate. Karl asked for a job. She called her father and the young man was hired as assistant gardener. It was love at first sight with Karl. As Betty turned to leave him she dropped a glove. He quickly secured it and put it in his pocket. When Betty, later, discovered him in the garden pressing kisses on the glove, she was very indignant—so very, very indignant that she ran to her room and burst into tears and then pressed the glove against her cheek. The young man with whom Betty was first seen returning from a ride was Percy Andrews, a relative, who was very anxious to marry her. Angered because she was indifferent to him, he waited for one day in the garden. Karl happened to be near and promptly knocked Andrews down. One afternoon a gloom was cast to attend Betty on her ride fell and hurt himself as he was about to mount. Betty's father saw Karl near and ordered him to take the groom's place. As they started, Andrews appeared and followed at a distance. Betty saw some flowers at the edge of a cliff. Karl offered to gather them, but she insisted on doing so herself. While thus engaged, she fell over the cliff. Karl was in despair. At the risk of his life he climbed down to her. She was unconscious. Karl took her in his arms to make her more comfortable. Then temptation overcame him and he kissed her. Andrews, who had been peering over the cliff, saw this. He rushed down by a roundabout path and arrived just as Betty regained consciousness. Angrily he told her what he had observed. Betty looked at Karl a moment and then put her arms around his neck. Of course, the Colonel raved around when he learned of their marriage, but he soon forgave them. To cap it all, a cablegram arrived stating that Karl's estates, title and military rank had been restored.

THE MUSICAL RANCH.—That power which "hath charms to soothe the savage breast," had charm enough to win Nora, the good looking cook of the Flying G ranch. Bob, the foreman, thought that Nora's affections were being won by Dan, a hobo musician who was quite some fiddler. You never in your life saw such a ranch as the Flying G. The cowboys all played mouthorgans and some performed on the trombone. There was a Mexican who twanged a mandolin, an Indian who beat the big bass drum, a Chinaman who clashed the cymbals and a colored gentleman who rattled the bones. They played their instruments at all hours and in all manner of places. They particularly delighted in serenading Nora. And she, being a kind-hearted girl, smiled and pretended to like it while they were looking, but tried to shut out the noise when their eyes were turned. When they all played together—cowboys, Indian, colored gentleman and Mexican—it sounded like a rolling mill, a cat concert on the back fence and the battle scene of "The Roundup" all going on at once. Then, one day, along came Dan, a tramp. Nora gave him a feed and he rendered a selection on his fiddle. The cowboys were entranced. When Dan said it was time for him to be moving on they didn't agree with him. They appointed a guard to see that this boss musician didn't get away. After that, all Dan had to do was to play his fiddle, eat, drink and sleep. Bob soon thought he detected Nora's affections transferring themselves to Dan. In fact, she did look with considerable favor on the musician, and as for Dan, it came to such a pass that he'd refuse to play until the cowboys had fetched Nora. Bob told his troubles to Alice, daughter of the boss. Her wit solved the problem. She advised Bob to buy a phonograph. He didn't lose any time doing so, and when he wound it up and turned it loose in the bunkhouse, Dan's violin sounded like a Hottentot tom-tom in comparison. Dan was angry. He smashed one of the records. So Bob threw him out of the house and finished the good work by placing the ring on Nora's finger.

G. MELIES.

OLD NORRIS' GAL.—Frank Gray, a young lawyer, fails to establish a practice in his native city and decides to go to Idaho and make a fresh start. After hanging out his shingle in his new field of operation he hustles for a clientele, which is not as responsive as he had hoped, and awaiting results he accidentally comes in touch with a case of a young girl, Mary Norris, who has served notice on a saloon keeper not to sell her father, who is an habitual drunkard, any more liquor. The saloon man tears up the notice, snaps his fingers in her face and asks her who would be fool enough to prosecute the case for her even if he did sell her "old man" more booze.

Frank Gray jumps up and says: "I will prosecute the case." The dispenser of liquid refreshment defies the law; the young attorney makes good and "puts it all over him."

Mary Norris induces her father to leave the place and while escorting him home she accidentally falls over a cliff and is hurt very badly. Her father thinks it was all his fault and, after rushing to her aid, makes a pledge never to drink again and he keeps his word. Mary and her father are very happy in the betterment of things and the young lawyer who always thought her attractive does not hesitate to show it and Mary holds him in marked favor.

The frequenters of the saloon and the proprietor, "Bud" Sykes, have a secret meeting and conspire to kidnap Gray and make him stop the prosecution of Sykes. An old squaw whom Gray befriended overhears their plan and tells Mary about it. She notifies the sheriff and he, with a posse of citizens, makes a hurried ride, followed by Mary, to the old quarry where the desperadoes have suspended young Gray over its rocky sides trying to induce him to consent to give up the case against Sykes.

They start a fire under the rope attached to Gray and tell him if he does not agree to their demand before the fire burns through the rope he will fall to his death. He refuses to quit the case and declares he will battle it out to the bitter end.

The sheriff and his men arrive at this point, arrest the villains and save young Gray. Mary cheers and encourages Gray with her words and presence. At last Frank Gray is convinced of his error through the prosecution of the attorney and compliments Mary. Frank Gray asks Mary to marry him and her father readily gives his consent. All hands save the young couple leave early course and Gray and Mary will find but one of the best women in Idaho.

PATHE.

IN HER FATHER'S ABSENCE. Arabella's father does not approve of Alphonse's attentions to his charming daughter. Yet, although her father is excitable and fiery-tempered, Alphonse decides to call when the old man goes out. Barely, however, has he been greeted by Arabella before there is a violent ring at the door bell. In a second he has sought refuge in a huge closet, whilst his frightened companion rushes to open the door. It is only a messenger from the milliner and Alphonse learns that he may come out. He overturns the closet in so doing and before he has time to recover his mental balance there is another loud ring at the door. A fresh hiding place has to be discovered, and the same comedy is repeated again and again. Alphonse finding refuge successively in a big coal box, a washing tub, and the wine cellar. Finally the father really does return and Alphonse, after doing havoc in the wine cellar, is forced to escape from that ignominious place as best he can.

HOBOES' XMAS. The scene opens in a market store where the proprietor finds one of the cases of turkeys shipped to him off color. He repacks the case and marks the label "Returned Bad." He takes them to the depot, where they are loaded on the express car of a train to be returned to the farmer who had shipped them. It is the day before Christmas, and a party of hoboes are assembled in an old stone quarry discussing how to enjoy the holiday. They decorate a tree brought from a nearby wood with old tin cans, etc. But what is the good of a tree without a meal. A happy idea strikes one of them. They will hold up a train and get money from the passengers. In a few minutes they are on the railroad tracks. One flags the train, and as it stops the others rush up and make the passengers line up. Alas, they are suburbanites returning from their Christmas shopping in New York with empty pockets. None of them has any money left. The hoboes detach the express car and send the train on its journey. They find a case of turkeys in the car, and each takes one. Food was all that they required. They go to the quarry and cooking the turkeys, commence to eat. All are soon in agonies, and one of them discovers the label on the case marked "Returned Bad." This makes them feel worse. Meantime the police have been informed and a squad has been hurried by rail to the scene of the affair. In their helpless condition the hoboes can make no attempt at escape and they are marched off to jail to spend their Christmas day.

LITTLE SNOWDROP.—The second wife of King Othon is the fairest lady in the land, and the possessor of a magic mirror which tells her often that her beauty is unrivaled. There comes a day, however, when the mirror tells her that her stepdaughter, Little Snowdrop, excels her in beauty. The jealous queen resolves that Snowdrop must die. She summons a hireling and orders him to destroy the girl, and bring her proof of her death. The servant wanders into the forest to lie in wait for Snowdrop, but when the girl comes strolling through the leafy glades, her beauty and youthful innocence touch his heart, and he tells her to fly into the forest out of her stepmother's reach. He takes her handkerchief, which he afterwards stains with the blood of a pigeon, and gives it to the queen. Snowdrop, left alone, plunges deep into the forest, and at last comes to the house of the Seven Dwarfs. They hospitably receive her, and beg her to stay with them. In the meantime the queen has learned from her mirror that Snowdrop still lives and where she is. She decides to destroy her herself, and, disguising herself as a beggar, she takes a basket of lace, seeks out the unfortunate girl and strangles her with a piece of lace. The Dwarfs return in time to save Snowdrop from death, and the queen, on reaching the palace, learns from her mirror that she still lives. She returns to the Dwarfs' house with a basket of poisoned apples, and Snowdrop, having tasted one, falls unconscious. This time, the skill of the Dwarfs is unavailing. They place her in a crystal coffin among the big boulders on the mountain. Scarcely have they placed the coffin on the ground when a gay cavalcade of mounted men, headed by a noble prince, appears in sight. The Dwarfs disappear, and the Prince dismounting, approaches the coffin. He lifts the lid and, withdrawing the piece of poisoned apple from Snowdrop's mouth, restores her to life. Then, wondering at her beauty, he hears her story, mounts her before him on his horse, and carries her in triumph to her father's palace, where her return is celebrated with much rejoicing, and to the discomfiture of the wicked queen.

SAVED BY DIVINE PROVIDENCE.—Widow Robinson's little son is taken sick, and dies, leaving the poor woman, who is only just able to eke out an existence, disconsolate. Mrs. Hirst, the wife of a wealthy broker, takes her little son Harry in the park to play. While engrossed in her book he wanders away, and is found some time later by Mrs. Robinson. She sees that he is lost and leads him back to the park. There is no trace of his mother. Struck by the resemblance to her poor son, she decides to take him home and adopt him. Seven years pass by. Harry is a strong, healthy lad, but the poor widow is dying of consumption. Feeling her end is near, she tells him how she found him. She bids him get a bundle from her trunk, and shows him the clothes he was wearing on that day. A few minutes after this disclosure the poor woman dies. Little Harry is alone in the world without friends or money. He takes the bundle of clothes and sets out on life's hard journey. At night he tries to sleep on a wharf by the river. Two of a gang of newsboys who have improvised a sleeping place under an old pier pass by. They see Harry's absolute misery and take him with them to their bed of straw. Next day they start him with a stock of papers to sell on the streets. His first day's work finished, Harry turns into a church, and while dozing there is comforted by a vision of Christ that appears to him. It is the seventh anniversary of his disappearance and Mrs. Hirst visits the nursery, that has not been disturbed since that time. She sits down and cries heartily, thinking of what might have been. As she dreams, Christ appears and shows her successively a vision of her boy found by the widow—the widow's death—Harry selling papers on the streets—and finally of his home under the pier. She rushes to her husband and together they start out. Aided by a friendly policeman who knows this gang of newsboys, they find their way to the pier. They soon discover Harry. He tells them of the widow's deathbed story of how she had found him, and shows them the clothes he wore the day he was found. There can be no mistake, and Harry that night is again back in a warm bed in his father's luxurious home, comforted by a mother's love.

SELIG.

A TALE OF THE SEA.—Tom and Bill become two inseparable partners when Tom saves the latter from a watery grave. They live very comfortably together in a small hut, and when Tom starts to pay attentions to Sallie, Bill considers "the old female" an intruder and watches the progress of the love match with jealousy. One evening Tom confesses to his partner that he is about to be married, and this so enrages Bill that he knocks Tom down and leaves the room.

After the wedding Tom and his bride meet Bill, who refuses to recognize his old friend. He leaves a note for Tom saying that since he has married "the old female" he would only be in the way and therefore was leaving on a long voyage.

Five years elapse. Sallie is sitting at the sea shore playing with her two little youngsters, and Bill, who just returned from his trip, meets them by chance. The chubby faces and pretty blue eyes of the little ones soften Bill's heart, and before he is aware of it he is reconciled to his old friend and "the old female." The two friends leave with a fishing cruise, and Tom and Bill are given the task of spreading the nets. They enter the little boat, and when far out at sea a storm overtakes them; they are driven for miles out into the unknown, at the mercy of the sea. Only a few drops of water are left in the flask, and Bill sees the chance where he can make reparation. He writes the following note: "Tom, the others have died; only you and I are left. There's water enough in the cask for one only, and I ain't got no kids or wife waiting for me, old pard. Good-bye, Bill." This he pins to Tom's coat and then jumps into the sea. Tom awakes; is startled by the disappearance of his friend. Just then a large vessel comes into sight and Tom is rescued.

On the seashore Sallie and her children are looking out upon the sea, praying for the safe return of their beloved ones. Tom finally returns; there is a hearty welcome. Sallie asks for Bill, and Tom, unable to speak, silently points to the sea.

THE COUNTY FAIR.—"The County Fair" is as well known to the theater goers as "Rip Van Winkle," "Uncle Tom's Cabin" or "The Old Homestead." To the jaded brain tired city man its story is as sweet as a breath of new mown hay or the scent of sweet clover. It takes thousands back to their childhood in rock-ribbed old England. Dear old Aunt Abby (made famous by the late Neil Burgess), the typical Yankee spinster whose heart is as soft as her tongue is sharp, whose home was the refuge of pretty Sally Greenaway, who loved the stalwart Joel Bartlett, who worked "the farm" on shares with Aunt Abby. We see Aunt Abby take to her heart the mischievous, slangy little city waif "Taggs," who has been sent to her from New York and who turns out to be her dead sister's child. We see her protecting "Taggs" and "Tim the Tanner," a little chap, formerly a jockey, from arrest by the constable, Solon Hammerhead, a hard-fisted skinflint, who wants to marry Abby, and, when she refuses his offer of marriage, threatens to foreclose the mortgage he holds on the farm. We see her trying to make big, fat, awkward Otis Tucker tell his love for her after ten years of silent courtship. We see the life of the farm in the bright June days, the corn husking, the country dance in the old red barn, see Tim the Tanner training the farm horse, which he has entered in the running race at the "County Fair," unknown to Aunt Abby. We see them driving to the "Fair" all dressed up in their "go to meetin'" clothes and see the race between the flying thoroughbreds, see little Tim riding like a demon on "Cold Molasses" now in the lead, then, pocketed under whip and spur, forge ahead in the stretch and dash under the wire a length to the good, the winner of the purse that pays off the mortgage on Aunt Abby's farm.

VITAGRAPH.

JACK FAT AND JIM SLIM AT CONEY ISLAND.—"Whew! Is it hot enough for you, Jim?" "Yes—plenty and a little bit more." This is the beginning of a conversation between Jack and Jim as they sit on their respective fire-escapes one hot day in August. Jim is glancing over his newspaper and sees an announcement of a big day at Coney Island. He shows it to Jack, and they decide to beat it for the sands without letting their wives know anything about it. Silently they steal down the ladders, and are soon on their way.

Arriving at the Island, they throw themselves into the fun, which is fast and furious. Their wives discover their absence, find the newspaper, and seeing the flaming announcement of Coney's allurements, guess the cause of their husbands' sudden disappearance and determine to follow them.

Seven feet six inches of attenuated man and five feet of concentrated 350 pounds of fat are enough to attract attention anywhere. Everybody rubbers, and everybody laughs themselves sick when they see the long and the short of it in bathing, riding around on the carousels, on the camel's back, in the "Sugar Bowl," "Down and Out," the "Cake Walk," "Bamboo Slide," and all the rest of the stunts that will upset the dignity of anybody.

To add to the fun the gay benedicts meet a couple of sporty ladies who visit the Island with a diminutive beau, whom they lose sight of in the company of Jack and Jim and who keeps tagging after them like a little poodle dog.

In the midst of their fun their wives come upon them, and a lively chase ensues, but they manage to evade them or keep a lap or two ahead of the poor women all the time. They don't get near them until the two truants have had a large day of it and stop with their lady friends to refresh themselves at the ice cream and soda-water stand. The two wives then take them in hand and march them to their homes, where we see them the next day seated on the fire-escapes recounting their experiences and laughing over the good time they had down at the isle by the sea.

THE PREACHER'S WIFE.—Rev. Daniel Gwyn, a fine-looking but somewhat austere circuit rider of the country districts, while on his way to fill the pulpit of one of his charges, meets Kate Mackey, a winsome and charming lass, who assists the preacher in watering his horse. He is duly grateful, and at the same time attracted by the comeliness of the girl, and she seems charmed by his manner and bearing.

Upon reaching her home she tells her father about the itinerant minister who will preach at the village church, and they both go to hear him. His preaching is forceful and impressive. After the service Kate and her father take occasion to congratulate him and express their appreciation. At the same time there passes between the preacher and Kate looks that betoken a growing fondness for each other. Kate's father invites the clergyman to his home, and thus he and Kate are thrown into closer relations until he asks her to marry him and the father gives his consent.

After the marriage he shows her he has little, if any, sympathy for the natural feelings and characteristics of his young wife, and she chafes under the restraints he puts upon her, denouncing her love of pretty hats and other things that a young person naturally longs for. The last straw is reached when he snatches from her hands a book she is reading and throws it into the fire.

She leaves her husband. On her way from her home she meets a young fellow, who notices her disturbed mind and pretends to sympathize with her and offers to help her. She writes her father about the intolerance and severity of her husband and the step she has taken. Her old daddy finds her, takes her home, and once more she is his companion and comfort.

A TIN-TYPE ROMANCE.—Phil, with his dog Jean, is spending his vacation at the seashore. They are seen walking on the sands; Phil's hat is blown into the water and Jean fetches it safely back to his master. Tired with his long walk, Phil lies down on the beach and falls asleep.

Jean steals away, and while trotting along the shore sees an old bathing hat in the water, gets it and carries it to Phil. Jean, encouraged by the petting he received when he rescued his master's hat, has evidently got the habit. Phil pats his dog's head and continues his nap.

Resting at another point on the beach we see Beth, a pretty girl, who is dreaming sweet dreams in the Land of Nod. Jean is looking about for new adventures; seeing the young girl's hat lying beside her, Jean picks it up and takes it to the source of his previous commendations. To say that Phil is surprised at the presentation of the hat is putting it mildly, and he determines to find its owner.

His dog soon leads him to Beth, who is previously awakened by the barking of the dog, but pretends to be asleep. Phil comes cautiously forward, and when he sees the girl he is smitten with her charms, but refrains from disturbing her; he silently leaves the hat and noiselessly gets away. This is a disappointment to Beth—she had hoped to become acquainted. To accomplish this she throws her hat into the water and screams. This brings Phil and Jean back; the hat is recovered and Beth is profuse in her thanks.

Acquainted, they now stroll along together and become friendly. In the course of their meandering they pass a photograph gallery and agree to have their tin-types taken, which they exchange.

Beth, at the hotel, is seen in her room cutting out Phil's face from the tin-type and placing it in her locket. Phil is also seen doing the same thing with Beth's tin-type, putting it in his watch charm.

They meet again. Sitting together on the beach with Jean at their feet, Phil proposes to Beth and she accepts him. He wants to know what is in her locket; she wants to know what is in his. She says she asked first, and they have a real lovers' quarrel and part. Jean is taking it all in, but, of course, says nothing. Phil, in despair, despondently strides the beach, takes his watch with fob and locket from his pocket and throws it on the sand, smites his breast and acts as if he contemplated suicide. Jean picks up the watch and fob and runs off in the direction Beth has taken.

Beth, in her loneliness and agitation, is gloomily looking at her locket, unloosens her hair, takes off her shoes and stockings, throws her locket aside and behaves as if she, too, were seized with the suicidal mania.

Jean now appears, places Phil's locket near Beth and takes her locket to Phil. The two lovers look into each other's locket and behold their own faces. It does not take very long for them to get together, make up and renew their betrothal with caresses and kisses and sweet converse as they sit underneath an umbrella on an isolated rock far out in the water, presenting a very novel situation.

THIS WEEK'S PROGRAM OF LICENSED FILMS.

Monday, December 12.

Biograph—The Golden Supper (Dr.) 998
Lubin—An Exile's Love (Dr.) 990
Pathe—In Her Father's Absence (Com.) 544
Pathe—The Julians 387
Selig—A Tale of the Sea (Dr.) 1000

Tuesday, December 13.

Edison—An Old Silver Mine in Peru (Ind.) 250
Edison—A Mountain Maid (Dr.) 750
Essanay—A Tangled Masquerade (Com.).....1000
Gaumont—The Phantom Rider (Com.) 279
Gaumont—Closed Gate (Dr.) 676
Vitagraph—The Law and the Man (Dr.) 1010

Wednesday, December 14.

Edison—Pigs is Pigs (Com.) 1000
Kalem—Seth's Temptation (Dr.) 955
Pathe—Hoboes' Christmas (Com.) 550
Pathe—Charlie and Kitty in Brussels (Sc.) 400
Urban—The Little Matchseller's Christmas (Dr.) 749
Urban—Scenes in British India (Sc.) 253

Thursday, December 15.

Biograph—His Sister-in-Law (Dr.) 998
Lubin—The Musical Ranch (Dr.) .....
Melies—Old Norris' Gal (Dr.) .....
Selig—County Fair (Dr.).....1000

Friday, December 16.

Edison—The Red Cross Seal (Dr.) .....
Pathe—Little Snowdrop 1000
Kalem—Her Indian Mother (Dr.) 995
Vitagraph—Playing at Divorce (Dr.) .....
Vitagraph—The International Motor Boat Race (Sc.) .....

Saturday, December 17.

Essanay—The Tenderfoot Messenger (Dr.) 997
Gaumont—Herod and the New Born King (Biblical) 965
Pathe—Saved by Divine Providence (Dr.) 985
Vitagraph—A Dixie Mother (Dr.) .....

PATHE PASSION PLAY FILM, ALSO PASSION PLAY FILM AND SLIDES

Several sets low price,

POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH $75. $215 MOTIOGRAPH, NEW, $150. MOTIOGRAPH AS NEW, $100.

Motion Picture Machines, $40, $50 to $85. Power's Cameragraph No. 5, low. Film 2c. per ft. Rheostats, Calcium Jets, Electric Lamps, Screens, etc., reduced. Many bargains. Get Sup. 33.

Motion Picture Machines Wanted.

WANTED

Moving Picture Producing Plant, modern equipment.

Advertiser will purchase outright or furnish working capital to any amount.

ADDRESS IN CONFIDENCE

Syndicate

Care of Moving Picture World

LICENSED RELEASES.

BIOGRAPH.

Oct. 24—Message of the Violin (Dr.).....997
Oct. 27—Passing of a Breach (Com.).....547
Oct. 27—The Proposal (Com.).....466
Oct. 31—Two Little Waifs (Dr.).....997
Nov. 3—Waiter No. 5 (Dr.).....997
Nov. 7—The Fugitive (Dr.).....966
Nov. 10—Simple Charity (Dr.).....966
Nov. 14—Sunshine Sue (Dr.).....998
Nov. 17—The Englishman's Boy (Dram.).....492
Nov. 17—Love in Quarantine (Dr.).....515
Nov. 21—The Song of the Wildwood Flute (Dr.).....997
Nov. 24—His New Lid (Com.).....563
Nov. 24—Not So Bad as It Seemed (Com.).....422
Nov. 28—A Plain Song (Dr.).....997
Dec. 1—Effecting a Cure (Dr.).....997
Dec. 5—A Child's Strategy (Dr.).....998
Dec. 8—Taking the Ladies.....416
Dec. 8—Hiram Jack, a Hero (Com.).....556
Dec. 12—The Country Singer (Dr.).....998
Dec. 15—His Sister-in-Law (Dr.).....998

EDISON.

Nov. 2—Rulers of the Plains (Dr.).....550
Nov. 4—The Little Station Agent (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 8—A Trip Over the Rocky and Selkirk Mountains in Canada (Scenic).....440
Nov. 8—The Lassie's Birthday (Com.).....560
Nov. 9—The Sky's Husband (Com.).....1000
Nov. 11—The Adoption (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 15—Into the Jaws of Death (Dr.).....990
Nov. 16—The Stolen Charm (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 18—The Toymaker; The Doll; and The Devil (Com.).....990
Nov. 22—His Mother's Thanksgiving (Dr.).....995
Nov. 23—Through the Clouds (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 25—A Daughter of the Mines.....995
Nov. 29—The Greater Love (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 30—Arms and the Woman (Dr.).....975
Dec. 2—The Cowpuncher's Glove (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 6—The Wooing of Miss Langdon (Dr.)...995
Dec. 7—The Life of a Salmon (Ind.).....440
Dec. 7—American Night (Com.).....550
Dec. 9—The Captain's Bride (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 13—An Old Silver Mine in Peru (Ind.)...250
Dec. 14—A Mountain Maid (Dr.).....750
Dec. 14—Pigs is Pigs (Com.).....1000
Dec. 16—The Red Cross Seal (Dr.).....

ESSANAY FILM CO.

Oct. 29—The Silent Message (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 1—A Fortunate Misfortune (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 5—A Westerner's Way (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 8—The Masquerade Cop (Com.).....428
Nov. 8—Hank and Lank "Life Savers" (Com.) 560
Nov. 12—The Marked Trail (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 15—Love at First Sight (Com.).....978
Nov. 19—The Little Prospector (Dr.).....960
Nov. 22—That Popular Tune (Com.).....
Nov. 22—Hank and Lank (as Sandwich Men) (Com.).....
Nov. 26—A Western Woman's Way (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 29—The Tie That Binds (Dr.).....953
Dec. 3—"Circle C" Ranch's Wedding Present (Com.).....1000
Dec. 6—Love's Awakening (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 10—A Cowboy's Vindication (Dr.).....950
Dec. 13—A Tangled Masquerade (Com.).....1000
Dec. 17—The Tenderfoot Messenger (Dr.).....997

KALEM CO.

Nov. 4—Silver Cloud's Sacrifice (Dr.).....967
Nov. 9—For a Woman's Honor (Dr.).....960
Nov. 11—The Attack on Fort Ridgely (Dr.)...1000
Nov. 16—A Drama of the Present (Dr.).....990
Nov. 18—Jim Bridger's Indian Bride (Dr.)...1000
Nov. 23—The Lad from Old Ireland (Dr.)....1009
Nov. 25—The Roses of the Virgin (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 30—The Touch of a Child's Hand (Dr.)...870
Nov. 30—Up the Thames to Westminster (Dr.)..125
Dec. 2—Elder Alden's Indian Ward (Dr.).....945
Dec. 7—Rachel (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 9—The Rescue of Molly Finney (Dr.)..1007
Dec. 14—Seth's Temptation (Dr.).....955
Dec. 16—Her Indian Mother (Dr.).....995

LUBIN.

Oct. 27—Edith's Averdupois (Com.).....375
Oct. 31—Brothers (Dr.).....
Nov. 3—Mike the Housemaid.....
Nov. 7—The Taming of Wild Bill (Dr.).....
Nov. 10—The Mystery of the Dark Note (Dr.).....
Nov. 10—The Gambler's Career (Dr.).....
Nov. 14—The Stolen Portrait (Dr.).....
Nov. 17—Right in Front of Father (Com.).....
Nov. 21—
Nov. 24—Romance of the Lone Ranch (Dr.).....
Nov. 28—
Dec. 1—
Dec. 12—
Dec. 15—
Dec. 19—
Dec. 22—

GAUMONT.

G. Kleine.

Nov. 1—Picturesque Matlock (Sc.).....269
Nov. 5—The Dancing Statue (Dr.).....961
Nov. 8—Pearson; or, Israel in Egypt (Dr.)..1050
Nov. 12—Faithful Unto Death (Dr.).....693
Nov. 12—A Trip to the Blue Grotto, Capri, Italy (Sc.).....369
Nov. 15—Both Were Stung (Com.).....696
Nov. 15—Picturesque Malacca (Sc.).....276
Nov. 19—Ladies, Before and During the Revolution (Sc.).....727
Nov. 19—Spanish Loyalty.....280
Nov. 22—Cast Into the Flames (Dr.).....981
Nov. 22—A Woman's Wit (Com.).....595
Nov. 26—Solomon's Betrayal (Dr.).....519
Nov. 26—Celtic Travels as a Picnic (Com.).....489
Nov. 29—The Flat Next Door (Com.).....722
Nov. 29—Tarascon on the Rhone (Scenic).....246
Dec. 3—Loved by a Phantom (Dr.).....712
Dec. 3—Nan's Wedding Trip (Com.).....275
Dec. 6—A Man of Honor (Dr.).....884
Dec. 6—Professor's Hat (Com.).....171
Dec. 10—The Revolt (Dr.).....942
Dec. 13—The Phantom Rider (Com.).....279
Dec. 13—Closed Gate (Dr.).....676
Dec. 17—Herod and the New Born King (Bible-ott).....965
Dec. 20—The Cinderella Girl (Dr.).....740
Dec. 20—The Kingdom of Flowers (Botanical)..220
Dec. 24—The Old Home (Dr.).....732
Dec. 24—Cain and Abel (Biblical).....270

URBAN-ECLIPSE.

G. Kleine.

Oct. 19—Tunny Fishing off Palermo, Italy (Ind.).....500
Oct. 26—The Signet Ring (Dr.).....868
Oct. 26—In the Spreewald (Scenic).....132
Nov. 2—Tragical Concealment (Dr.).....646
Nov. 2—Crossing the Andes (Sc.).....350
Nov. 9—Secret of the Cellar (Dr.).....788
Nov. 9—A Trip Through Scotland (Scenic)....217
Nov. 16—The Rival Barons (Dr.).....860
Nov. 16—An Alpine Retreat (Sc.).....142
Nov. 23—Behind a Mask (Dr.).....516
Nov. 23—Nantes (Scenic).....450
Nov. 30—The Return at Midnight (Dr.).....634
Nov. 30—Ramble Through Ceylon (Scenic).....319
Dec. 7—Death of Admiral Coligny (Dr.).....992
Dec. 5—On the Mexican Border (Dr.).....
Dec. 8—Reggie's Engagement (Dr.).....
Dec. 14—The Little Matchseller's Christmas (Dr.).....749
Dec. 14—Scenes in British India (Sc.).....253
Dec. 21—The Tyrant of Florence (Dr.).....676
Dec. 21—A Chamois Hunt.....332

G. MELIES.

Oct. 20—Uncle Jim (Dr.).....956
Oct. 27—Under the Stars and Bars (Dr.).....970
Nov. 3—Birthday Cigars (Com.).....
Nov. 3—Generous Customers (Com.).....
Nov. 10—A Mountain Wife (Dr.).....986
Nov. 17—His Sergeant's Stripes (Dr.).....950
Nov. 24—The Cowboys and the Bachelor Girl (Dr.).....
Dec. 1—Pals (Dr.).....
Dec. 8—What Great Bear Learned (Dr.).....
Dec. 15—Old Norris' Gal (Dr.).....

PATHE.

Dec. 3—
Dec. 5—
Dec. 10—
Dec. 12—
Dec. 17—
Dec. 19—
Dec. 24—
Dec. 26—
Dec. 31—

SELIG.

Nov. 15—
Nov. 14—
Nov. 17—
Nov. 21—
Nov. 21—
Nov. 24—
Nov. 28—
Dec. 1—
Dec. 5—
Dec. 8—
Dec. 12—
Dec. 15—
Dec. 19—

VITAGRAPH.

Nov. 18—
Nov. 18—
Nov. 19—
Nov. 22—
Nov. 25—
Nov. 25—
Nov. 26—
Nov. 29—
Dec. 2—
Dec. 3—
Dec. 6—
Dec. 9—
Dec. 10—
Dec. 13—
Dec. 16—
Dec. 17—

MOTION PICTURE
and Vaudeville Theatres, large or small,
BOUGHT AND SOLD
We can sell yours or find one for you.
ROYAL REALTY & INVESTMENT CO.
84 Adams Street, Chicago, Ill.

PIERO CALZABINI

Nine years' experience as Comedy Director and camera operator with Pathe Freres, Cines Co., etc. Rider in famous Italian Cavalry picture photographed by Ambrosio.

OPEN FOR ENGAGEMENT.

Address Piero Calzabini, care of M. P. World.

THOMAS RICKETTS
Motion Picture Producer and Director

For two years Chief Dramatic and General Producer for the Essanay Company, has withdrawn from The American Film Company, and will consider proposal from responsible firm. Author and Producer of The Celebrated Full Reel One Scene Art Pictures: "Justified," "Gratitude," "The Adventuress," "Woman's Wit" and "Maud Muller," "Hand of Uncle Sam," "The Thief," "The Game," "His Only Child," "The Stolen Fortune," "A Fair Exchange," "An Advertisement Answered," etc., etc., etc.

THOMAS RICKETTS, 1262 Wilson Avenue, Chicago, Ill.
Phone Edgewater 5800

Independent Film Stories.

POWERS PICTURE PLAYS.

THE RIDE TO DEATH.—White Dove, a beautiful young Indian maiden, is in love with Gray Eagle, whose people are enemies to her people. Wah-no-tee, a rival of Gray Eagle, surprises him with White Dove and a terrible knife combat follows. Wah-no-tee is slain. White Dove saves Gray Eagle from being shot by her own people. For this they punish her by "the ride to death." Tied to the back of the horse as "Mazeppa" was, the girl is carried through the woods, over hills, expecting every minute to be killed. Gray Eagle follows in a most exciting ride. He stops the fleeing horse and rescues his sweetheart. Time passes, Gray Eagle and White Dove are married. One day White Dove's people capture her and take her back to her father who is about to pronounce a death sentence upon her when Gray Eagle comes in carrying their child. At the sight of the babe the old chief softens and declares that peace shall henceforth be between their peoples.

A PLUCKY WESTERN KID.—"No Account" Hodgson leaves his five motherless children in the care of the eldest, Ellen, a girl of fourteen, and goes to the nearest town for a spree. He gets drunk and is seen gambling his money away. His faithful horse with almost human instinct runs back to Hodgson's cabin, pushes open the window. Little Ellen suspecting something is wrong with her father, mounts the horse and dashes to the town. Hodgson catches "Poker" Bill cheating him and as a result a knife fight between the two men is about to take place. Hodgson won't fight and "Poker" Bill is about to knife him when Ellen enters, smashes Poker with her whip and saves her father and takes him home. The acting of the five children in this picture is, we are sure, the very best that has ever been shown. The girl's rides are thrilling.

THE TRAMP BICYCLIST.—Percy Snobb is troubled with his wheel. A tramp comes along, shows him how to ride it and then shows Percy how to get a wheel without paying for it. The tramp on the wheel now begins his adventures each one of which will bring roars of laughter. He chases a Chinaman into a house. He knocks over all kinds of people on the street and when they protest he comes back and runs over them. He holds up street cars and captures a lady's bicycle and gathers in a gentleman's silk hat, a policeman's club and a farmer's sachel. He enters a saloon on his wheel, makes a flying grab at a glass of beer and is out before the astonished bar tender can hit him. After a series of very funny adventures the tramp runs into an old maid who captures the wheel. Later she returns it to him. The tramp proposes marriage to her and the two ride off together. This film will be greeted with roars of laughter.

THANHOUSER COMPANY.

LOVE AND LAW.—Sue Jennings and Tom Egan have been sweethearts, but Sue decides to marry another man, and holds a secret meeting with Tom, in which she returns his love letters and demands her own. On the same night, Jack Deming, a friend of Tom's who has lost heavily in speculation on Tom's advice, calls at the latter's rooms, very much intoxicated, brandishing a revolver and vowing vengeance. Tom calms the excited visitor, who falls asleep on the couch, after which Tom writes a letter to his former sweetheart and dispatches it by his servant.

When the servant returns, he discovers his master dead on the floor of his apartment and Jack just leaving the room revolver in hand. Jack is arrested on suspicion, and young Miss Marsh, a bright young woman in the detective department, is detailed from headquarters to investigate the case.

She does some clever work in the case, and proves Jack's innocence in a novel way, incidentally falling in love with the man whose life she is working to save.

On the strength of her evidence, Jack is set free; and with her love to live for, he starts out to make a new record in life for himself.

THE MILLIONAIRE MILKMAN.—Clara Moore is a society girl who has won the affections of Jack Cass, a young millionaire. He thinks she loves him; but it is really his money that she adores. Prompted by a letter of warning, Jack decides to prove his sweetheart's love. One reason is that he privately disapproves of the way Clara and her mother have treated a poor relation, an orphan girl, who has been left to their care. Instead of giving her a home, they make a servant of her.

Jack's plot works like a charm. His faithful valet gives the newspapers a story of the failure of Jack's mine, and that young man's ruin. Clara reads it and when Jack calls and he admits that the reports are correct, she returns him his ring and says that all is over between them. In fact the only person in the house who shows any sympathy for Jack is the poor relation, May Dustin, and naturally he compares her with the heartless society girl.

Jack wants to see more of May, and invents a unique way of doing so. He buys out the milkman who serves the family, and in that way is able to call on May every day. Their liking soon ripens into love, and May agrees to wed Jack, though thinking he has nothing in the world but a meagre salary. After marriage she is told the truth and finds that her husband has money enough to supply her every wish. As for Clara, she has lost her only chance to win a prized millionaire.

REVIER.

THOUGHTFULNESS REMEMBERED BY THE UTE.—The boys from the ranch go down to old man Collin's "Angle Salun" for refreshments. Bear Claws follows the cowpunchers in and drinks with them, while two Indian girls enter. Full of fire water he runs amuck and tries to embrace the elder sister. Nick Ramsey interferes and protects the red girls, whereupon a quarrel takes place and the Indian swears vengeance. That night Bear Claws robs the saloon, and as if placed there by fate, he finds Ramsey's gun nearby. Making his escape he sees the little Indian girl looking in the window. After a pursuit he captures her and, throwing her into a barn sets it on fire. At the ranch Nick wants another drink, and so leaves the bunk house and rides to the saloon. The Indian sees him, and recognizing his chance to blame the white man for his deed, tells the cowboys of the robbery and murder. They quickly saddle and rush to old Collin's place, where they find Nick and accuse him of the crime. Caught in the trap of circumstantial evidence, he is led out by his pals to suffer the extreme penalty. The Indian girl, missing her sister, falls upon her trail, tracks her to the burning barn, where she rescues her from the flames. The little girl tells her of the crime, and mounting a horse they start on a race against death to save their friend. Over rocky hills, through dark ravines they gallop, while near the shady ford of the river Ramsey, a lariat about his neck, is about to forfeit his life for the crime of his enemy. The rope is thrown over a limb, when just in time the Indian girls arrive. They tell their story and the noose is speedily adjusted over the neck of the redskin.

IMP.

A CLEVER RUSE.—Miles Darragh and Matthew Daly are two old cronies who have reached that stage of life where, having plenty of money, they decide to take things easy and enjoy themselves. Darragh has a daughter named Maud and Daly has a son called King. King and Maud are engaged to be married, much to the joy of the who see in the union of the two families the culmination of their fondest dreams.

One day, while the two old gentlemen are peacefully playing cards in the Darragh library, King and Maud have a violent lovers' quarrel in the drawing-room, over King's refusal to give up cigarettes. The quarrel finally reaches such proportions as to attract the attention of the two fathers, who stop playing and rush to the door of the room just in time to see King leaving the house "forever."

The two old friends, fearing the end of all their dreams, hold a brief conference and decide upon a ruse to draw the young lovers together again. Hastily drinking a glass of wine apiece, they pretend they have been poisoned and soon arouse the house by their pitiful cries and groans. Maud, frightened out of her fit of anger by the noise, rushes into the room, and learning the cause of the trouble, becomes terribly alarmed and dashes for the telephone for aid, and to whom should she call in her hour of need but to her faithful King? Learning the dreadful news, he runs for a doctor.

In the meantime, the old gentlemen have enjoyed listening to Maud's end of the telephone conversation, but when she returns to the library with a maid, the old schemers are again writhing about in apparently mortal agony. Taken to a bedroom by the two girls, they fall helplessly on the bed and continue to call madly for help. King soon arrives with a physician, who is escorted to the bedside of the sufferers and after a brief glance at the old men he orders the young couple from the room and begins his examination.

Being soon convinced that his patients are merely "faking," he proceeds to frighten the truth from them by a liberal display of deadly looking surgical instruments. His artifice proves entirely successful, for they immediately leap from the bed and confess their duplicity and the cause of it, but, nothing daunted, secure his assistance by presenting him with a liberal fee.

The doctor then visits the young folks, whom he finds clinging lovingly and sorrowfully to each other, their recent quarrel completely forgotten. Telling them that they may have one last look at their fathers before the end comes, the two follow him, and entering the room, gather sadly about the seeming deathbed. The two old reprobates then ask the children to promise they will never quarrel again. As the young people fondly embrace and solemnly promise to love and cherish each other as long as life shall last, the old gentlemen leap from their bed of suffering and boisterously disclose their clever ruse.

FAITHFUL MAX.—A post-rider of the old Colonial days owns a large, handsome dog, called "Max," that accompanies him upon all of his trips, running alongside of his horse and acting as his bodyguard.

One day the post-rider is given some valuable jewelry by a wealthy country gentleman, with instructions to deliver it most carefully at the other end of his route. On the way, as was his custom, the post-rider stops to refresh his horse and eat his noon meal, which he shares with his dog. Feeling sleepy, he decides to indulge himself to the extent of a brief nap, and lying down, endeavors to stretch out and feel comfortable. But his post-bag, which he wears slung across his shoulders, annoys him and he takes it off, and laying it beside him, orders Max to watch it. He oversleeps, but Max soon realizes this fact and proceeds to waken him. Starting up in great haste, he mounts his horse and rapidly rides away, forgetting his post-bag entirely. Max does not forget it, however, but runs swiftly after him, and circling about him, springs at his horse's head, barking and growling in his endeavors to get him to return. The dog's actions finally become so extravagant that his master regretfully decides that he has gone mad, and pulling his pistol from his belt, shoots him and rides away to make up the time lost through his delay.

Poor, faithful Max, wounded and dying, rises weakly and crawling painfully back to their recent bivouac, lies down beside the treasure he had been told to guard, and here he is later discovered by his deeply sorrowing master, who has been made aware of the loss of his post-bag and returns to recover it.

THE CRIPPLED TEDDY BEAR.—John King and his wife, Dora, with their little girl, Ida, live plainly but contentedly upon his small salary. Little Ida has few playthings, her father not being able to purchase more, but to her mind they are the finest ever seen, her favorite being a Teddy bear, with one hind leg missing. In order to make the animal as interesting as possible, her father makes a tiny crutch for it, which fills her childish heart with joy.

One morning, as King is on his way to the office where he is employed, he sees a man suddenly taken ill and assists him to return to his residence. This man, William Daly, a wealthy old bachelor, is very grateful for the service, but sees no way of returning the favor at the time. In consequence of this delay, King is quite late to his work and his employer, an irascible old skinflint, gives him a terrific scolding and in spite of King's explanations, discharges him from his service.

King returns home greatly cast down and not knowing which way to turn. He tries to find other employment but without avail and they finally find themselves without sufficient food to keep them alive. King then decides to pawn his best suit of clothes and taking little Ida with him, goes to the pawnshop and gets some money.

But the lack of decent clothing makes it still harder for him to obtain employment and he grows more and more discouraged. His wife realizing how handicapped King is without his best suit, slips out of the house with her little girl and going to the pawnshop, exchanges her engagement ring for the clothing and returns with it to King, who is deeply grateful for the sacrifice.

Things still go badly with the family and they are at the end of their resources again. Then little Ida has an inspiration—she will pawn her teddy bear. So wrapping it up, she steals softly from the house. On her way to the pawn shop, she meets Mr. Daly, the innocent cause of her father's discharge. Her bright face attracts the gentleman and he stops and speaks to her and as she leaves him, he watches her, not knowing, of course, whose child she is.

Ida enters the pawnshop and tries to pawn her treasure, which, while it amuses the pawnbroker, he does not know what to say to her. Mr. Daly then enters the shop and comprehending the situation, takes the child away and inquiring her address takes her home, where he meets King with much pleasure and is introduced to his wife. As Daly is about to leave he asks for the Teddy bear, which Ida gladly gives him. He then, having learned their circumstances, offers King money, but King refuses it. Stooping to kiss Ida "good-bye," Daly forces a bill of a large denomination into her hand and goes away.

Daly places the Teddy bear on his desk at his office and thinks often of the child who gave it to him. The day before Christmas, Daly, who is lonely, is blessed with a beautiful thought: he will give the little girl a Christmas tree at his own home and invite her parents.

Buying nearly the entire contents of a toy-shop, he has his servants deck out a tree and, when his guests arrive, he gives them a royal welcome. And one of the most precious gifts taken from the tree is a letter for John King, offering him a splendid position as confidential man with Mr. Daly.

LITTLE NELL'S TOBACCO.—Grandpa Turner lived happily with his daughter Ella and her husband, Robert Fuller. Little Nell, his grandchild, was his inseparable companion, the love between them being touching and beautiful.

Ella is finally taken sick and dies, and after a short lapse of time, Robert Fuller marries again. The new wife is a hard hearted young creature, who makes things very unpleasant for Grandpa and Nell, but especially for Grandpa. She deeply resents the fact, that he, the first wife's father, is allowed to remain under the same roof with herself.

She begins her persecutions by forbidding him to smoke and taking his pipe and tobacco away from him, throws them out of the window. As soon as her stepmother leaves the house with her father, Nell, her grandfather's little champion, climbs out of the window and finding his smoking outfit, returns it to him and he enjoys another smoke. But, alas, the stepmother returns and catching him a second time, she takes the pipe and tobacco and throws them in the stove. She then orders him to go up to an attic room and remain there. After the old man has tottered up the stairs, the husband and wife sit down and enjoy themselves, the former taking out a cigarette, which the wife lights for him.

In the meantime, little Nell, gets down her little hoard of pennies and going to the grocery store, buys Grandpa a nice big paper of tobacco and returning with it, presents it to him, much to his delight.

But the excitement and exertion, coupled with the harsh treatment, have been too much for the enfeebled old man's heart and he suddenly sinks back in his chair and his spirit goes to join his daughter. Nell rushes downstairs and informs her father and stepmother of the sad occurence and they hastily run upstairs and behold the terrible result of their heartlessness. And then the new wife suffers the pangs of remorse, while the husband sees her at last in her true colors. The next day, poor little Nell sorrowfully returns the tobacco to the grocer, "'Cause Grandpa'll need it no more."

Later, she is seen plucking flowers and decorating his grave, while she meditates upon what she will do to her father when he grows old and feeble.

AMERICAN.

A TOUCHING AFFAIR.—George Kenwood is the wealthy and indulgent father of a frolicsome, devil-may-care son.

His kindness imposed upon, until finally his patience is exhausted, he orders his son to leave his house and never darken his door again. The latter assumes an indifferent air lights a cigarette, takes up his coat and hat and leaves the house. He is next seen seeking employment as an accountant in a brokerage office in New York, where his irrepressible manner and confident bearing gains for him a hearing. Having no credentials, except his personal statement, as to his honesty and ability, the broker informs him that it is not sufficient. As he turns away, discouraged and crestfallen, he catches a glance of sympathy and admiration from Annie, the pretty girl stenographer. The look inspires him to make another effort, so he turns with a burst of enthusiastic self-praise and finally convinces the broker, who at once employs him. Only a few days were necessary for Harry to prove his inefficiency and a disinclination for a life of confinement. His pranks and practical jokes, coupled with his attention to Annie, the pretty stenographer, and her pronounced partiality for Harry made him an object of hatred and envy on the part of his fellow employees, who finally succeeded in effecting his dismissal. Loss of position did not discourage Harry in his pursuit of Annie. On the contrary, his manner became more insistent until finally she consents to become his wife. He apprises his father of his approaching marriage, and receives a check for five hundred dollars, his blessing and information that this remittance would be the last he would receive.

The young couple are married, and the attendant honeymoon expenses soon exhausts the meagre dowry, and in a short time the irate landlord and clamoring tradesmen render their lives unbearable.

Driven to desperate means, Harry hits upon a plan by which he hopes to soften his father's resolve. He wires the old gentleman that the union of himself and Annie has been blessed by the arrival of a ten-pound boy. The father receives the message in due course, and immediately notifies the son that he will arrive in New York to see his grandson, offer his congratulations and a generous check. Harry drops into a chair in bewilderment. "What's to be done? I must have a baby here within an hour." A way out of the difficulty suggests itself. He rushes madly into the street, is seen running frantically up and down the thoroughfare in an endeavor to get possession of an infant. He seizes every baby that comes into view, is repulsed at every turn, until finally in despair he returns to the house and tells the janitor he must have an infant at once. The janitor goes in quest of one, just as a taxicab rolls up to the door and the elder Kenwood steps out. Harry, beside himself, runs to his apartment and prepares to greet his father. He enters the room and is met by his son and the excited young wife. His father asks about the child, and is told that the nurse has it out for an airing.

He leaves his father to be entertained by Annie, while he rushes from the room and shortly returns in company with the janitor's wife, who has been pressed into service as a nurse. As he enters he winks knowingly at his wife. The baby, completely enveloped in a wrap, is brought down, and while all gaze in expectancy, a covering is removed from its face, disclosing a very black pickaninny.

Everyone is staggered. The father berates Harry for so imposing upon him. Starts angrily to leave the room, he knocks over a work basket and several articles of infant's apparel fall to the floor. He picks up an infant's shirt and a little shoe. Looks inquiringly at Annie, who blushingly drops her head. The father is convinced that the stork is shortly to invade the home of his son. He hands him the check and rapidly writes a note:

"My Children:

"If it's a boy, name him George. If it's a girl, name her Annie. Draw on me for $5,000.00. Grandpa-to-be."

In this reel a delicate subject is handled in a delightful manner, and the result is a heart-interest comedy hard to equal.

CHAMPION.

HIS MOTHER.—A drunken husband and an idle son are not very pleasant features of a home, and although such is the sad condition in the home of Mrs. Barton, it does not lessen her love for either

Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

THEATRES DESIGNED EVERYWHERE

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs

THE DECORATORS SUPPLY CO.

2549 Archer Avenue :: CHICAGO, ILL.

It is hard for the poor mother, but a godsend for the boy, who soon makes himself the favorite cowboy of one of the ranch owners in the West, and, incidentally, is brought beneath the gentle influence of the ranchman's daughter.

Conditions at home remain the same until the long expected fatality occurs, the husband being brought home dead. Without husband and apparently a lost son, the Widow Barton drinks deeply of the cup of sorrow. This, however, is mitigated by the arrival of a special delivery letter from her son, enclosing money with which she is entreated to come to him, together with the father.

The boy makes preparations to receive his parents. The father of Maud is a widower and a drinking man, and although he admires his favorite cowboy, he becomes angered if the boy refuses to drink with him.

The day of the arrival of the widow in town, her son is at the saloon with the ranchman, both in a drunken state. Maud, fearing that such is the case, hurries to the home prepared by the boy for his mother, and finds her there, weeping.

Learning the whereabouts of her son, the widow hastens to the saloon, in time to dash the glasses from the hands of the ranchman and her son. Realizing his culpability, the boy takes the vow on his knees before his mother to never touch another drop. Affected and surprised, the ranchman follows suit, and in the course of time is assured of her hand.

LUX FILMS.

HOW HE WON HER.—Bert has fallen in love with Miss Hetty. Whilst Mama dozes they make the most of the time. But mama awakens suddenly. What a discovery. Ma is like Aunt Tabitha, who never did so, and poor Bert has to depart. Where there's a will there's a way, and Bert resolves to try a little contrivance. Ma has been looking out for a new pet dog. Bert disguises himself as a well-groomed poodle and succeeds in entering the house, but how to get clear of Ma who does not leave her pet. He feigns madness, jumping and springing on poor Mrs. Tomkins who is glad to escape. Hetty appears and Bert discloses his identity. The two are congratulating each other on their good luck when Ma appears, reinforced, to find her daughter in the arms of the mad pet. Mrs. Tompkins, recovering from her astonishment, gives approval to their engagement and all ends happily.

Independent :: Competitive :: Progressive

That is Why We Are Winners

WE STAND ON OUR MERIT

We are buying all the films that will GET YOU THE MONEY regardless of who makes them.

We Handle All Makes of Machines, Machine Parts and Supplies

STANDARD FILM EXCHANGE

JOSEPH HOPP, President

"An Exchange of Strength and Character"

159-161 Washington Street - - - - CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

of them. The boy leaves home for the West, resultant of a quarrel with his father.

HER FAVORITE TUNE.—They have been taking tea in the garden, little Doris, accompanied by her brother on his violin, has sung that sweet song, "Daddy." She is sent into the house to fetch another song. In the drawing room she finds John prying into things. Resenting her appearance just then he pushes her. Her papa having followed his darling into the house learns what has occurred and John is dismissed. With some of his companions they resolve to steal the little girl, and whilst the two children are out walking with their nurse, they are overpowered and little Doris is carried off. The distracted parents fail to find a clue and Teddie resolves to try himself. Changing his clothes with a little urchin of the road, he starts off with his violin hoping that by chance the attention of Doris will be attracted by the music. The devoted little brother wanders from place to place. In anguish he tries again and plays her favorite song, "Daddy." A little girl appears at the entrance of a hovel clothed in rags. It is Dorris. As she listens to the sweet strains of her song "Daddy," she commences to sing. Teddy recognizes her voice and rushes off to his parents, who proceed to the place where their darling has been kept prisoner. The scoundrels are secured by the police.

ATLAS.

THE ARM OF THE LAW.—There was joy in the Leighton household for a message had just been received that John was coming home. John had said in his message that something great had happened, that he was bringing a grand surprise for her and little Ethel.

When Captain Leighton's ship, Marie, came into port many old friends were there to greet him. Before going home the boys insisted on drinking so they all repaired to a nearby saloon. Every man demanded his privilege of buying and soon tongues began to wag as the liquor flowed. Then the captain told the boys the story of the sudden death of an old pirate whom he had once befriended and how he could reach the place where he had buried a fortune. To prove the assertion, the captain produced a leather bag from an inner pocket and opening it spread a handful of pearls and rubies, unmindful of the three men who sat at a table nearby. Bill Sykes had a record. He had spent the greater part of his life in prison. He would follow the old captain and await his chance. Of course, Bill's pals were declared in on the prize. He started home but never reached there until they carried his body to the grief-stricken wife and daughter, dead.

Then the police started on a still hunt for the man who committed the murder. Dan Denton, detective, was assigned to the case and he was not long in finding evidence against Bill Sykes and his pals. A newsboy had seen the crime committed and had given him descriptions of the perpetrators.

Sykes drank harder than ever. He could see Captain Leighton everywhere he looked. He needed courage to get away without creating suspicion and he figured rum would supply the courage. After one of his debauches in his own room, he sank into a troubled sleep. When he heard a voice, Captain Leighton's voice, commanding him to rise, he opened his eyes and there before him stood the old sea captain with that awful wound on his forehead, his face white as death. Somehow, he managed to escape from the room, and ran to a saloon. There he met his pals and told them of his vision. Dan, who had impersonated the old captain, quietly followed and placed the suspects under arrest. Then they were given a taste of the dread "Third Degree." Sykes' pals weakened first and laid the crime to him. Then the detectives worked on him. When they heard his full confession Sykes went to pieces. Weakened by liquor and the dread of capture his system could not withstand the gruelling of the headquarters torture and the added thought of his penalty. When they tried to lead him to his cell he collapsed. Bill Sykes had cheated the gallows.

YANKEE.

THE OLD MINER'S DOLL.—It was a sad group which sat in a cold cottage, just a few days before Christmas. With two children to provide for, Widow Mitchell found her cross a heavy one to bear, but she bravely struggled on.

Helen slipped from the house quietly. After wandering about for half an hour, suddenly, she saw in the distance an old man. He was dressed peculiarly and smoked a stubby pipe. Here, indeed, was Santa Claus. Shortly he reached a cabin on the hillside and entered. Helen stood outside almost too frightened to breathe, but she soon summoned up courage enough to slip up and peek through the window and there she saw an old trunk, its lid thrown back, and in the old man's hands an old doll and a locket.

He was thinking of the past. His mind wandered again to the scene of long ago when his little home was made desolate by an Indian uprising.

Then she hurried home to tell her mother about finding Santa Claus. To please the child, she helped her fix up a note asking Kris Kingle for the things she wanted. Helen bravely went to the old man in the cabin and handed him the message. He read it over slowly. By degrees he drew from Helen the story of her widowed mother and sick brother. At dusk Helen's mother rushed in. She had grown anxious when the child had not returned and decided to go in search of her. At the sight of the old man, Mrs. Mitchell fell, fainting in the arms of her father. The old man lost no time in arranging the Christmas details. Helen and brother had their tree and loads of toys.

A WARD OF UNCLE SAM.—In Russia, a house was shrouded in gloom by the death of a kind and loving father and husband. Two children, boy and girl, the latter blind since birth, were left to comfort the sorrowing mother.

In America an uncle learns of the death of his brother and sends a cable asking that the boy be sent to him. Arriving in New York, little Michael soon becomes the pride of his uncle and aunt.

War breaks out with Spain and Michael enlists in the army. On the field of battle he proves himself a brave soldier. He succeeded in obtaining secrets by which the American forces put the Spaniards to rout and captured their most important stronghold. Badly wounded he lay in the field hospital until health and strength returned.

After the war he returned to his uncle with an honorable discharge in his possession and a letter from the President commending him for his bravery. At home he found a message from the mother he left in Russia asking him to come and visit them if possible. The following week found Michael bound for his native land.

During Michael's absence his little sister grew into beautiful womanhood, marred only by her sightless eyes. An officer in the Russian army once made an insulting remark to her and had followed her home. On the day of Michael's return she was sitting in the kitchen of their home expecting him. Suddenly she heard a step behind her and then was seized roughly and kissed while a voice which she recognized with horror warned her to remain quiet. Hearing the girl's scream for help her mother entered and would have been roughly handled but for the timely arrival of Michael who knocked the Russian libertine down in true Yankee fashion and drove him into the street, the Russian swearing vengeance. Michael suddenly taken prisoner by the Russian government accused of being a Russian subject plotting against his government. His assurance that he was an American citizen laughed at by the revengeful officer and he was led away to prison. His mother, frantic, rushed to the American Consul, prevailed upon him to investigate. Release of Michael demanded by Consul without result.

The Ambassador returned to the embassy and cabled the Secretary of War of the U. S., calling for one of Uncle Sam's gunboats. The Secretary of War recalled the evidence he had of Michael's bravery and gave his consent.

Again the American Consul visited the Gov.-General's palace and demanded the release of Michael, but was laughed at for his pains. Just then an American admiral stalked in followed by a company of marines bearing the stars and stripes. Better judgment prevailed and the prisoner was given up. Later on Michael, the mother, blind sister with him, were taken on board the gunboat and returned to his own land of freedom.

SOLAX COMPANY.

TWO SUITS.—Old John Tiffin, a henpecked husband, while at the table, spilled into his lap all the turkey meat and gravy. His suit is ruined. However, his wife gives him enough money to buy a new one, and he departs for that purpose.

Simultaneously with the purchase of Tiffin's suit, Charlie, the lover of Ethel Prentiss, buys himself a new suit for his wedding, identical in style and pattern to that of old John Tiffin.

During Mrs. Tiffin's peregrinations she discovers Ethel and Charlie in her lead, and as she has seen her husband's new suit, she mistakes Charlie for him. She follows them, and subsequently learns Ethel's address. Mrs. Tiffin reaches the Prentiss home during Charlie's absence and is informed that Ethel has just married. She notifies Ethel that the man she has married is already a husband, and the father of five children.

Mrs. Tiffin departs to secure a warrant charging her spouse with bigamy. Charlie returns to the Prentiss home with his grips. He is set upon by the father and brother of the bride and tossed out of the window. He alights upon the head of a policeman, and one of the wedding guests promptly sets out in pursuit of him.

In the meantime, Tiffin who has been turned out of his house by his wife is walking down the street. Charlie, pursued by the policeman and the old man whom he has knocked down in his flight, comes tearing down the street and collides with Tiffin. Regaining his feet Charlie continues his flight, and, thinking from the appearance of Tiffin's suit that he is the man he has been pursuing, arrests Tiffin.

Complications are finally cleared away and the respective men restored to the forgiving arms of their wives.

NESTOR.

THE PILGRIM.—The boys were holding an indignation meeting. That pilgrim from the East, Jack Warren, had walked in and taken possession of the hotel as though he owned it. Old man Clayton was ill and the work was certainly too much for Jane.

Marching up to the bar, each gave his order to the rendertoot, but, when it came to paying, they sneeringly declared that the drinks were "on the house." This was going too far—with a rush, Jack was upon them—the doctor's appearance, however, at this moment announcing Clayton's death, effectively put an end to the quarrel for that day. Solemnly the boys filed out, leaving the money on the bar as they went.

Hostilities were, nevertheless, renewed a few days later when the boys found that Jane was still retaining Jack as her assistant.

He had most likely left a sweetheart at home and was merely playing with the girl. And in truth, Jack had been engaged to Bertha Everett, but greatly to his relief, she had written breaking their engagement and announcing her approaching marriage to another man.

Coming to the hotel, they openly accused him of trifling with the girl. Instantly Jack sprang at them and had succeeded in knocking two down when Jane made her appearance and commanded the boys to leave. Then after they had gone, quietly but firmly insisted upon Jack doing the same.

Three months passed. Finding the work entirely too great for her strength and the "help" most unreliable, Jane had sold the place and was leaving her old home forever. Luckily, the walk to the station proved greater than she had anticipated, for as she sat down to rest, Jack came along. Gently he persuaded the girl to come to his cabin, while he hurried away for a minister. But no sooner was the ceremony performed and the clergyman and his wife congratulating the pair, than the boys burst into the room.

Long Bill and his partner, who had seen Jane enter the cabin, at once notified the others, and now, with tar and feathers, they had arrived to run Jack out of town. But the presence of the minister and the sight of the marriage certificate which Jack calmly held up to view, caused them to beat a hasty retreat.

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO.

A CHRISTMAS LETTER.—It is Christmas Eve, and in a crowded, well-lit street, stands a ragged little child trying to attract the attention of the passers-by to her wares. But everybody is too busy about their own affairs. At last, tired out, the little one creeps away to her widowed mother lying on the bed of sickness and her baby sister. There is neither food nor fire in the place, nor the wherewithal to purchase any. The child, full of a sense of responsibility, casts about for some means of obtaining help. She conceives the notion of writing to Santa Claus for aid, and at once writes a little note, and takes it to post. The post-box is too high for her to reach, and a lady passing by comes to her assistance. Catching sight of the address, "To Santa Claus, Heaven," her interest and curiosity are aroused, and she withholds the letter from the post unknown to the child. When the little one has gone she opens and reads the note: "Dear Santa Claus.—Please come to us as mother is very ill and can't work and my business has not been good." The lady hurries home after reading the letter, and relates the incident to her sisters. Food, warm clothing, and money to buy other necessaries are soon got ready by willing hands, and sent to the destitute family. Before the film closes it is evident that better days are in store for the poor mother and child.

ECLAIR.

THE CHILD OF TWO MOTHERS.—Mrs. Varnier, a young widow, loses her child who is her only joy and consolation. Made desperate through grief, the poor woman kidnaps the child of a friend, and retires to a secluded spot where she brings the little girl up with all the tenderness of a mother.

The years have gone by; the stricken parents are still seeking for their lost child! One day in the street they notice a little girl who seems to interest them more than usual. They consider that their own little girl would be about the same age. At the same moment they notice an excited woman take the child by the hand and hurry her away. Immediately they recognize the woman who kidnapped their baby. They at once set about to discover the whereabouts of the woman, Mrs. Varnier, and this is soon accomplished, and the child is returned to her own parents. But the little girl has been tenderly reared by her foster mother, and having shared the life of the woman who so loved and cared for her all through the years she cannot forget Mrs. Varnier, and pines for her day by day. One day while the child is out with her mother, they meet Mrs. Varnier. At the sight of the woman she loves as "Mother" the girl rushes joyfully forward, and Mrs. Varnier receives her with open arms. The mother of the girl then realizes that the child can never forget the woman who has been a mother to her from her very earliest remembrance, and, in the spirit of a most beautiful sacrifice, and for the sake of her child, the mother forgives Mrs. Varnier, and assures them that hereafter the little girl shall have the love and care of two most affectionate and tender mothers.

THE MUSEUM OF SOVEREIGNS.—In this film a great many world-renowned celebrities take part, and we are introduced in turn to Alphonso XIII, Victor Emmanuel III, and Nicholas II, all of whom are closely associated with a bomb. Francois Joseph, Colonel Roosevelt, the Lion Hunter, etc., and the film ends with a side-splitting caricature of the President of the French Republic.

JONES Duplex Check GATE

THE BEST WAY TO COUNT YOUR PUBLIC

This cut is from a Photograph of the Duplex Check Gates installed in Erie Station of the Hudson Tunnels.

Nearly 1,000,000 persons have passed through them this year. If it will work there, it will work in your place.

Perfect Count Smooth Operation

Manufactured by

JONES Change Register Co.
INC.

18 Broadway :: NEW YORK

W. E. Greene Film Exchange, Inc.

The oldest and largest Independent Film Exchange in New England

Mr. Exhibitor: When you see your receipts drop, call on us

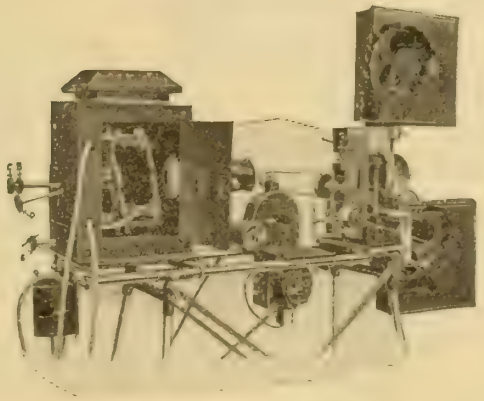
If you are unable to call, drop us a line and we will convince you that our service is the service you want to increase your business

Don't forget the name and address

W. E. Greene Film Exchange
INCORPORATED
228 Tremont Street Boston, Mass.

"STANDARD"

THE MACHINE THAT GIVES RESULTS
FULLY GUARANTEED



FIREPROOF—FLICKERLESS

ANSWERS—C. Byers, Dayton, O. Yes, our machine is guaranteed absolutely for one year.
Mr. Brown, Harrisburg, Pa. Yes, we have three machines in Crystal Hall, on 14th St. They have been in use for the past twenty months.

Catalogue Furnished on Request—Dept. W.

AMERICAN MOVING PICTURE MACHINE CO.
101 BEEKMAN STREET :: :: NEW YORK

¶ Put in our Easels and Poster Frames and watch your attendance grow.

¶ We make mechanical attractions, Electric signs, or anything special in the theatrical line. ¶ Ideas developed—Low Prices—Best Work—DON'T DELAY but write to-day.

THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.
717-719 Sycamore St., Cincinnati, O.

ADVERTISING : ANNOUNCEMENT SLIDES

Genre Transparency Company
507 N. Clark Street : : : Chicago

THIS WEEK'S PROGRAM OF INDEPENDENT FILMS.

Monday, December 12.

American—The Rummage Sale (Com.) .....
Eclair—The Bowling Craze (Com.) 445
Eclair—Our Dear Uncle From America (Com.) ..470
Imp—Faithful Max (Dr.) 500
Imp—A Clever Ruse (Com.) 500
Yankee—A Fight for Millions (Dr.) .....

Tuesday, December 13.

Bison—An Indian Test (Dr.) .....
Powers—A Plucky Western Kid (Dr.) .....
Powers—The Tramp Bicyclist (Com.) .....
Thanhouser—Love and Law (Dr.) 1000

Wednesday, December 14.

Ambrosio—Dido Forsaken by Aenea (Dr.) .....
Atlas—Brothers (Dr.) .....
Champion—The Sheriff and the Detective (Dr.) 950
Nestor—The Pilgrim (Dr.) .....

Thursday, December 15.

American—The Binding Shot (Dr.) .....
Imp—The Poor Student (Dr.) 1000
Itala—The False Accusation (Dr.) .....

Friday, December 16.

Bison—A Girl of the Plains .....
Lux—How He Won Her (Com.) 344
Lux—Her Favorite Tune (Dr.) 550
Solax—Two Suits .....
Thanhouser—The Millionaire Milkman (Dr.) ..1000

Saturday, December 17.

Columbia (No Release.)
Great Northern—A Christmas Letter (Dr.) ....
Great Northern—Dickey's Courtship (Com.).....
Itala—The Mother's Shadow .....
Itala—Thieves as Quick Change Artists .....
Powers—His Gypsy Sweetheart (Dr.) .....
Reliance—The Thin Dark Line (Dr.) .....

INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES.

AMERICAN.

Nov. 21—Starlight's Devotion (Dr.).....960
Nov. 24—Nothing But Money (Com.).....740
Nov. 24—A Big Joke (Com.).....220
Nov. 28—Regeneration (Dr.) .....
Dec. 1—A Touching Affair (Com.).....
Dec. 5—Vera, the Gypsy Girl (Dr.).....930
Dec. 6—Two Lucky Lins (Com.).....955
Dec. 12—The Rummage Sale (Com.) .....
Dec. 15—The Binding Shot (Dr.) .....
Dec. 19—Her Fatal Mistake (Dr.) .....
Dec. 22—Her Husband's Deception (Com.) .....
Dec. 22—A Troublesome Parcel (Com.) .....

ATLAS.

Nov. 2—That Doggone Dog (Com.).....
Nov. 16—The Hand of Providence (Dr.).....
Nov. 23—Cast Thy Bread Upon the Waters (Dr.)
Nov. 30—Saved by a Vision (Dr.).....
Dec. 7—Nature's Nobleman (Dr.).....
Dec. 14—Brothers (Dec.) .....
Dec. 21—The Arm of the Law (Dr.) .....

CAPITOL FILM CO.

Sept. 17—Round Trip $5.98 (Com.).....
Sept. 24—Bill Mason's Ride (Dr.).....700
Oct. 8—All's Fair in Love and War (Dr.)....
Oct. 15—A Shot in the Night (Dr.).....
Oct. 22—The Locket (Dr.) .....

CHAMPION.

Nov. 2—Caught by Cowboys (Dr.).....950
Nov. 9—The Ranchman and the Miser (Dr.)...950
Nov. 16—The Way of the West (Dr.).....950
Nov. 23—Let Us Give Thanks (Dr.).....950
Nov. 30—The Indian Land Grab (Dr.).....950
Dec. 7—Hearts of the West (Dr.) 950
Dec. 14—The Sheriff and the Detective (Dr.)..950
Dec. 21—His Mother (Dr.) 950

COLUMBIA.

Oct. 15—Tracked Across the Sea (Dr.).....
Oct. 22—Breaking Home Ties (Dr.).....
Oct. 29—In the Web (Dr.).....
Nov. 12—The Heroine of 101 Ranch (Dr.).....
Nov. 19—Oklahoma Bill (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 26—Stage Coach Tom (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 24—The Cattlemen's Feud (Dr.) .....
Dec. 31—Trapped (Dr.) .....

DEFENDER.

Oct. 13—The Tale the Camera Told (Com.).....
Oct. 20—The Heart of a Cowboy (Dr.).....
Oct. 27—A Clause in the Will (Dr.).....
Nov. 3—Cohen's Generosity (Com.) .....
Nov. 10—The Last Straw (Dr.).....
Nov. 17—The Education of Mary Jane (Dr.)..
Nov. 24—Forgiven (Dr.) .....

ECLAIR.

Nov. 14—The Devil's Billiard Table (Com.)....270
Nov. 21—The Exiled Mother (Dr.) 920
Nov. 28—The Wreck (Dr.).....565
Nov. 28—A Difficult Capture (Com.).....380
Dec. 5—The Price of a Sacrifice (Dr.).....833
Dec. 5—The Laundry Girl's Good-Night (C.).....82
Dec. 12—The Bowling Craze (Com.) 445
Dec. 12—Our Dear Uncle From America (Com.) 470
Dec. 19—The Child of Two Mothers (Dr.) 545
Dec. 19—The Museum of Sovereigns (Dr.) 400

CINES.

Eclair.

Sept. 23—Tontolini as a Ballet Dancer (Com.)..236
Sept. 30—Giovanni of Medici (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 7—Giorgione (Dr.) 1000
Oct. 14—The Mad Lady of Chester (Dr.).....965
Oct. 21—The Last of the Savelli (Dr.).....800
Oct. 28—Tontolini Is in Love (Com.).....480
Oct. 28—The Pretty Dairy Maid (Dr.).....480
Nov. 4—A Wooden Sword (Dr.) 800

GREAT NORTHERN.

Nov. 5—A Fatal Picnic (Com.) .....
Nov. 12—World's Wrestling Champions.....
Nov. 12—Mother-in-Law Arrives (Com.).....
Nov. 19—The Diamond Swindler (Dr.).....
Nov. 26—Kean, or the Prince and the Actor....
Dec. 3—The Birthday Present (Dr.).....
Dec. 3—The Ohami Troupe of Acrobats (Sc.)..
Dec. 10—The Poacher (Dr.) .....
Dec. 17—A Christmas Letter (Dr.) .....
Dec. 17—Dickey's Courtship (Com.) .....

IMP.

Nov. 21—Their Day of Thanks (Dr.) .....
Nov. 24—The Country Boarder (Com.) .....
Nov. 28—The Revolving Door.....
Dec. 1—A Child's Judgment (Dr.).....
Dec. 5—Aspirations of Gerald and Percy (Dr.).995
Dec. 8—Twixt Loyalty and Love (Dr.).....990
Dec. 12—Faithful Max (Dr.) 500
Dec. 12—A Clever Ruse 500
Dec. 15—The Poor Student (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 19—The Crippled Teddy Bear .....
Dec. 22—Little Nell's Tobacco (Dr.) .....

LUX.

Nov. 25—In Friendship's Name (Dr.).....901
Dec. 2—Bill as an Operator (Com.).....485
Dec. 2—Necessity Is the Mother of Invention (Dr.) 449
Dec. 9—What It Will Be (Com.).....491
Dec. 9—And She Came Back (Com.) 452
Dec. 16—How He Won Her (Com.) 344
Dec. 16—Her Favorite Tune (Dr.) 550

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO. ("Bison.")

Nov. 18—An Indian Maiden's Choice (Dr.).....
Nov. 22—True Western Honor (Dr.).....
Nov. 25—Cheyenne Love for a Sioux (Dr.)....
Nov. 29—The Ranchman's Personal (Dr.).....
Dec. 2—A Child of the West (Dr.).....
Dec. 6—A Sioux's Reward (Dr.) .....
Dec. 9—A Brave Western Girl (Dr.) .....
Dec. 13—An Indian's Test .....
Dec. 16—A Girl of the Plains (Dr.) .....

ITALA.

(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Dec. 1—A Painful Debt (Dr.).....
Dec. 3—The Big Drum.....
Dec. 3—The Dog Keeper .....
Dec. 8—A Soldier of the Cross .....
Dec. 10—Foolshead Knows How to Take Precautions (Com.) .....
Dec. 15—The False Accusation .....
Dec. 17—The Mother's Shadow (Dr.) .....
Dec. 17—Thieves as Quick Change Artists .....

AMBROSIO.

(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Nov. 9—A Floating Message.....
Nov. 16—Mermaid .....
Nov. 16—Tweedledum's Corporation Duty (Com.)
Nov. 23—Gounod Ave Maria (Dr.).....
Nov. 30—The Jeuda's Money (Dr.).....
Dec. 7—The Tell Tale Portrait.....
Dec. 7—Tweedledum Learns a Tragical Part..
Dec. 14—Dido Forsaken by Aenea .....

NESTOR.

Nov. 2—The Girl From The West (Dr.).....
Nov. 9—The Woodsman (Dr.).....960
Nov. 16—The Ranchman's Bride (Dr.) .....
Nov. 23—A Deal in Indians.....1000
Nov. 30—Valley Folks (Dr.).....
Dec. 7—The Conquering Hero (Dr.) .....
Dec. 14—The Pilgrim (Dr.) .....

POWERS PICTURE PLAYS.

Dec. 10—The Ride to Death (Dr.) .....
Dec. 13—A Plucky Western Kid (Dr.) .....
Dec. 13—The Tramp Bicyclist (Com.).....
Dec. 17—His Gypsy Sweetheart (Dr.) .....
Dec. 20—Jack Logan's Dog (Com.) .....
Dec. 20—The Bachelor's Finish (Com.) .....
Dec. 24—A Father's Love (Dr.)) .....

RELIANCE

Nov. 12—Under a Changing Sky (Dr.) .....
Nov. 19—Moulders of Souls (Dr.).....
Nov. 26—So Runs the Wat (Dr.).....
Dec. 3—When Woman Wills (Dr.).....
Dec. 10—A Dispensation (Dr.) .....
Dec. 15—The Thin Dark Line (Dr.) .....

REVIER.

Dec. 21—Love's Sorrow (Dr.).....950
Dec. 28—Thoughtfulness Remembered by the Ute (Dr.) 950

SOLAX COMPANY.

Nov. 11—A Widow and Her Child (Dr.).....
Nov. 18—Her Father's Sin (Dr.).....900
Nov. 25—One Touch of Nature (Dr.).....
Dec. 2—What Is to Be, Will Be (Dr.).....
Dec. 9—Lady Betty's Strategy (Dr.) .....
Dec. 16—Two Suits .....

THANHOUSER.

Nov. 25—The Wild Flower and the Rose (Dr.).1000
Nov. 29—Value Beyond Price (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 2—John Halifax, Gentleman (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 6—Rip Van Winkle (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 9—The Girls He Left Behind Him .....
Dec. 9—The Iron-Clad Lover .....
Dec. 13—Love and Law (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 16—The Millionaire Milkman (Dr.) 1000

YANKEE.

Nov. 21—Lone Wolf's Trust (Dr.) .....
Nov. 28—The Heart of an Actress (Dr.).....
Dec. 2—Queen of the Nihilists (Dr.).....
Dec. 5—In the Czar's Name (Dr.).....
Dec. 9—Western Justice (Dr.) .....
Dec. 12—A Fight for Millions (Dr.).....
Dec. 16—The Old Miner's Doll (Dr.) .....
Dec. 19—A Ward of Uncle Sam (Dr.) .....

NEW SLIDES

For the Following Songs—JUST OUT

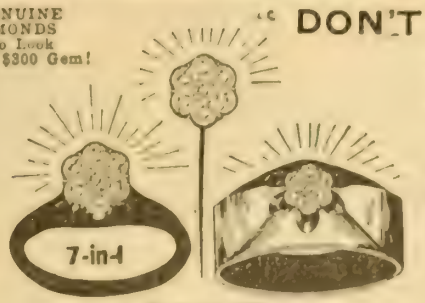
In My Dreams Of You.
They've Won Every Nation's Battles But Their Own.
Get a Girl to Love You.
My Rose From The Garden of Love.
You Are the Light of My Life.
Where the Desert Meets the Nile.
Lou
Take Me Back To Dear Old Dixie
You Are The Light Of My Life
Put Your Arms Around Me.
Winter.
Gee-Whiz, Sweety, I'm Stuck On You.
Cowboy
That's When Life's One Grand Sweet Song.
Only One Daisy Left
Oh, That Boog-a-boo Man
Any Place Is Heaven When You are with the Girl You Love
When June rolls around with its roses, I'll roll around with a ring.
The longer we're together, the harder it is to part.

DeWITT C. WHEELER
120 W. 31st St., N. Y. City

7 GENUINE DIAMONDS Set to Look Like $300 Gem!

DON'T SEND A CENT

Greatest Genuine Diamond Jewelry Innovation and Sensation In Years. "A $300 flash for $30" cash.



Patented 1909.

$30 AFTER you have examined the goods in your express office!

DESCRIPTION—Each Ladies' ring, men's ring, men's stud or scarf pin and ladies' cuff screw is set in platinum with SEVEN PERFECT BLUE WHITE GENUINE DIAMONDS, imported direct from Amsterdam by us. The setting of platinum is firmly held in the gold and the whole is so cunningly devised so that the seven diamonds seem to blend GIVING ALL THE FIRE, BEAUTY AND BRILLIANCE OF A $300 DIAMOND. Not the old, flat counter effect, but the raised setting, TIFFANY STYLE. If you want the most wonderful beautiful bit of jewelry on the market to-day, at absurdly low cost, send us a postal card, (not by money), ordering pin, stud or ring (giving size of finger with piece of string), and we will ship at once. Open the package in your express office. If not all we claim for it, keep your money, refuse the goods, and we will pay the express charges both ways. Choice of any article, set with 7 genuine diamonds set to look like one, $30; other sizes at $40, $50, $60.

DIAMOND IMPORTERS STRELITZ BROS. EST. 1874

Columbus Memorial Bldg., 103 State Street, CHICAGO

RUINED

A large number of New Machines are ruined by using cheap Oils Are you saving 10 cents on your oil and wearing out $15.00 worth of Machinery? Take no chances and oil your Machines with

ONE DROP OIL

The only scientifically compounded oil for moving picture machines on the market.

Ask your Exchange for One Drop Oil and if they do not carry it, send 35 cents for full size bottle of One Drop Oil.

ONE DROP OIL CO.
4059 N. 47th Avenue
CHICAGO, ILL.

Exhibitors

We can supply with exclusive service of Imp, Bison, Powers, Thanhauser, Challenge, Nestor, Atlas, Yankee, American Champion makes cheaper than any other exchange. Signs and Posters—YES.

J. Frank Hatch Film Co.
Hatch Building
109 Fourth Ave., Pittsburg, Pa.

E. O. Prince T. P. Bible

Imperial Film Exchange

144 N 12th St. Philadelphia, Pa.

Mr. Exhibitor: We can give you a Commercial Film Service for the lowest prices. Write, Wire or 'Phone.

Announcement Slides
Advertising Slides
Songs Illustrated

THREE STAR SLIDE CO.
Rooms 523-4
225 Dearborn Street - Chicago, Ills.

Want Chairs Quick?

Stafford chairs excell all others. We use no three-ply veneers. Why? Not good enough! Five ply is best, and that is why we use them.

Chairs like cut IN STOCK and GUARANTEED

Ask for Catalog No. 305

E. H. STAFFORD MFG. CO.
CHICAGO. ILLINOIS

Opera Chairs

The Strongest Made Most Attractive Designs Permanently Noiseless

More of our chairs used than all others combined. There are reasons. Large stocks constantly on hand, and we can make prompt shipments of rush orders.

Write for Catalog V

American Seating Company

215 Wabash Avenue CHICAGO | 19 West 18th Street NEW YORK
BOSTON PHILADELPHIA PITTSBURGH

HALLBERG
THE ECONOMIZER

SAVES two-thirds on electric bill and makes BIG CUT on the first cost of your complete equipment.

I carry stock of all makes M. P. Machines, Opera Chairs and Supplies.

Free Catalogue No. W-50

J. H. Hallberg, 36 East 23d St. New York City

All records broken for a rock-steady, flickerless picture. OPERATOR'S NECESSITY.

Improved Cam, Star, Arbor and Sprocket, $12.00

80 per cent. saved on repair bills.

WRITE TODAY

TESTIMONIALS:
"Grand Success" says one.
"Fine Job" says another.
"Crackerjack" says another.
"Worth $50" says another.
"Brilliant Work" says another.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED

Express your machine to me, no extra charge for putting it in. You pay express both ways.

E. W. LAVEZZI, 3042 N. Ashland Ave., CHICAGO, ILL.

Champion Films

Released Wednesday, Dec. 21, 1910

His Mother

Drama—Approx. Length 950 Feet

A realistic picture showing a mother's devotion in spite of the terrible curse of drink. Demon Drink wins the husband but the mother's love saves the son.

EXHIBITORS:—This is a picture that will make you a steadfast friend of "CHAMPS." STOP! LOOK! LISTEN! If you have not yet tried "CHAMPS" get this one and you CERTAINLY WILL COME AGAIN.

Scene from "HIS MOTHER"

Don't Forget Champs on Wednesday

SPECIAL:—Through new arrangements at our factory, we are now able to absolutely guarantee every CHAMP to be as steady as a wall painting and our new stock will stand wear like cowhide. INVESTIGATE!

SEE RELEASE DATES FOR CHAMP FEATURES

CHAMPION FILM CO.

Mark M. Dintenfess
General Manager

12 East 15th Street
NEW YORK, U. S. A.

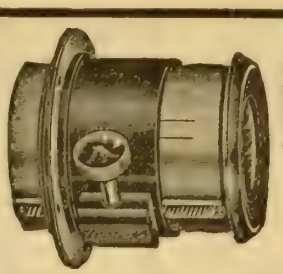
Laboratories at Coytesville on the Hudson

CHAMP

THE CHAMP STAMP

Sold only through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company
111 East 14th Street, New York City

Live Men Are On Our Mailing List—Are You?



We make the best lenses in the world for projecting motion pictures and lantern slides. Can you spend a little money more wisely and profitable than by ordering a set of lenses which will

IT'S ALL IN THE LENS

IMPROVE YOUR PICTURES?

NEW PRICES

M. P. Projection Lenses any size with our improved jacket with spiral adjustment	$15.00
No. 1 Stereopticon Lenses	15.00
No. 2 Stereopticon Lenses	20.00

All dealers sell them on approval.

WRITE FOR OUR NEW CIRCULAR

When ordering state the size of your screen and the length of the picture wanted. Give the distance from the lens to the screen. Remit the price of the lens or furnish references.

GUNDLACH-MANHATTAN OPTICAL COMPANY
808 Clinton Ave., So. Rochester, N. Y.

A Cement that will not burn and that will patch both the Celluloid and the N. I. films

This new Cement is not an experiment but a product in great demand and doing the work.

The chemist inventor although assured of a good income, wishes to dispose of his invention as the making of the said Cement interferes with his regular paying business. Profits are large and the proposition can be fully investigated. Repeated daily orders from all over the country prove the efficiency of this new Cement.

Formula, stock on hand, and good will for sale for $1200

Address Cement, care of M. P. World
160 Washington Street - - Chicago, Ill.

LUCIEN PRÉVOST

MECHANICAL ENGINEER

Formerly Chief Designer of Pathé Frères

OFFICE ADDRESS, 54 Rue Philippe de Gerard, Paris
WORKS : : 25 Bd de la Chapelle, Paris

Cameras
Perforating and Printing Machines (NEW PATTERNS)
Cleaning, Measuring and Joining Machines

SONG SLIDES

L I D E

NON-BREAKABLE—NON-INFLAMABLE

Colored Song and Announcement Slides

Patent Applied For

Just the kind of a slide you have all been waiting for. Guaranteed against breaking from heat or the careless operator. Send for list. Made and sold only by the original inventors. None others genuine.

NORTH AMERICAN SLIDE CO., 143 North 8th Street PHILADELPHIA, PA.

L I D E

SONG SLIDES

Classified Advertisements

[Classified advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted.]

AIRDOME OPPORTUNITY.

Plot of ground about 50x200, in center of nearby town of 15,000, eminently suited and located for airdome or amusement resort.

Owner will rent plot for $1,500 per year to responsible party or will erect airdome or theater and lease same or will enter into an agreement to build and run on profit sharing basis.

Theatrical men of experience and good character will be given full particulars by addressing

AIRDOME
Care of Moving Picture World.

THEATER FOR SALE.

FOR SALE OR RENT—Fine Picture House in a Conn. town of 1,400. All ready for business, price low, good reason. PAUL RUSSO, New Haven, Conn.

FOR SALE—Well equipped Moving Picture Theater in good "wet" mining town of 2,500. No competition. 180 opera seats, Power's No. 5 machine, incline floor, plaster screen. Good show town. A bargain at $700.00 for quick cash sale. Address JOS. N. RICHARD, Box 112, Assumption, Ill.

FOR SALE 10c. Picture Theater, town 3,500; $1,100 cash; only amusement. 10 miles of Chicago. Address O. DUDLEY, Gen. Del., Chicago.

FOR SALE—Modern, thoroughly equipped theater, in city of 25,000; seats 250. Everything new. Full information upon request, with reasons for selling. Address, CROUSE & KUNZ, Mansfield, Ohio.

FOR SALE—One of the largest Moving Picture and Vaudeville Theaters in Washington, D. C. P. O. Box 547, Washington, D. C.

FOR SALE or Rent—One first-class moving picture house, doing a good business. Good reasons for selling. J. P. DALEY, Daley's Corner, New Haven, Conn.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—Lantern Slide Camera (Anthony) complete with instructions. Practically new, cost $25.00, will sacrifice for $10.00. W. M. ZOLLINGER, 2255 Church street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

FOR SALE—169 Opera Seats. Ticket Booth. Electric Sign. Stained Glass Sign. 8 Doors, etc. THOS. P. RENNY, 136 Adams street, Rochester, N. Y.

FOR SALE—Educational and descriptive reels, cheap. Full particulars. Write. BIJOU THEATER, Edmonton, Alberta, Can.

SITUATIONS WANTED.

AT LIBERTY—Moving Picture Operator. Four years' experience with some of the leading picture houses of New England. American, twenty-seven, sober, will go anywhere. E. A. PRATT, 836 N. Main street, Leominster, Mass.

MANAGER, Lecturer, Singer; has no equal; crowded houses everywhere. A. D. LAFAYETTE, Marble Hall Hotel, Holyoke, Mass.

MISCELLANEOUS.

WANTED 100 to 300 Second hand Opera Chairs. HOOVER & BOLLINGER, Greencastle, Pa.

THEATER PARTNER WANTED.—Must have $3,000, experience unnecessary, capacity 1,000, crowded neighborhood, long lease, cheap rent, act quick. See my agent, ROYAL REALTY AND INVESTMENT CO., 84 Adams street, Chicago.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED—First-class Piano Player, Singer and Trap Drummer. Advise salary expected. RED MOON THEATER, Wilmington, Del.

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES
STEREOPTICONS, SLIDES, ACCESSORIES.

Chas. M. Stebbins
1028 Main Street,
KANSAS CITY, MO.
Large Line of Edison Goods
Established 1899.

DECEMBER FILM OFFERINGS

We offer for sale in our December list of films some very good bargains. All films are in good running condition at moderate prices, and if you want to have the films renovated, taking out all scratches, etc., the price will be $1.50 per reel extra.

We also have several copies of the Reproduction of the Johnson-Jefferies Fight for sale at $125.00 per copy.

CHICAGO FILM EXCHANGE
Chicago, Ill. Omaha, Neb Denver, Col.
Salt Lake City, Utah

UNIFORMS AND CAPS FOR Moving Picture Theatres

Catalogues, Samples and Prices for the Asking

James H. Hirsch & Co.
208 East Jackson Boulevard
CHICAGO.

More Money Every Month

You are in the theatre business to make all you can out of it—you are interested in anything that means larger profits. Our plan is just like "getting money from home." Brings you a check every month, makes your theatre more popular and better patronized, gives you a better standing with the other business men in your town.

NO COST TO YOU

That's the beauty of it. You don't buy anything—don't increase your cost in any way—don't have to make a single change in your theatre, film supply, operator or anything else.

Hundreds of theatre owners are getting our checks every month—making more money than they could without our plan.

You need us—we need you.

Paste this coupon on a postal card mail it to us today

T. R. WOODBURN & CO.
611 First National Bank Building
Chicago, Ill.

Name .....
Name of Theatre .....
Town ..... State .....

MOVING PICTURE SUPPLIES

Get accustomed to write to American M. P. Supply Co. for their prices before you order any supplies elsewhere. It will pay. For example:

Tickets—roll of 2,000	$ .16
Bio Carbons 6 x 5-8 per 100	2.15
Electra Carbons 6 x 5-8 per 100	2.10
Announcement Slides, each	.25
Extra Heavy Carbon Holders, each	.75
Pure White Condensors, each	.75

SEND FOR CATALOGUE

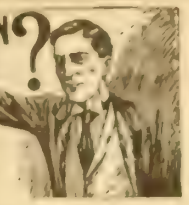
American Motion Picture Supply Co.
61 West 14th Street, New York City

WINNEBAGO WALTZES

A beautiful piece of music for piano, especially appropriate for motion pictures. By mail, 12 cents per copy. With each order we send professional copies of all our illustrated song hits.

NUGENT BROTHER'S MUSIC CO.
KAUKAUNA, WIS.

WHY NOT LEARN MOVING PICTURE OPERATING?



TAYLOR'S METHOD
(Licensed School)
51 W. 28TH ST. NEW YORK.
TEL. No. 1405 Mad. Sq.

Correspondence Course. Special rates to the trade, send for free illustrated catalogue.

School class meets every morning and afternoon, with F. H. Richardson of Chicago, as chief instructor. Evening classes meet every Monday, Wednesday and Friday. We positively guarantee you a $15 position.

We have a Powers' Cameragraph No. 5 in A-1 condition for $85.00 and an Edison Exhibition Model Machine for $60.00

We carry a large line of electrical supplies and furnish everything for the theatre.

F. C. TAYLOR
49 West 28th Street New York City
Phone 1405 Madison Square

United States Film Brokers and Importers

41 Union Square West
Broadway and 17th St. NEW YORK CITY

The largest dealers in new and second hand Association and Independent Films in the United States.

Second-Hand Film $5.00 per reel upwards.

New Film 4c. per foot upwards.

Cameraphone Film, new, with two sets records.

Edison and Power's Machine, like new.

All goods shipped subject to examination and partial acceptance on receipt of deposit covering express charges.

Complete lists sent free upon request.

FILMS FOR RENT

New Films High Class Service

The Pioneer House, With 8 Years Experience and $250,000.00 Back Of It

Write To-day for Terms

EUGENE CLINE
57 and 59 Dearborn St., Chicago

OPERATORS' HANDBOOK, $1.50
MOVING PICTURE WORLD

FOLDING CHAIRS

For Moving Picture Shows Grand Stands, Assembly Halls, etc. In sections if wanted.

Write for Catalog No. 2.

The Kauffman Manufacturing Co.
ASHLAND, OHIO

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES

ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. No. 31

The A. H. Andrews Co.

174-176 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill. Branches in all leading cities

CHEAP

Steel Frame Theatre Chairs

ABSOLUTELY Non-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small theatres and Moving Picture shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

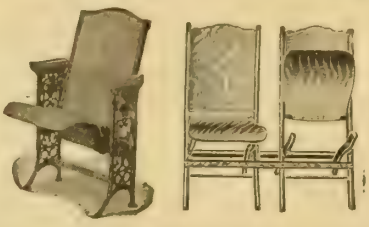
Second Hand Chairs

Also seating for Out-of-Door Use.

Address Dept. W.

STEEL FURNITURE CO., Grand Rapids, Mich.
New York Office: 150 Fifth Avenue
Boston Office: 224 Congress St., Boston, Mass.

Opera and Assembly Chairs



Most popular priced chairs on the market for pictures show use.

Prompt Shipments. Write for Catalogue

PEABODY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO.
NORTH MANCHESTER - - INDIANA
New York Agents—ROBERT J. EHLERS CO.
Lexington Ave and 43rd St. - New York, N. Y.

The Automatic Theatre Chair

It is a friend to the public
It advertises your theatre and makes your business grow.
It folds automatically and can be revolving, stationary or self righting.
It is the only sanitary chair.
It is a space-saver, life-saver and money-saver.
It is the world's greatest theatre chair.
If you have not seen our latest models, investigate.
Write today for Circular A.

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO.
Canal Dover, Ohio, U. S. A.

FILMS FOR SALE. 50 Reels of Film
$8 to $16 per Reel
Second-hand one pin Edison machine, $100 00
MAYER SILVERMAN, 105 Fourth Ave, PITTSBURG, PA.

To Operators Who Want More Money

The best way to get more money is to give better results.

Thousands of operators are making themselves "solid" with "the boss" by using BIO Carbons.

The BIO Carbon is an expert's carbon—it is meant to give better results, when used right.

It takes more brains to fly an aeroplane than to trundle a push cart. You never find BIO Carbons and a "crank turner" in the same booth—BIO Carbons are for operators.

Pin your check for $1.50 to this Ad and mail to nearest office for sample 50-(5/8x6 Cored) Prepaid.

CHARLES L. KIEWERT CO.

NEW YORK PITTSBURG CHICAGO MILWAUKEE SAN FRANCISCO

KLEINE OPTICAL CO., (Canadian Agents)

MONTREAL ST. JOHN, N. B. TORONTO WINNIPEG VANCOUVER

EVERY OPERATOR

wants the Bio Arc Screen as soon as he sees it. It enables him to get a better light, and get it easier than ever before. Send along a dollar and see for yourself. Your money back if you want it. That's fair, isn't it?

CHARLES L. KIEWERT CO.

39 Cortlandt Street, New York — 309 Carson Street, Pittsburg — 58 Plymouth Court, Chicago
114 Huron Street, Milwaukee — 195 Fremont Street, San Francisco

TALK IS CHEAP BUT QUALITY IS REQUIRED

ANY ONE MAY MAKE CLAIMS, BUT THE

MOTIOGRAPH

HAS ABSOLUTELY PROVEN

its durability and quality of pictures as hundreds of users during the past three years testify.

Why submit to experimenting, at your expense, with machines the durability of which is yet unknown, and which do not project pictures anywhere near the Motiograph quality.

There are Reasons for this Superiority

Many special, patented to us, features, the best of material and workmanship, and correct design have aided in making the MOTIOGRAPH the leader.

Manufactured and Jobbed by ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. CO., 504-572 WEST RANDOLPH ST. — CHICAGO, U. S. A.

J. H. HALLBERG, Agt. 36 E. 23d Street, New York City
EDWARD H. KEMP, Agt. 833 Market Street, San Francisco, Cal.
J. F. BROCKLISS, Agt. London, Paris and Berlin

EXHIBITORS BEWARE!

Don't run rainstorm and scratched films in your theatre when you can get first-class films in good condition.

We have equipped a special plant where all our films are renovated as soon as scratched, and our customers are guaranteed to get their films as good as new.

We have opening for one first run customer, also for very late service.

If you are interested in this write or wire at once.

We have the following feature films:

Original Wolgast-Nelson and Nelson-Gans Fights
Custer's Last Stand
U. S. Military Tournament
Knight Templar Conclave
Reproduction of the Johnson-Jeffries Fight

CHICAGO FILM EXCHANGE
Chicago, Ill. Omaha, Neb. Denver, Col. Salt Lake City, Utah

OPERATORS' HANDBOOK, $1.50

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE ENTERPRISE MODEL B

Portable Calcium Gas Outfit

Is the only Substitute for Electricity for projecting Motion Picture or Stereopticon views and is the

Only Satisfactory Portable Outfit

because it operates by WATER PRESSURE, IS CONSTANT, REGULAR AND RELIABLE and has no complicated spring valves to corrode, choke up and otherwise get out of order. Is patented.

"OXONE" in SQUARE CAKES is most Satisfactory for the production of Oxygen Gas. Send for particulars.

For Sale by Dealers

Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co. MANUFACTURERS AND SALES AGENTS 564 and 572 W. Randolph St. CHICAGO

New Power's No. 6 Heads $82.50

(Guaranteed for One Year)

Write us about this offer and for anything else you may need in the Motion Picture Line.

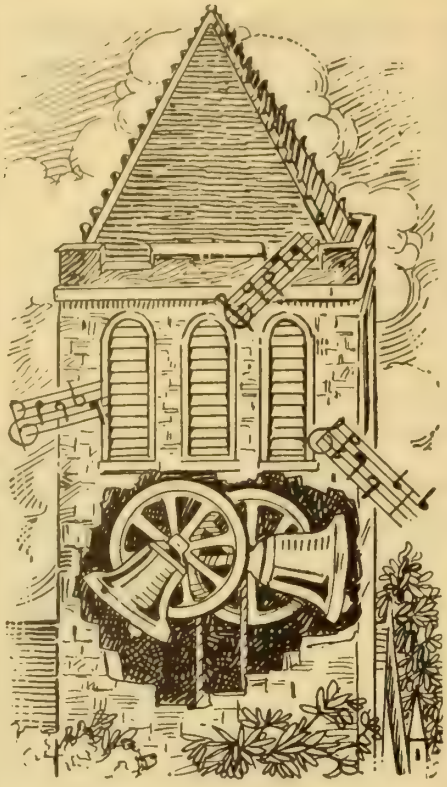
GEO. M. HOKE SUPPLY CO.
81 Clark St., CHICAGO, ILL.

5C SHOW SOUVENIRS

IMPORTED CHINAWARE—Per 100	$3.00
ALL LEATHER PURSE—Per 100	3.00
TRICK MATCH BOX—Per Gross	.75
1911 AERIAL PLANS. Latest Novelty—Per Gr.	1.25
FANCY WOOD WHISTLES—Per Gross	.75
JAPANESE TURTLE-IN-GLASS BOX—Per Gro.	.90
FANCY COLORED RETURN BALLS—Per Gro.	1.25
HORSESHOE MIRROR. Asstd. Colors—Per Gro.	1.00
SKELETON ACROBAT NOVELTY—Per Gro.	1.50
FRENCH LIP AIR WHISTLES—Per Gro.	1.25
JAPANESE 4-INCH TRAYS—Per 100	1.50
IMPORTED STONE STEINS—Per Gro.	2.00
DECEPTION WINE GLASS—Per Gro.	1.25

Terms: Half deposit, balance C. O. D.

NEWMAN MFG. CO.,
641 and 647 Woodland Ave., Cleveland, Ohio.



OUR
Cathedral Chimes

are the finest Imitation of Church Bells in the World and are used in all the leading theatres.

The price of the 4-tube outfit Complete as shown in cut is

$22.50

We will send anywhere on 10 days trial upon receipt of $2 to guarantee express charges.

NOTE:—With this set you can furnish sound effects for any picture in which a bell is used from a door bell to church chimes.

J. C. DEAGAN
3800 N. Clark Street
CHICAGO, ILL.

If you are in the Market for

SECOND HAND FILMS

Write to the largest and most reliable Dealers and Importers of these goods in the U. S.

International Film Traders
German Savings Bank Building
147 Fourth Avenue NEW YORK CITY

JUST A MOMENT PLEASE

Mr. Exhibitor, have you sent us your order for one of our

Film Announcement Titles

Any of the following Announcements sent by mail upon receipt of price.

That's All, Good-Night—15 ft.
Hand Colored Trick Film.....$2.00
(Same Black and White) 1.50

Entire Change of Program To-morrow—10 ft.
Hand Colored 1.50
(Same Black and White)..... 1.00

We thank you for your patronage and ask you to call again—20 ft.
Hand Colored 3.00
(Same Black and White)..... 2.00

Next Show in Five Minutes—10ft.
Hand Colored 1.50
(Same Black and White) 1.00

All that have not seen the entire Performance may remain for the next—20ft.
Hand Colored 3.00
(Same Black and White) 2.00

Any Announcement you wish made to Order at lowest Prices.

Send us an Order. Your money back if you say so.

French American Producing And Manufacturing Co.

918 Madison Street CHICAGO

For Sale—1,000 ft. reels film, $5 to $25 reel; Selig machine $35; Model B. gas outfit, $25; new Power's, Edison machines, $100; odd slides, 5c.. sets, $1.

For Rent—6,000 ft. film, $6; 12,000 ft. film, $12; late film, all one shipment. Will buy, film, machines, Passion Play.

H. DAVIS . . . Watertown, Wis.

SLIDES

Here's your Christmas present, Mr. Exhibitor. Send us 15c. and we will mail you a beautiful Merry Christmas and Happy New Year slide. Our revised catalog of slides just out. Send for it also.

NIAGARA SLIDE CO., Lockport, New York

Old Flimmyboy, surrounded by Independent Indians, has about as much chance as a snowball in Hades.

Shot full of holes, punctured and perforated from peanut head to pants, he is making one final rally and bluff by shooting threatening letters to exhibitors and publishing direful interviews in cities where he has "bought" exchanges. We are making arrangements with the artist now for the General's obsequies and burial. While the band is mournfully playing "Has Anybody Here Seen Kennedy" over the grave, you will be making arrangements to hook up with Old Doctor Laemmle who will cure you of all such diseases as "Repeaters", "Dropsy of the Film", "Rainstorms" and "Pip of the Cashbox". Send for Dr. Laemmle's loose-leaf supplementary film list to-day.

CARL LAEMMLE, President

THE LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE

Headquarters: 196-198 Lake Street, Chicago

OMAHA, NEB. MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

The biggest and best film renter in the world

A Large Assortment of Licensed and Independent Film for sale at

1c.-5c. per foot, and

Many Beautiful Scenic and Feature Subjects New in the United States

for sale with exclusive territory rights. Correspondence solicited with responsible parties.

AMERICAN-LONDON CINEMATOGRAPH CO.

604 Matthews Building, Milwaukee, Wis.

De Witt C. Wheeler Release- Nov. 14, 1910.

"That's When Life Is One Sweet Song"

When you use our celebrated

SONG SLIDE SERVICE

25c. A SET PER WEEK

Absolutely no charge made for time lost in transportation. Our method of shipping your week's supply in one consignment should appeal to you for various reasons. Write and we'll tell you.

The Largest Slide Exchange in the World

Chicago Song Slide Exchange

Sixth Floor, Portland Block

107 Dearborn Street Dept. 1 Chicago, Ill.

Advertising Copy Must be in Hand on Wednesday Afternoon

THE MIRROR SCREEN

——The Key to Success for All Moving Picture Theatres——

A REVELATION TO MODERN PHOTOGRAPHY
A "Mirror Screen" Theatre is Always the Home of Cosmopolitan Pictures

Read the Following Unsolicited Statement from One of the Leading Picture Theatres in the State of Iowa.

MR. H. F. BRYAN, General Agent,
Motion Picture Screen Co.,
160 Washinton Street,
Chicago, Ill.

My Dear Sir:

We wish to inform you that we have installed the Mirror Screen in our Lyric Theatre, and have been using it for the past two weeks with the greatest of success. We cannot say too much for the Mirror Screen; we would not run our theatre without it, nor would we part with it for three times the amount we have paid for it. It is giving our home a prestige that will increase our business 25 per cent. Our patrons claim that our pictures are the finest that they have ever seen, and the Mirror Screen is building a wall against competition that cannot be broken down with opposition pictures.

Wishing you the success that you richly deserve, we remain. Very respectfully yours,

BRYAN & ADAMS, Props. and Mgrs.,
LYRIC THEATRE.

Mr. Manager: If you improve your picture, does'nt it stand to reason that you will increase your business? The MIRROR SCREEN will improve your picture 100 per cent. It is endorsed by the leading Managers and Picture Critics throughout the country. It has revolutionized the Moving Picture Industry.

TAKE THIS TIP:—GET WISE BEFORE YOUR COMPETITOR DOES

Motion Picture Screen Company

SHELBYVILLE INDIANA

HARRY F. BRYAN, General Agent
Room 307—160 Washington Street
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

FRANK MANNING, Eastern Agent
355 Bedford Avenue
BROOKLYN, N. Y.

F. B. BLOOMFIELD, Eastern Agent
Majestic Theatre Building
MUNCIE, IND.

The Cincinnati-Buckeye Film Company

$100.000.00 incorporation, operating the CINCINNATI FILM EXCHANGE, 315 W. 4th Street, Cincinnati, Ohio, and the BUCKEYE FILM PROJECTING COMPANY, 309 Arcade Building, Dayton, Ohio. Biggest Independent Film Renting Concern in the UNITED STATES today. BUYING almost the entire Independent Output. Reference: SALES COMPANY, 111 E. 14th Street, New York. If you are looking for a real Film Service, drop us a line.

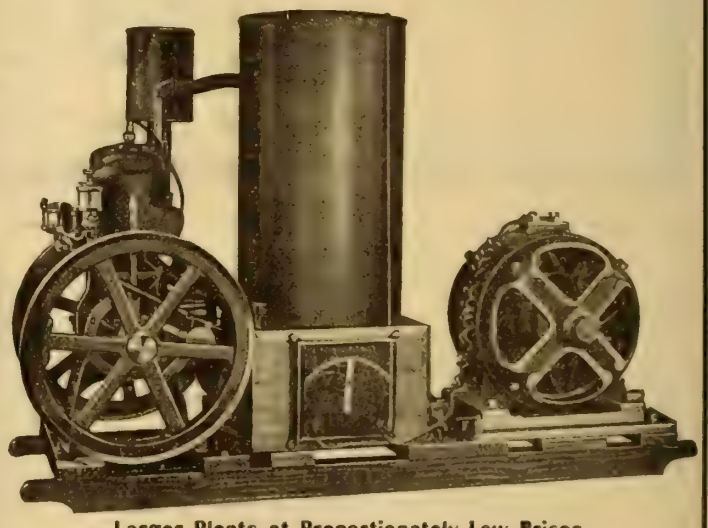
The Cincinnati-Buckeye Film Co.

315-317 W. Fourth St. CINCINNATI, OHIO

309-321 Arcade Building DAYTON, OHIO

Electric Light Plant Complete

$210.35



Larger Plants at Proportionately Low Prices

Including the celebrated DETROIT KEROSENE ENGINE and DYNAMO OF SUFFICIENT CAPACITY TO FURNISH CURRENT FOR YOUR ARC AND 10-16 c. p. TUNGSTEN LAMPS for illumination.

Total cost of operation from 5 to 25 cents per day. Gives you better light than you can buy. Gives you the same light in the afternoon as at night. Can be operated by a ten year old child.

Can Make Immediate Shipment

DETROIT ENGINE WORKS 406 Bellevue Avenue, Detroit, Mich., U.S.A.

Serves You Right if You Do Get It!

Serves You Right if You Don't Get It!

THERE HAVE BEEN MOUNTAINS OF SATISFACTION IN THE ROCKY MOUNTAIN DISTRICT SINCE WE ENTERED THAT FIELD. IN FACT, THE LETTERS ARE POURING IN ON US DAILY SAYING ALL KINDS OF NICE THINGS. THE FOLLOWING ENDORSEMENTS ARE HONEST CONFESSIONS UNSOLICITED FROM SOME OF OUR CUSTOMERS THAT ARE WEARING THE SMILE THAT WON'T RUB OFF:

TESTIMONIALS

Nov. 1, 1910.—"Your service has been a revelation to me. Me for Independent pictures all the time."—G. S. Saxton, Denver Theater, Denver, Colo.

Nov. 17, 1910.—"Just a few words to give credit where it is due. Your service is certainly a grand tonic for a sick show. My receipts have increased 35 per cent. since I left Gen. Filmco and joined your ranks about six weeks ago. My last program from the Steamed General was 'Alice in Wonderland,' and 'The —H. D. Cassidy, Family Theater, 218 Broadway, Denver, Colo.

Nov. 20, 1910.—"I regret I did not take your service sooner. Our patrons like Independent pictures very much."—Wm. A. Weston, Mgr. Pantages Theater, Denver, Colo.

Nov. 23, 1910.—"Your service is good enough for me."—Floyd Huston, Gem Theater, Denver, Colo.

Nov. 24, 1910.—"Your service is all that could be desired."—Rush Bronson, Majestic Theater, Denver, Colo.

Oct. 3, 1910.—"Thank you for the good service you are sending us. All our patrons say your pictures are better than the Patents Company pictures."—E. D. Smith, Sterling Theater, Sterling, Colo.

Oct. 24, 1910.—"Thanks for the great films you sent me for Saturday and Sunday. You are certainly delivering the goods, and your service is all a person could ask for."—A. R. Wilson, Isis Theater, Trinidad, Colo.

Oct. 27, 1910.—"If you keep up the class of service you are now sending us, you will not hear any complaint from me."—Fred Cameron, Lyric Theater, Laramie, Wyo.

Oct. 29, 1910.—"We played to twenty-one hundred people Saturday, and people liked your pictures very much."—F. W. Hall, Oak Theater, Pueblo, Colo.

Oct. 31, 1910.—"Excuse us for not returning posters. We had such a crowd Saturday night that they were rubbed off and destroyed. Your service is the best we have ever had."—Blodgett Bros., Lead, S. D.

Nov. 4, 1910.—"Mr. Yaegger, of Del Norte, told me you were giving him good service. I wish you would send me four reels same price he pays for his service."—J. Wirz, Monte Vista, Colo.

Nov. 7, 1910.—"Everything fine; best pictures I have ever shown in my house."—W. R. Dye, Rocky Ford, Colo.

Nov. 8, 1910.—"Will say this much, that I think your films beat the trust films all to pieces and my patrons like them better."—W. C. Farnsworth, Mgr. Lyric Theater, Cheyenne, Wyo.

Nov. 11, 1910.—"I simply cannot afford to lose your service."—H. L. Lent, Pueblo, Colo.

Nov. 13, 1910.—"Will say the present service you are sending me is very satisfactory."—J. V. Yaegger, Del Norte, Colo.

Nov. 13, 1910.—"I am Independent to stay as long as your service is what it is."—O. T. Curtis, Crystal Theater, Pueblo, Colo.

Nov. 14, 1910.—"Our business is phenomenal since returning to your service. I sure got a citron handed to me when I left your people for the Chicago Film bunch. They were supposed to be buying twelve reels, but I found out from good source they were not getting any. Simply a bone yard of Chicago, after Salt Lake and some other exchanges got through with them."—Huston & Abbot, Gem Theater, Albuquerque, N. M.

Nov. 20, 1910.—"I cannot praise you too highly for the film service you send me. Everyone who saw our show said, 'What wonderful pictures.' They are the best we have ever seen."—C. W. Wonderly, La Junta, Colo.

Nov. 21, 1910.—"Service is the best I have had yet. Thanks for the good pictures you are sending me."—W. L. Johnson, Lyric Theater, Raton, N. M.

Nov. 21, 1910.—"We even have people stop us on the street to tell us how they like our pictures. We have opposition skinned a mile."—V. A. Stoner, Majestic Theater, Cripple Creek, Colo.

Nov. 22, 1910.—"Have made good against opposition with your service. Our competitors have much more elaborate house than we have."—H. T. Cochran, Princess Grand Theater, Buena Vista, Colo.

Nov. 22, 1910.—"We like Independent pictures very much, and our patrons are pleased with them. Keep up this service and you have me for a steady customer."—Thomas Kerby, Star Theater, Sheridan, Wyo.

Nov. 25, 1910.—"Your service is O. K. in every particular."—Frank Tammen, Majestic Theater, Colorado Springs, Colo.

Nov. 25, 1910.—"Your service is fine and dandy. We are doing more than our share of the business in Deadwood."—Wm. Oates, Jr., Deadwood, S. D.

WHEN AN EXHIBITOR WRITES AN EXCHANGE

That he is tickled to death with the service, he must be. Can you write your exchange in the same tone? It's a ten-to-one shot you can't. If you come with us you will get the habit.

SWANSON'S SERVICE IS THE ANSWER

IF YOU ARE IN BUSINESS TO GET THE MONEY AND GET GOOD SERVICE, GET IN TOUCH WITH US.

WM. H. SWANSON & COMPANY

The Largest Buyers and Renters of Independent Film in America

304-5-6 RAILROAD BUILDING :: DENVER, COLO.

THE HOUSE THAT WENT TO THE FRONT TO STAY.

P. S.—When you read this ad sit down and drop us a line. The results will add to your bank roll.

3 Offices: NEW ORLEANS, LA. BIRMINGHAM, ALA. SAN ANTONIO, TEX.

Read THIS LETTER AND WRITE US To-DAY for FILM SERVICE

24 Reels WEEKLY

OFFICERS
CARL LAEMMLE, PRESIDENT
P. A. POWERS, VICE-PRESIDENT
HERBERT MILES, SECRETARY
CHAS. O. BAUMANN, GEN. MGR. & TREAS.

DIRECTORS
CARL LAEMMLE
P. A. POWERS
HERBERT MILES
CHARLES O. BAUMANN
WM. STEINER
WM. H. SWANSON
J. J. MURDOCK

MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING AND SALES COMPANY

111 EAST FOURTEENTH STREET

NEW YORK NOV. 16, 1910

DIXIE FILM COMPANY,
720 MAISON BLANCHE BLDG.,
NEW ORLEANS, LA.

DEAR SIRS:

YOUR LETTER PLACING STANDING ORDER FOR TWENTY-FOUR (24) REELS OF THE FOLLOWING TO HAND, AND SHIPMENTS WILL BE MADE IN ACCORDANCE WITH YOUR INSTRUCTIONS THEREIN:

MONDAY.	IMP YANKEE AMERICAN ECLAIR
TUESDAY.	THANHOUSER POWERS BISON
WEDNESDAY.	ATLAS NESTOR AMBROSIO CHAMPION
THURSDAY.	AMERICAN DEFENDER IMP ITALIA
FRIDAY.	BISON SOLAX THANHOUSER YANKEE
SATURDAY.	GREAT NORTHERN POWERS RELIANCE ITALIA COLUMBIA

WE WISH TO CONGRATULATE YOU ON ACCOUNT OF YOUR BUSINESS HAVING GROWN TO SUCH AN EXTENT TO WARRANT YOUR PURCHASING TWENTY-FOUR REELS A WEEK, AND HOPE YOUR EXCHANGE WILL GROW TO ONE OF THE LARGEST IN THE UNITED STATES.

THANKING YOU FOR YOUR VALUED ORDERS, AND WISHING YOU UNLIMITED SUCCESS, WE ARE,

YOURS VERY TRULY,
MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING & SALES CO.
By Herbert Miles
Secretary.

PM/C

LARGEST SUPPLY AND REPAIR DEPARTMENT
:: IN THE SOUTH ::

DIXIE FILM CO.

MAIN OFFICE 722-724-726 MAISON BLANCHE NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Vol. 7, No. 26. December 24, 1910 Price, 10 Cents

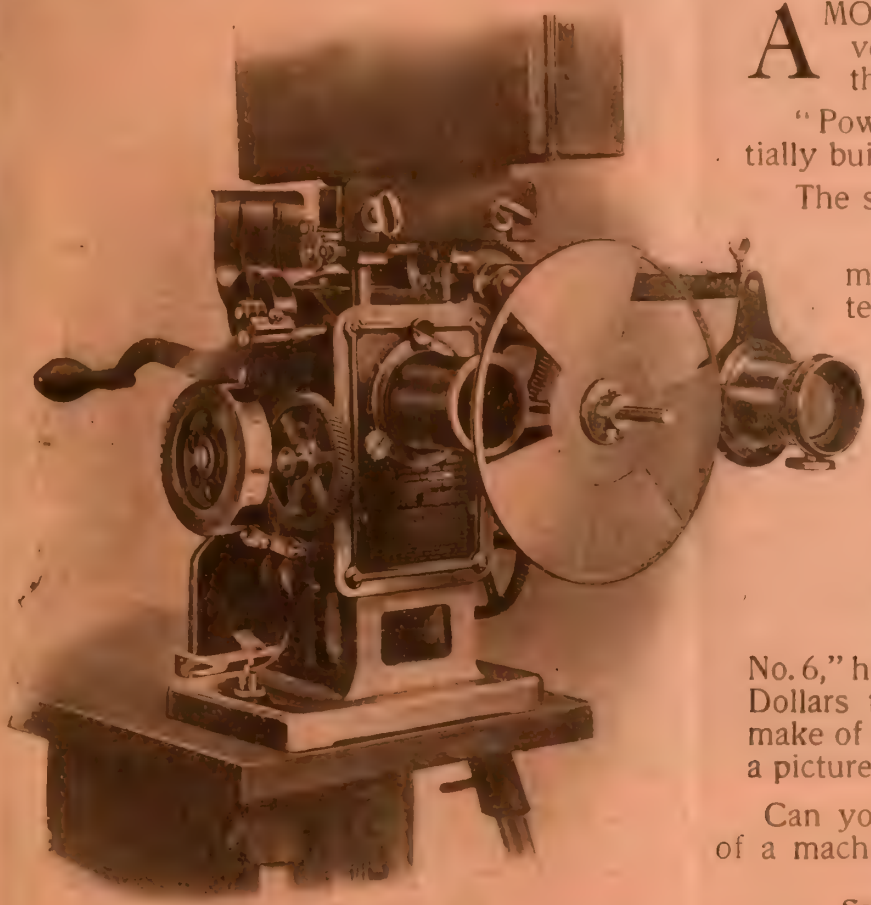
THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE ORGAN OF THE PHOTOPLAY AND ALLIED INTERESTS

NEW YORK

POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH No. 6

The Perfect Motion Picture Machine



A MOVING PICTURE machine is an investment, and you want a machine that will last.

"Power's No. 6" is the most substantially built machine in the world.

The strength is put where it is needed.

Heavy spindles, long bearings, massive frame, wide gears, unique tempered tool steel, intermittent movement running in oil make it outlast all other machines.

That is why we are able to guarantee it unconditionally for a year.

As for the picture, compare it with the picture produced by any other machine.

One exhibitor, using "Power's No. 6," has a standing offer of One Hundred Dollars to any exhibitor using another make of machine, who can project as good a picture.

Can you ask better proof of the merits of a machine?

Send for Catalog G at once

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

115-117 NASSAU STREET, : : : : NEW YORK CITY

FOR THIRTEEN YEARS THE LEADING MAKERS OF MOVING PICTURE MACHINES

A MERRY CHRISTMAS AND—

2-4-U

AND GOOD ONES, TOO!

THE THANHOUSER 2-A-WEEK

Scenes from "THE VICAR OF WAKEFIELD"

Release of Tuesday, December 27

The Thanhouser Masterpiece!

The VICAR of WAKEFIELD

This is the classiest classic that ever YOU saw, and you must have your PATRONS see it! It's a not-to-be-missed release. Simply bang—bang at the exchange man until he says "It's yours" to you. Try to know a bit ahead of time when you're to get it, so that you can do a little advance-announcing. The story, of course, is dramatic, and carries a love interest that is, perhaps, the strongest which ever found its way into a Thanhouser Classic. No "live" manager will fail to show this film.

No. 171. Code Word, Vicar.

Release of Friday, December 30

It will MESMERIZE You!

Hypnotized

is a story of love, true and false, that you'll like for the very air of reality about it. The picture pictures conditions as they exist; it treats boldly of the dangers and pitfalls that beset the young and innocent in this country to-day. As such, it is a powerful weapon for reform and your women patrons will praise you for using it. Aside from its great educational value, the reel will please the folks who go to the picture show for entertainment solely, and wish that entertainment to be served up with a dash and a swing.

No. 172. Code Word, Hyp.

The Thanhouser Photoframe consisting of portraits of the famous Thanhouser "Stock" framed in solid oak, mission finished, 33 inches in width and 43 in depth complete with glass and easel (6 feet high) GOES TO YOU FOR $3.50 with order. This is the prize outfit that tickled-to-death exhibitors the country over are calling THE GREATEST LOBBY DISPLAY BARGAIN EVER KNOWN. For System's sake address: ART DEPT.

THANHOUSER CO., NEW ROCHELLE NEW YORK

2-4-U

AND GOOD ONES, TOO!

—A HAPPY NEW YEAR

MAKE A SENSIBLE 1911 RESOLUTION

The New Year will be upon us in a few days. Mr. Trust Exhibitor, you can make no better resolution than to decide to use independent service. Contract for your service NOW. Start with a clean slate. You can get our original films (not dupes) only from 53 exchanges listed below who now serve 55% of the exhibitors of the country. Help us make it 70% and we will then have an OPEN MARKET and no more trust. The spirit of competition in the independent ranks promotes quality of films and excellence of service. Run your own theatre and get the finest film in the world from the following:

PROGRAM

EVERY MONDAY

AMERICAN—American Film Manufacturing Company
ECLAIR—Eclair Film Company
IMP—Independent Moving Pictures Company
YANKEE—Yankee Film Company

EVERY TUESDAY

BISON—New York Motion Picture Company
POWERS—The Powers Company
THANHOUSER—Thanhouser Company

EVERY WEDNESDAY

AMBROSIO—New York Motion Picture Company
ATLAS—Atlas Film Company
CHAMPION—The Champion Film Company
NESTOR—David Horsley

EVERY THURSDAY

AMERICAN—American Film Manufacturing Company
IMP—Independent Moving Pictures Company
ITALA—New York Motion Picture Company

EVERY FRIDAY

BISON—New York Motion Picture Company
LUX—R. Prieur
SOLAX—Solax Company.
THANHOUSER—Thanhouser Company
YANKEE—Yankee Film Co.

EVERY SATURDAY

CAPITOL—Capitol Film Co.
GREAT NORTHERN—Great Northern Film Co
ITALA—New York Motion Picture Company
POWERS—The Powers Company
RELIANCE—Carlton Laboratories.

List of BUYING EXCHANGES, December 17h, 1910

All others offering these brands for rent can supply only dupes or worn out subjects.

ALABAMA.

Dixie Film Co., 503 Chamber of Commerce Bldg., Birmingham.

CANADA.

Applegath, L. J. & Sons, 143 Yonge St., Toronto, Ont.
Canadian Film Exchange, Calgary, Alberta.
Gaumont Company, 154 St. Catherine St., Montreal, Que.
Great Western Film Co., Kennedy Bldg., Winnipeg, Man.

CALIFORNIA.

California Film Exchange, 1065 Mission St., San Francisco.
Miles Brothers, 790 Turk St., San Francisco.
Western Film Company, 108 East 4th St., Los Angeles.

COLORADO.

W. H. Swanson Film Exchange, 801 Railroad Bldg., Denver.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Paramount Film Exchange, 428 Ninth St., N. W., Washington.

GEORGIA.

Consolidated Film Exchange, Rhodes Bldg., Atlanta.

ILLINOIS.

Anti-Trust Film Co., 79 So. Clark St., Chicago.
Eugene Cline, 59 Dearborn St., Chicago.
Globe Film Service, 107 E. Madison St., Chicago.
H. & H. Film Service Co., 98 Jackson Blvd., Chicago, Ill.
Laemmle Film Service, 196 Lake St., Chicago.
Standard Film Exchange, 155 E. Washington St., Chicago.

INDIANA.

Central Film Service Co., 119 N. Illinois St., Indianapolis.

KANSAS

Wichita Film and Supply Co., 122 No. Market St., Wichita.

LOUISIANA.

Dixie Film Co., 720 Maison Blanche Bldg., New Orleans.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Boston Film Rental Co., 665 Washington St., Boston.
W. E. Greene Film Exchange, 228 Tremont St., Boston.

MARYLAND.

B. & W. Film Exchange, 412 E. Baltimore St., Baltimore.
Consolidated Amusement Co., 28 W. Lexington St., Baltimore.

MINNESOTA.

Laemmle Film Service, 400 Sykes St., Minneapolis.

MICHIGAN.

Michigan Film & Supply Co., 1106 Union Trust Bldg., Detroit.

MISSOURI.

Bijou Film & Amusement Co., 1222 Grand Ave., Kansas City.
J. W. Morgan, 1310 Walnut St., Kansas City.
Swanson Crawford Film Co., Century Bldg., St. Louis.

NEBRASKA.

Laemmle Film Service, 1517 Farnam St., Omaha.

NEW YORK STATE.

Albany Film Exchange, 418 Broadway, Albany.
Victor Film Service, 39 Church St., Buffalo.

NEW YORK CITY.

Empire Film Exchange, 150 East 14th St., City.
Exhibitors Film Exchange, 203 E 15th St., City.
Great Eastern Film Exchange, 21 East 14th St., City.
Hudson Film Exchange, 138 East 14th St., City.
Peerless Film Exchange, 94 Fifth Ave., New York City.
Wm. Steiner Film Exchange, 110 Fourth Ave., City.

OHIO.

Capitol Film Service Co., 422 N. High St., Columbus, Ohio.
Cincinnati-Buckeye Film Co., 309 Arcade Bldg., Dayton.
Cincinnati-Buckeye Film Co., 315 West 4th St., Cincinnati.
Toledo Film Exchange, 319 Superior St., Toledo.
Victor Film Service, Prospect and Huron Sts., Cleveland.

OREGON.

Ind. Western Film Exchange, Swetland Bldg., Portland.

OKLAHOMA.

United Motion Picture Co., 112 Main St., Oklahoma City.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Eagle Film Exchange, 143 N. 9th St., Philadelphia.
Ind. Film Exchange, 415 Ferry St., Pittsburg.
Philadelphia Film & Projection Co., 44 N. 9th St., Philadelphia.
Philadelphia Film Exchange, 934 Arch St., Philadelphia.

TEXAS.

Texas Film Exchange, 311 Elm St., Dallas.

WASHINGTON.

Pacific Film Exchange, Globe Bldg., Seattle.

WISCONSIN.

Western Film Exchange, 307 Enterprise Bldg., Milwaukee.

Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co., 111 E. 14th St., N. Y City

A Great Imp Comedy

Will be released the day after Christmas, Monday, December 26th. It is entitled "The Unexpected Honeymoon." It deals with a bright young chap who seeks to marry the homeliest girl he can find, intending to divorce her at the end of a year, and thus hoping to dodge the terms of his rich uncle's will. Well, the girl isn't homely, but she "makes up" that way. Then the fun begins and we defy a wooden image to keep a straight face as the comedy develops. Here's a subject you'll be only too glad to have your exchange send back for more than one return engagement. Please get after it!

A Powerful Drama

Will be released Thursday, December 29th, entitled "Unreasonable Jealousy." It tells the story of a doctor's wife who is jealous of her husband's patients of the gentler sex. This jealousy involves the couple in a series of dramatic events which lead to the most thrilling climax you have seen for many a day on any stage. Tell your exchange you want both of these films in fact TWO IMPS EVERY WEEK!

INDEPENDENT MOVING PICTURES CO. OF AMERICA

102 W. 101st Street, New York.

Carl Laemmle, Pres.

All "Imp" Films Sold Through the Sales Co.

HUMANATONE

The most marvelous musical instrument ever invented. No instrument in the world produces sweeter music, whether it be the joyous notes of a quickstep or the solemn strain of a church hymn, in fact, any class of music can be played upon the Humanatone without practice, as it is almost self-playing. When played with a piano accompaniment or any other musical instrument the effect is beautiful. Special holiday offer. Send 27 cents and get the $1 00 style.

HUMANATONE COMPANY
104 Nassau St. Dept. D New York City

Announcement Slides
Advertising Slides
Songs Illustrated

THREE STAR SLIDE CO.
Rooms 523-4
225 Dearborn Street - Chicago, Ills.

HALLBERG
THE ECONOMIZER

SAVES two-thirds on electric bill and makes BIG CUT on the first cost of your complete equipment.

I carry stock of all makes M. P. Machines, Opera Chairs and Supplies.

Free Catalogue No. W-50

J. H. Hallberg, 36 East 23d St. New York City

Exhibitors

We can supply with exclusive service of Imp, Bison, Powers, Thanhauser, Challenge, Nestor, Atlas, Yankee, American Champion makes cheaper than any other exchange. Signs and Posters—YES.

J. Frank Hatch Film Co.
Hatch Building
109 Fourth Ave., Pittsburg, Pa.

REMOVAL NOTICE

The American Moving Picture Supply Company, with increased facilities for doing business, and having outgrown their present quarters at 61 West 14th Street, have now located in the office of the William Steiner Exchange, 110 4th Avenue, New York City.

TO AMUSEMENT PROMOTERS AT LARGE

Herewith is a list of the States which are for sale and the price for the Exclusive right for the States including one complete set of the

Buffalo Bill and Pawnee Bill Films

3,000 FEET

The list also names the states which are sold, with the names and addresses of the owners of the Rights.

The Moving Pictures of the BUFFALO BILL WILD WEST AND PAWNEE BILL FAR EAST are the greatest money makers ever produced. They are in a class by themselves.

They are the first and only pictures, which do not decrease in value after having been exhibited. Return dates have proven to be as profitable as the first exhibition.

The film rents from $50.00 per day up and when played on a percentage basis from 50 per cent. to 75 per cent. of the gross receipts is the share received by the owners of State Rights.

Advance the prices for these pictures to 25, 35 and 50 cents.

If you have any doubts regarding the quality and drawing power of these films, get in touch with any owner of State Rights and learn what they have to say.

Select the State that you want from the list of unsold States and mail or wire us a deposit of $100.00 and we will forward contracts.

We require a surety bond of $1,000.00 on each contract. This you can secure from any Bonding Company for $10.00.

We can furnish everything needed in the way of advertising matter.

STATES SOLD

MASSACHUSETTS—RHODE ISLAND: Comfort & Van Dyne, 61 W. 14th Street, New York City.
VIRGINIA—NORTH CAROLINA: Petersburg Film Co., Petersburg, Va.
IDAHO—MONTANA: H. L. Quimby, Coeur d'Alene, Idaho.
TEXAS: P. G. Cameron, Dallas, Texas.
ILLINOIS—WISCONSIN: Anti-Trust Film Exchange, Chicago.
ARKANSAS: S. A. Arnold, Helena, Ark.
NORTH DAKOTA: E. L. Davis, Ambrose, N. D.
WESTERN CANADA: Canadian Film Exchange, Calgary, Alberta, Canada.
NEW MEXICO—ARIZONA—NEVADA: E. A. Joyce, Silver City, N. M.
MICHIGAN: H. E. Smith, Toledo Film Exchange.
WEST VIRGINIA: J. A. Parker, Hinton, W. Va.
NEW YORK: Collins & Collins, Utica, N. Y.
KENTUCKY: Fred Hoffman & Co., Louisville, Ky.
FLORIDA—GEORGIA—ALABAMA: Wm. Oppenheimer, Orpheum Theatre, Tampa, Fla.
MISSOURI: J. P. Atkins, St. Louis, Mo.
ONTARIO: J. A. Morrison, Meaford, Ont., Canada.
INDIANA: Leroy Tudor & J. B. Davidson, Muncie, Ind.
OHIO: Louis Becht, Mall Theatre, Cleveland, O.
PENNSYLVANIA: F. A. Tipton, 111 E. 14th St., New York City.
QUEBEC AND MARITIME PROVINCES: Sarah T. Bach, 2319 Hutchison Street, Montreal, Canada.
MARYLAND—DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA: Marcus Notes, Empress Theatre, 416 Ninth St., N. W., Washington, D. C.
WYOMING—COLORADO: Berta & Morris, Rock Springs, Wyo.
IOWA: Chas. L. Marshall, Excelsior Springs, Mo.
OKLAHOMA—KANSAS: Albert Jackson, Jackson Theater, Pawhuska, Okla.
WASHINGTON—OREGON—CALIFORNIA: Winik & Simmonds, Palace Theatre, Tacoma, Wash.

SIX STATES SOLD IN PAST WEEK. THE FOLLOWING ARE

FOR SALE

NEW JERSEY	$1,500.00	MISSISSIPPI	$1,000.00
DELAWARE	1,500.00	TENNESSEE	1,000.00
SOUTH DAKOTA	900.00	VERMONT	650.00
MINNESOTA	1,000.00	MAINE	800.00
LOUISIANA	1,000.00	NEW HAMPSHIRE	650.00
SOUTH CAROLINA	800.00	UTAH	800.00
CONNECTICUT	1,000.00	NEBRASKA	1,000.00

WRITE QUICK OR WIRE

Buffalo Bill and Pawnee Bill Film Co.
111 E. Fourteenth St., New York City

Notice

TO

Pennsylvania Exhibitors

To those desiring to EXHIBIT the Moving Pictures of

BUFFALO BILL

WILD WEST

AND PAWNEE BILL

FAR EAST

WIRE, WRITE OR PHONE

F. A. TIPTON

Fort Pitt Hotel, Pittsburg, Pa.

PERMANENT ADDRESS

111 East 14th St., NEW YORK CITY

Book It Now MONTE CRISTO Book It Now

A Double Every Tuesday. A Single Every Saturday Bases Full!!!

POWERS PICTURE PLAYS

The Regular Tuesday "Split Reel" for December 27th

"The Station Agent's Daughter" AND "Freddie's Courtship"

A living example of how the Western wilderness makes heroines even of a ten-year old girl! Here is one who saves her father's life.

2 ON 1

He'd be successful if it were not for "Spike McGuff." Can you imagine what happens when two such characters clash? It happens!

Saturday Feature, December 31st

A WAR SPECTACLE MILITARY GRANDEUR

"A Daughter of Virginia"

Those awful times when brother fought brother in North and South, gave the world some pictures of life that were stranger in their truth than the strangest fiction. We have dramatized one of these, and for impressive dramatic qualities no story writer ever dreamed its equal.

THE POWERS COMPANY

241st Street and Richardson Avenue - - New York

SALES COMPANY SOLE DISTRIBUTERS, 111 East 14th Street

Get Our Photo Frames with REAL Photographs For Lobby

RELEASES

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 23D.

THE PAWNSHOP

Tony, an honest organ grinder, becomes instilled with the gambling spirit. He tries to pawn his organ and his monk "Joco" (who, by the way, takes a leading part in this story). This security being refused, his sweetheart, Marietta, offers herself as security.

How Tony frustrates a proposed burglary, and receives the wherewith to procure his sweetheart's release, is depicted in a masterly and interesting manner.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 30TH.

Mrs. Richard Dare

A sparkling society comedy—the kind that holds the attention of a restless audience. (See synopsis, page ——.)

Sold through
THE SALES COMPANY,
111 E. 14th St.
New York

RELEASES

FRIDAY, JANUARY 6TH.

THE NIGHTCAP

(Split Reel.)

A screaming comedy, funniest ever.

Salmon Fishing in Canada

(Scenic.)

This is a very instructive and interesting picture.

This is the kind of combination that brings down the house.

Solax Company

Telephone 1864 Stuyvesant

147 Fourth Avenue NEW YORK

EVERY FRIDAY THE WORLD'S BEST—BAR NONE EVERY FRIDAY

LUX FILMS

YOU want your programs to be as good as the BEST.
YOU want the BEST in comedies to tickle and please your patrons.
There are none better in Europe and America than LUX Comedies.

YOU make no mistake when YOU

GET LUX

GET LUX

Release Friday, Dec. 23, 1910

Bill Plays Bowls

Comedy—423 Feet

Rosalie's Dowry

Comedy—492 Feet

Two comedies on one reel.

The first is a very clever trick comedy, every foot of which will astonish as well as amuse and will leave your audiences in amazement and wondering how it is done

The second is an amusing little comedy with a most unusual and novel setting that is seldom seen in moving pictures.

YOU are making a great mistake if YOU do not

GET LUX

FREE COLORED LITHOS.

See Other Pages for Synopses and Past Releases

R. PRIEUR

10 East 15th Street Phone 3427 Stuyvesant New York City

Sold only through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company.

GREAT NORTHERN

GREAT NORTHERN FILMS CO. COPENHAGEN

Stands For Quality!

Good films are the life of the moving picture business. Therefore, put life into your business by using GREAT NORTHERN film productions.

Release for Saturday, December 17th

A CHRISTMAS LETTER

This story will appeal instantly to every audience. The beautiful pathos of it tugs at the heart strings, and the film is made notable by a wonderful child actor who takes the leading part.

DICKEY'S COURTSHIP

A Comedy subject with many laughable scenes.

Release for Saturday, December 24th

NECKLACE OF THE DEAD

BIGGEST AND STRONGEST HEADLINER OF THE YEAR

A magnificent and compelling film production which will create more than ordinary interest owing to its unique and artistically enacted story. Don't delay in booking this "photomarvel."

ALL FIRST-CLASS INDEPENDENT EXCHANGES HANDLE OUR FILMS

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO., 7 East 14th St., New York

Sold only through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company.

Champion Films

The Golden Gates

Released Wednesday, Dec. 28

A melodrama of gripping interest. One of those you can't take your eyes from, and at the finish sigh for more. This is a feature holiday picture, 950 feet long and one you can't afford to miss.

A Western story by Western Actors and Western atmosphere, and above all photographed and printed on the best film in the market.

Scene from "THE GOLDEN GATE"

Don't Forget Champs on Wednesday

SPECIAL:—Through new arrangements at our factory, we are now able to absolutely guarantee every CHAMP to be as steady as a wall painting and our new stock will stand wear like cowhide. INVESTIGATE!

SEE RELEASE DATES FOR CHAMP FEATURES

CHAMP

THE CHAMP STAMP

CHAMPION FILM CO.

Mark M. Dintenfess
General Manager

12 East 15th Street
NEW YORK, U. S. A.

Laboratories at Coytesville on the Hudson

Sold only through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company
111 East 14th Street, New York City
Live Men Are On Our Mailing List—Are You?

Eclair Films

THE

Guiding Star

TO SUCCESS

As of old, the STAR OF THE EAST led Wise Men to the BABE OF BETHLEHEM, even so, "ECLAIR." The Film whose Name truly means a "GUIDING STAR" will lead all WISE FILM MEN to ultimate SUCCESS!!!

For December 26th

The Lock-Keeper

537 Feet

A Dramatic Comedy by Rene Brecy
Rich in Human Interest; an Excellent Character Play of a High Order.

The Fear of Fire

390 Feet

A Film Brimful of Laughable Situations and Mirth-Provoking Incidents; a Quaint Little Satire which will afford Excitement and Fun for all Classes, and Keen Enjoyment for the More Exacting.

DON'T DELAY---ORDER NOW

ECLAIR FILM COMPANY

NEW YORK: 31 E. 27th ST.
CHICAGO: 35 E. RANDOLPH ST.

Real Music That Really Fits the Picture

"MOTION PICTURE PIANO MUSIC"

FIFTY CENTS A COPY.

A Piano Book that contains descriptive Music to fit all probable Scenes, Actions, Characters, etc., shown in Moving Pictures. Composed and compiled by a Professional Pianist of twenty years' experience in Theatrical lines. Brimfull of practical suggestions for the inexperienced Pianist in a M. P. Theater. Descriptive Circular sent free upon request. Book will be sent promptly upon receipt of fifty cents. Address,

FRELINGER MUSIC COMPANY

LAFAYETTE, IND.

Drummers—Wait!

Before you buy a drum, until you let us tell you about our new Solid Shell Aluminum Hoop Orchestra Drum. IT'S THE BEST EVER. Our Drum and Trap Catalog in return for a postal card addressed to

The J. G. Richards Co.

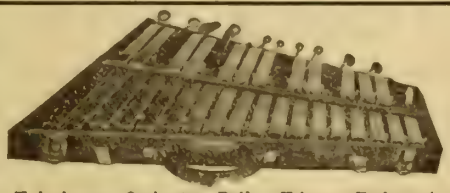
Dept D. Cleveland, O.

Sound Effects

In Picture Machine Theaters it is very essential that the imitations and sound effects are of the kind that can be depended upon. We make only practical and serviceable imitations that will give the exact reproduction of the original. We also manufacture Chimes, Tympani, Bells, Xylophones, Drums and accessories.

LEEDY MANUFACTURING COMPANY

1055 E. Palmer St., INDIANAPOLIS, IND.



Xylophones, Orchestra Bells, Chimes, Forks, etc. Send for free illustrated catalogue.

J. C. DEAGAN

3800-3810 N. Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

WURLITZER

Automatic Musical Instruments

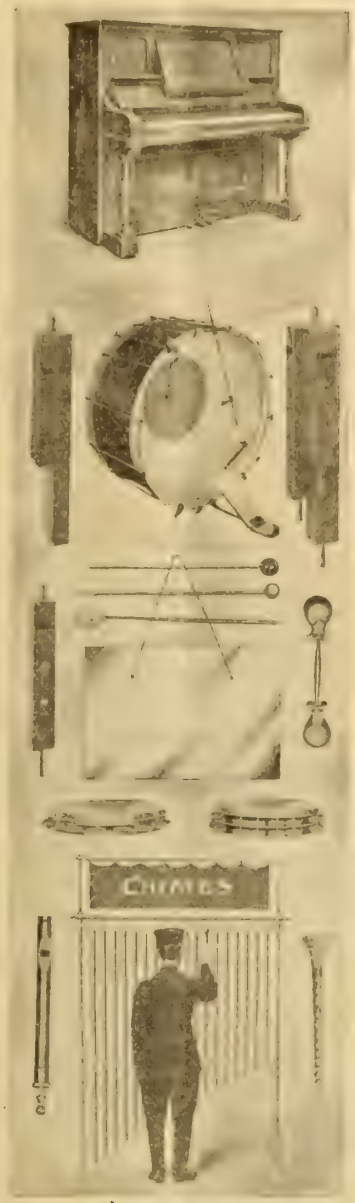
They do the work of expert musicians and reduce your operating expenses.

Wurlitzer is the world's largest manufacturer. We supply the U. S. Government with musical instruments. Write for big, new 84-page catalogue showing the only complete line of self-players, from a small electric piano to an automatic orchestra representing 35 musicians. Easy time payments.

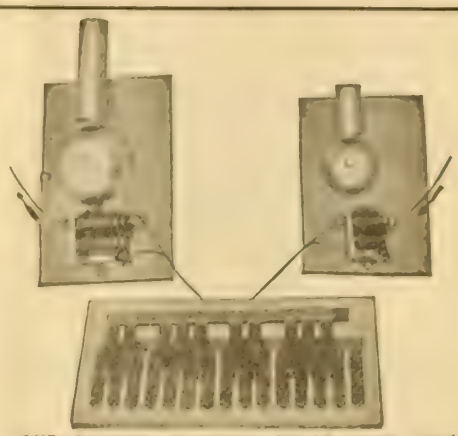
Concert Pianorchestra.

The RUDOLPH WURLITZER CO.

CINCINNATI, 117 to 121 E. 4th; NEW YORK, 25 & 27 W. 32d (bet. B'way & 5th Ave.); CHICAGO, 266 & 268 Wabash Ave., PHILADELPHIA, 1835 Chesnut; ST. LOUIS, 912 Pine; CLEVELAND, 206 Prospect Ave., S. E.; COLUMBUS, O., 57 E. Main



WURLITZER



OUR PATENT ELECTRIC BELLS create great enthusiasm in Moving Picture Houses, play from a keyboard as a solo instrument, or as an accompaniment to songs. Twenty-five Bells, two octaves chromatic, including resonators, magnets and keyboard, $75.00.

J. C. DEAGAN

3800-3810 N. Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

Moving Picture Pianists

Are you "working up" your pictures? If not, why not? If so, you want some good melodramatic music. Send for free sample page of "Orpheum Collection of Moving Picture Music." Now being used and praised by many of the best houses in the country.

PRICE.....75 CENTS

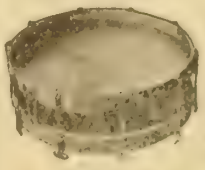
Also latest cue music (series 1910) for 10 parts and piano.....$1.00

¼ discount on both numbers.

Clarence E. Sinn

1501 Sedgwick St., CHICAGO, ILL.

TO TRAP DRUMMERS



A Limited Time Offer

Special Offer { Size Shell 8 x 14 $10.00 { Size Shell 8 x 15

Solid Maple, Rosewood or Walnut, 10 fine plated thumb crew rods, Kangaroo, Angora or Slunk Calf Drum Heads.

We ship with privilege of 6 days trial

E. P. ZEIDLER DRUM CO. Dept. F. Cleveland, Ohio

Drums, Traps, and all Moving Picture Show Effects

Our New Beautifully Illustrated Catalogue now ready and will be sent free to any address upon request.

LOUIS B. MALECKI & CO.

272 WABASH AVENUE, CHICAGO.

NOW READY

Operators' and Managers' Handbook

By F. H. RICHARDSON

PRICE $1.50 POSTPAID

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

125 E. 23rd Street, NEW YORK

TRADE MARK

REVIER FILMS

NOT IN ANY TRUST BIG OR LITTLE

Exhibitors Note

If your exchange cannot supply you with Revier Films write me and I'll show you where to get them.

You can't destroy Trusts by patronizing them. Demand Revier Films and show your independence.

MADE BY THE

Revier Motion Picture Co.

SALT LAKE CITY - - - - UTAH

First Release, Wednesday, Dec. 21

LOVE'S SORROW

App. Length 950 Ft.

This is a stirring picture, Western in every detail. Taken in the heart of the Rocky Mountains and played by men and women of the West.

Second Release, Wednesday, Dec. 28

THOUGHTFULNESS REMEMBERED BY THE UTE

App. Length 950 Ft.

An Indian on the rampage, the gratitude of two Indian girls and the quick justice of the cattle ranch are all elaborately portrayed in this picture

50 Beautiful Posters Free

SOLD EXCLUSIVELY BY

A. J. CLAPHAM

12 EAST 15th STREET - - NEW YORK

SOLD DIRECT TO EXCHANGES ONLY

THE BIO ARC SCREEN

is the greatest convenience ever devised for the operator.

It does away with the annoying and tiresome "squinting" through the "peephole"

It gives a clear, accurate view of the arc without the least "eye-strain"

It offers the only means by which the operator can really know what he is doing with the arc.

Sent postpaid for One Dollar.

Your money back if you want it.

CHARLES L. KIEWERT CO.

NEW YORK PITTSBURG CHICAGO MILWAUKEE SAN FRANCISCO

KLEINE OPTICAL CO., (Canadian Agents)

MONTREAL ST. JOHN, N. B. TORONTO WINNIPEG VANCOUVER

A MORAL TONIC

You Need a Big Sermon Film

One that the lady and children patrons of your house appreciate, but seldom witness. You need a Moral Stimulant at certain intervals for your go-as-you-please program. You want a film which will be discussed "all over the block" after they have seen it. We have made such a picture.

Released Wednesday, December 28

An Outcast's Salvation

A melodramatic, moral masterpiece, which deals with a man's downfall, and his subsequent rise to position and prominence through a mission in the slums.

BOOK THIS FILM READ THE STORY

WE WANT YOUR ADDRESS

SOLE AGENTS

ATLAS FILM COMPANY

10 East 15th STREET - - - NEW YORK CITY

THE DOWNFALL OF "BUFFALO BILL"

Once in a while we hear of an imitator of the great Scout and Plainsman. Nearly every one who is able to grow long hair, a goatee and mustache, enters the amusement arena and strives for fame and fortune. Up to now, none have succeeded in attracting even the slightest attention, but We've Discovered a Character who is bound to make all the Bill's and Pete's and Ike's and Jake's of the West green with envy. One who studied Buffalo Bill through his weekly magazine and then scurried westward to get into action.

We've Pictured His Wonderous Deeds Especially for You

COMING OUT FRIDAY, DECEMBER 23

The Terror of the Plains

A Full-reel YANKEE COMEDY—A Veritable Western Scream.

A New Sleuth Film—Out Monday Dec. 26—With Our Nell Pierce

AN INSANE HEIRESS

A startling mystery story involving the abduction of an heiress to millions and the rescue by the Yankee Girl Detective, disguised as an insane women.

IT'S EXCITING DON'T MISS IT IT'S A YANK

Exhibitors How About You? Are You Running "Queen of the Nihilists"? Are You Going After that $25.00 Prize? Are You Getting twoyanksperweek? Are You Receiving the "Yankeegram" Weekly? Drop Us a Line or Two.

YANKEE FILM CO., 344 East 32d St., New York

Telephone 6170 Madison Square

Write Your Order to the Sales Company

MR. EXHIBITOR!

THE BEST

Christmas Present

For Your Operator or Manager is a Copy of

RICHARDSON'S

MOTION PICTURE HANDBOOK

FOR MANAGERS AND OPERATORS

160 Pages, Cloth Bound

Price, $1.50 Postpaid

We will send a copy marked
"With the Compliments of—(your name)—" to any address furnished

FOR SALE BY ALL WIDE AWAKE FILM EXCHANGES, OR

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD
125 EAST 23rd STREET - - NEW YORK

Moving Picture World

THE WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING COMPANY - 125 E. 23d Street, NEW YORK
(Beach Building) Telephone call, 1344 Gramercy

EDITORS: J. P. CHALMERS, THOMAS BEDDING, F. R. P. S.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Post free in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands

ADVERTISING RATES: Whole page, $60.00; half page, $30.00; quarter page, $15.00; eighth page, $7.50; one inch (3¼ in. wide), $3.00; one inch (2¼ in. wide), $2.00; classified (no display), 3 cents per word.

TIME DISCOUNTS: 5% two or more insertions, 10% three months order, 15% six months, 20% twelve months.

WESTERN OFFICE: 160 Washington Street, (Post Building, Chicago). Telephone Main 3145.

Entered at the General Post Office in New York City as Second-Class Matter.

Vol. 7 DECEMBER 24, 1910 No. 26

Summary of the Week.

The Mute in the Mission....1458
The Raw Stock and the Picture....1458
Christmas on the Screen....1459
Religious and Biblical Pictures. By Rev. W. H. Jackson....1460
How to Improve the Business. By Louis Reeves Harrison....1461
Picture Personalities. Miss Mary Pickford....1462
"Man About Town" Visits More of the Shows....1463
Kinemacolor in New York....1463
Construction and Decoration. By John M. Bradlet....1464
Music for the Pictures. By C. F. Sinn....1465
Operators and Managers' Column. By F. H. Richardson....1466
"Lux Graphicus" Is Pessimistic....1470
Those Titles. By F. H. Richardson....1471
Scenarios. By Henry....1471
New England Notes....1472
New Oxford Theater, Brooklyn....1473
Prospect Theater, Bronx....1473
Vaudeville Worse than the M. P. Shows....1473
Comments on the Films....1476
Zoology in Kinemacolor....1481
Exhibitors' League Meeting in Columbus, Ohio....1481
What They All Want for Christmas. By H. F. Hoffman....1482
American vs. English Films....1483
Word for the "Hack"....1483
Chicago Notes....1484
In the Mississippi Valley....1485
Letter to the Editors—The Doom of the Picture....1485
Licensed Release Dates....1489
Independent Release Dates....1494

NOTICE.

The new Western offices of the Moving Picture World, Rooms 307-309, Post building, 160 Washington street, Chicago, are now ready to receive World readers visiting Chicago. Mr. John M. Bradlet, Western representative of the World, will extend to every one a cordial welcome. They will find a complete file of manufacturers' catalogues and a bureau of information on films, theater construction, materials and supplies. They will also find desks and stationery for their correspondence, the services of a lady stenographer and a polite messenger boy to act as their guide or go their errands. We invite every exhibitor or person interested in motion pictures to make our Western office their headquarters when visiting Chicago.

A MERRY CHRISTMAS TO ALL WORLD READERS.

Parcel Post.

The United States Post Office system, as compared with the British Postal system, is still capable of great improvement in the interests of those for whom that system exists; we mean the public at large. Postal systems, whether in this country or any other, are government monopolies to be administered for the common good. Postal systems originated with private individuals. Then government stepped in, bought out private enterprise and made these services government departments. Consequently, it is the duty of a government to consult the interests of those who support the postal service.

To-day, the British Post Office carries your letters, banks your money, transmits your telegrams, insures your life and performs other useful services for the community. In addition to this, it transmits small parcels to all parts of the world at postal rates.

Formerly small parcels, let us say up to about twelve pounds, had to be sent by rail or express. Nowadays the British Post Office handles these small parcels at a cheap rate, insuring rapidity of despatch, certainty of delivery and taking the risk. Let us give a concrete illustration of the value of the British Post Office. At this very moment hundreds of thousands of small parcels from Great Britain are being delivered on this continent. They are remitted to their proper recipients at a charge of a few cents a pound. If the same parcel were sent from New York to Chicago by express it would cost several times what it costs to send a small parcel from London, England, to Chicago. An obvious absurdity.

There is an agitation afoot in the United States for the establishment of a parcels post. The public convenience of such a service is so obvious that it hardly needs recommending. It recommends itself. But, of course, vested interests are against the innovation. The result is that the express companies, who hold something like a monopoly of small parcel traffic, are opposing the change. But vested interests must give way to the demands of public utility. It is a foregone conclusion that the express companies will in the long run have to succumb. But they need not suffer. They need not go out of business as carriers of small parcels; they can compete with the government. In Great Britain, though the government conducts the parcels post, the express companies also have a look in at the game, the consequence being that there is a healthy competition between the governmnt and the carrying companies.

The United States parcels post service would, therefore, benefit all and injure none. In what respect would it benefit the film industry? It would benefit the many hundreds of thousands of people connected with the film business of this country in the general sense: That is to say, in the transmission of small parcels of their ordinary daily requirements. But it would also benefit them in respect of their special business requirements. Let us take a concrete illustration. Suppose that a manufacturer in New York wanted to send a reel of film to an exchange in San Francisco. The express company's charges would be round about $1.25. The post office cost for the same parcel would probably be about one-third of that amount. Arguing from the particular to the general, therefore, it can be seen that under a United States parcels post system the film industry would probably save each year many millions of dollars in this respect. Moreover, the public would have the assurance that the government handling its small parcels would stand by the risk, would be more certain in its delivery and would more readily make good any loss or damage to which it was liable.

Quite recently one of our manufacturing friends from a distant part of the United States arrived in New York City when the express companies' men were striking. He went to claim some film that had been expressed to him, but was unable to obtain the film or make any impression on the express company. So the loss to him was great, both in time and money. Under a government parcels post sytsem, such a state of things could not prevail.

We urge all our exhibiting, renting and manufacturing readers to support the movement for the establishment of a parcels post in the United States. Thousands of exchanges throughout the country can use their theaters for backing up this propaganda on the screen. The government revenue would be materially increased by this reform, which would take us one step further to the perfection of the United States postal system. No doubt, as in Great Britain, the system will in time include the telegraphs for the country, the telephones and will engage in the business of life insurance. Meanwhile we ask each individual reader of this paper to do all that he can in his own interests, in the interest of the business and those of the general public to bring about the establishment of a United States parcels post system.

The Mute in the Mission.

Any stick is good enough to beat a dog with. The dog in this connection is the moving picture, which, during its short existence, has been beaten by every kind of stick that the hand of hatred can wield. The press, the pulpit, the legislature, law, science, learning, money passion, prejudice, venom, ignorance, sheer idiotcy, all these weapons have been handled from time to time for the purpose of downing or attacking the moving picture. If there is any other subject or institution on this earth which comes in for a greater variety of attacks than the moving picture, we should like to know where and what it is. Not even W. J. Bryan, the late Mrs. Eddy, Dr. Cook or the New York subway have had more scornful things said about them than has the harmless picture. To believe one-tenth of what has been said against the picture would be equivalent to an admission that the millenium had been remitted to the Greek Kalends.

Failing their inability to enlist the opposition of the blind to the moving picture, its fanatical opponents in the press and elsewhere have been reduced to the pitiable state of enlisting the opposition of the mutes. Poor, dumb people, who have lost one of the most precious of the five senses—the power of speech! And the newspapers allege that somebody in authority over some of these poor mutes at Cleveland declares that the latter are offended and shocked by the lip motions of the photographed actors and actresses on the screen. The mutes are quoted as saying that they can tell that these actors who are working before the camera use swear words or profane expressions!

This nonsense has given the newspaper ignoramus the opportunity of spinning out lots of stupid copy on a very stupid subject. It is needless to inform the intelligent reader that the average moving picture actor is no more profane in his work than anybody else. Our observation of scores of these moving picture actors at work, both in the studio and in the open, has shown us that they are as well behaved as any other section of the community. Of course the representation of temper, passion, anger, disappointment, etc., on the screen involves the assumed use of expletives in real life. But expletives are used in books, stage plays and are given representation in paintings and other works of art. Yet we do not find the Cleveland mutes, or any other mutes anywhere else, quoted as saying unfavorable things about books, paintings, etc. No! It must be the picture.

A Mrs. Elmer E. Bates, of Cleveland, is quoted as backing up the statement that "the use of indecent, improper and profane language is common amongst picture actors!" It is up to all the manufacturers, licensed and Independent, to convince this good lady that she is the victim of a too active imagination.

The Raw Stock of the Picture.

The closing year has witnessed several abortive, or at any rate, unrealized attempts to place on this market a variety of raw stock, i. e., celluloid film for negative and positive making. It was understood that the Fireproof Film Company of Rochester, N. Y., would be ready with a non-inflammable film to offer to the trade; but inquiries that we have made indicate that this company is not yet prepared to put its product on the market. Then we have had semi-official assurances that the Berlin Aniline Works are about to supply the Independent demand. The Berlin Company, however, we gather, is not quite ready.

The Ansco Company who, it is alleged, were to supply film are not, we think, making any move. Mr. Gennert of East Thirteenth street, New York City, still continues to supply the Austin-Edwards film. As we write this article, we perceive that in England, a large manufactury has got into order for the purpose of making and supplying negative and positive film to the world's markets. We have known of this manufactury for many years and it bears a high reputation, turns out good productions, and we think that in time Criterion film, for such it is named, will find its way to the American market.

It is well known that the Independent manufacturers of this country chiefly draw their supplies from the Lumiere Company. Indeed, were it not for the Lumiere Company and their ability to meet Independent demands, it would be doubtful if any Independent manufacturers could exist.

The "licensed" manufacturers draw their film from the Kodak Company of Rochester. We do not know the exact nature of the agreement of the Kodak Company with the trust manufacturers, but believe it is a terminable one. We have no authority for saying this, but it is well within the bounds of probability that the Kodak Company might like to cater for the Independent market in which case they will have an opportunity of acquiring extra business, involving a supply of many hundreds of thousands of feet of film per week.

The position of affairs, would appear to be, therefore, that there is likely in the immediate future to be considerable competition in the supply of raw stock to manufacturers. Kodak and Lumiere, however, have immense advantages over their competitors and are hardly likely to be disturbed, except without very great difficulty. The Kodak works at Rochester are of enormous size and are well equipped for the production of practically an illimitable output, the Lumiere works at Lyons are also of enormous extent, as indeed they must be, when it is recollected that they supply a large proportion of the European trade together with that of other parts of the world.

It is interesting to speculate what footage of film is annually consumed in the picture business. It runs of course total up to many millions of metres, its manufacture and supply necessarily means the making of large sums of money.

Christmas on the Screen.

By Thomas Bedding, F.R.P.S.

Scanning the list of releases especially designed by the American film makers to take advantage of the sentiment of Christmas, now imminent, we find a number of distinctively Christmas subject specially prepared for exhibition around the Christmas time. Chiefest credit for attempting something seasonable rests, it must be conceded, with the Edison Company, who propose releasing a film dealing with the subject of Dickens' "Christmas Carol." "The Christmas Carol," as every student of Dickens knows, is a pretty and human story, and though written for English people, will probably appeal to American sentiment. Pathe's have a subject called "Sunshine in Poverty Row," which explains itself. This is another picture of the Christmas Carol type. The Vitagraph people tell the story of "Jean and the Waif." The Imp release is entitled, "The Crippled Teddy Bear." Then we have a Great Northern subject, entitled, "A Christmas Letter," the pathos of which story is said to "tug at the heart strings." On the whole, not a very happy selection of Christmas subjects.

Christmas is the alleged time of "peace on earth and good will towards men," the sentiment of which forms the basis of a great deal of the literature published about this time of year. Peace and good will, however, exist, we fear, too much in the imaginations of writers and artists. Charles Dickens was said to have invented Christmas. There are many people, especially on the other side of the Atlantic, who say that Christmas as Charles Dickens described it, never existed. Washington Irving wrote about Christmas in a very entertaining fashion. So, of course have multitudes of other authors. Here, then, the Christmas sentiment undoubtedly is, no matter whether peace on earth and good will towards men has any large existence in fact, which is certainly open to doubt.

In England theater entertainments at Christmas time deal largely with fairy stories, goblin stories, giant stories, etc. The beautiful, the spectacular, the scenic, all these enter into Christmas stage productions. Of course, the entertainments are very costly and are run for considerable lengths of time. Thus they attract millions of people and make much money.

It is this end of matters which we think the American film manufacturers, writing generally, seem to have overlooked. Are not "Christmas Carols," "Poverty Rows," and other sentimental themes dealt with sufficiently in the magazines and in everyday life without presenting them as entertainment? We think they are. That is why, in expressing disappointment with the Christmas efforts of the film manufacturers, we venture to offer them a suggestion. It is this: that next year an attempt be made to adopt different themes, more of the merry-making order. Let us have something approaching the pantomime story, in film form. This is generally a story of good and bad fairies, giants, ogres, adventures, spectacular, etc., etc., which immensely pleases the little people. We do not think children are very much interested in stories of poverty and its relief. At any rate, if we had our way we would keep such things from them; we would concentrate their minds upon the more beautiful aspects of life. Let them have all the illusions they can while they are young. Let them have fairy pictures, and fairy stories. Let them believe there are such things as enchanted castles, caves of diamonds and all the wonders of fairydom. Let them know no different until they are older.

A great ballet on the screen would, we think, look well: Anything fanciful, spectacular, grotesque, even weird; but let us, please, have as little as possible of the poverty and misery contrasted with wealth and garishness. There is quite enough of it outside the theater to have it served up to us inside, where we go for entertainment.

The Gnome Company seem to be working on, what to our minds, is the most interesting phase of the Christmas sentiment. They are making fairy pictures for young people. We fully expect to see other makers follow suit, when they realize what the real Christmas sentiment is, namely one of lightness, brightness, joyousness. Of course it is the children's feast and the children want to be entertained. We do not think they are entertained by stories of poverty, misery, and the like. They would rather be transported to the realms of imagination. If those realms are in fairyland, so much the better. Less misery, please, Mr. Manufacturer, and more brightness, gaiety and brilliancy.

THE PICTURE IN OPERA.

A novel and highly pleasing entertainment was rendered on Wednesday evening, December 14, in the auditorium of the Knickerbocker Field Club, a select Brooklyn organization. It was a musical comedy entitled "A Houseboat Romance," by J. Stuart Blackton and Alfred J. Doyle. The Dramatic and Musical Society of the Club furnished the talent, and were supposed to be professionals by strangers, so well did they acquit themselves. Mr. Blackton was at home as Capt. Benson, of the Houseboat "Knickerbocker"; Clara C. Monsees, as the Captain's daughter was charmingly natural; Mrs. Blackton, as Mme. Dubonnet, a rich Parisian widow, comported herself with dignity and grace. In the song, "Won't You Play Eyes Wis Me" specially written for her by Alfred J. Doyle, Mrs. Blackton made a great hit, assisted by the "Captain" and sextette. Special mention is also due to the work of F. A. Weissman, Lizzie Metcalf, and Geo. Ganzenmuller. But the feature of the evening was the showing of the Vitagraph Film of the International Motor Boat Races. This event was worked in as a part of the story and the pictures were projected onto the drop which was painted in blue and tints to represent the sea. The effect was surprisingly beautiful and realistic.

We venture to say that if a company was to go on the road with this musical comedy and present it as well, they would meet with the biggest kind of success.

Religious and Biblical Pictures.

By Rev. W. H. Jackson.

There is no doubt that one of the largest fields of moving picture enterprise and success lies in the religious world, this means also the Biblical world, and these together form one of the largest portions of the world of education. From a literary standpoint too, the fact that all booksellers affirm that more Bibles are sold than any other book, proves conclusively the trend of the human mind. Art also has shown the great hold upon master minds which Biblical subjects have taken, as testified to by the art galleries of the world; it has often been said that if all the sculpture and paintings of a Biblical or religious nature were taken out of the art galleries of the world, a poor and non-inspirational exhibition would remain. In like manner if the libraries of the world were depleted of biblical literature, a most inadequate remainder would be the result. These facts show how life and history are interwoven with the most important subject lying closest to human requirements as well as popular appreciation. That this great realm is at present scarcely touched by moving pictures is a great oversight, especially so when it is remembered that thousands of churches, institutions and schools are waiting for reproductions of the best of the world's educational subjects. That many film manufacturers hesitate is not surprising, the writer is fully aware that the undertaking is a vast one, but judging from the attempts already made and the evident unlimited ambition of many manufacturers there should be no further hesitation on their part. Two great prospects are already assured those who have the courage to make headway along these lines; they are a great waiting body of people, and sure financial success. It is impossible to conceive or imagine any line of subjects where reproduction would be so warranted as those of a Biblical nature, any one scene or subject once given would be required constantly and always, even for generations to come! this cannot be said of any other line of subjects; eternal permanence would fittingly characterize these films. Therefore it would seem that factories could be continually employed replacing the worn films, leading to the further thought that here is the secret of one of the most economical lines of subjects possible to manufacturers, the scenarios and concomitant parts are all at hand, and when a good set of pictures are once obtained their use and value would be unlimited. That all these arguments are feasible one has only to refer to the Oberammergau pictures, a series always in demand and always welcome, and this in spite of their incomplete and somewhat unsatisfactory nature; if it were only possible to reproduce the original Oberammergau, there is not a church or institution anywhere (secular places not excepted) where they would not be used. Of other Biblical subjects now before the public it is necessary candidly to say, that while good as far as they go, and great praise is due to their producers, they are not at all satisfactory. The first fault lies in choice of subject, Esther, Delilah and Mary Magdalene seem to suggest a hidden motive in the selection of these characters, and a careful public is very wary when their religions are touched; the Christian authorities on one side are fearful of profanation and the public is afraid of the sin of desecration on the other side. Besides Oberammergau the "Life of Moses" series is the only one which the churches have taken up, but its loneliness causes a slowness of general appreciation, which only indicates that more of its kind is needed. The "Lord's Prayer" visualization was lost in its own ambiguity, and the "Resurrection of Lazarus" will not be generally received because of its separation from its historical surroundings, it needs to be made part of a series to command attention. It must be borne in mind that the institutions and churches which are going to use these pictures (and are waiting for them) need complete subjects or series, suitable for from one to two hours' intelligent, comprehensive and instructive work; as unlike a theater or play house they cannot and of course will not make up an exhibition by mixing a Biblical subject with a drama or a comedy. The next important matter relating to the preparation of Biblical pictures is that they must be exact, if they are to be used (as they must be) by teachers, ministers and lecturers who are all acquainted with the original text, errors are intolerable, and it does seem from the few pictures now before the public that they have not either carefully considered the text or been assisted by competent advisors. Recently the writer was present at the plant of a large film manufacturer where a Bible scene was being enacted for a forthcoming picture, his first surprise was occasioned by the fact that no competent person was present to either instruct, or aid, in the most necessary preparation for so important a work; his second surprise came when the "director" of the occasion was suggesting a certain change ventured the remark "we must try to do this right as the pictures will be seen by those who know more than we do"! With such "directing" as this, is it any wonder that the religious pictures are not successful? Surely it is natural that what proper critics cannot accept the people will not popularize, especially where truth and faithfulness to a given standard is required.

Great—and right—predictions have been made of the power of the cinematograph in every direction, and expectations in the realm of Biblical history are widespread, but at present almost unfulfilled. In this great field there is room and opportunity for both financial, honorable and professional success, aided by the more powerful opportunity of doing much good; besides placing the cinematograph in one of its proper places as a great instructor and teacher. If any impetus is desired to give this great line of work an upward and onward move, the writer, and others of his acquaintance, are willing to act in an advisory capacity with any capable firm desiring to honor themselves by giving Biblical and religious subjects a more prominent place in their productions.

Fearing to be misunderstood let it not be considered that this article intends in any way to discount the value of the present religious pictures as used in moving picture places; by no means, they fill a certain need, but in an exceedingly ambiguous and incongruous nature. To amplify and rectify the present condition is the writer's first motive, and then to raise to their proper sphere of usefulness by a more thorough and general production of complete themes, subjects and historical parts in sacred history. This has been done by the stereopticon slides, why not in the cinematograph film? It only waits for the right firm to go forward.

The Pictural Drama As A Fine Art

by Louis Reeves Harrison

HOW TO IMPROVE THE BUSINESS.

The men who have money invested in the production of moving pictures are not blind to the advantages of turning out high-class reels because the present benefits are large and the future gain from superiority of production will be two or three times that of to-day. It is especially favorable to present success that photoplays should so interest the intelligent class throughout the country as to bring in the desirable patronage of those who have the means and leisure to go every day to the picture exhibitions. A high state of prosperity for the exhibitor will be reached whenever the average quality of the pictures shown rises to a point of merit that will command the patronage of those who now regard the picture shows as a childish and decidedly inferior form of entertainment. Splendid plays, of enduring interest, would enable the exhibitor of the present day to charge more for desirable seats, would fill his house at better rates, and would tend to elevate the quality of the average audience without decreasing its numbers. It is true that many exhibitors are catering to the lowest class only. They imagine that all human nature is on their level, but it is equally true that those pictures which appeal to the most enlightened members of moving-picture audiences are at the same time more satisfactory to the people who occasionally spend five or ten cents for a couple of hours of amusement.

Why not give the exhibitors the finest motion pictures that money can procure? Because of the greater cost?

That is certainly a short-sighted policy. If a producer's present sale is limited to 50 or 100 reels of each subject, the poor ones will go to the junk pile in the future while those strongly popular to-day will be like the most enjoyable music rolls for self-playing pianos—they will be in large demand for private and family use. This means thousands of dollars additional profit in an untouched market. Every strong play helps all concerned, strengthening the hold of moving pictures on the public, pleasing people in general, advancing the interests of the exhibitor, and giving every department of the business a dignity which no part of it now enjoys. Every such play means ten thousand dollars or more supplementary profit to the far-sighted manufacturer, so that a few hundreds of dollars additional expenditure necessary for improved quality seems trivial indeed.

How and where can that added outlay be most profitably and beneficially placed in the manufacture of picture reels?

Where are the weak spots in production?

The initial weakness is due to the fact that an enormous number of amateurs, who would like to see their ideas set forth in print or on the screen, who have not taken sufficient pains to prepare themselves for dramatic work of any kind, pour in a misleading flood of scenarios containing occasional ideas, but so badly presented as to need reconstruction at the hands of an overworked director or some one individual employed for the purpose. The result is a monotony of production, a feeble sameness of idea, where vigor and variety are needed. The cowboy chases the Indian, the sheriff pursues the villain, the hero embraces the heroine at the end, or the pianist plays the wedding march at the foreseen conclusion until the steady patron grows sick and weary of motion pictures as a form of entertainment. Brilliant professional writers, whose stories command from $5,000 to $500.00 in current periodicals, are given no inducements to write picture scenarios, or they would otherwise contribute to this much desired end.

Another weak spot is the lack of a competent "art director."

I realize perfectly that these little plays must be popular to succeed. When I refer to high quality, I do not mean anything technical or abstruse. When I speak of an "art director," I do not mean a man of such exalted ideas that he will attempt to lift the pictural drama above the comprehension of the common people. I mean that the regular stage manager should be put in charge of the actors; this will give him enough to do. He is obliged to place them and move them in a very limited scope, to concentrate his mind upon an infinite number of details in the swift performance of each scene, and his natural activities are on the stage. Picture plays, like those on the stage, are the result of composite activity in which the author, the director and the actor participate, but the picture play's appeal is purely visual. There must be a man of imagination to mentally portray the various scenes in advance, just as the author does, and he should have enough artistic sensibility to be aware of what goes wrong in the rehearsed presentation. I saw a "thriller" the other day representing the forecastle of a vessel in a storm on the rocks. A dipper-full, then a bucket full of water dashed over the bow barely wet a portion of the deck. Then a hose was kept spraying in one place. Then came a scene sub-titled "The Calm After the Storm." In nature, there is a higher sea running after than during mid-storm, but we were treated to the spectacle of a man hanging to a log in a mill-pond. Grass was visible in the left corner and a little kid-critic near me said: "Hully gee, see dem weeds!" There was no thrill. The performance was ambitious but in parts so inept that it broke the spell. A competent art overseer would not have let that scene spoil the rest of the reel. If it disgusted the kid-critic, there can be small wonder why others regard such productions as childish and unworthy of the money spent on them. No concern engaged in turning out examples of the pictural art can enjoy the favor of the people long if those engaged to turn out reels are deficient in appreciation of art. "Art is an instrument of thought the knowledge of which is to be acquired in order to be applied."

Get original plays, modern or historical, conveying an idea or picturing truly some interesting phase of human life, put them on with intelligence and good taste. That is the sum of my idea. If I am wrong, I am always open to conviction.

MISS MARY PICKFORD
(Independent Moving Pictures Company).

There are many actresses and few artistes. Miss Pickford is an artiste. Show girls of all kinds and conditions flock to the motion picture studios with a self-satisfied idea that the work they will be called upon to perform is "dead easy," whereas not one in a hundred qualifies as a super. Those who rise to the dignity of performing leading roles in motion pictures have to be endowed with a knack of conveying an infinite variety of emotions without words and without pantomine, an exquisitely subtle art, not widely distributed among loud-voiced members of the theatrical profession. With no vocal expression, and with no audience to inspire them, the real artists of the silent drama are as rare as on the actual stage.

Miss Pickford is an artiste of the highest rank in a field where there are very few of her kind. She is one of three brilliant stars in the motion picture firmament, rising to the top of her profession while yet too young to sign a contract. Preceding her photoplay experience she so pleased Mr. Belasco in "The Warrens of Virginia" that she received high approval and encouragement from that discoverer of native talent. Her success with another picture company was so pronounced that she became known to millions as "Little Mary."

The early training under Belasco was all right, and the severe exercise of her talent in the silent drama was still more beneficial, but the essence of Miss Pickford's charm is born in her. She has a vigorous, winning personality that pervades her work and carries over into the audience a sympathetic interest in all she does. "There she is," means "we are glad to see you, little Mary, no matter what part you are playing." This direct interest is due to a certain youthful spontaneity in the movements of the actress as well as in her facial gestural expression. It seems as though she was not acting at all, but was simply having a good time. It is also due to her possessing that sort of beauty which goes with a healthy physique, in this case spiritualized by an unusually active intelligence. Back of her spontaneity and youthful charm there is a highly trained and subtle art which makes Miss Pickford a veritable queen of comediennes; and back of that there is a thoroughly modern and progressive spirit unrestrained by worn out conventions. Miss Pickford's acting is entirely within the lines of the new art. She is intelligent and gracious, but her greatest charm lies in the fact that she seems to be perfectly natural in any role that she assumes.

AT KEITH & PROCTOR'S TWENTY-THIRD STREET HOUSE.

The time having arrived for my periodical visit to our friends of the "Bijou Dream," West Twenty-third street, and, remembering that as a result of my last visit exception had been taken to my criticizing the running of a comic film after a religious one, the readers most immediately interested considered this a reflection upon the manager; this was an injustice both to the manager and myself as my criticism said distinctly that the two subjects were "on one film," placing the fault on the manufacturer; if an operator runs a comic after a sublime religious picture it would show bad taste, but when a manufacturer deliberately makes up a film containing these two extremes, it shows not only a contempt for decency and propriety, but an indifference to the susceptibilities of the public.

Many improvements were noticeable in the general handling of the pictures. They were much steadier and clearer; the military drum, too, while not entirely silenced, was under a pronounced subjection. Of the films shown "The Closed Gate," a Gaumont picture, is of average parts centering upon the wandering of a sweet little toddling child which on account of an open gate, strays from its beautiful home and miraculously escapes death, both at a level crossing and beside the river. The scenery is everywhere good. As an open gate was the cause of the trouble it would seem the name of the title should be changed. "A Tangled Masquerade" (Essanay) reveals a rivalry between two companions for the same young lady, planning to elope with one of them the young lady's plans are frustrated by her father who takes her costume and appears as "Night" at the ball. The old gentleman makes a very poor "young lady." Meanwhile the young lady elopes with the man of her choice.

"The Phantom Rider" (Gaumont) is a good comic. Riding upon a stolen bicycle a man pursued by the police vanishes, leaving his clothes in the policemen's hands the time he is supposed to be caught, the riderless wheel continuing alone even across a stream is a very clever mechanical effect. Using an automobile in the same way in which he had used the bicycle by vanishing when caught, and again appearing upon the still going machine, are exceedingly clever maneuvres. "He Who Laughs Last" (Vitagraph) is a humorous picture of a new kind. A young man being subject to certain pranks at his club, makes the members agree to grant any request he makes if within a given time he turns the laugh upon them. He is successful and as his sweetheart's father is one of the members of the club entering into the agreement he claims his daughter in fulfilment of the wager. Of course he wins and laughs last.

The picture talks given here are very good and full of intelligent interest. One on the Philippines is being given this week.

SOME THIRD AVENUE MOVING PICTURE PLACES.

Having visited Twenty-third street, Fourteenth street and Brooklyn houses, the writer turned his attention in the direction of Third avenue, New York. As it is not long since yellow journals gave some of these places an unsavory reputation he was prepared for an exhibition of subjects calculated to arouse his censorious nature; it was an agreeable surprise, however, to find a condition of things contrary to "yellow" descriptions, or even morbid anticipations. The worst features of these places are the crude poster decorations, bad in drawing, vile in color, giving the outside appearance a most repulsive aspect. How such "decorations" can be expected to "draw" is something yet to be learned.

As the "bark" is often worse than the "bite," so here the exterior is worse than the interior, for inside the Varieties Theater, 112 Third avenue, a mirror screen is the first noticeable feature, showing that the proprietors are determined to have something of the best. The program of pictures shows also that nothing of a questionable nature was being exhibited, as the following list speaks for itself: "Old Glory," "The House With the Closed Shutters," "The Stolen Claim," "Whist," "Hiring a Gem" and "Hank and Lank." A cleaner list of ordinary or current pictures could hardly be selected. Another great surprise and one favorable to the houses, was the absence of "illustrated songs." Here, of all places, seemed to be the first place to expect singing of a ribald nature. The omission is commendable; surely the exhibitors must be readers of the Moving Picture World, as indeed it seems that they are trying to conduct their places in accordance with views expressed in these columns. The simple musical accompaniments were agreeable, no noisy drum, but a suitably played piano, making the exhibition at a cost of 5 cents equal to any and superior to many of a higher price. Considering the severe and perhaps justified strictures passed upon these places in days gone by, it is a pleasure to record these improvements and to give credit for them. It is to be hoped that a continuance along these lines may still merit further approbation.

BETWEEN THE ACTS.

In some of the theaters which do not pretend to be either moving picture places or vaudeville houses moving pictures are shown in the interval "between the acts." Corse Payton has adopted this innovation in Brooklyn with much satisfaction to his patrons. There is no doubt that this plan affords a pleasant diversion from the "play," filling up many a prolonged pause, preventing irritating delays with an impatient audience besides giving the stage hands longer time to more satisfactorily do their work. No doubt a howl of complaint may arrive from those who in various ways are benefited by the "between the acts" financial returns, but the universal adoption of this use of moving pictures may be looked for in all the large theaters. The cinematograph is filling large places in every possible way and very soon the theater without an outfit will be the exception. "Between the acts" is a good use for our protege.

MEN, MEN, MEN.

A most noticeable feature in all theaters visited during the last few weeks in Greater New York is the large number of men in the audiences, somewhere about 75 per cent. being of the adult male kind. What does this mean? Experts say that whatever appeals to the heart draws women, and that which appeals to the head draws men. Is this an argument that moving pictures are growing in intelligence?

KINEMACOLOR IN NEW YORK.

Since the introduction of Kinemacolor to the United States last December, interest in the process has been sustained by the fact that the Kinemacolor Company of America was formed to work the process here. Their fully equipped factory is now in working order at Allentown, Pa. It is anticipated that shortly the mechanical end of matters will be brought to a stage of practical perfection. It is a fact that difficulty has been found in making the machines, which has caused what appears to be some delay in the formation of the process. Meanwhile, we have been in receipt of many inquiries as to where Kinemacolor results could be publicly seen here in New York City. It will interest many readers to learn that, at the Eden Musee, on West Twenty-third street, New York City, daily exhibitions of Kinemacolor pictures are given. The Eden Musee has a fine large screen, and pictures are always well shown there. No doubt this exhibition will attract the attention of, not merely a large number of the moving picture public, but of the general public as well.

Crandon, Wis.—The Princess, a new up-to-date moving picture theater, will be opened here about Christmas by Harold E. Brady. Moving pictures and illustrated songs only, with a 10-cent admission.

Mobile, Ala.—Geo. W. Pryor, manager, Bijou Theater, reports business "very good." Using licensed service and runs pictures exclusively on two Power's machines. Two first-class opertors is the secret that "packs them in everyday."

CONSTRUCTION DECORATIONS

BY JOHN M. BRADLET.

The Self-Releasing Fire Exit Device.

The new Family Theater of Indiana Harbor, Ind., is a source of very valuable information and in many ways is a model for persons intending to build moving picture theaters or remodel their present houses. One of the features of the Family Theater calls for special mention and there is no doubt that in the near future the authorities will advocate that all halls of amusements be provided with "The Self-Releasing Fire Exit Device."

In most every case of fire, any loss of life is due, primarily, to the fact that the exit doors refuse to operate at the crucial moment. The terrified people pile themselves in heaps about the exits and the poor unfortunates are trampled to death before the fire even reaches them.

The writer well remembers a similar experience he had at the White City Park. Philadelphia, Pa., in 1906. He was then in charge of the Penny Arcade. In the same building and on same floor was located the moving picture show. One day, when both places were packed and another rush of humanity was waiting a chance to get in, some trouble occurred at the power house and the lights went out. As the operator had no current to either run his machine or light the hall, and as minutes, looking like hours, passed with no return of the current, a general panic ensued and the people trying to run out, piled themselves against two wide double doors in such heaps that the doorman was pinned in a corner and was unable to unlock the doors.

The writer realizing the danger of such a panic, secured the services of two other men, and the only way to force a way to the locked doors, was to use clubs freely right and left, with no regards if the blows were falling on men, women or children. There was no time to be lost and the only way to save lives, was to act without mercy.

The recurrence of such disasters is rendered absolutely impossible by the operation of the "Von Duprin Self-Releasing Fire Exit Latch." This device takes advantage of the inevitable rush of the panic-stricken crowd, and uses it as the natural means of throwing open the way to escape and safety. A child has the same advantage as an adult, no great power being necessary—merely a touch does it.

The essential features of the Von Duprin Device are these: It combines into one the usual features of all locking devices, i. e., the lock and the top and bottom latches. The usual hardware trim is applied on the outside of the door. On the inside, about waist high, a solid bar stretches across the door. This bar stands away from the wood and connects directly with the mechanism of the latch. Any pressure applied to any part of the bar instantly and positively releases lock and latches simultaneously and permits doors to open.

The operation of the Von Duprin Device under actual conditions of a panic is self-evident. The people rush blindly toward the exit doors—the leaders are forced against the bars across the doors, and the said bars under the pressure of the crowd give in, the latches operate automatically, and the doors are thrown open to safety.

The bar extends across the full width of the door, it is not a device that you have to hunt for, nor a device requiring any special training to work. A mere child running against the door, will throw open same with no other effort than to press the bar with his little hand or part of his frail body. This door cannot be opened from the outside unless a key is provided.

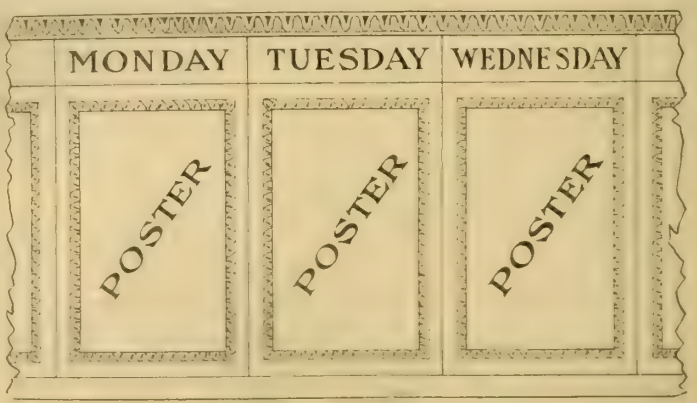
To this already perfect safety device, Mr. Berkson of the Family Theater, has added an extra precaution by having the emergency exit doors to open in a short passage, built of heavy masonry and cement which passage leads to the street in the rear of the theater.

We are very thankful to Mr. Berkson to have called our attention to these safety doors, as we hope that the above will be well received by all exhibitors wishing to make their theaters as safe as possible. Although our aim is to investigate every new device pertaining to a moving picture theater, we are bound to overlook some of them, and if the exhibitors who have anything of real merit will kindly send us word, we will be glad to pay them a visit.

* * *

Posters for the Week.

Is another feature of the Family Theater. Mr. Berkson advertises his show for the full week but, as in everything, Mr. Berkson displays good taste, instead of having numerous loose posters hanging from every corner or nailed to the walls, he has built in his lobby a succession of frames as shown in the following cut.



These frames of fine workmanship are of mahogany with a plate glass over each poster.

These frames are a fixture of the walls of the lobby and are at a convenient height, being placed above the wainscoting. At the top of each frame are painted the days of the week: Monday—Tuesday—Wednesday, etc. So displayed, the posters, even the most vulgar ones, do not look half as bad as when they are nailed to the walls.

Mr. Berkson's posters arrangement is not only neat, attractive and an efficient manner to advertise the coming features, but creates a good impression. This is where so many exhibitors fail. They lack good taste; they believe that anything is good enough—a sad mistake. If your lobby is neat, clean and well arranged, if your employees are clean, polite and well uniformed, you naturally convey the impression that your show is clean and decent and the place for ladies and children to visit.

"A. J. O." writes a long and complimentary letter in the course of which he voices a wish in which we all share. He says, "I want to know how to work up pictures correctly, and the proper music to play for them." His question is natural—we all want to know the same thing. As I said in the beginning, I shall try to give helpful hints on this subject, but from the very nature of the thing, these hints can only be along general lines. An unreleased picture is an unknown quantity and we don't know what music to play for it until we have seen it, but when we do see it we should be able to classify it at once. My third article contained a classification which, though by no means complete, is sufficient to meet the ordinary run of pictures. A purely scenic picture is easily recognized, and though these are not easily "worked up" in detail as you would a melodrama, still they often provide opportunities for musical coloring. For East Indian or Hindu scenes "The Star of India" (Bratton) is a good number. It is also effective in African and jungle pictures generally. Herbert's "Oriental Dance" is another useful number. For Chinese pictures "The First Born," "Highlanders' Patrol" and "Chinese Serenade" are good. Medleys and patriotic songs of Europe are so well known as to need no mention here. When you have fitted a scenic picture with music suggestive of its own locality, and introduced all required sound effects, you have done all there is to do. If you don't happen to have on hand the required piece of music, get as near to it in character as you can. Even if your picture is laid in Tangiers or Turkey, you could use one of the above in a pinch; it will at least sound characteristic and provide a novelty number for your program. (You know the concert idea of the program is not to be ignored.) If you have nothing characteristic of the countries shown or nothing that by a stretch of the imagination might be suggestive, play any concert number you like; but I earnestly advise you to provide yourself with something of this class as soon as possible. Oriental music and songs of other nations are in constant demand and your library surely should contain these. Industrial pictures seldom call for any special music. I've said that before, but it naturally falls in place here. Scientific pictures likewise. These give opportunity for selections or anything you wish which will round out your concert program. Now let us consider these three classes of pictures disposed of for all time (there is really nothing to suggest further as to their musical settings) and consider the others.

First on the list we find "Tragedy—Shakespearean order." These abound in court scenes, royal and titled personages, combats, light comedy, and sentiment. A grand march (4-4 time) or a polonaise is ponderous and dignified and fits very well when the characters are gathering for a serious scene—a coronation for example, or a council or departure for battle. For the lighter scenes a gavotte or minuet is useful. "La Cinquantine" can sometimes be used as a fill-in. Any ordinary andante (except modern songs) will be appropriate for the pathetic and sentimental scenes. Battles and other combats of course call for "Hurrys." If "A. J. O." will send me specific questions (in care of this department) I will be glad to answer them if I can, and if not, they can be passed over to our readers for suggestions. I should like to make this page a sort of a meeting place where we can all get together and exchange views for our mutual benefit. So come on with your communications; make them brief and to the point, and if they require a personal answer don't forget to enclose a stamp. I get a good many of that kind, and it makes an inroad into my postage stamps.

The common inquiry is for titles of descriptive numbers. Occasionally I can slip in a few names on this page, but a list of any length would completely fill it, and while it might all be for the good of the picture, it would not be practical to devote ourselves entirely to the advertising of music publishers' wares. Such letters will receive personal answers if a stamp is enclosed.

"James T." asks: "What should I play for acrobatic scenes such as Pathe gives us?" If you mean pictures of acrobats, play just the same as you would for a troupe of real performers doing a vaudeville turn. Give them a long chord or a flourish on each appearance and play a galop or lively march for the act.

"Jessie O. S., Chicago, Ill." inquires as to what should be played when the picture stops and a letter is shown on the screen. A letter, newspaper article, or any document or writing or printing which a character is reading or writing, is a part of the scene in which it is shown and whatever you may be playing at the time it is shown should be kept up until the action of the scene warrants a change or stop.

A few suggestions are appended for music to the following pictures: "Elder Alden's Indian Ward."

Lively till Indian enters;
Indian music till change of scene;
Heavy mysterious (bass solo) till change;
Repeat same number till change;
Indian War Dance (Belstedt's) till sub-title Thanksgiving Day;
At next change of scene, mysterious (pizzicato effect) till change of scene;
When Indian looks in window "heavy mysterious" (same as third number) till attack;
"Hurry" till death of Chief Squantum;
Soft Indian music till finish.
"The Golden Supper":
Gavotte till "After the Wedding," then
Anitra's Dance (by Grieg) till "Later," then
Massinet's Elegy till funeral procession; then
Chopin's Funeral March till Camilla moves hand;
Rubenstein's Melodie in F till "The Golden Supper."
Scarf Dance (short) till Camilla enters;
Short pause.
When Lionel sees Camilla, "Oh Tender Moon" (from Faust) till end of picture.

A CHEERFUL IDIOT.

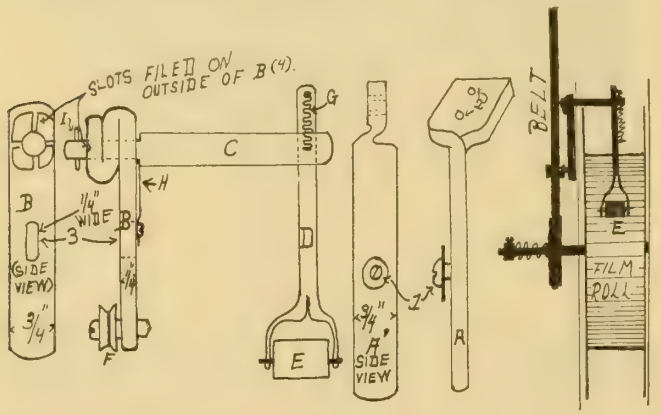
During a recent trip to West Hoboken, I visited a theater which enjoys the reputation of being the largest house and of exhibiting the best pictures in that location. The building, an old church with a good size balcony and a very high ceiling, affords an ideal opportunity for proper projection and the presentation of a good show. The operator, knowing his business, is alive to his opportunities and takes great advantage of them; the result being almost perfect projection on a well lighted screen. If the management could be induced to run a straight moving picture show with no musical accompaniment, I am sure their house would be more popular, for at present the only jarring notes come from the space between the first row of seats and the stage.

I sat within three or four rows of "the orchestra" and can honestly say, that last night was my closest observation of a cheerful idiot. The drummer sat sideways on his chair without once looking at the screen, and in turn played with all his toys, with as much physical effort as he could possibly put forth. During the projection of a Vitagraph subject, a very beautiful drama, while a mother was in the act of gathering up and putting away the playthings of her baby daughter who had died a day or two previous, the fool at the traps, instead of producing as soft music as possible, brought his basedrum and cymbals into evidence and imitated the crying of an infant on a long horn, when the child had already died and was buried. Again, during an Edison picture, showing a man climbing the Alps in search of a certain flower to be found only at the top of the mountain; the man gets within arm's length of the object of his search, when the stick he has for support slips and he starts on a hurried trip to the bottom of the mountain gathering momentum as he goes. During the fall, the man with the traps demonstrated his ability to make a noise, and imitated the crashing of glass and the falling of heavy objects. No sound effects at all were necessary.

This drummer has been criticized in several other articles in these columns. If he only knew how he kills the interest of the pictures by his hammering on the nearest sound effect, he would try to study the interest of the audience by studying the picture and the exact effects it needs. A. McA.

Another Tension Equalizer.—A. H. Huelsman, Covington, Ky., contributes the following: "I wish to submit sketch of an automatic tension equalizer now attached to and successfully working on my Power's No. 5. If you think it worth while, place it in the Department; otherwise the waste-basket is handy. Also if you have any suggestions to make as regards same will be glad to have you set them forth. I am always looking for suggestions and willing to accept advice. Have rigged up a lamp in the front of my lens to watch framing, as you advised in the last issue of the World, and it works fine. I have been having a lot of trouble making patches with the Edison waterproof film. I now wet the waterproofing, where I wish to scrape it off, with alcohol, and off it comes without any trouble at all; I then make the patch in the usual way. It takes a little longer, but you can make a much better job. Well, Mr. Richardson, I think I had better quit before you call me down for writing nonsense."

My dear boy, you have queer ideas as to nonsense. I am sure our readers as well as myself will be quite willing to listen to all the nonsense of that kind you can produce. The tension equalizer is just a little hard to understand and I'm not sure that I grasp the idea. I publish it to see what our readers will be able to make out of it.



"A" is a brace made of ¼ to ¾-inch wrought iron. At "1" is a ¼ standard machine screw with washer, and at "2" are drilled two holes for screws, with which the brace is fastened to the bottom of the machine board, the top part being twisted around in a way that will be understood by looking at the two cuts "A" and "A'." "B" we will call a sliding rod made of the same material. I bend this down and up to make a better bearing for the rod "C," drilling a 5-16 inch hole through as shown. There is a slot filed for the ¼-inch screw on "A," as shown, in center of "B." (See 3.) "C" is made of ½-inch square iron turned down to 5-16 inch at one end where same fits into the hole drilled in "B." "D" is a piece of 5-16 inch cold rolled steel, split and forked, to hold roller. "E" is a grooved pulley on the end of "B." "G" is a small spring connected to "C" and "D." "H" is a flat spring to brace against shutter on "C." "I" is a pin in "C" to fit in slots cut in "B" at "4." It operates as follows: When take-up reel gets a certain amount of film on it, it presses against "E." Naturally "E," "D," "C' and "B" raise slot in "B," allowing it to raise until it reaches the end of slot, when it stops, as it cannot put any more pressure on belt. The spring "G" now gives and allows "D" to travel until reel is full. When reel is full, throw your roller to one side and it will stay there while you are taking out the full reel and replacing with an empty one. The pin in the end of "C" fits in slot "B," holding it there by pressure of spring "H" against shutter on "C." Put brace "A" on bottom of machine-board towards the lamp house. You will only be able to put this in one corner of the magazine. The foregoing is explanation supplied by neighbor Hueslman.

* * *

Various Things.—From Len F. Sargent, manager Sargent's Opera House, Laona, Wis., comes the following: "Enclosed find $1.50 for the Handbook. I run a picture show in my house once a week, the location being a very small northern Wisconsin town, but we always do a capacity business. My band plays before the show and between the reels the orchestra gets busy. I occasionally introduce home talent vaudeville, which takes very well. I put on three reels and two songs, charge 15 and 25 cents and fill my house just as readily as I would at 5 and 10 cents. As I am a fairly good mechanic, being a locomotive engineer at work every day, I do my own operating and must say that I project as good a picture as I have seen in a long while. I recently took a trip to some of the larger cities, looking for ideas to improve my show, and I believe that the majority of the houses I saw make too large a picture. I fail to see good projection in such huge magnification. I read the Trouble Department regularly and learn a great deal from it. Have read with particular interest the letters from B. M. Merrill, Edgar, Neb. I have exactly the same outfit as he, excepting that I use a double throw switch so that I can use either city lights, A. C., or my own D. C. Mr. Merrill is right in saying he has a special electric engine. This make of engine operates with a throttling governor, which makes for regular explosions at every other revolution of the flywheel, hence there is hardly any fluctuation in its speed."

Neighbor Sargent, I will shake hands with you, because in the long ago I was a locomotive engineer myself and belonged to the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers for several years. I would call particular attention to the fact that friend Sargent fills his house at 15 and 25 cents with three reels of film and two songs. Others, I am very sure, could get those prices if they only thought so, and if they only used good film combined with first-class projection.

* * *

An Address.—Greenville, Miss., writes as follows: "Will you please give me the address of the manufacturers of Climax resistance wire?"

Climax resistance wire is made by the Driver-Harris Company, Arlington, N. J.

* * *

Outside Shutter.—From Seattle, Wash., comes the following: "I notice in the Moving Picture World of November 19 that Richmond, Vt., asks about putting a shutter in front on an old Edison machine. For his information permit me to give a few details regarding an experiment of that kind which was entirely successful and gives a practically flickerless picture on an aluminum curtain at about normal speed. The machine in question was a two-pin Edison made over into a one-pin. The shutter was patterned after the Power's No. 6 (except that the wing covering the movement of the intermittent was made about 1-5, or 72 degrees, of the circle and the other two wings about 54 degrees each. The shutter was made 8½ inches in diameter and extended out in front of the magazine and revolved in a bearing supported by a bracket made of iron 1 inch wide and ⅛ inch thick. The bearing being about 1½ inches long made of a battery connector. The connection was made by a rod same size as the little bevel pinion shaft and two 'universal joints,' one fastened on where the old shutter was and the other just inside of the outer bearing, allowing about 3-16 inch for end play. The connections on the long rod were soldered to do away with just that many set screws. An oblong hole was cut through the upright board for the shaft to pass and work up and down for framing. The 'universal joints' were made of two battery connectors sawed in two in the middle and two steel cubes 3-16 inch thick. The holes were drilled through the steel cubes as close as possible without coming in the same plane.

"I am aware that this is a poor description, but it is the best I can do and I cannot make any drawing to help you out."

We are indebted to you, Seattle, for your kindness in describing the shutter. I am sorry you cannot make a sketch of the shutter connection, but believe our readers can understand what you are driving at all right, particularly after looking at the illustration in a recent issue of the Department.

* * *

A Carbon Jaw.—From Joseph Swan, Albany, N. Y., member of I. A. T. S. E., No. 14, comes the following: "I note that Chicago has carbon jaw trouble. I submit herewith diagram of a carbon jaw that will do away with all his breakage. Such a jaw properly taken care of will last a lifetime. What I mean by 'properly taken care of' is that the set screw 'A' should be backed out when it gets through at night. If you let them stay set up tight while the lamp gets cold you will have a hard job getting them out. I hope you will give this space so that the boys can make themselves a pair of these and do away with carbon jaw breakage. Or, if they do not care to make them I shall be glad to send a pair on receipt of $2.00."

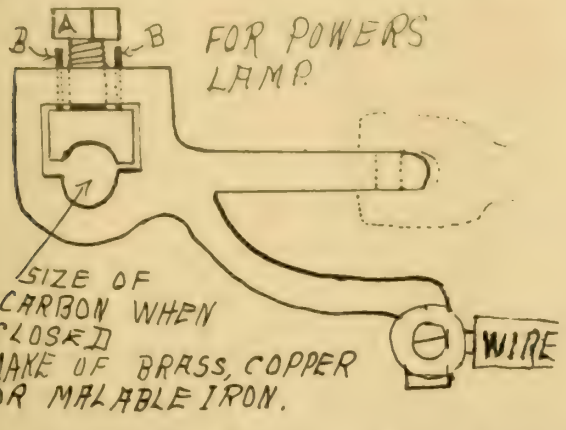
(Neighbor Swan's address is Proctor's Theater, Albany, N. Y.)



The excellent drawing, of course, receives space and neighbor Swan has our thanks for submitting it. I would suggest two things, however, one being that the jaw and shoe be made "V" shaped instead of round so that it take either ½ inch or ⅝ inch carbon; also that there will be no trouble about setting of screw "A" sticking, if it be kept well lubricated with good plumbago. The screw should be taken out every day, greased with vaseline, the vaseline wiped off and the screw coated with powdered plumbago.

* * *

A Little Later.—From R. C. Hart, who contributed the article, "Another Take-up Equalizer," page 1288, December 3, comes the following: "I was gratified to see my idea set forth in the Trouble Department, notwithstanding the fact there must have been much material of probably greater importance waiting publication. I am very busy just now, but a little later will find time to illustrate my idea at greater length. I am certain it is practical if properly worked out. The Trouble Department is certainly a great thing for everyone who thinks, and who is honestly interested in the art or science, or both, of motion picture projection."

Neighbor Hart, we shall await further explanation of the equalizer at your earliest convenience.

* * *

A Useful Idea.—From Baltimore, Md., comes the following: "Enclosed find a piece of film showing the way I prepare mine in order to be able to frame the picture before starting. You see I scrape off the emulsion on the dividing lines of one picture so the aperture edges show sharp and clear through the scraped part and I get it exactly right. It doesn't injure the film, nor does it show on the screen, since I always scrape the first or second picture of the title. I am sorry to have to report that salaries here are just about half what they should be. As far as I am able to find out, $15.00 is the highest wages paid in Baltimore, and for it one is compelled to work from eight to nine hours per day. Very few get even that much. The fault is that there are too many would-be managers who do not know good projection when they see it, therefore anything will do. With them, anyone who can thread a machine and twist a crank is a 'good enough' operator. Our Union (Local 181, I. A. T. S. E.) secured the passage of a law by last Legislature compelling operators to pass an examination; also requiring that they be at least twenty-one years of age. We thought that would run a lot of the would-be operators out of business, and it did to a certain extent. Still, there are now about 130 licensed men here, while I do not think over 50 of them are really competent. The Board, which consists of an operator, Geo. Gregory; an electrician, Marion Pierce, and a fire underwriter, Mr. Whittier, seem to have the same set of questions for every applicant. Naturally you know the result—one would-be would learn the answers and proceed to instruct the rest what they were. You cannot blame the Board, in one way, since, of course, they did not know who was who, and had to pass all who answered their questions correctly. I think, however, every man should have received a different examination, which would have cut out the crowding of applicants by those who had already passed the board. The Baltimore managers, in opposing our efforts to try to give them good operators, have been attempting to have the law changed to allow 19-year-old men at the examination. They control many theaters here, and, so far, however, they have not succeeded, and I do not believe they will. If they could only learn how much better their business would be if they would place their projection in the hands of competent men, paying sufficient salary to encourage good work, how much better it would be for everybody. They seem, however, on the contrary, to think the cheaper the labor the more money they make. There are a few waking up, I believe, and I am certainly glad to see it. We have a hard time getting our men to join our Union, as they seem to be afraid of their jobs. They do not seem to realize that if all joined the managers would then be obliged to treat us fairly and advance salaries to at least a decent figure.

I can certainly sympathize with you, Baltimore, for I know just what you are up against, though I have never had the pleasure of visiting your beautiful city. I wish I might have the opportunity and pleasure of speaking to the boys in Baltimore, and to the managers as well. The improving of the conditions of labor, after it has fallen into such a deplorable state as the operators of Baltimore seem to be enjoying, is a long up-hill struggle, particularly if you are handicapped by managers and owners blind to their own best interests. I most sincerely wish, Baltimore, that I could help you boys down there in some way. You certainly have my best wishes and my sympathy, though, of course, I know that sympathy does not pay any board bills. If there is anything you can suggest by which I can be of assistance in bettering your conditions, do not hesitate to let it be known. Both myself and our readers are indebted to you for the film scraping idea. Taken in conjunction with the lamp recently described, it is most excellent. I would suggest you hand your chief examiner the article "Information Desired," Trouble Department, November 19 issue.

* * *

Arc Glasses.—Ashland, Wis., writes as follows: "Somewhere I have heard that one can get a pair of glasses through which the arc can be looked at without straining the eyes. Can you tell me where such an article can be procured, and what is the price? I would like very much to be able to look at the arc and study its action. Have tried glasses of different colors, smoked glasses and about everything I can think of, but they do not seem to fill the bill."

Yes, Ashland, I can fix you up all right. There are spectacles made from what is called French arc glass, through which the arc can be readily examined. These glasses are, however, quite expensive, varying from $2.75 to $3.00 or $4.00. Shade No. 6 is the right glass. Your city optician will doubtless be able to procure them for you.

Some two years ago, however, I discovered a combination of two colors in glasses which I like even better than the French arc glass. With these glasses one can look at the arc, no matter how powerful it may be, for an hour, without the least bit of strain on the eyes, and yet every detail of the action of the arc can be seen. I will furnish you two pieces of this glass, one of each color, four inches square, for $1.00. Or, I will furnish you a pair of glasses made of the combination for $2.50.

* * *

Condenser Breakage and Other Things.—Indiana (name of town suppressed) writes as follows: "As regards the matter of condensers breaking, here is the scheme I have found to be very successful during the past six years: I set my new condensers up inside the lamp house on the off side of the lamp, being sure they do not lean over and touch the lamp jaws, but at the same time placing them as close to the arc as I can get them. This scheme has proven very successful with me and may be of assistance to others. If some of the operators of to-day, who think they have to figure out some tough propositions, had been obliged to buck the game seven or eight years ago, when authoritative information on anything pertaining to projection was mighty scarce and the operator was the only man with the show who even knew how to thread a machine, they would soon come to the conclusion that the problems of to-day are comparatively easy of solution. I have seen quite a few of the old-style machines, but the first I ran was a Lubin, with an arc lamp unenclosed and the condensers just held in place in front of the arc. The films were 50 to 75 feet long and endless. If one should run one of those films to-day the audience would start a riot. My next machine was an old-style Power's, with a wooden frame and a chain feed from the crank to the upper sprocket. I remember once in a little town in Texas there was no current. There was, however, an old dynamo in a sawmill nearby. I managed to put it in running order but could only find enough wire in town to run part of the circuit. I got out of that by using some old tee rails about one one-hundredth of a second and then your fuses in place of wires and keeping a couple of men nearby to prevent their falling apart.

"Out here a show consists of two reels with an illustrated song between, the whole thing lasting about forty-five minutes, which, with a five-minute intermission, makes a show every hour. I am glad to see operators and managers setting forth their views and ideas in the Trouble Department. As for myself, I would be glad to help any reader of the Department in any way that I possibly can at any time."

The last sentence of your letter, Indiana, shows the right spirit. As to the problems of other days compared with those of to-day, they were tough in their way, true, but nevertheless the operator of to-day is confronted with even more serious questions. In the times you speak of, Indiana, the operator ran into many propositions of the kind you name which called forth all his ingenuity to successfully cope with. On the other hand, projection itself was a joke, machines were of the crudest design, and acting, photography and about everything else was in the "baby" stage. The moving picture drew its patronage very largely because of its novelty. Everybody paid to see it merely as a curiosity. To-day, however, all that has been changed. Up-to-date projection machinery, the highest grade of acting and photography, practically perfection in film perforation and beautiful theaters devoted to the photoplay, have, or are, combining to compel the operator in his turn to very greatly improve his work and place upon the screen perfect projection, without which all the other things named go for almost nothing. The operator of to-day must be something of a mechanic and considerable of an electrician, with a touch of the artist in his nature, if he expects to attain the highest results, and over and above this he must be intelligent, active and quick of perception. The operator of to-day, in a sense, "renders" a film just exactly in the same sense that a musician renders the note of the master. This may sound to some of you a little far-fetched, and to some of you it may even seem absurd. I wish, however, to reiterate that it is the absolute fact, and a fact which sooner or later is bound to be recognized by managers and owners of theaters, as well as by everyone else. As to the length of your show, Indiana, I do not exactly see how you can run two reels of film and one song in forty-five minutes and get the best effect on all films. Probably you mean that the time varies, approximating forty-five minutes.

* * *

Slow Speed.—Brooklyn, N. Y., contributes the following: "I have been turned down in several places because I would not run a 1,000-foot reel of film in 14 minutes or less. Do you think that is right? I am a little "new," but I can do the work and also am able to maintain the best possible light with A. C. or D. C. Kick No. 2: Do you consider a man who wears glasses inferior to the man who does not? I have been told that it would be very hard to get a position. I would like to get work somewhere in Brooklyn where they want good results."

No manager who takes any pride whatever in his show or who is at all fit to have charge of a theater would want, or even allow, an operator to run 1,000 feet of film through in 14 minutes under any circumstances. The managers who do this simply ruin the reputation of their own houses and gradually murder the goose that lays the golden egg. The "manager" who pursues this course is the type of man who is unable to see exceeding three-eighths of an inch in front of his own nose. The house is full and people are waiting outside. That is enough! Mr. "Manager" goes crazy! He cuts and slashes the vaudeville acts, if any there be, and orders the operator to "rush them through." Result: The show is ruined and the audience disgusted. He gains a few nickels or dimes that night, but for every one he gains he will lose five in the future. Speed should be governed wholly by the action of the scene being projected. It varies from 40 to 80 feet per minute but ordinarily remains between 50 and 70.

No, Brooklyn, the wearing of glasses is not necessarily a sign of defective vision. Spectacles are very frequently worn to correct other things than faults of vision, strange as that statement may seem. My own stenographer who writes these lines has perfect vision and yet she wears glasses, which are worn by reason of some defect of the muscles controlling the eye. The operator should and must have keen vision. He should, however, be judged, not by whether he wears glasses or does not wear them, but wholly, solely and entirely by the result he places on the screen. Anyone desiring to give Brooklyn a trial will be furnished his address by application to the Editor of this Column.

Transformer Action.—New York City asks the following: "In the issue of December 3, page 1286, Chicago, Ill., wanted to know what would happen should he connect his transformer to D. C. lines. You answered, 'You would get a flow of current on the secondary side, which would last would blow.' Now, Mr. Richardson, what I want to know is, why would those fuses blow? This brings to my mind another thing concerning which I am puzzled: A transformer connected on A. C. won't blow any fuses, as you say it will if connected on D. C. Now, why won't it blow fuses on A. C. as well as on D. C.? We know that unless there is some resistance through which the current must pass there will be a short-circuit. If there is none and we, therefore, have a short-circuit, why don't the fuses blow? I hope you will not criticise these as 'Foolish Questions, Series 23.' Another thing. Suppose my employer gives me four extra condensers, two 6" and two 7". I place these on my rheostat which is connected to 110 volt 60 cycle arc. Three days afterwards every single condenser is cracked (doubtless by the heat of the rheostat). Does this signify carelessness on my part, and is the employer in the right when he wants me to pay for them or discharges me? Which gives the more heat, the lamp or rheostat? This is to settle a dispute."

Well, New York, as regards the transformer matter, you circle all around the thing and practically answer it for yourself. One end of the primary coil of the transformer (inductor, compensarc, etc.) is connected directly to one line of the circuit and the other end of the coil to the other line. When connected to A. C. the alternations of the current set up a strong magnetic field in the iron core around which the coil is wound. A coil acting in this magnetic field becomes, in effect, a choke coil, limiting the flow of current in accordance with the amount of power being used on secondary, plus the loss in the transformer itself. When, however, you connect the primary coils to direct current lines, there is no such magnetic field set up except at the instant the current starts and stops, which, of course, is when you throw in your switch and pull it out. When you throw the switch in there is, for an instant, magnetization of the core and we have a wave of current on the secondary and then—nothing, except a dead short-circuit, which, of course, blows the fuses. To thoroughly understand this, you should get some good work on transformers and study it. I do not know where you can find such works in New York City, but in Chicago the Public Library has a number which may be studied in the reading room without charge.

Space forbids me giving a detailed explanation of the magnetic action of the transformer. I might add, however, that I had been expecting somebody to ask that identical question.

As regards the condenser matter, I am afraid I shall have to decide against you in that matter, in this way: If you simply laid the condensers on your rheostats, using it as a shelf, that was rather a careless thing to do. If, however, you laid them there as an experiment, to temper them, I should say you might better have tried one lens first to see how it worked out. There is heavy vibration in many rheostats when they are working on A. C., though I do not think it could possibly be sufficient to break a condenser lens. I think that the breakage was due to the heating of the lenses and their sudden cooling off on account of drafts of cold air. I do not really think the manager ought to make you pay for all of those lenses, but I am inclined to think that under the circumstances you might fairly shoulder half of the loss and consider the lesson as worth the money. The arc is far hotter than the rheostat.

* * *

Information Wanted.—Indiana (name of town suppressed) writes as follows: "This is the first time I have been in trouble for a long time, but I am stumped now. I want to know how to get into the oil casing of the intermittent movement of the Power's No. 6. I took the screws out and tried everything I could think of, but could not seem to make it work."

To get the Power's No. 6 intermittent movement open, you take off the lower (take-up feed) sprocket and take its shaft out. Next look on the inside end of the shaft of the large gear which drives the lower sprocket and belt-wheel and you will see a brass collar held in place by a set screw. Loosen this set screw and pull the gear and shaft out. Now set your frame-up lever clear up and remove the screws from the oil casing. Some of the oil casing covers are put on with shellac and you may have to tap the cover slightly to loosen it. I do not see, however, what good it is going to do you to get into the casing, since there is not a thing in the world you can do in the way of adjustment. When you get the casing open all you will see is the back of the cam. To tell you how to remove the cam cross, I would have to know just what type of framing carriage you have. If you have an oil casing with oil cup near bottom of casing you can eliminate lost motion in intermittent sprocket by loosening set screw holding left hand intermittent shaft bushing. On its under right hand edge will be seen two small holes. Stick a punch in one of these holes, and by tapping very lightly and carefully turn the bushing slightly, shoving the holes from you, until the intermittent is snug but not too tight. Re-tighten set screw and the job is done.

* * *

Turning Sprocket Around. C. S. Clarke, Brenham, Tex., contributes the following: "For the benefit of those using Power's No. 5 machines, when hooks are worn on the intermittent sprocket teeth, if they will take out the pins holding the sprocket to the spindle and change ends with the sprocket it will run the same as a new one and thus give double wear. I know this will work for I am using mine that way now. It only takes a few minutes to make the change and in every respect is equal to a new sprocket."

We are greatly obliged to you, neighbor Clarke, for your kindness in sending in this suggestion. It holds good, not only with the Power's, but with other machines as well. What friend Clarke means is that the intermittent sprocket be removed from its spindle and turned end for end, thus causing it to revolve in a direction opposite to what it formerly did. This presents the opposite side of the teeth to the film, and, as Mr. Clarke says, very largely increases the useful life of the intermittent sprocket. The lower or take up feed sprocket may also be changed in a similar manner to good advantage, when it becomes worn.

* * *

This Sounds Queer.—Conway Springs, Kan., writes as follows: "I am a constant reader of the Moving Picture World, especially the Trouble Department, and will say that it has been of very great benefit to me and has increased my knowledge of operating and of the show business in general at least by two-thirds, thanks to you. I am now holding a good position here as manager an operator, at a good salary, but will soon lose same on account of a Wichita operator. The former owner of this house was a good show man and we had good film service from the Wichita Film and Supply Company. A good light and a steady picture got us the business. He sold out, however, to a farmer fresh from the country and to him my work looked easy. He thought, of course, that my salary was naught but a waste of money. He, therefore, sent a friend of his, also fresh from the country, to Wichita to learn operating. This man gave a Wichita operator $10.00 for a week's course on a machine and at the end of a week he was turned out as a first-class operator. Can you beat that? He is coming to relieve me. Now here is where the joke comes in. The operator in Wichita was trying to organize an operators' union, which, of course, in itself was all right and very creditable, but do you think, Mr. Richardson, a man who will certify a man as a first-class operator after having taught him just one week (a man who knew absolutely nothing at all about operating, I mean), has any business as a member of the union? I would certainly like to hear your honest opinion in this matter."

No man on the face of God's footstool can teach a man the trade of operating in a week, or teach him to be a first-class operator in quite a number of weeks. No, I do not think that Wichita operator has any business organizing unions or belonging to unions if he is guilty of what you accuse him. Had he given the man a bona-fide course of instruction and turned him out properly equipped with knowledge, plus some practical experience, that would have been quite different.

* * *

From Cleveland.—H. C. Kunzmann, 2520 West Fourteenth street, Cleveland, Ohio, writes as follows: "I address you these few lines in compliment of the work you are doing in the Trouble Department in the education of operators and managers for the purpose of improving projection. Good projection is the foundation stone of success in any picture theater. That goes without saying. I have never had the opportunity of meeting you personally, but hope to some day in the future. I wish to say right here that the World and yourself certainly deserve all the praise you have received. There is nothing like an operators' union when the members work hand-in-hand. Our Cleveland Union deserves great credit for the work done here. You will find a Union operator in every theater in Cleveland, with the exception of two, and, taking everything into consideration, fairly good projection is the rule. Your book, recently published, I find to contain everything necessary in the way of instruction to enable one to secure good projection results. It is one of the best text-books I have ever read and it should be in the hands of all operators who are interested in good work. Now, Mr. Richardson, there is one point to make clear. In recent years I have devoted much time to the study of carbons, especially those used in projection work. I have noticed in several issues of the World various complaints as regards carbons. Now, I would be very glad to give you or the operators who wish to write me direct, any information I may be possessed of as regards carbons; that is to say, in the matter of trouble they encounter in setting, sizes to use on given current conditions, or anything pertaining to the carbons. Will be very glad to devote my spare time in any way that will help to improve projection."

I thank you, friend Kunzmann, for your kind words; also on behalf of the Department readers, I thank you for your offer of information. I am sure the readers of the Column, as well as myself, will enjoy and profit by anything you are able to tell us concerning carbons.

So far as the Handbook is concerned, you are not the only one who is pleased with that little book. I only wish it might have been even more complete than it is, but I am thankful for the reception which has been accorded it. I can say, however, that I am not a bit ashamed of it, because practically everything in it except a few tables, was dug up out of nothing. It was, in a way, "created."

* * *

Shame on You!—Bartlesville, Okla. (Wm. E. May), sends the following: "Dear Editor: Mr. Frye, of the Bijou Theater of this city, and Miss Morse, the daughter of his partner, committed matrimony Sunday, December 4. They immediately started on a wedding trip and when the train left town were congratulating themselves on their escape without the usual rice trimmings. Their joy was short-lived, however, for presently from the smoking-car came six Bartlesville operators and a number of friends loaded to the gunwales with sacks of rice, etc. Appropriate signs were hung over the couple and tags like the enclosed were given to every person in the car. Our intentions are to meet the Newlyweds on their return, accompanied by a complete trap drummer's outfit. Another wedding is expected in the immediate future at this same theater."

Bartlesville, such proceedings are positively disgraceful. Aren't you ashamed of yourself? The "enclosed tag" reads as follows:

"Treat them kindly, for they are some mamma's darlings. He was afraid to go home in the dark, but he will soon be afraid to go home at all. She couldn't get the other fellow, so ———."

If I had been neighbor Frye I think I would have deserted the bride long enough to have chased you folks off the universe with a shotgun. Success and happiness to the bride and groom!

* * *

A Question.—Rock Island, Ill., writes as follows: "I am thinking of pulling off an advertising stunt. It is a novelty. I want to project a picture 35 feet wide on a 50-foot throw. Will you kindly advise me whether or not this can be done?"

I have written Rock Island a personal letter and I am going to ask the readers of the Column to answer this question. I want you to tell me whether it can be done or not and if it can be done on one machine and not on another, why? If you think it cannot be done at all, tell me why. In other words, explain the whole proposition, so far as you can. Now, let me see how many correct answers I will get.

NEW EXCHANGE IN THE SOUTH.

We were visited this week by H. T. Palmer and R. E. Boswell, of the Seminole Film Supply Company, Baldwin building, Bay street, Jacksonville, Fla. This is a newly incorporated company, composed of well-known Southern gentlemen. Mr. Boswell was formerly general manager of the Seaboard Air Line. With him is associated W. K. Haile, general superintendent of the Southern Express Company and one of the most popular men in the South. Mr. Palmer is also a man of means and has had considerable experience already in the film business. The other member of the firm, A. G. Martin, is a retired officer in the United States Navy. We do not know of a more solid and businesslike firm engaging in the film exchange business and wish them every success.

HANDBOOK OF MOTION PICTURE PROJECTION
By F. H. Richardson.
Cloth bound, $1.50. Postage free.

Were I a millionaire (which I am not, and never hope to be) with lots of loose cash awaiting investment, the last business I would invest it in is the moving picture business; either the manufacturing, the renting or the exhibiting end. For at the moment of writing the picture looks to me as though its life will not be a very prolonged one. I mean in respect of its pre-eminent position in the entertainment world. It does not look, in fact, as if the picture had come to stay in the larger sense. Frankly, I think it is losing its hold upon the American public. And this is the opinion of many noted entertainment magnates with whom I have been discussing this subject these last few weeks.

Six months ago these men, who were at the head of vast enterprises, were running the picture for all it is worth. Now their disposition is to cut the picture. They are men who for years have been identified with successful amusement enterprises in this country; whose business it has been to feel the pulse of the public and to make money out of it. The pulse of the public, according to these authorities, who look to the ticket office to tell them all they need know, is acting somewhat slowly in respect of the picture, which does not possess the magnetic power to-day that it did twelve months ago. In other words: in the opinion of these men, who are in the best position to judge, the picture has seen its zenith, and is now visibly on the decline. Money talks! The picture does not draw as much money as it did twelve months ago. Facts are stubborn things.

The American public is vaudeville mad. They are not play or theater mad; they are just vaudeville mad. You can read this for yourselves in the theatrical newspapers; you can see it for yourselves by studying what is being done in the entertainment world. Vaudeville is king! New York lives on vaudeville in the Fall, Winter and Spring months. So do other parts of the country. It looked as if at one time the picture would supplant vaudeville in popular, profitable esteem, but vaudeville has beaten the picture out of sight, as any intelligent modern entertainment caterer will tell you.

Why is this? Because the picture, generally speaking, is not good enough for the public. The quality of the picture is not keeping pace with the public demands. The handful of manufacturers who work under the Edison patent are indifferent to the taste of the public. Under this protected system, they make so much money that they need not care for the public taste. The result is: The public is retaliating. It is transferring its dimes and quarters from the moving picture treasury to the vaudeville treasury. What applies to these licensed manufacturers applies very, very largely to their Independent competitors. These people utterly fail to study the public needs. They underpay their help, from scenario writing to developing, and the result is dime novel mediocrity which the public is revolting against by severely staying away from the moving picture house and going to the vaudeville theater. Considering, too, that the fate of the moving pictuce largely depends upon its treatment by the unmitigated nincompoops who call themselves operators, and you have another powerful cause operating against progress. Indifferent pictures—badly shown! Here are the chief causes of what looks like the imminent downfall of the picture in pre-eminent public esteem.

These are rather pessimistic ideas, dear brethren, but they have been arrived at after many discussions, much observation, much thought, and the study of a mass of irrefragable facts. "Why don't you run pictures only?" I said some time ago to one of the best known amusement caterers in New York City. He replied that the picture was not enough to fill his house: "It may be good enough for a 'Nickelette.' or one of those shacks; but it won't hold a theater audience in New York City. Speaking generally, the picture is not good enough in quality. Here and there we have attractive subjects, but mostly the makers send us very senseless stuff which does not please the public." I am quoting this man almost literally. And what he said to me months ago has been said to me recently by the other entertainment magnates referred to.

"The Picture on Its Trial," "Marking Time," "Are We Going Forward or Backward?" "Poorly Paid Scenarios," "Blunders or Wonders of Kinematography," etc., etc., etc., etc. Such are the headings of articles that have recently confronted the reader of this paper. I have looked upon the articles with a certain amount of interested pity, for I knew that they were nearer the truth than their writers thought. I suppose that there is no branch of industry that comes in for so much pessimistic criticism as the moving picture. The cause for it rests, not with the public, who are ready to welcome good moving pictures, but with the manufacturers and the exhibitors. The first do not make good subjects; the second do not have the films properly shown to the public.

The manufacturers are making too much money; a very evil state of things, because this renders them indifferent to real industry in the making of their pictures; they are content to have stupid, stale stories and indifferent acting. They are content to keep to the beaten track instead of trying out originality and freshness. They do not care. The public these last few years has handed them some very easy money, indeed. They have been spoilt, these manufacturers. And now to-day the public is realizing that it is worshipping false gods and it is boycotting their mediocre pictures. A very gloomy outlook for the future of the picture, eh?

And several of these picture makers are talking "quality" without knowing what "quality" means. How can an ex-huckster, who has broken into the picture game, know anything about pictorial quality in graphic matters? Or an ex-bellboy, or an ex-tailor, or an ex-advertisement man, or an ex-bookmaker? I do not want to be rude or offensive, but these are some of the personalities in whose hands the destiny of the moving picture reposes. Can you wonder, therefore, that minds of this type fail to understand the requirements of the public? Those minds are deficient in knowledge of the first principles of the subjects they are supposed to deal with. When I consider some of the personalities behind the advertisements of many of these crude pictures I laugh outright for sheer scorn. I won't say I am tickled to death—I am simply amazed at the impudence of these hucksters posing as authorities on the making of pictures! ! ! !

It is lamentable; it is tragic; it is awful to contemplate that any part of the destiny of the moving picture should rest in hands that should be more properly employed in guiding a push cart in the lower East Side of New York City, than in directing stage plays and making "pictures" of them. I say it is lamentable. It is something more: it is deplorable that the future of a great industry should tremble in the balance simply because the men at present in charge of it are not equal to the demands made upon their brains. Bah! They have not got any brains. They have only got pocket which they are filling as quickly as possible in spite of their ignorance and stupidity. This is why the moving picture is going, or at any rate threatens to go, out of popularity. The picture is not good enough because the people responsible for its production are not good enough to make good pictures. There you have cause and effect in a nutshell.

Dark as the picture is that I have drawn, yet it has its lighter side. There are some really good and progressive men in the field; the trouble is that there are not more. Supply does not keep pace with demand. There is room in this country for twenty really good PICTURE MAKERS. I repeat, PICTURE MAKERS. At present there are not as many as would take up the fingers on one hand. That is why entertainment magnates are looking somewhat suspiciously on the picture as a drawing card. That is why vaudeville instead of being supplanted by the picture is supplanting it. That is why the picture outlook, to my mind, is somewhat uncertain. No, dear brethren, I have not got Mal de Tete, Mal de Vent or mal de anything; I am just giving you an impression left upon my mind by some very prolonged discussions that I have lately had with people in the entertainment field who were once favorably disposed towards the picture and are now saying unkind things about it.

THOSE TITLES.

By F. H. Richardson.

I notice that of late there has been considerable discussion as regards the ever present evil of lost titles. By looking back over the issues of the past two years it will be found that the writer has on numerous occasions discussed that very matter, calling the attention of exchanges, exhibitors and operators to the importance of having ample title at the beginning of each film. I have also told operators, exhibitors and exchange men how the original title could be made to last almost as long as the film itself. But it seems that the exchange man is too dense, or too thoroughly taken up with the glamor of money making, to pay much attention to the details of his business, while the operator either does not stop to figure things out or he simply does not care, the exhibitor, of course, being, in either case, the goat.

Now, I shall again, for the benefit of exchange men, exhibitors and operators, tell you where the titles go—that is to say, what becomes of them—and how the wasting away of titles can be stopped. It is all so simple that it would seem a child could grasp the idea without even being told. Evidently, however, a great many grown-up men, men of brains if you please, have not as yet "caught on."

When a new film comes from the manufacturer it has a short leader ahead of the title. Under modern practice, since take-ups have come into general use, it requires about three or four feet of film to thread into the take-up and give the machine a turn or two to be sure that all is right. This means that the threading is done on the title part of the film. Threading is very hard on the film. In many instances where the operator is rushed he won't get it quite right on the sprocket and some damage will be done when the machine starts before the film rights itself or runs off the sprocket entirely, all of which, of course, is rough on the title. But over and above this, there is a constant wastage of title from two causes, one being that the film is thrust under the spring clip of the lower reel in threading. Now, this spring may be pretty stiff and when the film is re-wound, instead of pulling out from under the clip it may be that an inch or two of the film will be torn away. This very frequently happens. Also it is the custom with many operators to double over an inch or two of the film before thrusting it under the spring clip of the reel. This renders the pulling off of the end of the film all the more liable, and when it happens, it, of course, takes from two to three inches of film. It is safe to say that the average operator will amputate from one to three inches of title in the course of a day's run.

The second cause of title wastage is that in re-winding, when the film is fully re-wound and pulls off from the take-up reel, it is no uncommon thing to have the full reel revolve several times before it is stopped, the end of the film thrashing around, slapping on the table or whatever the re-winder happens to be fastened to. This, of course, injures the title and gradually tears it away.

The above explains fully and completely what becomes of titles. Now, what is the remedy? It would seem that any man who knows anything at all about film ought to see what the remedy is, without even being told. It is all summed up in four words: Leaders of ample length; that is all there is to it. If exchange men would, as I long since preached to them, equip their films with from five to six feet of leader and keep them thus equipped, the title trouble would very quickly disappear.

The stock answer of the exchange men to this argument is that the operators steal leaders. That is quite true, Mr. Exchange Man, they do; and why? The answer is simple. If the operator is so fortunate as to get a five-foot leader to-day he knows darned well he will not, in all human probabilities, get another one for the next two months. But if you equip your films with ample leaders and keep them that way the incentive to amputate leaders will quickly disappear and you can readily accelerate the disappearance by charging the exhibitor two or three cents per foot for any leaders that do not come back.

Mr. Exchange Man, as a matter of plain common sense, get busy! As a matter of protection for you own property, equip your films with leaders and keep them thus equipped; not a little 18-inch imitation, but a leader not less than four, and preferably five feet long, so that the threading will be on the leader instead of on the title.

Mr. Exhibitor, as a matter of common sense and good business, why don't you insist on your films being equipped with a four or five foot leader?

Mr. Operator, as a matter of common sense and fairness, why don't you help out in this matter by letting those leaders alone when they do come to you?

And there you are!

SCENARIOS.

Mr. G. R. Warren's Letter Answered by Henry.

Mr. G. R. Warren, scenario editor for the Imp Company, in a letter addressed to the Editors of the World, and published on page 1324, issue of December 17, tells us of his ratlier sad experiences with scenarios for the moving picture play. He states that the company he represents has advertised in The Saturday Evening Post, Collier's Weekly, Munsey's, McClure's, the Cosmopolitan, New York and Chicago newspapers, and moving picture trade papers. From these advertisements, the Imp Company received over [illegible] answers, and found only fifty acceptable. To quote Mr. Warren: "A miserable one per cent." Mr. Warren goes on to say: "We would have saved thousands had we been able to buy good manuscripts at $100 apiece, without advertising for them." If the New England representative of the Moving Picture World may be pardoned for saying so, he feels that Mr. Warren greatly misdirected his energy and his money by advertising in the above mentioned publications. The advertising columns used by the Imp Company in its quest for good plots numbered among them some of the finest mediums in this country—but not for the moving picture manufacturers. These magazines and dailies have tremendous circulations. Of this there can be no question. But—they do not reach the people whom they must reach if superior scenarios are to be procured. The absolute truth of this statement can be most readily seen by reading Mr. Warren's letter itself. If these papers and journals had reached the right parties, no such percentage as 50 out of a possible 5,000 scenarios would have resulted. In short, the advertisements inserted by the Imp Company reached many hundreds of thousands of people—but they did not reach dramatic writers of repute and experience. However, such men are not at all hard to reach, provided, of course, the right means are employed. The way to procure "scenarios that contain a heart throb or a hearty laugh"—to again quote from Mr. Warren's letter—is the following: Personal letters should be written to writers of books, plays, etc., etc., who have gained reputation by virtue of their past work, asking them to submit scenarios for moving picture use. In other terms, moving picture manufacturers should get into business communication with reputable writers and dramatists, and put up a plain business proposition to them. By doing this the only cost is a 2-cent stamp, and "thousands" will not have to be spent—or rather wasted. Furthermore, we feel that Mr. Warren places too much stress on "$100 scenarios." Accepted manuscripts should be paid for on a fair, living price—sometimes considerably more than $100, sometimes less. The price to be based on the plot itself, and with due consideration of its nature and the time entailed in evolving the story. When the Moving Picture World in its recent editorial to which Mr. Warren replies, spoke of $100 as a price for scenarios, it had in mind a remuneration which was in line with the procuring of better plots, and gave the figure of $100 as opposed to $10 or $15 prices now in vogue; $100 cannot be made a set price, any more than can $15, if we are to see good scenarios in moving picture productions. The price must vary as the quality of the scenarios vary. Quality must be the barometer. The moving picture plot cannot by its very nature be made a one-priced commodity.

In conclusion, to return once more to our main point, instead of advertising in periodicals having an immense—but general—circulation, let the moving picture manufacturers (or those of them who desire to deliver the goods and be sure of continued prosperity) place themselves in direct and personal contact with the better class of writers of all descriptions, and enter into plain, every-day, matter-of-fact business arrangements with them. The manufacturer must specialize in his quest for scenarios. For instance, when the Imp Company, whom Mr. Warren represents, made its recent and sensational coup in retaining the services of the Count de Beaufort, it went straight to the latter and offered him a proposition. Do the same with the writers as you do with your talent, Mr. Warren, and the writer believes you will find some of the troubles in procuring superior scenarios behind you.

F. A. Tipton, of the Buffalo Bill and Pawnee Bill Company, will leave this week for Pennsylvania, where he will book the Wild West and Frontier pictures portraying Buffalo Bill, the old scout, in his last days with the show that bears his name. This series has proved to be a great drawing card and money maker for those who have exhibited them. For all those who desire any information in this State, we advise to communicate with Mr. Tipton at the Fort Pitt Hotel, Pittsburg, Pa.

New England Notes.

Two ministers and eighteen school teachers are leading a fight in Cliftondale, Mass., against the opening of a moving picture show in a structure which for years served as a church. The townspeople are said to be divided among themselves over the question, and already the Board of Selectmen have held a hearing in the matter. The church was occupied for some years by the Baptists. Later, after the building had been sold, the Baptists tried to buy back the property but were unable to raise sufficient funds. The present owner of the building leased the structure to a moving picture concern and the latter made ready to move in and start the ball rolling. Several meetings were held in opposition to this, and at present the matter is undecided. We do not see why the show should not be allowed. Let us hope good sense will prevail!

Beverly, Mass., is to have a new moving picture theater—the first one in President Taft's Summer residence town. Wonder if Big Bill will be a good patron of the moving pictures?

H. A. Kaull, formerly manager of the Star Theater, Newport, R. I., will be in charge of the new Colonial Theater, Newport, which will be opened shortly.

Harry Archer is now in charge of the Scenic Theater, Fall River.

The Gaiety Theater, Portsmouth, has reduced its admission fee to 5 cents. G. B. Whitman is in charge of this house.

Falmouth, Mass., has a new moving picture show which was built by Wetherell & Snow.

A new moving picture theater is now being built in Foresters' Hall, Weir, Mass.

H. A. Chenowith, manager of the Lawrence Theater, New London, Conn., has resigned his position and will be succeeded by Mab Rafferty. Mr. Chenowith goes to New Bedford, Mass., to take up the management of the new Comique Theater.

George Delmore, of the Bowdoin Square Theater, Boston, is running a program of moving picture and vaudeville at the Rockland Opera House, Rockland, Mass. Frank McKay, manager of the machine repairing department at the General Film Company, Boston, is interested with Delmore. Shows are given on Thursdays and Saturdays, and indications point to a good-sized business.

Memorial Hall, Lee, Mass., has been leased by J. J. Carey for moving pictures.

The Scenic Temple, Chelsea, Mass., is making extensive alterations, with a view to a general betterment of the whole house.

The Joy Theater has recently been opened in Berlin, N. H., by Dennis Campbell. Mr. Campbell reports that his business is just what the name of his new house implies—joy.

BOSTON, MASS.

Louis Boas, who has been in charge of Loew's Orpheum Theater, Boston, since its opening in September, has returned to Fall River, Mass., whence he came. Mr. Boas was also directing several houses in Fall River and found the strain too severe. Victor Morris, formerly manager of Loew's Elizabeth Theater, Elizabeth, N. J., is now in control of the house. A. L. Lazarus, the assistant manager under Mr. Boas, will remain there in his old capacity.

The Theater Comique, Tremont row, recently installed two new Power's Cameragraphs, No. 6. Some cities seem partial to one make of moving picture machine, while others lean towards a different make. Boston is very "strong" for the Power's No. 6. Practically every house which has installed new moving picture machines for the last year has purchased the Power's. Some say the machine stands the wear better; others state the picture projected is more clear, while still others feel that the pictures the Power's machines show are more steady and less trying on the eyes. Probably it is the combination of all these qualities that sells the machine so readily. It makes good.

Passing by one of Boston's prominent moving picture houses not long ago, we noticed this sign conspicuously hung in the lobby. "The next show starts in two minutes and runs till 11 P. M." We noticed that same sign an hour or so later when passing the theater again. It seems that the sign is usually placed in the lobby at 8.30 or 9 P. M. and remains there indefinitely. Something new and original in the way of advertising!

The Tremont Temple, Boston, is now showing licensed films and illustrated songs every Saturday evening to very pleasing audiences. This structure has been spoken of regularly for three years as a good proposition for a photoplay house. Nothing ever came of these rumors, and these Saturday night performances are the nearest it has ever come to being transformed into a moving picture theater.

* * *

At the time of the release of the fight pictures of the Jeffries-Johnson bout by the J. & J. Company, Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston announced that the exhibition of these films was not to be allowed. An exhibition was talked of at the Armory Athletic Association for Saturday, December 10. That His Honor had not changed his views in regard to the matter was clearly in evidence by the following letter received by all Boston theaters December 8: "The question of the exhibition of pictures representing pugilistic contests in this city has again arisen, and in order that my position may be clearly understood by all managers of amusement enterprises, you are hereby notified that no such exhibition will be permitted in any licensed theater, moving picture house, or hall, in Boston." Mayor Fitzgerald may not personally have any objection to the exhibition of fight films, but as the chief executive of Boston he no doubt made the decision with reference to petitions made on this matter by the clergy and others.

* * *

As was noted in these columns last week, the Globe Theater, Washington street, has again gone over to pictures and vaudeville. The change of policy evidently had a most deadly effect on the Premier and Unique Theaters, which are on either side of the Globe. Both of these houses have reduced their admission rates to 5 cents. The fee up to that time had been 10 cents. It would seem from these facts that the regular photoplay houses are seriously injured by the competition of regular playhouses who take up the picture and vaudeville game. We believe the reason for this condition is that the competition does not rest upon a basis of the quality of the shows given by the two theaters. The public does not give the regular moving picture house a fair chance as against the regular theater. People like to sit in theaters formerly charging admission rates of $2.00—even if the performance is not as high grade as that offered in the smaller moving picture theater beside it. That makes the competition unreasonable. Unless both parties are judged by the performances offered, the competition between the two houses cannot be called fair. In the case of the Premier and Unique it can be seen that both licensed and Independent service was of no avail. The Premier is Independent, the Unique licensed. The former uses no vaudeville, the latter does. These facts show that the shows are not to blame, as all the different combinations are presented by the two houses. This matter is a serious one.

* * *

Speaking of the reopening of the Liberty Theater, Tremont street, by the Automatic Vaudeville Company of New York, the World's New England representative had this to say in the issue of October 8, 1910: "The Liberty has several very poor features about it, the foremost of which are, a seating capacity of less than 300, no ventilation, a poor front and lobby, and a poor location. It would seem that these misfortunes were enough to doom any theater to failure." As the Liberty was closed permanently Sunday night, December 4, these predictions have been verified. The moving picture audiences are becoming more exacting every day, and "the best is none too good." Every moving picture house must be first class in every way, both as to its lobby and its pictures, if it expects to stand the strain.

* * *

The Motion Picture Screen Company, of Shelbyville, Ind., displayed its mirror screen before the directors of the Star Theater, Tremont row, during the week of December 5. A general exhibition of this patented screen will be given on Sunday, December 10, at one of Boston's local moving picture houses. The World's New England representative expects to advise his readers of the fact that one or more Boston houses have purchased a mirror screen in a very short time. At present the mirror screen has not been installed in any Massachusetts theater.

* * *

The Beacon Theater, Tremont street, recently cancelled its standing order for the Selig Company's releases and in its place chose the Edison films. Such a change as this is of more than ordinary interest, as it shows just how the wind is blowing. The writer was informed by this theater that it considered recent Edisons superior to the Selig releases, and that in the opinion of this house the Selig films were not nearly so good as formerly, while the Edison films of recent dates had been showing more uniform quality and general excellence.

HENRY.

THE NEW OXFORD THEATER IN BROOKLYN.

A visit to this new theater for the purpose of proving how it fills the place among the moving picture exhibitions was of interest. The building is a well arranged and prettily decorated one, and is generally convenient and attractive. The program, which is made up of vaudeville and moving pictures is well balanced and wholesome, a lack of suggestive extremes indicate a sane management.

Of the pictures which, of course, command the writer's closest interest, it is unfortunate to have to say that out of a series of five subjects, three of them had absolutely no title. If this is the fault of the exchange or the manufacturers, the exhibitors have good reason to complain, as it is absolutely absurd in "silent pictures" to throw them upon the screen absolutely nameless; indeed it is an imposition on the audience.

A very nice series of scenic views of river and lake taken upon a small steamer were very pretty, but lost their value as they were nameless.

"The Rival Barons," an Eclipse film, proved a very good series in every way, indeed, there is an air of superiority here that is noticeable, the personnel of the caste with the costumes and surroundings were especially appropriate to the times, probably Elizabethan English.

The next picture, without a title, represented a mining camp where a widow kept a boarding house for the men one of whom, "Sandy," marries her, only to prove that married life "is not perfect," and, aided by his associates he leaves her. A comedy full of life and wit, which, when able to consult my Moving Picture World, proved to be "The Widow of Mail Creek Flat," a Selig release, probably the writer was the only one of the audience to know the title. Another nameless picture suggests early French settlers illicitly selling whiskey to Indians. Pierre desires to marry Jean's daughter, who repulses him, whereupon, in revenge he betrays her father to the authorities causing him to lose his life; Pierre also loses the girl as she marries the soldier leader of the government troops. A good play, full of force but here the writer joins the audience in their ignorance, for he has been unable to find a title. It seemed to be a Kalem film.

It is worth while noticing that the illustrated song, "What is the World Without You," is not of the common variety and it is to be hoped here that this theater will join others in keeping away the trashy kind from their stage.

The musical accompaniments are not of the perfect kind, the military drum keeping up its ceaseless rumble and tatoo all the time the pictures are being shown; this is one of the writer's pet aversions, it is a common nuisance and will always receive his condemnation.

It is pleasing to add that this theater does not disfigure its handsome entrance with ugly posters, neither do they announce the day's pictures as they should, but yet, if they don't know, how can they?

Quantity instead of quality has been the bane of this business. If the New Oxford will show two good pictures with titles instead of five junk, we know that they would better please their patrons.

THE PROSPECT THEATER.

A New $250,000 Picture Palace for the Bronx.

The growth of a section or community is always indicated by the theaters that are being built within its precincts. The advent of the Bronx as a substantial theatrical district is established beyond all doubt with the erection of the New Prospect Theater, at Westchester avenue and 160th street. The New Prospect Theater is a sign of the times. It is an indication of the solid financial basis upon which the moving picture exhibiting business has finally come to rest.

It is also another sign of the times because it is one of a number of recently built theaters that point out to the observing eye that not only is the store show passing, but the ordinary size theater is also passing. It is an indication that theaters in the future will be larger than ever before. Seating capacity, of course, is the basis of this contention. A couple of decades ago there were large theaters built, probably seating as many people as the new Prospect Theater does now, but they had their drawbacks. They were great, barn-like structures in which the acoustics were awful. Whatever was said on the stage reached the audience like a roar of echoes.

In these latter day theaters that are built to accommodate tremendous audiences, the acoustic properties have been thought out to a nicety. As they have improved along other lines, so they have in this, and we doubt very much if hereafter another small theater will ever be built by those who have proper capital to put into such an enterprise.

The Prospect Theater represents the last word in theater building. There is not enough wood in it to keep you warm if it were all burning at once. From any part of the house you could hear a pin drop upon the stage, so well have the acoustic laws been studied to. The decorations are superb, rare painted panels please the eye on every hand. The color scheme is a warm cheerful pink, with gold trimmings. The floors are concrete, covered with luxurious velvet carpet. The seats are the very finest that have ever been turned out by the American Seating Company. By way of novelty, and a very pleasing novelty, the seats of this theater happen to be of velour upholstered with black leather, one of the prettiest choice in selected colors that we have seen for many a day.

Also the scenery is different from that in most theaters, instead of the invariable old-setting drop curtain there are some very pretty Dutch landscapes that are a decided relief from the "usual thing" in that line. There is a very long lobby leading to the promenade. We might incidentally remark that all theaters building in the Bronx should have long lobbies. The [illegible] of baby carriages we noticed that day in the lobby of the Prospect Theater inclines us to believe that some day it will be necessary for every theater in the Bronx to have a special garage for baby carriages, with nurse in attendance.

The Prospect Theater is owned by Meehan, Ehrich & Sires. It was erected at a cost of $250,000. The theater is being conducted by Fredericks, Gerstin & Bee. Hugo Gerstin is the active manager. It seats 1,800 persons and pictures for 10 and 20 cents to crowded houses. The electric signs can be seen for blocks, and are a credit to the makers, Strauss & Co., of Manhattan.

VAUDEVILLE WORSE THAN THE MOVING PICTURE SHOWS.

(From the Boston "Record," December 3, 1910.)

To the Editor of The Record: In view of the fact that his Honor, the Mayor, has chosen to give to the public press a statement in which he charges me with utterances that were "unfair and unworthy of an officer of the Twentieth Century Club," may I ask to make it clearer just what was said at the conference held to discuss the moving picture show.

I simply differed from the conclusion presented to us by the Mayor's representative. In substance I stated that Boston was full of cheap shows and worse vaudeville, and that I believed, contrary to the opinion which had been expressed, that not only in the case of last year, but at the present time, any thoroughly vulgar or indecently suggestive performance can be stopped by a determined effort from the Mayor's office, even though the letter of the law does not seem to fit the case.

There is probably no theater manager in the city who will not take off a play if a determined word comes to him from the city hall that stuff of that sort is not good enough for Boston. That the laws need changing in the interest of simplicity and directness I am quite well aware. But it is also my conviction that in the meanwhile the authority of the city's executive can be exerted more vigorously than it has been, with successful results.

In my remarks at the conference I didn't speak of the moving picture films. There has been remarkable improvement in the quality of these films, owing to the [illegible] work of the National Board of Censorship in New York.

Nevertheless it is significant that the manager of the most intelligently conducted moving picture house in the city finds but a small proportion of the censored films of sufficiently good quality to give to her audience. When the further fact is added that the audiences at this theater are as large, if not larger, than at any similar house in the city, there is sufficient proof that the public wants the best.

The main trouble, however, is not in the picture films at the present time, but in the enormous amount of trashy and vulgar vaudeville, much of which is broadly suggestive and constantly bordering on the extreme limit of indecency allowed by the letter of the law. It is this sort of thing that can be remedied.

The school teacher and the social worker as well as the distressed parent join in the request to the municipal authorities, not that they explain at length why everything can't be stopped, but that they simply use every means within their power to mitigate a situation which is demoralizing to the last degree.

EDWARD H. CHANDLER.

NESTOR

"Rarely Equalled—Never

If You Would Avoid Regrets and Apologies:

Look Before You Leap!

We Both Look and See; Thus Making Sure That

IF IT'S A NESTOR IT'S GOOD!

ON WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 21st, 1910, WE WILL RELEASE

A DESPERATE REMEDY!

Length, 990 Feet, and Every Inch a Comedy

TWO OF YOU

BEST EVER!

Nestor Films are the best I have ever run. Audiences are best pleased when Nestors go on the sheet.

JOHN POTTER,
13 S. Race St., Springfield, Ohio

IMMENSELY LIKED!

Am running Nestor Films and like them immensely.

Mrs. May James, Mgr.,
May Theatre, Kirkwood, Mo.

TWO MORE

THEY'RE DANDIES!

Nestor Films are certainly dandies.

GEORGE SMITH. Mgr.,
Lyric Theatre, Hoosick Falls, N. Y.

CONTINUOUS LAUGHTER!

Nestor Films are very good. A" Deal in Indians," which we ran recently, made the house ring with continuous laughter.

HARRY A. JONES,
Olympia Photoplay, Waukesha, Wis.

Scene from "A DESPERATE REMEDY"

Mr. Exhibitor!

You do not run any chances when you GET "A DESPERATE REMEDY," as you are sure to get the prize film of the week. It is the brezziest, cleverest, prettiest and wholesomest comedy filmed to date. You will laugh yourself hoarse over it. Your patrons will swim and frolic most merrily into this delightful Sea of Laughter.

List!—There is a story in this picture, a temperance lesson and a moral.

A Suggestion!—It will pay you to rough-house for "A DESPERATE REMEDY."

A Hint!—GET IT!

ORDER NOW! For Release Wednesday, Dec. 28, 1910 ORDER NOW!

Elda of the Mountains

A Rugged, Rustic Masterpiece of Exceptional Beauty.

For Synopsis, Bulletins and other advertising matter, write to "NESTORLIST 1003", 147 Fourth Avenue, New York City.

DAVID HORSLEY, German Savings Bank B

FILMS

urpassed—Often Imitated"

NESTOR MADE BY DAVID HORSLEY FILMS

THE PAGE OF HONOR!

EVERY NAME ON THIS LIST OF

Exchages Buying Nestor Films

REPRESENTS ALL THAT IS FIRST CLASS IN FILMDOM

"Elda of the Mountains" A Rustic MASTERPIECE, will be RELEASED WEDNESDAY, Dec. 28th, 1910

LIST OF EXCHANGES:

Albany Film Exchange	418 Broadway, Albany, N. Y.
Anti-Trust Film Exchange	79 South Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.
Applegath, L. J., & Sons	145 Yonge Street, Toronto, Ont.
Bijou Film and Amusement Co	1222 Grand Avenue, Kansas City, Mo.
Boston Film Rental Co	665 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.
B. & W. Film Exchange	412 East Baltimore Street, Baltimore, Md.
California Film Exchange	1065 Mission Street, San Francisco, Cal.
Canadian Film Exchange	Calgary, Alberta, Vancouver, B. C.
Capitol Film Exchange	422 North High Street, Columbus, O.
Central Film Service Co	119 N. Illinois Street, Indianapolis, Ind.
Chicago Film Exchange	48 Jackson Boulevard, Chicago, Ill.
Cincinnati-Buckeye Film and Projecting Co.	309 Arcade Building, Dayton, O. 315 West Fourth Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.
Consolidated Amusement Co	Rhodes Building, Atlanta, Ga.
Co-operative Film Exchange	320 Atlas Block, Salt Lake City, Utah.
Eagle Film Exchange	43 North Ninth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
Empire Film Exchange	150 East Fourteenth Street, New York City.
Dixie Film Co	503 Chamber of Commerce Bldg., Birmingham, Ala.
Globe Film Service Co	107 E. Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.
Great Eastern Film Exchange	21 East Fourteenth Street, New York City.
W. E. Greene Film Exch. (Inc.)	28 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.
H. & H. Film Service	8 Jackson Boulevard, Chicago, Ill.
Independent Film Exchange	415 Ferry Street, Pittsburg, Pa.
Independent Western Film Exch.	Swetland Building, Portland, Ore.
Laemmle Film Service	196 Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.
Laemmle Film Service	1517 Farnam Street, Omaha, Neb.
Michigan Film and Supply Co	1106 Union Trust Building, Detroit, Mich.
Pacific Film Exchange	Globe Building, Seattle, Wash.
Paramount Film Co	428 Ninth Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.
Philadelphia Film Exchange	934 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
Standard Film Exchange	155 Washington Street, Chicago, Ill.
Swanson-Crawford Film Co	723-734 Century Building, St. Louis, Mo.
Swanson, W. H., Film Exchange	301 Railroad Building, Denver, Colo.
Texas Film Exchange	311 Elm Street, Dallas, Tex.
Toledo Film Exchange	319 Superior Street, Toledo, O.
Victor Film Service	Prospect and Huron Streets, Cleveland, O.
Western Film Company	108 E. 4th Street, Los Angeles, Cal.
Western Film Exchange	307 Enterprise Building, Milwaukee, Wis.

THIS WEEK'S ADDITIONS:

Gaumont Company	154 St. Catherine, St., Montreal, Que.

"At Cedar Ridge" A Western DREAM, will be RELEASED WEDNESDAY, Jan. 4th, 1911

Nestor's Roll of Honor is not yet complete—There's room for a few more worthy exchanges—They belong on Nestor's List and should be there—The sooner the better! Missing exchanges! Wire your standing order for that

ONE NESTOR A WEEK!

NESTOR FILMS are distributed through THE SALES CO.

MOTION PICTURE DISTRIBUTING AND SALES COMPANY

ilding, 4th Avenue, and 14th Street, New York

"Effecting a Cure" (Biograph).—Whether this picture will be understood outside the cities where such events are popularly supposed to be common is a question which others may decide. If husbands did what this film represents this one as doing there would be many more separations than there are. As a joke it may seem laughable, but some will question the advisability of making jokes in this way. Like the mother-in-law joke, the somewhat crudely related one of the husband who goes to the club, upon which this picture is based, is sadly overworked and probably quite as untrue today as it ever was.

"Spoony Sam" (Lubin).—Sam undoubtedly is funny. Anyhow everybody laughed at him where this picture was seen. But Sue's character seems in some ways a travesty upon womanhood. No woman worth considering would be as inconsistent as this one is represented to be, marrying a man apparently because he appeared at the time when the minister was there. Spoony Sam is not improbable. Indeed, there are a good many like him. But Sue can scarcely be swallowed. Women are not like that and there is nothing funny in representing them so. This picture would be improved by changing that wedding scene to make it appear that Sam was put off for a time, but eventually accepted, after he had received his lesson.

"Pals" (Melies).—A story of the mines which impresses one with the oft repeated truth that two men can become such fast friends that nothing can break their friendship. This instance shows a case where the break was perilously near, but events straighten out the tangle and they became more friendly than ever. The last scene, when the two men meet, after one has apparently disappeared with the gold dust, is dramatic, largely because it contains so much of human nature. The rest of the film is merely a pleasant story.

"The Stepmother" (Selig).—Why the long length of good film required in its production was wasted upon this picture is difficult to say. The introduction of adventuresses into homes in this way is not sufficiently common to require such a warning. And the dramatic features are scarcely strong enough to warrant the waste. Probably some women do go after money, but generally they have some other means of procuring it. This picture did not please the audience where it was seen and it offers no real and valid excuse for existence.

"Turning the Tables" (Biograph).—A comedy presenting the situation in which a wife finds herself when she seeks for her recalcitrant husband in a cafe and he gets home first. She found it difficult to explain her position, consequently the man has the best of the argument and there is no longer any objection when he wants to go out for a little game.

"Happy Jack, a Hero" (Biograph).—Detailing the adventures of a tramp who gets into a suit of armor at a reception and succeeds in capturing two thieves who are making away with a good many valuables. The tramp was posing for a dinner, but after he had restored the valuables and had succeeded in getting the thieves arrested his reward was something more than a dinner.

"Reggie's Engagement" (Lubin).—A snappy comedy representing the difficulty into which Reggie is plunged when he exchanged suit cases with Mike and when he went into it for the wedding ring found a growler instead. Perhaps that wouldn't have made so much difference under normal circumstances, but the girl's father was the temperance reformer of his community and Reggie naturally suffered the consequences of the appearance of that growler. However, the tangles were ultimately straightened and the engagement ring was placed where it belonged and everything went on swimmingly.

"What Great Bear Learned" (Melies).—An Indian drama representing the situation in which an Indian, deceived by a scheming Mexican, found himself when the tribe discovered what had happened. The characters of the scheming Mexicans will be recognized as lifelike. That sort are much too common in that section of the world. The duel with knives is a thrilling bit of work and is well executed. That Great Bear is finally taken back by his wife and tribe seems to be but just when he was deceived, as many others have been before and will be after.

"In the Wilderness" (Selig).—A thrilling Western drama which introduces the battle following an Indian uprising that affords a good many exciting moments before it closes. The capture of the girl is well managed and her treatment is more satisfactory than it is in a good many films of this character. The novel escape by being drawn into the tree to which she had been tied, adds to the film's attractiveness. As a play of this type this one has many features to commend it, and one is that it stirs the audience to applauding the characters on the screen.

"The Captain's Bride" (Edison).—An adaptation from a story by John Luther Long based upon a lapse of memory caused by an injury in a shipwreck. The unfortunate young wife, unable to remember her past, is about to marry the captain who saved her when her husband appears. She does not remember him, but he, thinking of a trick they used to play on each other, succeeds in restoring her memory. Some of the scenic effects, like the shipwreck, are unusually good and the whole play is acted with a full appreciation of the dramatic possibilities. It is seldom nowadays, that a picture is repeated in a large theater by special request. This was at Proctor's Twenty-third street house. On the day of its exhibition at Keith & Proctor's Fourteenth street house it was the feature of the program and, so the managers report, eclipsed the vaudeville numbers. Picture dramas of this class, so different from the "usual thing," so well worked out, so thrilling without being melodramatic, with here and there touches of good comedy and real pathos—picture dramas of this class, if more frequent, would so strengthen the program that vaudeville would not be needed. The acting of the heroine of the piece was flawless, in fact all the actors deserve credit. One slight defect should be mentioned, as it was inexcusable: The brave captain of the lifesavers swims out to the wreck with a lifeline and is pulled ashore with the apparently lifeless body of the girl, but he does not show any effect of his exertion as he enters the hut with his burden, and his jacket, which should have been drenched, plainly shows only a few splashes of wet. Apart from this and the spraying of streams of water, instead of waves, over the bow of the wreck, the picture is a triumph of the producer's art.

"The Rescue of Molly Finley" (Kalem).—An Indian drama dealing with the capture and sale into slavery of a Puritan girl and her rescue later by her lover. The setting affords a good idea of the surroundings of Colonial times. Aside from the last portion of the film, which contains the rescue, the picture did not seem to impress the audience as some Indian releases have done.

"Saved in the Nick of Time" (Pathe).—As has been pointed out before, it may be realistic but it is not good taste to use an affliction like paralysis as the basis of a picture. Physical misfortunes are too sacred to be reproduced for the amusement of the public, and this observation is especially applicable when the victim is even indirectly made the object of the machinations of the villain. Some strong expressions of disapproval of this picture were heard from those sitting near the writer. Aside from this the picture was worked out with the usual Pathe combination of good photography and good scenery.

"Soap in His Eyes" (Pathe).—A comedy which takes well. To see a man blundering about the house, upsetting everything with which he comes in contact, because he has soap in his eyes, will set almost any audience laughing. Such pictures are liked by an audience fully as well as some of the gentler comedies.

"He Who Laughs Last" (Vitagraph).—A comedy made up of jokes played by club members upon one of their number who retaliates in kind and wins a bet and a girl.

"A Cowboy's Vindication" (Essanay).—The story of two brothers: one of the highest type of manhood, the other a drunkard and gambler. A love story with jealousy enters

"THE SIGN OF THE FLYING A"

AMERICAN FILM

DRAMA

Her Fatal Mistake

Release Monday, December 19th

A dramatic triumph. Full of intense action. A thriller from the first foot to the last. A reel that will make the "trust house" across the street sit up and take notice. A reel you will get as near first run as possible and repeat.

COMEDY

Her Husband's Deception
A Troublesome Parcel

Release Thursday, December 22nd

Two on one reel. Both Screeches. Both comedy in its Xteenth sense. If you want to "really and truly" amuse your patrons get this film.

NOTICE

If you want both the American Releases truthfully described above fill in your Name and Address and the Name of your Exchange in coupon below and mail to us. That's all.

NAME OF EXHIBITOR

ADDRESS

CITY

NAME OF YOUR EXCHANGE

AMERICAN FILM MFG. COMPANY

BANK FLOOR, ASHLAND BLOCK, CHICAGO, ILL.

Our films sold exclusively through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Co.

STATE RIGHTS NOW SELLING

Wonderfully Successful Moving Pictures

FIGHT

OWEN MORAN vs. BATTLING NELSON

Held at San Francisco, Cal., November 26th, 1910

BIG HIT AT HAMMERSTEIN'S THEATRE, NEW YORK

Held over for two weeks. Pronounced by experts to be the best Moving Pictures ever taken of a fistic event. For particulars, write or wire

J. W. COFFROTH : : : : : 1402 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY

into it. The novel feature of the film lies in the fact that the jealous man kills the ne'er-do-well while the two brothers are engaged in a struggle. But his triumph is short, since he is forced to his knees and there made to confess that he did the shooting. The film abounds in thrills, and affords opportunity to develop some dramatic situations. At the same time it is a cowboy picture, introducing almost the same types as have characterized these films since the first one was produced.

"The Revolt" (Gaumont).—A scene from French history, representing an episode in the life of a daughter of France. The picture is scarcely intelligible to an American audience, but probably is interesting to those who understand French history.

"Her First Husband's Return" (Pathe).—Purporting to tell what a woman did when her first husband, whom she supposed dead, suddenly returned. Fortunately a burglar appeared and the first husband, no better than a tramp, was handed over to the police in place of the burglar. The burning of the marriage certificate in the hands of the man is a strong bit of dramatic work.

"The Color Sergeant's Horse" (Vitagraph).—An interesting story of a trained horse that performs some almost human acts. This horse is a good feature of an occasional Vitagraph film, but stands a chance of being overworked, although, as we have pointed out, the animal in the picture is always a popular feature.

"The Golden Supper" (Biograph).—The theme of this story is well known to all readers as it is told by Bocaccio and as it appears in the sequel to Tennyson's "The Lovers' Tale." It is a love story, made remarkable by the fact that the woman's former lover restores her to consciousness and returns her to her husband. While all this may be understood by the person who has read Bocaccio, it is quite probable that a good many in every audience will not know what it means. The sub-titles help, but it must be admitted that unless one is familiar with the origin of the story it is more or less obscure. A golden supper may be quite the proper place in dreamland to return what one most desires, but in motion picture land it requires something more than the scenes and the sub-titles to make it intelligible.

"An Exile's Love" (Lubin).—Here is an exiled prince employed by a wealthy gentleman falling in love with the daughter in quite the American way. Of course there is a villain to be jealous, but his machinations do not disturb the flow of the stream of love. Marriage follows, succeeded by a lecture delivered by the girl's father with considerably more force than elegance. All is made right, however, by the arrival of the intelligence that the exile has been restored to his title, his rank, and what is of vastly more consequence, his money.

"In Her Father's Absence" (Pathe).—A comedy presenting the trials of a young man upon a visit to his lady love during her father's absence. It is funny, perhaps, to hide a lover in all sorts of ridiculous places, but it ceases to be funny when it represents such wholesale destruction as follows this lover's advent. Destruction of property is not fun, though some producers seem to still cling to the impression that it is.

"The Julians" (Pathe).—A group of ten acrobats performing difficult feats of strength and agility.

"A Tale of the Sea" (Selig).—A homely story, whose only claim to dramatic distinction is the scene when one man jumps from the boat to death in the sea that his friend might live to return to his family. The anti-climax, when the ship picks up the survivor so soon afterward, is almost as impressive as the climax. The closing scene, with the man pointing to the sea, is fitting. Altogether an acceptable and impressive picture and handled in Selig's best style.

"Pigs is Pigs" (Edison).—Ellis Parker Butler's famous story put on the screen, with all the characters, especially Fannery, the expressman, whose obstinacy causes no end of difficulty and allows the guinea pigs to increase until they overrun everything. His sententious remark that it is fortunate they were not elephants will be concurred in by all who see the film. It is a good reproduction of a story which has become a standard in the recent humorous productions of literature.

"Seth's Temptation" (Kalem).—A film by the Southern Stock Company, depicting Cracker life and scenery. It is a love story, and the country boy whose suit is discarded for a city man almost commits murder. The girl takes him back eventually after he has saved her life and that of her city lover. The photography among the live oaks hung with southern moss will please by its novelty.

"The Hoboes' Christmas" (Pathe).—A humorous story of some tramps who stole a quantity of bad turkeys from an express car and proceeded to eat them. While suffering the tortures which follow the consumption of bad food the police succeed in capturing them all. Their Christmas was not such a success after all.

"Charlie and Kittie in Brussels" (Pathe).—An attractive travel picture representing the progress of two children who start alone to the city. The different points of interest are well photographed and the youngsters perform much as little folks might be expected to do under such circumstances.

"The Little Match Girl's Christmas" (Urban).—A picture which will appeal strongly to the emotions at this season. The film has a happy ending for the little girl is rescued from the cold and she and her mother enjoy a happy Christmas in the home of a benevolent gentleman who discovered her in the arms of a policeman.

"Scenes in British India" (Urban).—An interesting series of views in India, including Bambay, Delhi and some other smaller places. The picture affords a reasonably good opportunity to acquire an impression of what the country and its people are like.

"An Old Silver Mine in Peru" (Edison).—An industrial, illustrating how the Indians still mine silver in Peru. It is like reading a page from the history of the middle ages to see the toil with which the silver is taken from the mines and reduced for use. The photography has been well managed and the mechanical work is excellent.

"A Mountain Maid" (Edison).—A dramatic subject, made so by the situations which develop naturally. Two actors seeking local color spend the summer in the Tennessee mountains where they meet and fall in love with each other without knowing the part the other is to play in a forthcoming drama. The climax comes when they meet on the stage at the first rehearsal. The film has much of heart interest and develops a good deal of dramatic interest, as well.

"THE STREET PREACHER"—AN ACCEPTABLE RELIGIOUS PLAY.

This film by the Lubin Company is very acceptable chiefly because it is a departure from the monotony of the "usual thing," also because it reaches with some degree of satisfaction, the desire for religious pictures now demanded. To say that the film is perfect would be fulsome praise, but because of the courage of the Lubin firm in producing such a subject, the writer prefers to overlook all demerits, believing that the better parts of the picture compensate for its deficiencies excepting but one instance, the mention of which seems absolutely necessary; in the last scene—a marriage ceremony—the bridal pair are holding left hands, giving the occasion a most ludicrous appearance; surely this cannot be a reversal of the film or other parts would appear equally ridiculous, there is evidently some fault in making up the film; should the film prove absolutely correct it shows that greater care is required of the operator.

The Street Preacher is a young minister who believes he can accomplish more good in the world by going after the people than if comfortably installed in a rich city church. This decision is a disappointment to his fiancee who had social ambitions, consequently she breaks the engagement, advising him to marry her more suitable friend, which he accordingly does, the match proving a most appropriate one.

In city missionary work they are very successful, the wife is seen singing and distributing tracts in sympathetic harmony with her preacher husband. Meanwhile his former love has also gone to the city and succumbed to the temptation of the fast social life; she is found living in luxury but in an unmarried state. After repeated refusals on the part of her lover to ratify the marriage vows she decides upon suicide. At different times both of these lovers have come under the influence of the street preacher whose tracts they carry with them; catching his unlawful wife handling a revolver the man refers to his tract for the address of the street preacher, and sends for him to unite them in marriage; in doing so the preacher and his wife find their old friend and lover, and are pleased at the results of their missionary work. The characters are well sustained and an even attitude pervades the whole. The personality of the "preacher" is very good and a further study of this class of subject will prove creditable to the Lubin firm, and as no other firm has at present filled the demand for such subjects as this, it is to be hoped that Lubin's will not now stop here but proceed to meet a long expressed desire for such subjects.

W. H. J.

INDEPENDENT.

"A Touching Affair" (American).—A lively little comedy that leaves the audience in good humor and, among a series of releases that have contained more of the usual proportion of difficulty and gloom, is a welcome addition to the lighter side. Short, snappy comedies are wanted and badly wanted, too. Don't stretch them out into needless lengths, but make them short and lively and managers and audiences alike will bless your efforts to amuse them.

"A Child's Judgment" (Imp).—The story of a difficulty between a husband and wife which involved the turning of the mother out of doors. When the child found her afterward the father permitted her to choose and she went with the mother. But this led to a reconciliation in which all the differences and difficulties of the parents, including the wife's brother, who had caused all the trouble, were patched up. The dramatic point is when the child is deciding between the two. The rest is narrative, but there is a situation which holds the audience in a spell while it lasts. The second climax comes when the wife's brother enters the husband's house through a window, removes his disguise and the two men confront each other. A thrill goes with this view and when the husband decides to take back the wife and not interfere with the brother there is an evident sense of coinciding with his decision. The play is well acted and the photographer has done his part well.

"A Painful Debt" (Itala).—A rather gloomy subject, though perhaps the work of the actors cannot be questioned. They perform their parts well and the photography is clear.

"Two Lucky Jims" (American).—The first Western release of this company. It is made in New Mexico by the firm's Western stock company and is, of the West, Western in every sense. The picture is dramatic, but is in addition humorous enough to keep the audience laughing. There is much in it that will appeal, as it affords opportunity to secure accurate impressions of the life which has been a feature of that remarkable land. The manager who includes this film in his program will make no mistake. It will amuse and instruct with its careful reproduction of Western life.

"'Twixt Love and Loyalty" (Imp).—Not every newspaper man has such a trial, but the probability is that substantially all of them would be as loyal to their newspaper as this one if it came to the test. In a small way many newspaper men have been called upon over and over again to face similar crises, though, fortunately, not often connected with a love affair. Loyal to his paper, the editor goes on and does what he believes is right. Then fate takes a hand and assists in untangling the troubles until everything is set right. The pluck of the girl in pying the form is admirable, and perhaps the touch of the unusual adds to its attractiveness. The picture will please because it seems true to life. The characters are the same commonplace individuals one sees about him every day and the problems presented are the same ones that might be met by any man. The dramatic strength lies in the fact that the picture is simple, direct and tells its story plainly. The actors are sympathetic and enact their roles with earnestness and discretion. That the girl forgives the young man even though what he intended doing would have ruined her father is justified. There is no reason representing a man as suffering because he is doing his duty. The only character who seems unusual or unlikely is the secretary, whose conscience afflicts him and he confesses his complicity. Such men do not often confess and there is an impression that the picture would be improved by permitting the editor to discover that portion by some other method. If a reporter brought in the discovery it would add to the interest and be more in keeping with the newspaper office realism. This is not intended as a criticism, but as a suggestion which might improve the picture.

"A Soldier of the Cross" (Itala).—A drama which presents numerous good qualities and enables the actors to perform some very good work before it closes. The situations are well worked out and well developed, thus constituting an important feature of the drama itself.

"What it Will Be" (Lux).—An amusing travesty on the present hustling age. All through life the individual depicted hustles and, at last, disdaining the ordinary wings which the average person uses in his final flight, he goes up in an aeroplane. Some of the hits at the present day method of hustling through everything are particularly apt. The film is well photographed and the situations are worked out with care to develop the most humor possible.

"And She Came Back" (Lux).—A variation of the mother-in-law joke showing the different methods the man took to get rid of her. Each time she came back and each time he devised something novel and different for her reception. The closing scene shows the [illegible] and [illegible] and everybody laughing heartily.

"Lady Betty's Strategem" (Solax).—A pretty film, showing the determination of a high spirited girl to discover whether [illegible] wants her or her money. Donning man's attire she goes to the tavern frequented by the men and involves herself in a duel by slapping the face of one of her suitors because of remarks derogatory to herself. Some interesting situations are developed in the effort she makes to extricate herself from the unpleasant predicament into which her escapade has plunged her. But in a series of interesting dramatic scenes she succeeds in accomplishing it and the film closes with the course of true love flowing smoothly again. The picture is admirably worked out, the actors entering into the spirit of the picture with exceptional discretion and acting it as though they were really interested in the matter themselves. The mechanical department was careful in its operations and a film which is technically good and pleases the audience has been produced. The Solax Company has been doing good work recently and this is not the least of its accomplishments.

"The Girls He Left Behind Him" (Thanhouser).—A comedy, not by any means original, but with a sentimental touch, developed through a series of visions representing the girls a bachelor left behind him during the years. On his wedding night he sees them all, the visions produced through the influence of a letter from one of them congratulating him upon his approaching wedding. Probably the picture will cause many such visions to appear in the mind's eye of more than one in the audience. Many have felt this way before, many will again, and this excellent film has placed in visible form these visions of the past which often haunt the middle aged or the younger person which is about to take some important step. The mechanical work is well done and the audience follows the picture with interest.

"The Iron Clad Lover" (Thanhouser).—A farce representing the difficulties which beset the unwelcome suitor. He is thrown out, and still he is determined to conquer and thinks he has succeeded when he gets himself carried in the house as a present in a suit of armor. Again he is thrown out and this time sold to the junk man. Then, taking pity on him, the girl and her lover pursue the junk man and secure his release. The idea is novel and the carrying out, though developing a tendency to the rough house type, affords amusement for the audience.

"A Brave Western Girl" (Bison).—A Western story which has more of interest connected with it than many stories which have been put out under Western titles. The girl proves her bravery under trying conditions and wins her reward.

"The Poacher" (Great Northern).—A beautifully tinted picture which is sufficiently well explained in its title. There is much that will interest people in this country, even though they may understand little about poaching. The picture is well acted, the photography is clear and the camera was placed so as to warrant saying that an artist handled it, and the tinting was done by those who thoroughly understood their portion of the business. It is, in all senses, a creditable production and one that is popular.

"Foolshead Knows How to Take Precautions" (Itala).—This comedian appears in a film which affords opportunity for him to do some of his extremely funny stunts. The work of preparing the actors was performed by a master and then the people did their parts to perfection. Foolshead is one of the comedians who always seems to have something new and something entirely unexpected to offer. His fun is original and though it is rough in some instances, he never forgets that he is there for the purpose of making the audience laugh, and that he succeeds in so doing.

"The Ride to Death" (Powers).—A picture which takes its name from the fact that the chief's daughter is bound to a horse and the animal sent away, carrying her through brush and through brier. There are other thrills but they are insignificant compared with this one and upon this will be concentrated the attention of the audience. The setting is admirable and the actors perform their various parts well.

"The Rummage Sale" (American).—The story of a pair of twins who accompanied their mother to a rummage sale. The wildest flight of imagination can scarcely furnish a clew to the funny things that happened. Given a lively pair of twins, aching for mischief and filled to the brim with curiosity, and a rummage sale; the combination is irresistible and the situations which develop are sufficient to make even a Sphinx laugh. The man who can sit through this picture with a long face doesn't deserve anything more lively than "Hark from the Tombs a Doleful Sound." It would be sufficient evidence that sense of humor was sadly lacking.

"The Bowling Craze" (Eclair).—Probably there are many in almost every community who could successfully pose for this film. The bowling craze is contagious and persistent and the few who are not afflicted with it are interested in some of their friends who are; therefore, this film will unquestionably prove popular. Probably a large number have been in the position of the unfortunate who was thrown out of the alleys. But not all are able to go back later and get revenge in such a summary way. It is a funny picture, containing humor above the rough-house type which characterizes so many.

"Our Dear Uncle from America" (Eclair).—That an American uncle should be made the butt of fun because of eccentricity is quite the thing with some foreign producers. The tramp who profits by this latest exhibition may well be thankful, but eventually the tangle is unraveled and everybody is happy, including the tramp, whose remembrance is sufficiently liberal to make him stare in wonder. While the picture is not particularly brilliant it is amusing and whiles away a passing few moments acceptably enough.

"Faithful Max" (Imp).—Too bad to shoot the dog whose attempts to make his master understand give rise to fear that he is mad. The dog's acting is better than that of the man; and he exhibited more sense in his effort to inform his master that the precious post bag was left behind. The last scene, with the dog dragging himself painfully back to the bag, to guard it as he was told, is pathetic and supplies an interesting and touching climax to a good film.

"A Clever Ruse" (Imp).—An amusing story of how two fathers succeeded in forcing their quarreling offspring to make up and promise never to fight any more. It was heroic treatment, perhaps, but if it was effective, as the picture indicates, it was justified. Lovers' quarrels are considered necessary, but these two fathers took drastic measures to force the making up of the lovers in this instance.

"Fight for Millions" (Yankee).—A detective story of merit. The clever way in which the detective ferrets out the criminals and brings them all to justice, the arch conspirator with the others, supplies a few minutes of intense interest. There is life and action enough in this to satisfy the most exacting, and what is of even more interest, it is told without the semblance of a love story connected with it. As a detective story it stands upon its own merits, with no reference whatever to love, excepting the love of money in the heart of a crafty schemer. The fact that all those implicated are brought to justice is a satisfactory ending to a somewhat thrilling photoplay.

"The Medicine Man" (Powers).—A comedy which tells what happened to a fake medicine man who cheated the Indians and was raided as a result. The picture then goes on to show what happened when the Indians drank all his medicine. It is impossible to describe the funny actions which followed this indulgence in the medicine man's wares. If there are any contortions or funny stunts which are not included in this series it is almost safe to say that the producer would introduce them if they were pointed out. It is quite evident that he tried not to omit anything.

"The Rehearsal" (Powers).—A drama with a thrilling climax where the wife of the actor appears and undertakes to discover whether this is really a play, or whether the woman and the actor teacher are in earnest. The rest of the picture leads up to that one point. And, upon discovering the true state of affairs, she shows a touch of magnanimity which is as rare as it is effective when she tells the husband of the woman that they are merely rehearsing a scene. It came dangerously near being a serious scene. The play ends happily for both couples, even though two of them, at least, were perilously near the ending of that eternal triangle which has caused so many disturbances in the world.

"A Sioux's Reward" (Bison).—A Western drama which tells the story of a Sioux and the way he was rewarded. The actors have performed their parts with ability and much sympathy is shown in the subject.

"Nature's Nobleman" (Atlas).—People may be cynical, but they will have to admit that there is occasionally a man who can crush down his own feelings and desires and give way to others when happiness or good is at stake. This picture happily represents such a man. That he should forego his own love for another is made so much a matter of course with him that it is difficult to appreciate the sacrifice he is making. Even though his heart is breaking he congratulates the brother and the girl and leaves them, even though he leaves his heart behind. Years afterward he is seen sitting alone contemplating a photograph and dreaming of the past. The story is dramatic because it is simple and easily understood. After all, the strongest and most affecting dramas are those which represent something which might happen. This picture is so much like life that it assumes an importance it would not otherwise possess.

"Tweedledum Learns a Tragical Part" (Ambrosio).—Here is the comedian Tweedledum learning a tragical part and what happens to him affords the audience a good many laughs before he finishes. Tweedledum is an original comedian and his work in this film is satisfactory. The audience that does not get a good laugh out of this must be hard to move.

"The Sheriff and the Detective" (Champion).—A story of love and adventure which will make the audience take notice. The story is told very clearly, and what is best of all, there is no intimation of who the robber really is until the mask is torn from his face after he is shot by the young Eastern man who has been unjustly accused of the robberies. The girl's part in the drama is well played and the astonishment when the discovery of the culprit is made is an excellent piece of acting. The picture will please with its straightforward rendering of a type of story which is a favorite with most audiences and which will, all other things being equal, attract an average audience anywhere. Technically the film has much to commend it and the acting is in harmony with the subject and the necessities of the characters as they are presented. While it is, in a way, Western in its characteristics, it does not include careering cowboys and stealthy Indians, a restraint which will be pleasant to that portion of an audience that may not care for them.

"The Pilgrim" (Nestor).—A Western film, with some cowboys in it, but they do not occupy the center of the stage. The young man from the East and the girl are both attractive characters and what they do is of sufficient interest to keep an audience pleased throughout the length of the film. The acting is good and the climax, where the boys file in with their coat of tar and feathers ready, but are balked by a marriage certificate, is one of the cleverest bits of acting this firm has sent out in some time. The film will prove popular because it tells its story simply, but clearly and causes the audience to want more like it.

"Brothers" (Atlas).—An extremely dramatic and emotional picture. The widely separated paths of the two brothers is clearly depicted and the dissimilarity of the pair is so strongly marked that it appeals to the audience irresistibly. One successful, the other quite the reverse, even to serving a term in prison. Then the climax, the attempted burglary, with the discovery of the half picture and its matching with the other half as the brothers are thus enabled to recognize each other. It doesn't take long to make a pleasant ending out of what is a rather disagreeable film up to the close, disagreeable because it tells a story so plainly that it cannot be misunderstood. The actors are to be commended for the excellence with which they have done their work, while the photographer has performed his part with discretion and an understanding of the requirements of the picture. The manager who includes this in his program will make no mistake.

"A Plucky Western Kid" (Powers).—A film which will attract favorable attention for two reasons. First, the acting of the five children is unusually good, especially that of the eldest girl. Her ride to town is thrilling and as she dashes into the saloon and rescues her father an involuntary burst of applause follows her exploit. It would be difficult to image anything more plucky than this, and, as everyone admires courage so everyone will admire this picture. The acting, as has been said, is remarkably good, while the photography is above the average. The film should be popular with every audience that sees it.

"The Tramp Bicyclist" (Powers).—A comedy which is fraught with destructive consequences to a large number of people. The tramp gets the bicycle and retains it until it is taken from him by an old maid. Then he gets the maid, and the bicycle too, and they ride away together. Perhaps the most interesting feat the tramp performs is to ride into the barroom and snatch a glass of beer from the bar. The other stunts are not unusual, though like all knockabout comedies of this sort they provoke laughter.

"Love and Law" (Thanhouser).—A detective story in which a woman discovers the innocence of a ne'er-do-well charged with murder and determines to marry him after he has reformed. That is the whole story, but in the working out many interesting situations are developed, particularly where she proves the innocence of the accused man in a novel manner. In all respects the film is up to the Thanhouser standard and should not fail to interest a large number of people.

THE EXHIBITORS LEAGUE MEETING AT COLUMBUS, OHIO.

The meeting held at Columbus, Ohio, on December 5th, was a grand success. There was a large attendance, everybody enthusiastic, and new members were taken in from every part of the State. One of the important questions discussed was, whether those engaged in the renting of films, or manufacturing of films were eligible, to membership. After a lengthy and animated discussion it was decided unanimously that only bona fide moving picture exhibitors could belong to the League, and no one engaging in the manufacturing, or film business could belong to the League, and of course their resignation as members would be accepted.

I have not the time to write the matter up just as I would like to see it in print, so I hope you will write it up fully. I am having constitution and by-laws printed, and will send you some as soon as they are out. I have received several letters from Women's Clubs, and organizations throughout the country, and they are going to co-operate with us in giving clean pictures, etc. The old Ohio Film Protective Association voted to come in with us, and turn over the money they had in their treasury to our treasury. It is our purpose to organize local leagues in every part of the State to co-operate with our League.

Committeemen from twenty-one districts in our State were appointed to organize locals in their districts. There is no question about our League being a success. It is planted upon a firm basis, and the leading picture men are coming in very rapidly, and just as soon as all our aims and objects are known to all of the exhibitors they will affiliate with us beyond a doubt. This is no association society by any means, but a strictly high class organization, based upon business principles for the purpose of protecting legitimate moving picture exhibitors.

I am enclosing you a clipping from one of the Columbus papers, which I would ask you to return at some future date, if convenient. You will notice that Max Stearne of the Exhibit Theater, Columbus, Ohio, was placed at the head of an employment bureau and the League requests all singers, operators and piano players to send in their names, experiences and salary wanted to Max Stearne.

Thanking you for your kindly interest in our League, I am,

Yours very truly,

THE EXHIBITORS LEAGUE,

M. A. NEFF, President.

ZOOLOGY IN KINEMACOLOR.

At Ampthill, in Bedfordshire, England, a gentleman possessed of a large estate possesses the unusual hobby of training wild animals and generally regarded as beasts of burden, to carry human beings on their backs. Amongst other creatures thus broken to harness are llamas, camels, wild sheep, zebras, bullocks, reindeer and a yak from Tibet, and for many weeks past Charles Urban's expert kinemacolographers have been taking "Urbanalia," or life motion pictures in natural hues of these extraordinary proceedings. The films will shortly be shown to the public; meantime a private exhibition of them at the Kinemacolor studios in Wardour street, was attended by a most distinguished company, including the Speaker of the House of Commons and Mrs. Lowther, their Highnesses the Princess Alexis Dolgoroukl and the Princess Cantacuzene, the Marchioness of Blandford, Lady Norah Churchill, the Dowager Viscountess Powerscourt, the Hon. Clara Wingfield, Lord and Lady Talbot de Malahide, Lady Carew, Lady Clifford Cory, Sir Henry and Lady Chamberlain, the Earl of Munster, the Hon. Misses Russell, Col. the Hon. Algernon Sidney and many others.

An ordinance has been introduced before the House of Delegates, at St. Louis, asking a license of $250 a year from moving picture theaters seating 750 persons or more and $150 a year from those seating less.

Spring City, Pa., is to have a new photoplay theater. It is being erected for Mr. Samuel Brunner, of Royersford, Pa., former lessee of the Royersford Opera House and proprietor of the Star Theater. The Spring City house will be equipped with 500 opera chairs, a commodious stage and dressing rooms, steam heated and with all the latest conveniences. The theater has been equipped with Tungstolier light fixtures and other electrical fixtures by electrician H. A. Heck of Spring City. The World desires to compliment Mr. Brunner and Mr. Heck on the handsome home for the photoplay that they are erecting and will be pleased to reproduce photographs and further particulars when the place is completed.

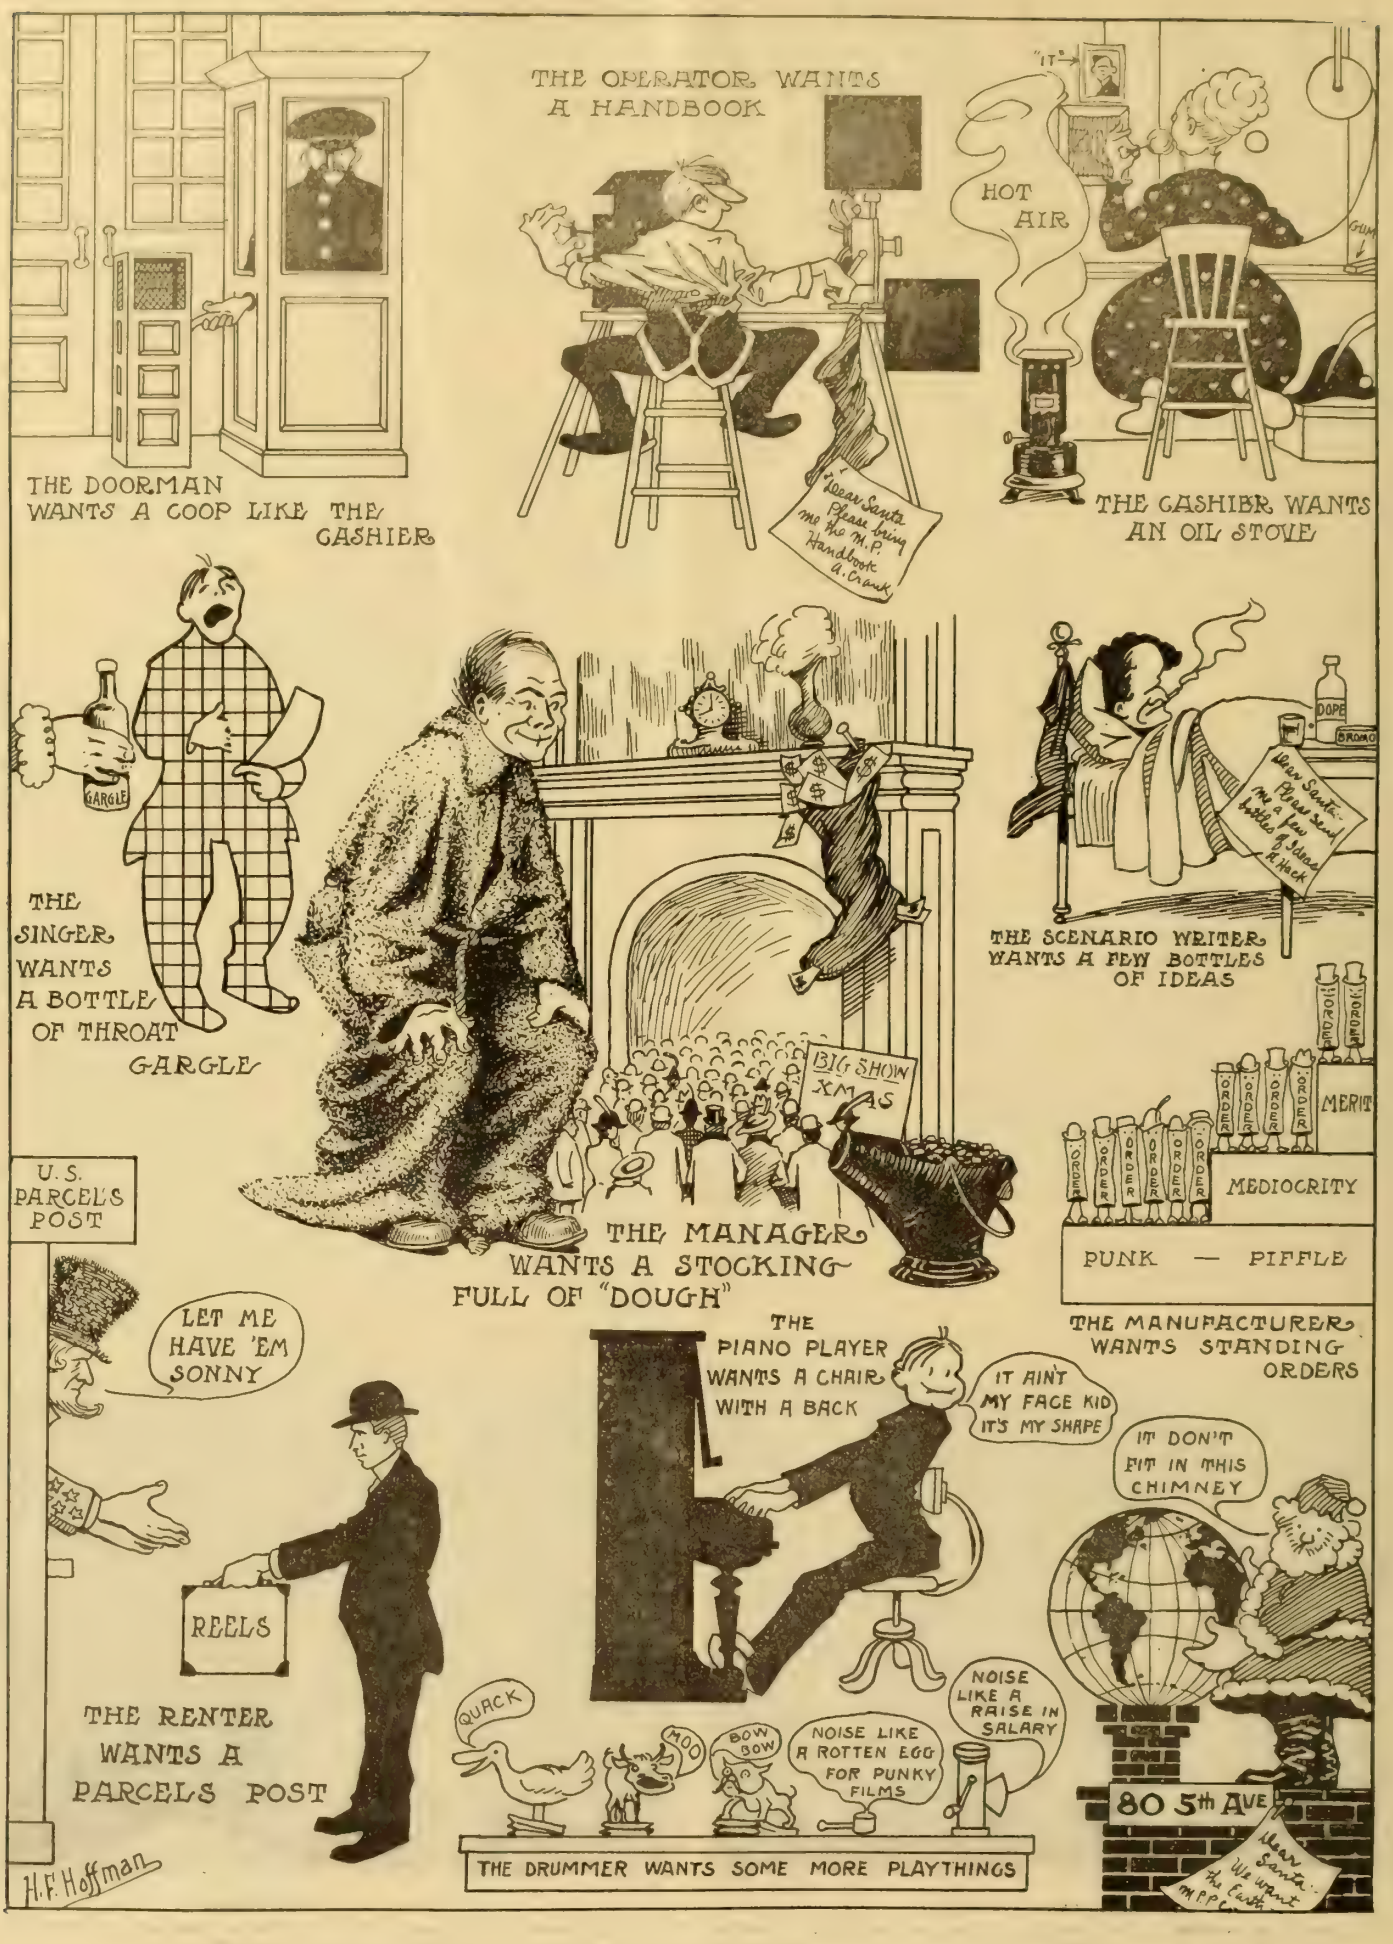
SUNSHINE IN POVERTY ROW—A PLEASING PATHE PHOTOPLAY.

THE RICH MAN'S CHRISTMAS.

Joy comes to the wealthy postmaster's family because they bring "sunshine to poverty row."

THE POOR MAN'S CHRISTMAS.

Made happy through the unexpected visit of Santa Claus with toys for the kids and a job for the father.



THE DOORMAN WANTS A COOP LIKE THE CASHIER
THE OPERATOR WANTS A HANDBOOK
"Dear Santa Please bring me the M.P. Handbook A Crank
HOT AIR
"IT"
THE CASHIER WANTS AN OIL STOVE
GARGLE
THE SINGER WANTS A BOTTLE OF THROAT GARGLE
BIG SHOW XMAS
THE MANAGER WANTS A STOCKING FULL OF "DOUGH" DOPE
BROMO
Dear Santa Please Send me a few bottles of Ideas A Hack
THE SCENARIO WRITER WANTS A FEW BOTTLES OF IDEAS ORDER MERIT
MEDIOCRITY
PUNK — PIFFLE
THE MANUFACTURER WANTS STANDING ORDERS
U.S. PARCELS POST
LET ME HAVE 'EM SONNY
REELS
THE RENTER WANTS A PARCELS POST
THE PIANO PLAYER WANTS A CHAIR WITH A BACK
IT AIN'T MY FACE KID IT'S MY SHAPE
IT DON'T FIT IN THIS CHIMNEY
80 5th AVE
Dear Santa: We want the Earth
QUACK
MOO
BOW WOW
NOISE LIKE A ROTTEN EGG FOR PUNKY FILMS
NOISE LIKE A RAISE IN SALARY
THE DRUMMER WANTS SOME MORE PLAYTHINGS
H.F. Hoffman

WHAT THEY ALL WANT FOR CHRISTMAS—By H. F. Hoffman.

AMERICAN VERSUS ENGLISH FILMS.

(By H. A. Browne, in "The Kinematograph Weekly." The author of this article paid a visit to the United States last Summer. He occupies a prominent position in the English film trade and is chairman of the Kinematograph Manufacturers' Association.—Eds. M. P. W.)

On my return from the States last Spring, I rather fell foul of certain gentlemen on the other side when I expressed my opinion that the Old Country was away ahead of our cousins across the "herring pond" in their methods of running picture shows. I did not give this opinion in a spirit of bigotry, but as an opinion formed with open mind, and unless they have improved very considerably during the past six months, I venture to assert that we can still claim to hold the record for beautiful picture houses against all comers.

In every town of any size in the United Kingdom to-day are picture houses, electric theaters, picture palaces, call them what you will, that are the last word in comfort, cleanliness and luxury. The pictures are as a general rule, well shown, carefully selected, and accompanied by a skillful pianist.

Now in the States, the majority (I think I may say) of the halls used as kinematograph theaters are converted theaters, music halls, and buildings of various descriptions, which have not had a tithe of the money spent on their conversion that the English halls have spent on their erection and equipment. The selection of pictures the manager of a show over yonder can get from his renter is not nearly so good as that which his English confrere can get from his hiring house, owing to the renters not being able to buy where they please. Added to this is the fact that their market is practically barred to all except a few favored European firms. Another disadvantage the New York show manager labors under is that he cannot get as good a light through his pictures as we get over here, owing to the stringent regulations of their local authorities, consequently he cannot get so bright and clear a picture as we get.

Then, again, the pictures are interspersed with vaudeville turns that are very far from first class. To be perfectly frank, they are usually "rotten," but I suppose his audience demands them, so he must have them. There is no doubt that the picture business on the other side is, as here, booming, but until the picture theater proprietors can get an open market in which to rent or purchase their films, they must be content to take a back seat when comparing their entertainment with that given in London. Another stumbling block, I understand, in the way of building theaters, especially for kinematograph shows in New York, is the very stringent building laws relating to this class of theater.

Under the aegis of the Trust, at least six manufacturing films have built up large and profitable businesses, but there is a grave doubt in my mind whether, unless the powers that be loosen the strings with which they have tied up their market so tightly, sooner or later they will kill the golden egg laying goose, viz., their audiences, by being unable to give to the theater manager that variety of pictures that his patrons demand. In London, with its open market, which is liberally supplied with pictures from both Trust and anti-Trust manufacturers in America, and from the many manufacturers in Europe, it is impossible to deny that our hiring firms are often hard put to it to give a bi-weekly change of program of really good first run stuff, therefore, how much more difficult must it be for the American renting houses, whether allied to the Trust or Sales Company, to give a really good program to their customers? The one thing that will kill the public interest in picture shows will be the continual presentation of pictures lacking variety and interest.

There is one other aspect of the trade, Mr. Editor, you suggested I should touch upon.

The photographic quality of kinematograph pictures is being improved week by week, but I am doubtful if the plots of our pictures are keeping pace with the demand for "high-class picture literature" that the public of to-day are receiving. How hard it is to get a good comic—one that is really humorous. Only those who have been "through the mill" as lawyers can appreciate Chase! Chase! Chase! with the usual struggling heap of perspiring humanity to finish up the picture, or some hideous face and head covered with bandages and sticking plaster, protruding a very unhealthy and bulbous tongue, and exposing to view a row of dirty looking teeth. Ye gods! What an idea of humor!

Take the plots of the so-called dramatic pictures. How thin some of them are and how alike they are to one another in story and treatment. It's all right to-day, Mr. Manufacturer, whilst this form of entertainment is a novel one to the great "B. P." but they will soon get blase. Unless you keep their interests continually engaged by giving them pictures with plots well conceived and more than well carried out, they will cease to take interest in pictures.

I hope no one will think I am at all pessimistic regarding the course of the trade, because I have pointed out one or two to my mind serious faults that are prevalent at the moment. The public to-day are keen on kinematograph shows, and so long as they can get the amount of entertainment for as little money as they do now, they will flock in their thousands to the picture shows, but the manufacturers must never lose sight of the fact that the more a person goes to a picture theater the more hypercritical they become and the harder they are to please.

"WORD FOR THE 'HACK'."

By Charles N. Sims.

The present poor pay and position of the hack scenario writer is one of his own making.

Both pity and contempt are his, where he has lifted his voice to cry out to the silent drama world, that he is a badly abused individual quite worthy of public sympathy.

Not long ago some one said in the pages of the Moving Picture World, that the scenario writer, to make from nine hundred to a thousand feet of film, will also make a good short story, or a novel, worth many times the maximum price paid for the same material in scenario form. That person was obviously correct in his views, I heartily agree with him.

But, alas! how many hack motion picture playwrights could write a saleable story, short or long? Not many, I fear.

In spite of the evident fact that we, to-day, have thousands of talented workers in the literary field, we can boast of only one Kipling, a few Davis's, and several O'Henrys.

A first class short story is one of the hardest things on earth to write, the incredulous hack may easily determine for himself the truth of this assertion.

The literary market of to-day, is bigger and better than it has ever been before. There is a place; a good place; a profitable place for every paragraph worth while. There is another inducement offered in the magazine field, worthy of the disgusted hack's notice. Consider the universal courtesy of the magazine editors.

The average length of the scenario that will make a thousand feet of film, contains about fifteen hundred words. This picture play will bring the hack from ten to twenty-five dollars (most likely ten), while a short story of similar length, that will merit the approval of a magazine editor, will yield the author much more than the price of many scenarios.

The disappointed hack seems to forget that a film manufacturing plant is not a charitable institution; but a bona fide business, doubtfully lucrative, built, and operated to produce breakfast bacon for a few, and something beside pork for a good many others, therefore it is childish, and an admission of deplorable ignorance of human nature to blame the thrifty manufacturers for obtaining scenarios at the lowest possible price.

All responsibility for the low prices in scenarios undoubtedly rests with the irrepressible hack, and he alone is to blame for existing conditions.

A radical change to the hack's material advantage may be effected, by a united action.

If every hack would cease throwing off motion picture plays for, say, a year, I for one firmly believe prices would go up, and even the manufacturers would utter little glad sighs of relief, in the mean time, the starving hack, who has called for help in a loud timid voice, may grow opulent, by selling short stories to the magazines.

SOUVENIRS

Advertising novelties, such as Buttons, Mirrors, Pictures, etc., to give away at matinees. Will bring results :: :: ::

SOL. PUDLIN

Manufacturer :: 137 Bowery, N. Y.

FLICKERS.

Which would you rather be, an organ, or a music box, or an Index?

* * *

The trouble with being an Index is that an index only points to one thing.

* * *

Another drawback is that with an organ you have to pass the hat, and a music box only plays one tune.

* * *

Did you ever notice that the man who can best afford to pay his way into a show is usually the man who wants to get in for nothing!

* * *

The Moran-Nelson pictures are successful and are being shown without interference. Moral—What they don't know will never hurt them.

* * *

The ladies of the New York Civic Federation who engaged the sun parlor of the Waldorf-Astoria for a motion picture lecture received their first practical lesson in projection.

* * *

When the daily press begins to call them "reels" instead of "rolls," we shall know for sure that the pictures are here to stay.

* * *

The Censorship Committee stands ready to investigate all alleged indecencies.—Spokane "Spokesman."

They'd better sit. It may be a long stand.

* * *

Now, then, will somebody with lots of nerve please get up and suggest the investigation of churches that are giving moving pictures in darkened auditoriums?

* * *

Suppose the pictures were regulated to please the most fastidious, would the most fastidious then become picture patrons? Answer—They follow the bell-cow.

* * *

All you need is a good pair of scissors and a bunch of stock cuts, and you can have all the Film Fancies you want.

* * *

While the press is raving about boys who are made bandits by moving pictures, let us timidly inquire why they omit to mention who sells the boys the pistols that make the boys bandits.

* * *

A contemporary says: "We nailed our colors to the mast. These colors of ours have never been untacked from the masthead where they still fly as a beacon light."

Beacon light! Somebody must have touched a match to the rag.

* * *

Cleveland dominie stirs up hornet's nest by advocating moving pictures on Sunday. President of Ohio Wesleyan University was heard to remark: "Why, if the Methodist Discipline, the book of Methodist laws, had been on this reading desk and heard that, I would have expected it to crawl to the edge and fall off."

Where, into the waste basket? Perish the thought.

* * *

The editor, by courtesy, of a certain would-be trade paper says: "It has never stooped to villify those who differ from it or its policy."

Unfortunately for the author of the foregoing platitude, all he "has done or wrote" in the pages of the sheet he edits (!) testifies in black and white as to the falsity of his claims.

* * *

That crime follows congestion in New York City as a result of weakened morals due to unsanitary conditions is the latest sociological dictum. It may be true, but the first recorded murder took place when there was ample elbow-room in the world, according to the narrative in Genesis.—New York "World."

In other words, Cain killed Abel without the aid of moving pictures.

CAN YOU BLAME THEM?

"The Independents have not given us our just due. One thing about the Independents we notice is, whether they are defending a suit in court, whether they are starting in business, or any other position they may be in, they go about it with a hang-dog sort of look, and a kind of guilty conscience, as though they were committing some crime against 'the powers that be.'"—Quotation from "the beacon light of the Independents."

Chicago Notes.

CANDY VERSUS PICTURE.

In some theaters the sale of candy seems to be of more importance than showing good pictures. The managers do not care if by running the film at a terrible speed they tear several feet of sprocket holes or hurt the eyesight of the spectator, but, on the other hand, they do not want to miss the profit on the sale of cheap candy.

At the Lyric, on State street, on Sunday afternoon, the "A Man of Honor," of Gaumont, 834 feet, was run in exactly (watch in hand) 9½ minutes, and "Her First Husband's Return," of Pathe, 990 feet, in 10¾ minutes. The intermission was just eleven minutes to allow the candy man to distribute his free samples, make a second tour of the auditorium to sell his confectionery, then a third tour to sell some songs.

These are the exact figures; they speak for themselves and need no other comment. The manager knows his business, if he prefers to discourage the lovers of good pictures by running the films too fast for the sake of giving more time to the sale of candy, it is his own lookout.

I was also surprised to find at the Lyric such poor music, as the Lyric is owned and operated by the owners of the Orpheum, so favorably known as the leading theater for good and appropriate music for the pictures.

In "A Man of Honor," when the woman finds herself locked with the artist in the ruins of the old castle, she gets excited, accuses the artist and even threatens to whip him, all this under a slow, soft, plaintive tune from the orchestra. When the artist jumps from the tower, is picked up as dead and carried away, the orchestra played lively ragtime music.

I wish that the film producers would stop this humbug of kissing photos. In "Her First Husband's Return" there is no reason for the wife to take the photo of her second husband and make such a fuss over it. He is not dead, he is in no danger, he has not deserted her, he has not gone very far, as we see him leave the house to attend to some business, and this without the traditional suit case. No doubt she loves her husband, but there is no reason for such a passionate scene with the photo. It is exaggeration pure and simple.

It seems that cinematography is a great mind-reader, as everything is always so well prepared and so convenient. In the same picture the woman, a supposed widow remarried to another man, seems to know that her first husband will return, and to greet him she has conveniently placed on her desk the clipping of the railroad accident in which her first husband is reported as killed. When this first husband returns, looking like a tramp, he has also in his pocket a clipping of the same railroad accident and he has also the marriage certificate, both papers as fresh as if they had been kept in a safe.

"A Man of Honor" is a miserable title for this picture. Where is the honor? He has done nothing wrong, it is not his fault if they are locked in the old castle; it is a mere accident. He does not save the honor by jumping from the tower; on the contrary, his rash act would imply that he was guilty, that he had a bad conscience and wanted to kill himself to hide a crime. It is no honor to shroud a woman in a sort of mystery. J. M. B.

THE PASSING OF THE SOAP BOX.

Do you remember about five years back, when the moving picture theater was a sort of "soap box" affair, how the "wise ones" shook their heads and said: "Oh, it's only a fad; it will die out in a year's time"? I wonder what they say, now. Times have changed, that's true; the business is on a solid basis and moving pictures are looked upon as a necessity instead of a fad. The picture theaters are being built as handsome and expensively as the regular opera houses, but what will be the limit?

Here in Chicago there is a firm of exhibitors who seem to possess more than ordinary confidence as to the future of the business. Christy Bros. & Sandow have opened the Elmo Theater, which they are advertising as the "biggest 5-cent house in Chicago," and more than likely their claim will be undisputed for some time to come. The finishing touches have as yet not been made on this theater; when the house is entirely complete, we will illustrate it in these pages. In the meantime the following will give you an idea as to its "bigness."

The building is 93 feet long by 68 feet wide, and has a capacity of 860 all on one floor. The interior is so arranged that a good view of the screen can be had from any part of the house, while the decorations and fittings are such as to give the place an air of coziness despite its spaciousness. The building is modern in every respect, twelve exits being one of the prominent features. The Elmo has been doing a wonderful business since its opening on Thanksgiving Day, yet this is not surprising, for the Elmo is the third venture of the Christy Bros. and they know what the public desires, more than that, they give it to them.

The only objection I found in the theater was that the operating booth is in the extreme right corner of the building. But this does not in any way interfere with the projection, for the operator, Al. Fales (who, by the way, lays claim to being the oldest operator in Chicago), has overcome the difficulty and is showing an excellent picture.

THE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT.

The managers of the moving picture theaters in Chicago have been enlisted in the crusade against tuberculosis through the sale of Red Cross Christmas Seals. Slides have been furnished the theaters by the Chicago Tuberculosis Institute, which has the sale in charge, and from now until Christmas, pictures of the red and green "stickers" will be thrown on the screen in the various theaters at the beginning of each performance. A commendable practice. J. C. K.

Neil Duffy, proprietor of the Elite Theater, Appleton, Wis., spent the past week in Chicago renewing acquaintances and "wising up" on the picture situation in general. Mr. Duffy has the unique distinction of being the first Independent exhibitor in the State of Wisconsin, always a booster for the cause, he is now having his fond hopes realized in seeing the improvement the Independent manufacturers have made since he entered the business. When I was presented to Mr. Duffy one of the gentlemen of the crowd asked him if he knew what the World is. "Do I know what the World is!" he exclaimed. "Why, man, it's as necessary to me as the Bible is to a Sunday school teacher." Of course I "swelled up." J. K.

Julius Singer, the representative of the Laemmle Film Service, has won over the Bijou Dream on State street, starting with the Imp film, Count de Beaufort. This makes the second Independent theater in the loop. Mr. Norman, general manager of the Laemmle Film Service, is a very busy man these days, but not too busy to grant an interview which we will give next week.

In the Mississippi Valley.

Dreamland, the moving picture theater at Farmington, Ill., has been sold to Mr. McFarland, of Monmouth, Ill. who will put in new chairs, an enlarged stage and remodel the front.

J. G. Gesell has reopened the Nickeldome, at Bloomington, Ill., after remodeling the interior and adding 150 opera chairs, bringing the capacity up to 300.

Contracts have been let for the redecoration of the Idylhour, at Pekin.

Robinson Brothers, allied with the Princess, at Peoria, and Alcazar, at Chicago, may open a vaudeville house in Sterling. Efforts are being made to lease the Academy, George Olmstead, owner.

J. M. Rugless is now manager of the Colonial Theater, at Rockford, Ill.

The Empress, 413 Main street, Peoria, Ill., has forsaken the lure of vaudeville and has become an exclusive motion picture and song house with a 5-cent admission. A new pipe organ takes up the room formerly used for dressing rooms. This move by Vernon Seaver, recognized as a magnate in other lines of amusement, shows the trend of public desires.

Peter and Mathew Gingry, under the firm name of Gingry & Gingry, are occupying the Roth Building, in Mt. Pulaski, with their new Colonial Moving Picture Theater, instead of the Odd Fellows' Building, as first planned.

The Gem Theater, at Mound City, Ill. aided the Woman's Club drinking fountain fund by a benefit performance.

George W. Malone has been engaged as manager, temporarily at least, of the Superba Theater, at Freeport, succeeding Charles Dees, resigned. The interior and front are being remodeled.

Ornamental standards bearing clusters of boulevard lights will be placed in front of the Family Theater at Sterling, Ill. A new white pressed brick front is part of the improvements recently begun.

Moving pictures Sunday afternoon and evening were a feature of the drug show given at the convention of the Wisconsin Drug Association, in Milwaukee, recently. It is estimated 35,000 persons attended the exhibit.

PUPILS NEED PICTURE SHOWS—MAYOR SEIDEL.

Work of the Milwaukee Council in promoting social centers by moving picture exhibitions in public school buildings and the formation of neighborhood clubs has found a champion in Mayor Emil Seidel and W. D. Peplow, former president of the Board of Education is a strong advocate of the movement.

The first entertainment of the sort given in Milwaukee was a success so far as cash receipts were concerned, but drew from Building Inspector E. W. Koch an edict that no moving picture shows must be given in school auditoriums above the first floor. "I don't like the idea at merely saying, 'you can't do certain things.' There must be shown a way out and a practical way," was the comment of Mayor Seidel. "This work must go on and we cannot wait until we have remodeled every school in the city."

It was brought to the attention of the city officials that nearly every lodge hall in the city was above the ground floor, and that aisles had not only been run but smoking had been permitted. Together, it was declared if the buildings were empty at night they were too dangerous for occupancy by the children in the daytime.

People were turned away when the second of these exhibitions was given in the assembly hall of the Eleventh ward, one of the most fruitful fields for social workers. In this section many complaints had been made by citizens that children, having no amusement, disturbed the peace by their conduct upon the streets. Music by a talking machine, piano solos and a travelogue supplemented the pictures, which were supplied by the Western Film Exchange, Enterprise Building, Milwaukee. The machine was operated by Thomas Trowbridge, a member of the Stage Employees' Union, and precautions taken made fire out of the question.

F. H. M.

FILM MANUFACTURERS BUY HALLBERG ECONOMIZERS.

J. H. Hallberg, "The Economizer Man," reports that he has recently sold his Standard Automatic Electric Economizers to the Biograph Company and to the Gnome Motion Picture Company. No better evidence of the value and superiority of the "Economizer" could be asked than the endorsement of such purchasers. The Gnome Motion Picture Company also purchased a Motiograph Moving Picture Machine after carefully investigating all other makes.

Letters to the Editors.

THE DOOM OF THE PICTURE.

St. Louis, Mo., December 11, 1910.

Editors Moving Picture World:

Dear Sirs—I am sending you a page from a local newspaper which contains much that is only too true. In less than three years from now, moving picture shows will be fewer than there are stock companies. Why? Because people are tiring of the same old thing, week after week, year after year; and also the way they are projected.

I visited picture shows here, where the pictures shown were so dim I could hardly discern them. No wonder the people's eyesight is suffering and they are getting disgusted. All some of the owners care for, is raking in the nickels and dimes, not caring a snap whether their patrons are pleased or not. It seems so, anyway.

Moving pictures are doomed. Small stock companies are going to take their place as sure as the sun rises in the east.

The film manufacturing companies ought to wake up and do something; not only improve their films, but also teach the proprietors how to project their films to the best advantage. What good is a first-class picture, badly projected?

This is the case with nine out of ten here in St. Louis.

Yours respectfully,

A LOVER OF GOOD PICTURES.

[Our correspondent encloses us an article from a St. Louis paper which seems to think that the moving picture theater, in a short space of time, will be replaced by cheap stock companies. We are not quite so pessimistic as this, but we certainly are of opinion that unless manufacturers make better pictures, unless those pictures are better shown, and unless exhibitors generally take a more intelligent interest in the business, the primacy of the picture, as the most popular form of cheap entertainment, is very seriously threatened. It is the object of the Moving Picture World, week by week to impress on all concerned the vital urgency of averting a possible danger to the business by avoiding apathy and carelessness. "Better pictures, better shown," is our counsel in this respect.—Ed. M. P. W.]

BIOGRAPH.

THE LESSON.—The Rev. Mr. Hollister, nearing the last milestone of life's journey, has but one ardent wish, and that is to see his son James wearing the cloth that he must now lay aside on account of his old age. The boy has had the advantage of an example in religious principles, but he has needed the guiding solicitude of a mother, she having long since died, so that James and his sister Ruth are raised by their father, the old minister. The old father loses no opportunity to point out the better way for James, hoping that he will follow in his footsteps. Ruth is also solicitous, she feeling that James is guilty at times of disobedience, in which conjecture she is right. James instead of harkening to his father's plea, though he ostensibly pretends to, spends most of his time in the corner saloons, becoming more addicted to drink, until through moral frailty the habit is formed to an irrepressible degree. The old minister's condition takes a sudden turn for the worse and upon the arrival of the doctor Ruth is informed that her father has but a few moments to live. The old man calls for his boy, but he at this hour is in a saloon intoxicated, rejecting the persuasions of even his companions to go home, for they are cognizant of the good man's weakness. Ruth knows too well where her brother is at this moment and can imagine his condition, but she conquers pride and goes out to search for him. Entering the saloon, she finds him in an almost helpless condition. The saloon-keeper, appreciating her embarrassment, begs her to leave, he intending to send the boy home. James misconstrues his actions and strikes him in resentment of a fancied insult, felling him. In the fall, he strikes his head on the foot rail and when the police arrive they find the brawl has resulted fatally for the saloon-keeper. In the excitement Ruth has gotten James out and to home, where he arrives only a few minutes before the messenger of death. The police learn who delivered the fatal blow and go to get him. Ruth hears them entering and intercepts their entrance into the sick room, begging them to hold off that her father may be kept in ignorance and his last moments peaceful. This they consent to do and when the old minister breathes his last the boy is taken away to pay the penalty of his indifference to the greatest of God's commands.

WHITE ROSES.—Harry loved Betty, and vice versa; but Harry was fearfully bashful. No matter how he tried, he never could muster up sufficient courage to propose, despite the fact that Betty always endeavored to help him out. An idea! He writes his proposal, and invents a sentimental code of signals. The letter reads: "If you will accept me, wear red roses; if your are in doubt, the pink; if you do not love me and reject me, wear the white." He then repairs to the florist's and purchases the three shades of roses, despatching them by messenger to his lady's residence. The messenger, however, is a dime novel fiend, and while engrossed in the thrills of a harrowing story, loses the box of flowers which are picked up by another boy. A policeman sees this boy with the box of flowers, and as he cannot give a clear account he runs him in. In the meantime, the novel reader is in despair over his loss until a modern Good Samaritan seeing the boy in tears offers to help him when he hears his tale of woe. This well-meant generosity, however, twists the romance, for he procures white roses only. Of course, Betty thinking only of Harry, wears them. Harry takes it for a hint to "beat it," and for revenge decides to marry his cook. The real box arrives at the station house, where is encountered a wise judge, aye! a modern Solomon, who after investigating the details of the case, sends the officer with the flowers to the address given on the box and letter, thus averting a heart tragedy.

THE RECREATION OF AN HEIRESS.—The designing mother strongly advises her son to look about for a wife with money, and let money play the important factor in the affair rather than love. The mother receives a letter which seems ominous, as it reads: "Dear Friend—I am sending my niece, whom you have never seen, to you for a little recreation. As you know, she is an heiress now, so kindly gratify her every whim." The very chance, so when the young lady arrives with her maid the boy immediately gets busy. The heiress, of course, is wise, and realizes this is no place for her to recreate. However, she feels she must deliver a jolt to this family of fortune hunters, and hence she writes the following letter: "Friend—By chance I learned that the heiress at your house changed places with her maid before arriving. If you are after her money you had better make up to the maid. A Friend." The son at once shifts his attentions to the maid and the niece allows him to go far enough to embarrass himself upon the disclosure when she enters the room with her grip which she peremptorily orders the maid to take, giving the crestfallen mother and son the laugh.

EDISON.

THE LIFE OF A SALMON.—We are first shown the picturesque canyon of Capilano, near Vancouver, B. C. As the camera descends the rocky cliffs, we pause for a moment to give the spectator a passing glimpse of a roaring mountain stream. A boiling mass of water is hurled with terrific force downward, and here we catch the first glimpse of Mr. Salmon and his wife and their life's struggle for the continuation of the species. We are shown the salmon frantically endeavoring to leap the falls. Time and time again they hurl their bodies into the air, only to be caught by the swift current of water and dashed against the rocks.

We are then shown the spawn in its various stages of evolution until it takes the form of a tiny salmon. Mr. and Mrs. Salmon are placed in cans, ready for their place in the world's market.

This picture shows the operation of catching the silver horde, the setting of the trap, the drawing in of the net in the gold grey of the dawn with a catch of 15,000 salmon, and finally their delivery to the salmon cannery. We are also shown in this picture an Indian canoe race participated in by Indians who work in the cannery, eleven men in each crew, and three crews, in their long, slim craft hewed out of solid trees. This is an exceedingly interesting sight and one that holds the attention and interest of the spectator from the start of the exciting race to the finish.

AMATEUR NIGHT.—We see at the start of the story a proposal and the rejection of the round-faced youth because of the maiden's conviction that she must sacrifice all to what she thinks is her art. And then we see the practice of the art, the young lady's studying of the sleep-walking scene from "Macbeth," which she recites and declaims and "elocutes" comically. Convinced that she is a real tragedienne, she is highly incensed when she finds herself billed in front of the theater as a comedienne and has the sign changed.

When the fatal night comes—"amateur night"—she stands in the wing and watches the acts of the other amateurs. There is a boy who thinks he is Jew impersonator and who loses his nose at the critical moment of his monologue, and there is a wonderful (?) dancer of uncertain age whose poses and dances are absurd in the extreme, and on whom, as on the Jew impersonator, the "hook" is used with telling effect. There are two boy aspirants for honors who juggle Indian clubs with painful results, and who are likewise led away in disgrace. Then comes the human snake, and she sees him fall beneath a blow from a bag of leaves, dealt by a stage hand, after which he is led away by the manager of the "hook department." All this produces a disastrous effect upon the mind of the fair tragedienne, and she becomes more and more fearful as each one of the "artists" disappears. Her courage oozes out of her finger tips and finally, when the stage attaches are not looking, she slips away and runs for the street, making her escape.

Her youthful lover has been sitting in a box awaiting her appearance and carrying a huge bouquet to toss to her. He becomes alarmed at her non-appearance, the audience becomes restless, and finally the youth climbs to the stage and demands to know where his lady love is. He is incontinently thrown out of the stage door by the irate manager and, thinking he is pursued, he in turn flies down the street, the girl flying down the street in the opposite direction. They run around a corner into each other's arms, and the outcome of the story may be easily guessed.

THE CAPTAIN'S BRIDE.—The opening scene introduces us to the betrothal of a young couple in the far West, and we follow their fortunes in the next scene to a honeymoon on board ship. The day is bright and the passengers are enjoying a stroll upon the deck. Then there is a sudden transition, for the next scene carries us to a storm at midnight. The sky is black and no land is visible through the darkness.

We are next apprised that the shipwreck is seen from the shore by catching a glimpse of the rocks and the life saving crew making efforts to reach the vessel in distress. Flashing back to the ship, we see the life boat lowered, the decks cleared and the ship apparently deserted. Then suddenly from the cabin appear our young lovers, who had evidently not been aroused in time to make the life boat. Next we see the powerful captain of the life saving crew on shore taking the rope in his teeth and starting his heroic swim through the breakers. On the ship the young lover is struck by a falling spar and hurled out of sight just before the captain climbs over the rail and finds the girl lying unconscious upon the deck. Taking her in his arms he begins his awful struggle with the waves and tide, and finally reaches the shore in safety with his burden.

Then follow scenes in the captain's hut. The girl is restored to consciousness, but not to memory. The rough crew on the out-of-the-way island take every care of the girl and she becomes apparently perfectly normal, but does not recover her sense of the past. Of course, each one of the crew falls desperately in love with her. Then they decide that it is not right that the girl should be there alone with men, and that someone should marry her and take care of her, and the choice is finally left to her. Unconscious of the past, the girl chooses the captain who has saved her life and whom she has learned to love in her present personality.

Meanwhile some scenes have shown the husband afloat on a spar and picked up by a ship, and thus it happens that when the little wedding procession starts from the station towards the church they are met on the way by a strange man who confronts them and halts their progress. The situation is intensely dramatic, for the girl, in spite of the fact that she stands face to face with her young husband, is still absolutely unconscious of the fact and wholly fails to recognize or remember him. He pleads with her and tries to recall the scenes of their courtship and marriage, but she turns from him to the stalwart captain whom she is about to marry, as if for protection.

Then the young husband remembers the little bit of lover's by-play which had been a part of their courtship, and it flashes across his mind that this suggestion may serve to remind her, even though his face has failed to do. In imitation of a man drawing a pistol, he puts his hand to his hip pocket and points his finger at her. The gesture had been used between them so many times that as she sees the familiar movement it suddenly flashes into her mind that there is something that has been forgotten. At once the train of memory is started and it leads to complete recognition at last.

ESSANAY FILM CO.

A TANGLED MASQUERADE.—Paul Dunlap and Ralph Ford both love Helen Moore, whose father favors Paul's suit, and finally forbids Ralph the house. Paul, a hypocrite, has completely won over the old man by his mock saintly ways, and the more manly Ralph, although Helen's favorite, finds that he must carry on his wooing under difficulties.

Hopeless of gaining the father's consent, Ralph decides upon an elopement, and writes Helen, asking if she will marry him in spite of her father's objection. She writes a reply in the affirmative, making an appointment with him at a coming masquerade, and telling him that she will be costumed as Night, with a star in her hair. Her father discovers her in the act of writing the note and forces her to show it to him. Wrathful at first, he suddenly conceives a plan to put an abrupt end to Ralph's unwelcome wooing. He feigns to give into Helen's pleading and allows her to send the note.

However, the old man's sudden generosity has a long strong string to it. On the night of the masquerade, immediately after Helen's costume has arrived, father tells her that he will attend the ball, and that he will do so in the costume intended for her. Forbidding her to leave the house, father goes blithely to the ball, garbed as Night, and chuckling over the anticipated discomfiture of Ralph.

But father's plan, though well laid, is upset by Paul. This young gentleman has the prying disposition that fits so well with his general character, and Helen's note, intended for Ralph, has fallen into his hands. Not for a moment does he scruple to open it and take advantage of the information gained. It's Paul for the masquerade, to seek out the lady who is costumed as Night.

Father has scarcely left the house before Helen calls Ralph on the 'phone to warn him of father's plan. Explanations over the 'phone follow, and the young people decide that while father is disporting himself with Paul at the masquerade, they will take advantage of the opportunity to elope. Ralph is soon on his way to the house, where he joins Helen, and the two go at once to find a minister.

Paul, at the masquerade, meets father, and thinking him Helen, proposes that they elope. Father, thinking Paul is Ralph, delightedly assents, and they set out for the minister's, chance leading them to the same divine selected by Ralph and Helen.

Ralph and Helen, married, are just about to leave the parsonage, when father and Paul, in costume, are ushered in. Paul, surprised, tears the mask from father, and Ralph performs a like office for Paul, who thoroughly scared, rushes from the room. Father sees no other course than for him to give his blessing to Ralph and Helen, and he does so with the best grace he can command.

THE TENDERFOOT MESSENGER.—In this striking portrayal of the West, the story revolves around the cleverness of Shorty Blair, the express messenger, who, by his tenderfoot appearance, manages to carry the most valuable packages through the bandit infested country in which he operates.

In this story Shorty is entrusted with $50,000 and, knowing that the probability of being held up, he carefully conceals his identity and poses as the greenest of green tenderfeet, completely hoodwinking the proprietor of the roadhouse at which he is forced to wait for the stage.

A band of outlaws, operating near the junction, are apprised by their pal, Kelly, in the employ of the express company, that a messenger is passing through and must stop at the Wild Steer Tavern. They come in full force that night of Shorty's arrival, tell the proprietor, who is in league with them, that they know the messenger and the money are in the house, and demand that he be given up. The proprietor, fooled by Blair's innocent appearance, tells them that he has no guest but a tenderfoot, who knows as much about riding express as a mule does about paradise. However, they put considerable faith in their pal's tip and insist upon searching the effects of the "tenderfoot," and they start for his room.

Early in the evening Blair has shown a slight kindness to Nell, the daughter of Mac, the proprietor and she overhearing the plans of the band, goes to warn Ned and Wanda. She takes his precious bundle of currency, secreted by Neil Blair makes his escape by a rope from the window and secures a horse.

The outlaws soon reaching the room and finding Blair gone resolve that they become mad has tricked them and escaped to warn Mac the hotel proprietor. Neil coming from the room finds Blair mounted and about to leave and tells him that her father's life has been endangered. Blair at once abandons his intention of flight, and returning to the barroom, gets the drop upon the astonished bandits and in a short time has them disarmed and helpless. To further convince them of the futility of making any more attempts against him, he gives them an exhibition of marksmanship which leaves them open-mouthed.

Laden with the entire armament of the outfit, Blair goes out and further protects his retreat by leading off all the horses available. "Good bye, gents; you'll find your guns scattered along the trail. Likewise your broncos; but don't be in too much of a hurry to follow me," he says as he rides away, leaving the disconcerted bandits thankful that he did not carry matters further and put them all in the hands of the law.

GAUMONT.

G. Kleine.

HEROD AND THE NEW BORN KING.—"Now when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea in the days of Herod the king, behold, there came wise men from the east to Jerusalem, saying Where is he that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen his star in the east, and are come to worship him.

"When Herod the king had heard these things, he was troubled, and all Jerusalem with him.

"And when he had gathered all the chief priests and scribes of the people together, he demanded of them where Christ should be born.

"And they said unto him, In Bethlehem of Judea: for thus it is written by the prophet,

"And thou Bethlehem, in the land of Judea, art not the least among the princes of Juda: for out of thee shall come a Governor, that shall rule my people Israel.

"Then Herod, when he had privily called the wise men, inquired of them diligently what time the star appeared.

"And he sent them to Bethlehem, and said, Go and search diligently for the young child; and when ye have found him, bring me word again, that I may come and worship him also.

"When they had heard the king, they departed; and, lo, the star, which they saw in the east, went before them, till it came and stood over where the young child was.

"When they saw the star, they rejoiced with exceeding great joy.

"And when they were come into the house, they saw the young child with Mary his mother, and fell down, and worshipped him: and when they had opened their treasures, they presented unto him gifts; gold, and frankincense, and myrrh.

"And being warned of God in a dream that they should not return to Herod, they departed into their own country another way.

"And when they were departed, behold the angel of the Lord appeareth to Joseph in a dream, saying, Arise and take the young child and his mother, and flee into Egypt, and be thou there until I bring thee word: for Herod will seek the young child to destroy him.

"When he arose, he took the young child and his mother by night, and departed into Egypt."

HIS CINDERELLA GIRL.—Maggie, a poor orphan, is forced to wait on her wealthier cousins as a servant. The cousins receive a letter from a nephew who had left for a foreign country many years before. The letter read as follows:

"My Dear Uncle—After many years absence, I am delighted at the thought of returning to my native country and shall arrive to-morrow by the 6 p. m. train. I am looking forward to seeing you all and hope my unexpected visit will not inconvenience you. Your loving nephew, Jack."

The next day the whole family makes ready to meet the nephew at the station, but they are disappointed to see that the nephew looks poor, for they understood he was a rich man. They force him to sit with the coachman and at the house he must eat his meals in the kitchen and sleep in the attic. In the company of Maggie, he soon learns that they are cousins. The following day they are caught making love. Immediately Maggie is dismissed, but Jack removes a false beard and says Maggie has promised to marry him and he shall settle on her his vast fortune. They go away together, leaving the whole family in despair. A year later, we see the young married couple with their little babe living a happy life.

THE OLD HOME.—A lesson in faithfulness. A young man is unexpectedly advised that a mortgage is resting on the old home which he has inherited from his parents. He lacks courage to meet the necessary hardships in order to save the home from being sold and leaves it and his lover for parts unknown. His old servant, who has been in his father's family for years, at this point steps in and states his intention to assist the girl in raising the money to clear the debt. The wanderer returns and finds everything paid and is profuse in his thanks to his fiancee and the old servant.

URBAN-ECLIPSE.

G. Kleine.

THE TYRANT OF FLORENCE. [illegible] of which the tyrant [illegible] capitals are [illegible] to [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] to his shoes, and his efforts and contortions to get through the door of his room are absurdly ludicrous. Finally he manages to get out and we see him making frantic efforts to maintain his equilibrium on a fairly gentle slope. Max is plucky, and in spite of numerous falls, sticks to his purpose, although his attitudes and the knots in which he ties himself are excruciatingly funny. Finally we find him making his first leap; it is not exactly successful, and in the last scene the unhappy novice appears to be endeavoring to escape from the snowballs that the children of the village are pelting him with.

BETTY'S FIREWORKS. Betty plays truant and fills her satchel with crackers and other fireworks. Having thrown a few in the classroom, where both scholars and mistress are left shrieking with dismay, she attaches some crackers to two women who are busy gossiping. Frightened out of their lives they fall and roll over. Nothing seems to deter her, and in turn she has placed crackers on several people and two policemen. At last the balance are attached to a motor car and set off to the astonishment of the occupants. Betty returns to the store, where she sets fire to the complete stock of fireworks, which necessitates the presence of the fire brigade.

SUNSHINE IN POVERTY ROW.—The story relates to two poor children whose father is out of work and whose mother is sick. They live in a squalid tenement in Poverty Row. The doctor sent by a local charitable organization prescribes medicine for the wife, but they have no money to purchase it. The father has but a nickel left. The children, 8 and 3 years of age, are out gathering wood from around the builders' yards. On their way home their thoughts center on Christmas at the sight of the toys that are tastefully displayed in a window of a store. They realize that the following day is Christmas Day. On returning to the two room tenement that is their wretched home they go into their bedroom while the doctor is with their mother. The elder writes a letter addressed to "Mr. Santa Claus, Heaven," in which he asks him to remember them. The doctor departing, they go to their parents, and the father finds that all that is left in the house is a dry crust of bread. He gives them his last coin and sends them out with a bottle to purchase some milk. On the road they mail their letter, which in due course reaches the postoffice. A sorter shows it to the superintendent, who in turn shows it to the postmaster, who happens in then. The latter places it in his pocket and returns to his sumptuous home to see his little daughter asleep in her cot, while his wife has gaily decorated a fine Christmas tree for the following day. She sees the letter protruding from his pocket, and taking it out they read it sadly. The same idea strikes both, they put on their wraps and, taking a goodly load of the magnificent toys destined for their own little girl, proceed to Poverty Row. Meantime the two poor children have returned home and eaten their meal of bread and milk. They say good-night to their parents and retire to their room. There they hang up their stockings, and having said their prayers, retire to sleep. The postmaster and his wife enter the squalid dwelling and, showing the letter to the poor father, steal on tiptoe and deposit the toys at the foot of the children's stockings. The children are not disturbed, but happy in their slumber dream that they see the factory of Santa Claus in full blast. They see the toys being made, and the fairies filling a big bag which Santa places on his shoulder. They see him emerge from the fireplace of their room and deposit the presents on the floor. They wake up. It is morning. They find it was not a dream. In reality the toys are there. Each taking some they rush in to tell their parents, and the picture ends with a clever tableau showing the poor man's christmas and the Postmaster's Christmas.

SELIG.

JOHN DOUGH AND THE CHERUB.—The prophecy is fulfilled and John Dough becomes the King of Lo-Hi. As King of the Lowlanders and Highlanders, he assumes the dignified duties of a ruling monarch, but with no degree of satisfaction to his adherents or happiness to himself, as the evil spirit of the witches and trend of natural events strew with shagged breakers the path of the "ship of state." The alchemist entrusts his wonderful elixir of life to the baker woman for safe keeping, who, being color blind, mistakes the precious elixir for a rheumatism cure, and the application has startling effects. Neglecting to dispose of the contents of the bowl, same finds its way into the baker's bread, and the result almost proves the undoing of Lo Hi. John Dough gives his assistance in the celebration of the Fourth. No end of trouble results from the invasion of his peaceful rest by the much despised Miffkits. Then comes the cherub, who introduces Dough to his animal friends, incidentally secures supplies. He then visits the fairies' garden and later interviews the Princess Ozma, who makes a prophecy: "The throne of Lo Hi shall vacant be until the coming by air or sea of an oven baked man and a Cherub wee." Accordingly John Dough drops into the Land of Oz and meets the Cherub.

OVERLAND TO FREMONT.—With the snow capped peaks of old Mt. Shasta frowning down upon the little Indian village at its base, wild wood and shagged undergrowth hid from view the glories of the outer world. Black Bear and his squaw Red Bird disagree over the drinking of rum and the squaw is wounded when she tries to destroy the bottle. An old trapper hearing the shot, runs to the spot from which the sound came, finds Red Bird wounded and carries her off to the army post where the kind old Colonel Beverly and his daughter order her cared for and she is finally nursed back to life and becomes very friendly to the Colonel and devoted to his daughter.

One day the Colonel receives a letter stating that his son, who is attached to another post under Colonel Fremont, is seriously ill and that in his delirium he calls for his sister, asking that she be sent as soon as possible. The old trapper offers to guide her there, and Red Bird begs to accompany them and is allowed to do so. The start is made on horseback, riding through the forest. Indians are seen following them. Black Bear has started an uprising for revenge. While the trapper swims across the lake for a canoe to get the girls across the Colonel's daughter is carried away and the guide captured.

The faithful Red Bird escapes and steals into the Indian village at night and releases the guide, who effects also the escape of the Colonel's daughter, making a hasty retreat in the little boat at hand. They are followed by the irate Indians, and finally, almost exhausted, reach the desert plains, only to find flames sweeping everything before. Famished for want of water and worn from fatigue, poor Red Bird dies and leaves old Joe the trapper and Helen to push on alone to the post. After many days of weary travel they reach the post. Fremont rescues and cares for them and the son survives to see his sister and dies in her arms

VITAGRAPH.

HE WHO LAUGHS LAST.—What is more pitiable than a lady like man? He is, putting it mildly, a laugh. And that is why the fellow members of the club to which Reggie belongs are all laughing over a joke one of the fellows is telling about him. "Here he comes now" bashful and timid, but withal a very likeable young chap. He is invited to join them, and while talking to the president of the club, a fat, pompous gentleman, he accidentally steps on his foot. "The fat grouch" goes for Reggie with a fiendish delight, and when the boy leaves the room to escape his abuse, all hands, including the president, join in a hearty laugh at the expense of their innocent butt.

A few evenings later, at a dance, Reggie is introduced to Miss Ethel Stevens by the president of the club, and she shows a decided preference to him, much to the displeasure of her escort and admirer, Ralph Morris. She eludes Ralph and seeks the company of Reggie, with whom she dances, leaving Ralph foolishly holding two plates of ice cream, which she placed in his hands and which she and Reggie had been eating. Reggie is completely smitten, and makes up his mind there is only one girl for him, and that one is Ethel.

The next night Ralph, having noticed Ethel's fondness for Reggie, loses no time in going to her home and popping the question. Ethel refuses him, notwithstanding her father's angry intercession for Ralph. In tears Ethel is bemoaning her fate when the maid announces Mr. Reginald Foster. "Let him come in.' is the ready command from Ethel. It is Reggie's turn now. He proposes, is accepted with open arms just as Mr. Stevens enters the room. He orders the young man from the house, but his daughter remains firm in her proclamation of her choice.

Ralph goes to the club, piqued at his "turn down," and especially sore at Reggie. One of the club members proposes a good joke on Reggie; he is very enthusiastic over it. An invitation is sent to Reggie to attend a reception at the club that evening. The invitation is despatched by a messenger, and the recipient comes to the club that evening in full dress, carrying a bouquet, only to find out it is all a joke and meet the jeers and laughs of the whole club.

Reggie acknowledges that it is "on him," and then declares that he will get "one on them" with interest, or know the reason why. Ralph Morris tells him that if he pulls a joke on him he will do anything he may ask of him, if it is in his power to grant it. "And I will agree to see that the agreement is carried out," says the club president. They draw up the terms, and after they are regularly signed and witnessed, Reggie bids them all good-night.

Reggie has had his eye-teeth cut, and he proves himself to be made of the right stuff. He acquaints Ethel with his agreement with Morris and with his plans of getting even.

Just a week later a swell reception is given, and everybody is there but Reggie. Ralph is there with Ethel and her father; the club president and all the members, too. While everything is in full swing a young woman bursts upon the scene, throws herself upon Ralph, claims him as her long lost lover and begs him not to desert her for another.

The dancers stop and everybody crowds around Ralph and the excited woman. Ethel's father denounces Ralph as a villain; the president of the club and all hands are astonished. Ethel, who knows all about it, is all smiles, and when the joke has gone far enough Reggie pulls off his wig. Ralph acknowledges himself beaten, and when Reggie asks Mr. Stevens for his daughter's hand Ralph has to withdraw in his favor, and when the father objects the club president soon wins him over and gains his consent to the acceptance of a son in law who is clever enough to successfully get the laugh on them all.

THE COLOR SERGEANT'S HORSE. The Color Sergeant's horse, "Don," is no ordinary animal; it possesses extraordinary intelligence and a great fondness for his master, and this picture proves it, although it embodies a love story about the Sergeant, his sweetheart and the English flag.

The Sergeant, before starting for the field, bids his sweetheart good-bye. She presents him with a flag and tells him if he bears it safely through and brings it back to her after the war she will marry him. "Don" seems to appreciate the agreement, and kisses the young lady good-bye. The Sergeant mounts his horse and they leave for active service.

In the encounter with the enemy the Color Sergeant is wounded and the flag is captured. When he is lying prostrate the horse takes his canteen and going to a nearby pool fills the bottle with water and revives his master, who tries to rise but falls back exhausted, haunted with the consciousness of having lost the flag and his sweetheart.

"Don" follows the enemy, and while they are sleeping the faithful beast stealthfully enters the encampment, takes possession of the flag and gallops at top speed back to the wounded color bearer and places the colors over his body. The Sergeant is delighted at the sight of his lost trophy, but cannot raise himself to his feet. He takes a paper and pencil from his pocket and writing a note gives it to "Don" to carry to the English regiment.

The Arabs have discovered the flag has been recaptured and start in pursuit of the horse. They follow his footprints and are in hot pursuit when they encounter the English regiment, which has been notified by "Don" of the Color Sergeant's plight. They are defeated, and the Sergeant is saved and brought back, with his flag, to the city and the English headquarters, where we next see him attending a banquet with his sweetheart, now his wife.

"Don," who is outside the house, hears the cheering of the guests, walks to the window, looks in, nods a "How-do-you-do," drinks a glass of wine given him by his mistress, takes the Color Sergeant's flag from her hand and waves it triumphantly as his master and mistress lovingly place their arms around his neck and place their faces against his in acknowledgement of service rendered in making two loving hearts beat as one.

THE LAW AND THE MAN.—It is surprising to what extremes avarice will go to accomplish its object. Just take a good looks at Silas Peters and you can readily see what sort of a scoundrel he is, and we are not at all surprised when he is threatened with legal action for obtaining land for the railroad of which he is president, by fraud, from George Merton. He tries to secure the service of John Turton, a young lawyer whom he thinks he can make use of as a willing tool. Pleased with the offer from the president of a railroad, young Turton accepts the offer.

Not long afterward Miss Claire Merton calls on Turton and asks him to take her father's case against Peters, and when he learns the true state of affairs recognizes that he is being made party to fraud, goes to Peters, asks him to let him see his agreement to act as his attorney, destroys it and becomes counsel for Mr. Merton. The more Turton and Claire Merton are thrown together the more they like each other, until Turton asks Claire to marry him. She consents to become his wife when he wins her father's case.

Peters realizes before long that something must be done to escape conviction. He calls on the judge before whom the case is to be tried and endeavors to bribe him. Peters is indignantly denounced and shown the door. Failing in his first attempt to evade the law, he becomes more desperate, and, with the aid of his lawyer and his sneaking clerk, employs two thugs and pays them to waylay and assault the young lawyer the night before the suit of Merton against Peters is to be tried.

They carry out their villainous scheme: Turton is attacked and left for dead, but his cries are heard and he is carried into the house of Mr. Johnson, who administers to him, and when morning comes assists him to get to court just in time to prevent the villain and his lawyer continuing the trial without him.

The case is decided in favor of Merton and judgment given against Peters and his railroad. John Turton is victorious not only in his suit at law but in his suit for Claire's heart and hand. He makes a double win and proves he is lucky both in love and law.

E. O. Princ T. P. Bibie

Imperial Film Exchange

144 N 12th St. Philadelphia, Pa.

Mr. Exhibitor: We can give you a Commercial Film Service for the lowest prices. Write, Wire or 'Phone.

LICENSED RELEASES.

BIOGRAPH.

Oct. 24—Message of the Violin (Dr.).....997
Oct. 27—Passing of a Grouch (Com.).....537
Oct. 27—The Proposal (Com.).....466
Oct. 31—Two Little Waifs (Dr.).....997
Nov. 3—Walter No. 5 (Dr.).....997
Nov. 7—The Fugitive (Dr.).....996
Nov. 10—Simple Charity (Dr.).....993
Nov. 14—Sunshine Sue (Dr.).....998
Nov. 17—The Troublesome Baby (Com.).....492
Nov. 17—Love in Quarantine (Dr.).....505
Nov. 21—The Song of the Wildwood Flute (Dr.).996
Nov. 24—His New Lid (Com.).....563
Nov. 24—Not So Bad as It Seemed (Com.).....432
Nov. 28—A Plain Song (Dr.).....997
Dec. 1—Effecting a Cure (Dr.).....997
Dec. 5—A Child's Stratagem (Dr.).....998
Dec. 8—Turning the Tables.....416
Dec. 8—Happy Jack, a Hero (Com.).....576
Dec. 12—The Golden Supper (Dr.).....998
Dec. 15—His Sister-in-Law (Dr.).....998
Dec. 19—The Lesson (Dr.).....994
Dec. 22—White Roses (Dr.).....588
Dec. 22—The Recreation of an Heiress (Com.)..410

EDISON.

Nov. 2—Riders of the Plains (Dr.).....550
Nov. 4—The Little Station Agent (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 8—A Trip Over the Rocky and Selkirk Mountains in Canada (Scenic).....440
Nov. 8—The Lassie's Birthday (Com.).....560
Nov. 9—The Ship's Husband (Com.).....1000
Nov. 11—The Adoption (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 15—Into the Jaws of Death (Dr.).....990
Nov. 16—The Stolen Claim (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 18—The Toymaker; The Doll; and The Devil (Com.).....990
Nov. 22—His Mother's Thanksgiving (Dr.).....995
Nov. 23—Through the Clouds (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 25—A Daughter of the Mines.....995
Nov. 29—The Greater Love (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 30—Arms and the Woman (Dr.).....975
Dec. 2—The Cowpuncher's Glove (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 6—The Winning of Miss Langdon (Dr.)...995
Dec. 7—The Life of a Salmon (Ind.).....440
Dec. 7—Amateur Night (Com.).....550
Dec. 9—The Captain's Bride (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 13—An Old Silver Mine in Peru (Ind.)...250
Dec. 13—A Mountain Maid (Dr.).....750
Dec. 14—Pigs is Pigs (Com.).....1000
Dec. 16—The Red Cross Seal (Dr.).....
Dec. 20—The Police Force of New York City (Scenic).....995
Dec. 21—The Joke they Played on Bumptious (Com.).....990
Dec. 22—A Christmas Carol (Dr.).....1000

ESSANAY FILM CO.

Oct. 29—The Silent Message (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 1—A Fortunate Misfortune (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 5—A Westerner's Way (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 8—The Masquerade Cop (Com.).....428
Nov. 8—Hank and Lank "Life Savers" (Com.) 560
Nov. 12—The Marked Trail (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 15—Love at First Sight (Com.).....978
Nov. 19—The Little Prospector (Dr.).....960
Nov. 22—That Popular Tune (Com.).....
Nov. 22—Hank and Lank (as Sandwich Men) (Com.).....
Nov. 26—A Western Woman's Way (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 29—The Pie That Binds (Dr.).....953
Dec. 3—"Uncle C" Ranch's Wedding Present (Com.).....1000
Dec. 6—Love's Awakening (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 10—A Cowboy's Vindication (Dr.).....950
Dec. 13—A Tangled Masquerade (Com.).....1000
Dec. 17—The Tenderfoot Messenger (Dr.).....997

KALEM CO.

Nov. 4—Silver Cloud's Sacrifice (Dr.).....967
Nov. 9—For a Woman's Honor (Dr.).....960
Nov. 11—The Attack on Fort Ridgely (Dr.)...1000
Nov. 16—A Drama of the Present (Dr.).....990
Nov. 18—Jim Bridger's Indian Bride (Dr.)...1000
Nov. 23—The Lad from Old Ireland (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 25—The Roses of the Virgin (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 30—The Touch of a Child's Hand (Dr.)...870
Nov. 30—Up the Flames to Westminster (Dr.)..125
Dec. 2—Elder Alden's Indian Ward (Dr.).....945
Dec. 7—Rachel (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 9—The Rescue of Molly Finney (Dr.)..1007
Dec. 14—Seth's Temptation (Dr.).....955
Dec. 16—Her Indian Mother (Dr.).....995
Dec. 21—The Little Spreewald Maiden (Dr.)....985
Dec. 23—When Lovers Part (Dr.).....963

LUBIN.

Oct. 27—Edith's Avoirdupois (Com.).....375
Oct. 31—Brothers (Dr.).....950
Nov. 3—Mike the Housemaid.....990
Nov. 7—The Taming of Wild Bill (Dr.).....990
Nov. 10—The Mystery of the Torn Note (Dr.)..550
Nov. 10—The Gambler's Charm (Dr.).....450
Nov. 14—The Street Preacher (Dr.).....990
Nov. 17—Right in Front of Father (Com.) 990
Nov. 21—Caught by the Camera (Dr.).....
Nov. 24—Romance of the Lazy K Ranch (Dr.).
Nov. 28—Shadows and Sunshine (Dr.).....
Dec. 1—Spoony Sam (Com.).....
Dec. 12—An Exile's Love (Dr.).....990
Dec. 15—The Musical Ranch (Dr.).....
Dec. 19—The Dead Letter (Dr.).....
Dec. 22—An American Count (Dr.).....

GAUMONT.

G. Kleine.

Nov. 12—A Trip to the Blue Grotto, Capri, Italy (Sc.).....
Nov. 15—Both Were Stung (Com.).....696
Nov. 15—Picturesque Muroen (Sc.).....276
Nov. 19—Lisbon, Before and During the Revolution (Sc.).....727
Nov. 19—Spanish Loyalty.....280
Nov. 22—Cast Into the Flames (Dr.).....284
Nov. 22—A Woman's Wit (Com.).....595
Nov. 26—Samson's Betrayal (Dr.).....549
Nov. 26—Calino Travels as a Prince (Com.)....489
Nov. 29—The Flat Next Door (Com.).....722
Nov. 29—Tarascon on the Rhone (Scenic).....243
Dec. 3—Lured by a Phantom (Dr.).....712
Dec. 3—Nancy's Wedding Trip (Com.).....273
Dec. 6—A Man of Honor (Dr.).....834
Dec. 6—Professor's Hat (Com.).....171
Dec. 10—The Revolt (Dr.).....942
Dec. 13—The Phantom Rider (Com.).....279
Dec. 13—Closed Gate (Dr.).....676
Dec. 17—Herod and the New Born King (Biblical).....965
Dec. 20—The Cinderella Girl (Dr.).....769
Dec. 20—The Kingdom of Flowers (Botanical).220
Dec. 24—The Old Home (Dr.).....732
Dec. 24—Cain and Abel (Biblical).....279
Dec. 27—The Adventuress (Dr.).....997
Dec. 31—The Doctor's Secretary (Dr.).....981
Jan. 3—The Artist's Pay Day (Dr.).....972

URBAN-ECLIPSE.

G. Kleine.

Nov. 2—Tragical Concealment (Dr.).....640
Nov. 2—Crossing the Andes (Sc.).....350
Nov. 9—Secret of the Cellar (Dr.).....788
Nov. 9—A Trip Through Scotland (Scenic)....217
Nov. 16—The Rival Barons (Dr.).....860
Nov. 16—An Alpine Retreat (Sc.).....142
Nov. 23—Behind a Mask (Dr.).....516
Nov. 23—Nantes (Scenic).....450
Nov. 30—The Return at Midnight (Dr.).....634
Nov. 30—Ramble Through Ceylon (Scenic).....319
Dec. 7—Death of Admiral Coligny (Dr.).....992
Dec. 5—On the Mexican Border (Dr.).....
Dec. 8—Reggie's Engagement (Dr.).....
Dec. 14—The Little Matchseller's Christmas (Dr.).....749
Dec. 14—Scenes in British India (Sc.).....253
Dec. 21—The Tyrant of Florence (Dr.).....676
Dec. 21—A Chamois Hunt.....332
Dec. 28—A Mexican Romance (Dr.).....650
Dec. 28—Coaching in Devonshire, England (Scenic).....348

G. KELLER.

Oct. 20—Uncle Jim (Dr.).....950
Oct. 27—Under the Stars and Bars (Dr.).....970
Nov. 3—Birthday Cigars (Com.).....
Nov. 3—Generous Customers (Com.).....
Nov. 10—A Mountain Wife (Dr.).....986
Nov. 17—His Sergeant's Stripes (Dr.).....950
Nov. 24—The Cowboys and the Bachelor Girl (Dr.).....
Dec. 1—Pals (Dr.).....
Dec. 8—What Great Bear Learned (Dr.).....
Dec. 15—Old Norris' Gal (Dr.).....
Dec. 22—A Western Welcome (Dr.).....980
Dec. 29—In the Tall Grass Country (Dr.).....980

PATHE.

Dec. 3—The Maid of Niagara (Dr.).....995
Dec. 5—The Clever Domestic (Com.).....485
Dec. 5—The Mexican Tumblers.....476
Dec. 7—An Animated Armchair (Com.).....650
Dec. 7—Cocoanut Plantation (Sc.).....348
Dec. 9—Saved in the Nick of Time (Dr.)...800
Dec. 9—Soap in His Eyes (Com.).....184
Dec. 10—Her First Husband's Return (Dr.)...990
Dec. 12—In Her Father's Absence (Com.).....544
Dec. 12—The Julians.....387
Dec. 14—Hoboes' Xmas (Com.).....550
Dec. 14—Charlie and Kitty in Brussels (Sc.)....400
Dec. 16—Little Snowdrop.....1000
Dec. 17—Saved by Divine Providence (Dr.).....985
Dec. 19—Get Rich Quick (Dr.).....735
Dec. 19—Hunting Sea Lions in Tasmania (Scenic).....266
Dec. 21—The Runaway Motor Car (Com.).....555
Dec. 21—Max Goes Skiing (Com.).....430
Dec. 23—The Lucky Charm (Fairy Tale).....667
Dec. 23—Betty's Fireworks (Com.).....394
Dec. 24—Sunshine in Poverty Row (Dr.).....1000

SELIG.

Nov. 10—The Vampire (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 14—Mr. Four Flush (Com.).....990
Nov. 17—Gratitude (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 21—No Place Like Home (Com.).....
Nov. 21—The Dull Razor (Com.).....
Nov. 24—The Merry Wives of Windsor (Dr.)..1000
Nov. 28—The Queen of Hearts (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 1—The Stepmother (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 5—The Widow of Mill Creek Flat (Dr.)..1000
Dec. 8—In the Wilderness (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 12—A Tale of the Sea (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 15—County Fair (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 19—John Dough and the Cherub (Mystical).1000
Dec. 22—Overland to Fremont (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 26—The Rustlers (Dr.).....990

VITAGRAPH.

Nov. 18—A Modern Courtship (Com.).....
Nov. 18—The Bum and the Bomb (Com.).....
Nov. 19—Francesca Da Rimini (Dr.).....
Nov. 22—Suspicion (Dr.).....
Nov. 25—A Four Footed Pest (Com.).....
Nov. 25—The Statue Dog.....
Nov. 26—Love, Luck and Gasoline (Dr.).....
Nov. 29—A Woman's Love (Dr.).....
Dec. 2—Jack Tar and Jim Slim at Coney Island (Com.).....951
Dec. 3—The Butcher's Wife (Dr.).....1001
Dec. 6—A Tin Type Romance (Com.).....990
Dec. 9—He Who Laughs Last (Com.).....927
Dec. 10—The Color Sergeant's Heir (Dr.).....978
Dec. 13—The Law and the Man (Dr.).....1040
Dec. 16—Playing at Divorce (Dr.).....
Dec. 16—The International Motor Boat Race (Sc.).....
Dec. 17—A Dixie Mother (Dr.).....
Dec. 20—The Light in the Window (Dr.).....
Dec. 23—Caney (Dr.).....
Dec. 24—Jean and the Waif (Dr.).....

THIS WEEK'S PROGRAM OF LICENSED FILMS.

Monday, December 19.

Biograph—The Lesson (Dr.).....994
Lubin—The Dead Letter (Dr.).....
Pathe—Get Rich Quick (Dr.).....735
Pathe—Hunting Sea Lions in Tasmania (Scenic) 266
Selig—John Dough and the Cherub (Mystical)..1000

Tuesday, December 20.

Edison—The Police Force of New York City (Scenic).....995
Essanay—(Title not given.)
Gaumont—The Cinderella Girl (Dr.).....769
Gaumont—The Kingdom of Flowers (Botanical).220
Vitagraph—The Light in the Window (Dr.)..

Wednesday, December 21.

Edison—The Joke they Played on Bumptious (Com.).....990
Kalem—The Little Spreewald Maiden (Dr.).....985
Pathe—The Runaway Motor Car (Com.).....555
Pathe—Max Goes Skiing (Com.).....430
Urban—The Tyrant of Florence (Dr.).....676
Urban—A Chamois Hunt (Scenic).....332

Thursday, December 22.

Biograph—White Roses (Dr.).....588
Biograph—The Recreation of an Heiress (Com.).410
Lubin—An American Count (Dr.).....
Melies—A Western Welcome (Dr.).....980
Selig—Overland to Fremont (Dr.).....1000

Friday, December 23.

Edison—A Christmas Carol (Dr.).....1000
Pathe—The Lucky Charm.....667
Pathe—Betty's Fireworks (Com.).....394
Kalem—When Lovers Part (Dr.).....963
Vitagraph—Caney (Dr.).....

Saturday, December 24.

Essanay—(Title not given.)
Gaumont—The Old Home (Dr.).....732
Gaumont—Cain and Abel (Biblical).....279
Pathe—Sunshine in Poverty Row (Dr.).....1000
Vitagraph—Jean and the Waif (Dr.).....

PIERO CALZABINI

Nine years' experience as Comedy Director and camera operator with Pathe Freres, Cines Co., etc. Rider in famous Italian Cavalry picture photographed by Ambrosio.

OPEN FOR ENGAGEMENT.

Address Piero Calzabini, care of M. P. World.

Independent Film Stories.

LUX.

BILL PLAYS BOWLS.—Bill and his pals find the confined space of the bowling room too small to their way, with the result that harmless pedestrian lead as a better spot. The bowls are sent to excessive their talent, and accordingly select the destruction of the skittles and are bowled over. Lamp posts and trees are knocked down, and women are left in a confused mass, and the arrival of a gang of raw recruits seriously disturbed. Then the skittles decide to follow the bowls, and forming fours, with the jack at their head, set off. Now commences a chase fast and furious, for the bowls appear to be possessed, and Bill and his companions are forced to flee. Over hill and down dale they go, the bowls hurling themselves through the air in search of the three men. Finally Bill takes to the water, but even here he is not safe, for he is the recipient of several severe blows from the bowls. Meantime the skittles have wandered up steps and along roads until they decide to return home. This they do, and accompanied by the bowls, they march back and fall into their proper places.

ROSALIE'S DOWRY.—Rosalie is being instructed in violin playing, and her tutor, Jack, falls in love with her. He is pressing the lady's hand to his lips when her father enters. Angrily he ejects Jack and, following him to his office, shows the disconsolate lover the amount of his daughter's dowry, telling Jack that if he can show the same sum he shall have Rosalie. Now Jack's wealth amounts to $5 and he is kicked out. During the absence of Rosalie's father from his office a young clerk steals the money from the safe and makes off with it. Approaching the river, his foot slips and the bags of gold drop in. Meantime father has discovered his loss and drops in a dead faint. Late Jack decides to elope with Rosalie, and at nightfall the girl steals from her room and the two lovers at once dash off. They are pursued by the irate father, and things look black for the loving pair when their car breaks down. Hurrying along they meet two divers and for a small consideration the latter agree to sell their diving suits. At last the lovers can meet in peace, even though at the bottom of the sea among the fishy inhabitants of the deep. But more than that, they discover the missing gold and carrying it to papa he is easily persuaded to withdraw his opposition and eventually blesses the happy lovers.

POWERS PICTURE PLAYS.

JACK LOGAN'S DOG.—Jack Logan has a sweetheart, a rival, Joe Kane and a dog. Jack and Joe have a quarrel over the girl and the fight between them is prevented by some cowboys. Joe falls over a cliff and is badly hurt. His faithful dog goes down to him, takes his hat and runs back to the home of the girl. Joe enters and is accused of throwing Jack over the cliff. A chase follows led by the dog. Joe gets there first and Jack explains the accident.

A BACHELOR'S FINISH.—The bachelor is in love with a widow but is too bashful to propose. He writes a letter to the widow asking her to marry him. He forgets to mail the letter. Meantime he calls on his friend Thompson, who enjoys the blessings of seven children and a quarrelsome wife. The bachelor is treated to an exhibition of the worst phases of married life and he is glad that he did not mail his proposal. Imagine his feelings when he arrives home and finds that his valet has mailed the letter. He dashes after the carrier who is taking it from the box and a funny chase follows without result. Then the bachelor sneaks through a window and gets the letter. Saved. He is congratulating himself when a letter arrives from the widow proposing to him. He is caught and resigns himself to his fate. In the last scene the bachelor does some funny stunts as a captured husband.

A FATHER'S LOVE.—Howard Marey is the husband of a jealous wife and a beautiful little girl, Bessie. A friend of Marey's is falsely accused of embezzlement. The man's wife appeals to Howard for help. Mrs. Marey finds her husband and the woman together and in a jealous rage leaves her home, taking with her her child. Marey looks for them in vain. A letter from Mrs. Marey's maid to the butler betrays their whereabouts. The wife will not give her husband a chance to explain. It is Christmas Eve. Bessie writes a letter to Santa Claus asking him to bring back her papa. The sight of this letter softens the wife. The next day at the child's Christmas party a man dressed as Santa Claus enters. He throws off his disguise and Bessie and her papa engage in a loving embrace. The wife enters and reconciliation takes place.

HIS GYPSY SWEETHEART.—Edith Marlow, a young society woman, visits a gypsy camp to have her fortune told. She proposed to the gypsy girl to exchange dresses. Dressed as a gypsy, Edith goes into the woods and there meets Robert Harlow, her handsome new neighbor. It is a case of love at first sight on both sides. Edith bribes the fortune teller to let her assume her place and she tells Robert's fortune. A funny mishap comes when Zorelli, a gypsy, seeing Harlow make love to Edith and believing it is his own sweetheart, pursues Harlow with a knife. Edith saves her lover's life and a great surprise is in store for him when he returns. Edith dressed as a society girl. He has seen gypsies but does not know him at all, but it is hard to resist when the gypsy girl enters and demands her costume.

THANHOUSER.

LOOKING FORWARD. Jack Goodwin is a young student of economics who is far in advance of the times. He discovers a compound that has the power to put a man to sleep for any stated period of time, after which he will be as physically fit as ever.

Jack tests this marvel for the period of a week, finds that it works, and decides to take a rest of 100 years. He takes space in a safety deposit vault, sees himself locked in a box and the box sent to the vault. There, according to instructions, it is to remain for 100 years, and at the end of that time sent to the Mayor of the city.

There is no hitch in Jack's experiment and he wakes up in 2010, as much surprised at the people as they are at him. He discovers that the rapid transit facilities have been greatly and strangely improved, and that instead of there being any fight for "Women's Rights" it is the men who have their troubles.

Jack finds a friend in the lady Mayor, and she finally wins his hand, but not until she realizes that the man from the century before intends to be master in his own house, although the indications are that he will be a kind, loving and considerate master.

THE CHILDHOOD OF JACK HARKAWAY.—Jack Harkaway is of aristocratic birth, being the son of a wealthy Englishman's daughter and a poor young man, with whom she has eloped. Her parents bring about a separation and compel her to place the child in the hands of strangers, who are bribed to keep his whereabouts a secret from his mother.

At the age of twelve Jack is placed in a school the master of which is prejudiced against him, owing to the boy's mischievous disposition. After having received severe and unjust punishment from the schoolmaster, Jack decides to run away from school, and escapes from the room in which he is locked, through the window.

Wandering along a country road, he accidentally overhears two sneak thieves planning to rob a house. Jack makes his way to the house in time to warn its mistress of the proposed robbery. Two men servants are placed in hiding, and when the would-be thieves put in an appearance they are immediately captured.

Jack is given a fine supper by the lady of the house, who is very grateful to him. And when the schoolmaster, accompanied by Jack's guardian arrives, she is touched by the boy's appeal not to be turned over to his rough looking "friends." Upon getting a closer view of the man who calls himself the lad's guardian, she realizes that he is the man to whom she was forced to give over her child. The man admits that Jack is her own boy, and the picture ends with the men being turned out of the house and Jack restored to his mother's arms.

CHAMPION.

THE GOLDEN GATES.—Divorced! Separated by the Court's verdict, the mother is allowed the girl and the father is given the boy, both children too young to realize the bitterness of the moment, but each clinging to the allotted parent with childish faith. As tokens of remembrances little Lee is presented with his mother's locket which is hung around his neck, the same being done with the father's ring to Harriet.

Shortly after the separation the mother is compelled to entrust the care of her daughter to a neighbor about to join her husband in the West. Towards the arrival at their destination however the train is wrecked, the sole survivor of the crash being little Harriet. Guided by Providence, she is adopted by a Western couple who rename her Mary, to replace their child now dead.

Returning to the once happy home we find little Lee, deserted and forlorn amidst bare conditions, his father having sunk to the depths beyond reclamation. Lee purposes to get away from the abode and meeting a bunch of cowpunchers in the street, who are bound Westward, following a sightseeing trip in the Eastern city, he prevails on their sympathy for adoption to their crowd and shortly afterward is renamed Jim.

Grown big in size and years, Jim is accosted by Jane, the ranchman's daughter, who writes to her school chum, Mary, to spend Christmas week with her and Jim. Thus brother and sister after all these lengthy years, meet and unconsciously a spark of love is flashed between them, which familiarity grows with the passing days, all this being apparent to poor Jane. The outcome is revealed on Christmas day, when Jane returns her engagement ring to Jim who has embraced Mary. Jim draws his mother's locket from his breast upon Mary's refusal to accept the engagement ring and in a flash the truth that their love was of brother and sister is revealed to them. Of course, the engagement of Jim and Jane is renewed.

"IMP."

UNREASONABLE JEALOUSY.—Eva Norton, the wife of Dr. John Norton, is jealous of her husband's lady patients and has work, which deprives her of so much of his society.

One night she wants him to take her to the theater to see a famous actor, Irving Blake, but he tells her he is too busy. She begs and finally persuades him to accompany her. She enjoys the play and at the end of one of the acts, when Blake is called before the curtain, she rises in the box and throws him the bouquet of flowers she is carrying.

Shortly after this the doctor is called from the theater on a professional call and she is left to go home alone in the automobile. But after the performance she meets the actor, Irving Blake, who admiring her grace, beauty, invites her to go to supper with him and she accepts.

While they are enjoying their meal a friend of Dr. Norton's sees them and meets the doctor. The friend tells Norton about his wife and the actor and they both hasten to the cafe, where Norton sees the couple. He makes no disturbance, however, but returning home, awaits her coming.

Eva and Blake arrive shortly afterwards and as they part at the door, Blake attempts to take her in his arms. She, filled with anger at his anger, pushes him outside and shuts the door.

There the doctor finds her and starts to chide her for her reckless behavior, but she, delighted at having aroused his jealousy, leaves him without a word of explanation and runs upstairs to her room.

Irving Blake is shortly afterwards struck by an automobile and his skull fractured and he is taken to the hospital of which Dr. Norton is chief of staff. When Norton discovers the identity of the patient he refuses to operate upon him, although an immediate operation is necessary. Finally his sense of professional duty overcomes his personal feelings and he performs the operation and Blake's life is spared.

When Eva learns of her husband's nobility of soul, in saving the life of the apparent destroyer of his happiness, she goes to him and making full explanation of her reprehensible conduct, is fully forgiven.

THE UNEXPECTED HONEYMOON.—Bob Black's uncle leaves him his entire fortune of $500,000 on condition that he marry, and not one cent of the money can he touch until the terms of the will have been fulfilled. The unfortunate, or fortunate, legatee has no desire to tie himself down with a wife at his time of life, so he hits upon a capital plan to evade the spirit of the will, although conforming to the letter of it.

He writes his lawyer, James Henshaw, instructing him to hunt up a hopelessly homely girl and offer her $25,000 to become his wife in name only for a year, at the expiration of which time they are to be divorced.

In the same mail with Bob's letter Mr. Henshaw receives a letter from his niece, Bella, requesting him to obtain a position for her, as she feels she ought to go to work. Henshaw at once sees a chance for Bella to make a tidy sum of money and telephones her to come to his office immediately as he has found a fine position for her.

When she arrives he explains matters to her, but she objects, because she is not one bit homely. He, however, tells her he can fix that part of it and she consenting, he proceeds to help her get herself up to look as hideous as possible.

When Black arrives and gets one look at his prospective bride he almost faints. But the match is duly arranged and the bride's check handed over and then Bob is requested by the lawyer to give the bride that is to be a pre-nuptial kiss. He attempts it several times, but his courage fails him each time, until finally bethinking himself of his handkerchief, he spreads it over her face and the deed is done.

When the year is up Bob gives a dinner to his friends, in honor of the divorce which is to be granted the following day. And when the next day arrives he accompanies his lawyer to the home of his wife and is greatly surprised to find it a mansion.

Bella enters the room, stylish and beautiful, and when he is presented to her near Bob almost faints again, and now his desire for a state of single blessedness leaves him—the thought of divorce becomes suddenly abhorrent to him and he attempts to fly from the house in order to escape it. But old Henshaw, the lawyer, is close on his trail, and seizing him throws him back into the house, and then closing the door holds it shut from the outside. Bob vainly struggles to reopen the door, begs and pleads to be allowed to escape, but Henshaw is obdurate and Bob is forced to face the music.

Returning to the drawing room, he finds Bella playing the piano and singing and not one bit of attention will she pay to him. As he stands around awaiting her pleasure he discovers his photograph, at which Bella has gazed at fondly every day since she received it. The sight of this gives him hope and finally, taking the music off the rack from under her pretty nose, he proceeds to declare his undying love. She listens for a few minutes and then surrenders herself to his loving embrace.

When old Henshaw learns through the medium of the newspapers that Bella and Bob have stopped all divorce proceedings and have gone on a European honeymoon, he tosses his papers and letters into the air, in one grand "Hurrah!"

And the desperate spooning of the young couple on board the ocean liner becomes the one topic of conversation amongst the balance of the passengers.

AMERICAN.

VERA, THE GYPSY GIRL.—Vera, the gypsy girl, is driven from the couch of her dying mother by the tyrant king of her tribe, and is forced to sell baskets along the country road to satisfy his mercenary and grasping nature.

While pursuing her task along a country lane, Vera encounters a scoundrel who insults her. A young farmer happening by protects her, chastises the scoundrel and, pitying her, buys one of her baskets and sends her on her way.

After an unsuccessful day, Vera returns to the camp of her people in time to witness the death of her mother. The gypsy king now proposes marriage. Vera refuses and the king threatens force. Vera runs away from her tribe. Alone and exhausted, she stops in a field and sinks beside a corn stack. All night long she lies there and in the morning the young farmer who befriended her finds her sleeping. He takes her to his people and the gypsy girl begins a new life in the midst of civilization. Her love for the young farmer grows stronger day by day and he unconsciously nurtures it with his brotherly devotion.

A harvest picnic is given by the belle of the district, and the young farmer is chosen as the belle's escort. In a paroxysm of jealousy the gypsy girl dons her old costume and goes back to join her people.

The news of the gypsy's departure awakens in the young farmer the knowledge of his love for Vera. A searching party is organized and a search for the girl begins.

In the meantime Vera has gone back to the gypsy camp. The king denounces her for her unfaithfulness, and under the curse of her people she is driven away.

Driven to despair by her loneliness and sorrow, she is about to end her life with a dirk knife her mother had left her, when she discovers that the spot she has selected for the deed is a shrine. The sight of the crucifix brings the realization of her cowardice, and she bows before the image repentant. The young farmer, driven to desperation in his search for the girl he now knows he loves, and tearing breathlessly through the woods, finds Vera before the shrine. He tells her of his love and in his embrace the little gypsy girl finds peace and happiness.

ECLAIR.

THE LOCK-KEEPER. Marianne, of late, does not so well agree with her husband, a lock-keeper. She has become too sentimental, and considers her husband, a mere lock-keeper, is not sufficiently romantic! She accepts some slight attentions from a young sailor named Peter. While enjoying a pleasant stroll with Peter one afternoon, Marianne is startled by a piercing scream, and finds that yonder, her little son has fallen into the river; instantly she starts for the spot where her child has disappeared; but Peter would detain her; with great effort, she frees herself from his restraining grasp and rushes to the river bank. She arrives there just in time to see her husband rescue their beloved boy.

In the face of such an event, Marianne is brought to her senses; she realizes what a great difference there is between the two men, and how much there is in favor of her husband, and her whole heart goes out to that good, courageous man, and thenceforth the sailor holds no place in her estimation.

THE FEAR OF FIRE.—Mr. Coward has had the unfortunate experience of a fire in his home, and ever since our poor friend has contracted an exaggerated fear of fire, under any form. In fact, his unwarranted nervousness in this respect approaches the ridiculous, and has become a source of great annoyance to his friends and associates. For instance, Mr. Coward notices a pedestrian lighting a cigar a few rods from the establishment of a petroleum merchant, or he observes that an acquaintance, at his restaurant, has ordered for breakfast an omelet with rum. All these little incidents prey upon the mind of Mr. Coward, who sees in them an element of danger of combustion, and he loses no time in denouncing them, one and all, for their gross carelessness. At last his victims grow weary of his exciting and wholly unnecessary interference, and decide to revenge themselves upon him; and, incidentally, provide a little amusement for themselves. Accordingly, after a little planning, they select a night when they know that old Mr. Coward is comfortably settled for the evening in his cozy sitting room, and having secured a large supply of Bengal lights, they set these off directly under the windows of Mr. Coward's domicile. In an agony of terror, and with the shout of "Fire! Fire!" upon his lips, Mr. Coward rushes for the street. He has scarcely opened the front door, however, when he is treated to a chilly shower of nice refreshing water, which is delightfully antagonistic to any kind of fire. His former victims, across the street, set up a shout of delight, but to their great amazement, in that instant Mr. Coward has been cured of his abnormal fear, and joins in the laugh heartily.

SOLAX COMPANY.

THE PAWNSHOP.—Tony, a worthy Italian youth, who for years has manfully maintained his little family, consisting of his mother and Marietta, whom some day he hopes to wed, by means of his hand-organ and his little friend Joco, one fateful day meets an old friend. The friend bears evidence of great prosperity, and in answer to Tony's eager questions as to where he got it, tells him that he has turned gambler and that money is coming easy. Tony, instilled with a desire to emulate his prosperous friend, determines to try his luck.

He secures from the two women of his household the modest family savings and starts forth to try his luck with the festive tiger. Luck favors Tony, and he returns to the house with a big bundle of money. At last the inevitable occurs—he bucks the tiger once too often and returns home broke. His mother upbraids him, but Marietta, sympathizing with the poor boy's distress, comforts him. She hands him the organ and tells him he need not despair, as with the music and faithful Joco they can always make a living.

A bright idea strikes Tony—he will pawn Joco and the organ, and with the money thus secured return once more to the game. Accompanied by Marietta, he proceeds to the pawnshop where the pawnbroker refuses to accept the security offered. Marietta pleads with the old Jew to relent. The Jew conceives the idea of lending Tony the money he wants, keeping the girl as a pledge. Tony departs with a new $100 bill to tempt fate again, and the girl remains to do the housework of the Jew and his mother until such time as Tony will return and get her out. Tony again loses. Downhearted over his misfortune, we find him back again on the street with Joco, trying to scrape the money necessary for the release of Marietta. But, alas, business is very dull and the small coins come in far too slowly to give Tony hope of ever getting back the girl. We next find Tony leaning against a fence with despair writing upon his features. On the other side we see two of the inmates of the gambling den. Tony overhears them discussing plans for a burglary and follows them.

Aided by the wonderful Joco, Tony manages to frustrate the robbers. As a reward for his efforts he is presented with a $100 bill which he hands to Mlle. Marietta. His face wreathed in smiles, Tony redeems the pledge.

GREAT NORTHERN.

THE NECKLACE OF THE DEAD. A girl is given a necklace by her lover. She becomes an invalid, and in time passes away. The young man comes in to take a last farewell of his beloved. He places a bouquet of flowers on the pall, and encircles the dead girl's neck with the jewelry he had given her. Later, the undertaker's helper comes to perform the last sad office. The man is poor, and the sight of the necklace recalls to his mind the poverty of his home. Accordingly he goes during the night to the vault where the remains are entombed, unscrews the coffin, and re-

Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

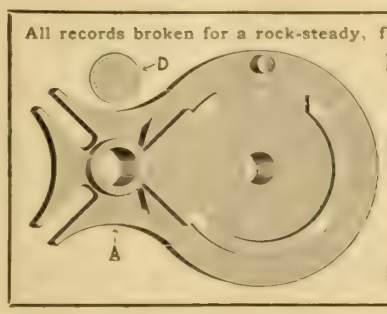
THEATRES DESIGNED EVERYWHERE

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs

THE DECORATORS SUPPLY CO.

2549 Archer Avenue :: CHICAGO, ILL.

All records broken for a rock-steady, flickerless picture. OPERATOR'S NECESSITY.



Improved Cam, Star, Arbor and Sprocket, $12.00

50 per cent. saved on repair bills.

TESTIMONIALS:

"Grand Success" says one.
"Fine Job" says another.
"Crackerjack" says another.
"Worth $50" says another.
"Brilliant Work" says another.

WRITE TODAY

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED

Express your machine to me, no extra charge for putting it in. You pay express both ways.

E. W. LAVEZZI, 3042 N. Ashland Ave., CHICAGO, ILL.

moves the shroud. Horrors! he feels a movement. Unmanned, he flees from the spot, but reasoning the thing out afterwards, he comes to the conclusion that the movement he felt was not a ghostly visitation, but that perhaps the girl was buried alive! He goes to her lover, confesses all, and the two hasten to the vault. Meanwhile, the girl has really regained consciousness and gets out of her coffin and finding that the door has shut, waits with what patience she can muster, hoping to make someone hear in the morning. For the sake of warmth she wraps herself in the pall which covered the coffin. When her lover arrives he finds her senseless with terror at her grim surroundings, but in his arms she recovers. Learning the undertaker's story, she gives him the necklace, the desire for which led to her preservation from a living grave. The man, however, feels that the only thing to be done in view of the circumstances is to devote the gift to the service of the church, and this he does.

NESTOR.

A DESPERATE REMEDY. Bill Rodney was an ideal father, when sober, but as Jess very curtly observed, he was seldom sober. Indeed, it was this fact which caused Miss Harmon to look with disfavor upon Walter's prospective bride, so she explained in her letter to the girl.

When Walter appeared, Jess placed this letter before him; then, calling her brother Jack, together the young people went over the situation and decided upon a plan of action which they hoped would thoroughly frighten and cure the old man.

Hurrying to the sitting-room, they quickly sprinkled the floor with whiskey, then overturning the furniture and disheveling their hair, each grasped a bottle and waited.

Ere long Bill Rodney hove into sight. Instantly there came a yell and a volley of blank cartridges from the sitting-room. But the old man had simply time enough to put his head in at the door and observe his son and daughter in what he supposed to be a thoroughly intoxicated condition, when he was grasped by one of the boys and helped through the door.

From the steps, upon which he landed in a sober but somewhat dazed condition, he was hustled off to the nearest tree and securely tied with a strong rope, then his three tormentors proved their good marksmanship by deliberately breaking the bottles placed on his head and in either hand; after which they hastened to the barn, mounted their horses and galloped off for the saloon. Sooner or later Bill would show up there and they meant to be prepared for him.

True enough, no sooner had the hired man released the distracted father, than he ran to the saloon. The trio, however, had been too quick for him. Already they had made arrangements to pay for what damages might occur, and now, with Jess in a side room, the boys were making things lively at the bar, when Bill appeared and was forced to foot the bill.

But the worst was yet to come. Reaching his sitting-room door, he heard cries for help and upon opening it found the Prohibitionist whom he had scoffed earlier in the week, kneeling in the center of the room pitiably begging for his life, while Jess, Jack and Walter danced wildly around him, flourishing their revolvers.

The Prohibitionist, with a sly wink at the terrible trio, suggested that they might be induced to sign the pledge if Mr. Rodney would set the example.

Eagerly the unhappy father consented, promising never again to touch the demon drink.

ATLAS.

THE OUTCAST'S SALVATION.—A son, once manly, honest and hard working, whose one thought was centered on the loving mother at home, but who, like thousands before his time, yielded to the voice of the tempter and was gradually weaned away from her influence until he became an outcast.

But the mother never lost hope. She clung to the thought that to-morrow her boy would see the error of his way and be the man he once was. Even when they brought the news that a fight was in progress in Riley's saloon she did not hesitate for a moment, but ran as fast as her feeble limbs would carry her, to help her boy and bring him home.

When she reached the low dive, her boy was in the center of a mob. Unmindful of the danger, she rushes in their midst, screaming. At the sound of her voice the crowd separates and she reaches her son. Rum-crazed, he throws the old woman from him, and she falls to the floor in a pitiful heap.

When they picked her up everyone thought she was dead. The light of reason came to the boy's eyes when he realized what he had done; then, fearing the law, he made his escape.

Weeks later we find him, wild-eyed, haggard and pale. By day and night he can see the sad face of his mother always before him. Finally in his wanderings through the tenderloin he stopped to listen to the sound of an organ as it pealed out "Where Is My Wandering Boy To-night?" Something drew him on to the open door. Then the music changed and "Rock of Ages," his mother's favorite hymn, was borne to his ears. Sobbing like a child, he never stopped until he reached the altar where the kindly faced "Father of the Slums" stood. There he told his story to that motley, ragged and hungry congregation. Then someone began singing "Throw Out the Life Line." This was followed by a prayer for the erring one. Every eye was wet with tears as that motley throng filed out into the street, leaving the boy and the mission worker alone.

"Now, my boy, brace up; forget your troubles and start out all over again," etc., etc., said the missionary as he handed a dollar bill to the astonished sinner. "Get something to eat and a place to sleep and I'll look you up to-morrow."

Well, he did look him up the next day and the boy went to work as a result. He kept on working, too, and really, on the advice of his good friend and savior, returned home to find his old mother was not dead as he had thought, but was still alive and waiting for her boy's return.

YANKEE.

THE INSANE HEIRESS.—Nell Pierce has just solved a mystery involving millions and was planning a long trip to foreign climes. She was tired and needed rest. But Nell was not to get off so easily.

This time she was called upon by a young man who told her his sweetheart had been abducted. Close questioning revealed the fact that the abducted girl was heiress to a large fortune which was held in trust for her by her guardian, for whom the young man entertained a decided dislike. Nell decided she must find some means of entering the home of the girl and search for a clue.

Disguising herself as a young girl, she sauntered towards the Mannering mansion and was fortunate in being able to join a rope-skipping party of girls. Nell made quite an impression on one of the girls, a niece of the Mannering heiress' guardian, who invited her into the house for tea and cakes.

The butler acted suspiciously, as though he had done something he was sorry for. Later on a physician called and she overheard enough of his conversation with the guardian to convince her she was on the right track. To shadow the doctor was comparatively easy. She was not disappointed when they brought up at a private sanitarium for the insane.

Now, to get inside that sanitarium was our Nell's next plan, but before doing so she decided to impersonate the stolen heiress and scare the old butler into a confession. This she did, appearing on a balcony just outside the library window just as the old man drew aside the hangings when he heard her tap on the window. She later entered the house and stood before him as he sat by the open fireplace. The badly frightened butler was easily induced to tell the story of the abduction, and, as Nell supposed, implicated the girl's guardian. Then she returned home and quietly donned another disguise. When a doctor was called in a while later he was so impressed with the girl's insanity he committed her at once to an asylum for the insane, the same institution where the heiress was incarcerated. Once inside, Nell lost no time. Chloroforming a nurse and changing clothes with her, she soon reached the girl's room and quietly led her out of the house and grounds. Another disguise completely baffled their pursuers and they reached Nell's home, where the girl's sweetheart waited for them. The rascally guardian who had planned to acquire a fortune was summoned to the house and was confronted with his guilt. When he saw the heiress he realized the game was up and straightway confessed. Nell later joined a party of two on their honeymoon and enjoyed her much-delayed vacation.

A TERROR OF THE PLAINS. Mike, the messenger boy, is a great admirer of "Buffalo Bill" stories. The present issue was more exciting than any other he had read. He lost himself in the story until he fell asleep. But Mike did not lose the thread of the narrative, even though he was journeying through slumberland. But he grew tired of Buffalo Bill as a hero and decided to play the role himself.

Donning his buckskins, boots and spurs and arming himself, he sets out for Death Knell Ranch mounted on his broncho "Spitfire." His arrival is marked by great rejoicing on the part of the assembled cowboys and he further regales himself in their eyes by protecting the ranchman's daughter from the insults of a cowpuncher.

Mike slapped his face and then kicked him until he begged for mercy. A few days later, evil eyes are looking through a window, watching the wealthy rancher as he counts his gold. In the distance comes the daughter. One glance and she knows her father's danger. Something must be done to break up this diabolical plot. And as though he had divined her thoughts beforehand, our hero rushes up on his steed and halts at her side. Explaining her father's peril, the girl urges him on until they reach the door of the ranch-house. But the Mexican cut-throats have anticipated just such an interruption and have carefully locked and barred every door and window. Mike and the girl are foiled for the moment. Then Mike's fertile brain begins to work. One glance at the roof and another at his trusty lariat and the problem is solved. In a moment he has lassoed the chimney and is climbing up. Then, placing a long, keen-edged knife in his teeth, he waves a farewell to the girl far below. One shot from our hero's pistol and seventeen Mexican brigands bite the dust. Then the old man is released and the girl falls fainting in Mike's arms.

Spurning the half dozen sacks of gold offered him by the grateful ranchman, "The Terror" rides away.

He has but reached a bend in the road when, glancing back, he witnesses a terrible sight. A band of blood thirsty Indians have taken the old man and his daughter prisoners. Wheeling about, he follows in pursuit, struggling to overtake the redskins. Alas! They have bested him in the start. But he reaches the Indian camp in plenty of time to unlimber that awful mowing machine weapon and, adjusting its delicate mechanism, he takes careful aim and fires. Nineteen savages are hurled into eternity while the rancher and his daughter remain impervious to danger.

Mike has graciously given his horse to the father and daughter when suddenly, springing up on every side, he is confronted by more Indians.

With a last grim of defiance on his countenance, he again charges the magazine of his arsenal and pulls the trigger. This time two of the devils lay on. He chases them on foot up the mountain side. Reaching the edge of the cliff, he overtakes the pair. A twist of the wrist and one is hurled to the jagged rocks below.

The other hangs on with a deathlike grip. Nearer and nearer to the brink they draw, and finally both drop into space. As they fall, our hero releases his hold and throws out both arms. Thanks to his excellent presence of mind his fingers clutch a projecting branch and, exerting his wonderful strength, he holds on, poised in mid-air.

Now, Mike's dad hears peculiar sounds emanating from his son's room and he drops around to investigate. Presently he hears a crash and bursting open the door he sees a badly scared youth sitting wild-eyed on the floor, his face and hair sprinkled with plaster and in his hands he tightly clutches the gas chandelier, which he has pulled from the ceiling.

Mike has finished his story, but the spanking he receives from dad is more welcome than the finish he expected when the protruding branch against the cliff gave way.

Among the Exhibitors.

Bloomsburg, Pa. The Lyman H. Howe moving picture show at the Columbia Theater was very well patronized on last Thursday night.

Chester, Pa.—The Borough Hall has been leased by a large theatrical syndicate, who will operate a high class moving picture show every Friday and Saturday night.

Kane, Pa.—The following films made an excellent hit at the Star Moving Picture Theater here: "Her Adopted Parents," a Vitagraph film, and "Who Is Boss?" a Pathe.

Asbury Park, N. J.—Central Hall, the first building ever erected in Asbury Park solely for church services, is being razed to make way for a new moving picture theater to cost $7,500.

Far Rockaway, N. Y.—The new moving picture theater in Inwood has been opened and is drawing large crowds at every performance.

Shamokin, Pa.—The new moving picture theater which is planned for this town, to be known as the Shamokin, will be ready about December 1.

Lewiston, Idaho.—A third moving picture house will open here in a few days under the management of Rufus Belcher.

Columbus, Ohio. Architect Bryan is getting plans ready for a moving picture theater on Broad street, near Martin avenue, for Al Taylor. It will cost about $9,000 and will be ready to open about November 8.

Rahway, N. J. Plans are under way for the erection of an opera house in Irving street on the plot of land adjoining the Auditorium, which has been purchased by Mr. Ritter. The house will have a seating capacity of 1,200. Moving pictures and vaudeville will be shown here.

Brooklyn, N. Y. A new $40,000 moving picture theater which will have a seating capacity of about 1,000, is being planned for Jamaica avenue, between Elm and Maple streets, to be known as the New Queens. It will be under the management and proprietorship of J. A. Hessel.

Farmington, Me.—J. L. Thomson has recently purchased a moving picture outfit and will give his first exhibition at the town hall here.

Salt Lake City, Utah. Work on the erection of a new moving picture theater has begun at 158 South State street for Raleigh & Harmon, who will conduct it.

Mahoney, Pa. The following films, "The Model's Redemption," "Black Gondola" and "The Revenue Detective," made a big hit at the Family Theater.

Brooklyn, N. Y. The old building on the easterly side of Flatbush avenue, nearly opposite Carlton avenue, is being torn down to make way for another theater, which will be operated as a moving picture and vaudeville house. The site is 75 by 130 feet. The structure is to be put up by the Carlton Amusement Company and will have a seating capacity of about 1,000 persons. The theater will be put under the management of A. H. Schwartz, owner of the Washington Theater at 344 Washington avenue.

Denver, Colo. The Auditorium Theater here has again opened for the season with moving pictures and vaudeville.

Philadelphia, Pa.—A new moving picture theater is being planned at 425 South street for A. J. Margolin.

Newark, N. J. A meeting of the men of the Blessed Sacrament Church, in Clinton place, formed an association to manage the recently inaugurated Parish Moving Picture Theater. A new Edison machine has been installed in the Church Hall, talent has been engaged, and the exhibitions will be along the lines of a modern moving picture theater.

Richmond, Va. Southsiders will shortly have two additional moving picture and vaudeville theaters. A 5-cent moving picture house will open on Hull street, between Twelfth and Thirteenth streets, on or before December 1. It will be conducted by R. C. Broaddus. A 10-cent vaudeville and moving picture theater will also throw open its doors on Thanksgiving Day. High class moving pictures and vaudeville will be the features in both.

Kutztown, Pa. The Kinetoscope Amusement Co., proprietors of the Auditorium, exhibited the Jeffries-Johnson fight pictures at their theater and did big business.

Dayton, Ohio. The well-known Jewell Theater in this town has again re-opened and will run all of the best vaudeville and moving pictures that can be produced. An admission fee of 10 cents will be charged.

McKeesport, Pa. Good vaudeville and moving pictures is making the Manoyer Family Theater a very popular and a well paying theater.

Long Island City, L. I., N. Y. Long Island is to have another moving picture theater which will keep all of the Long Island Cities in their own town to see a picture show. This one will be known as the New Linen, to be situated at Vernon avenue and Fourth street.

Carlisle, Pa. Major Meals has granted permission to the Harrisburg Theatrical Company to show the Johnson-Jeffries prize fight films at all of their local moving picture theaters.

Holyoke, Mass.—Charles S. Higginbotham, who owns the Grand Theater, has purchased the Globe Theater in the same city, formerly conducted by John H. Woods and T. W. Cavanaugh.

Johnstown, Pa. The Majestic Theater here has been converted into a moving picture theater.

Bellow Falls, Vt. The Dreamland Theater is a new moving picture theater which has recently been erected on Rockingham street.

Redlands, Cal. A moving picture theater will be opened in a building adjoining the City Hall.

Riverside, Cal.—K. C. Wells will erect a moving picture theater near City Hall, to cost about $10,000, and will seat about 600 patrons.

Newburyport, Mass.—It is understood that the Orpheum Theater is to be rebuilt by the owner, W. F. Runnells, and a moving picture syndicate will take a lease on the property; $12,000 has been spent for improvements.

Louisville, Ky.—M. Switow, proprietor of the Crystal and Grand Moving Picture theaters, has leased the Daisy Airdome on East Market street and will run moving picture shows like the ones in his other two theaters.

Northampton, Mass.—A new moving picture theater is being erected on one of the short streets near Main. Moving pictures and vaudeville will be the features here.

Hanover, Pa. Ralph G. Felty has sold his moving picture theater here to his partner.

Johnstown, N. Y. The Fulton Theater, on West Main street, which has been conducted for the past year by Mr. and Mrs. D. Armstrong, was sold to Frederick Sperber and Charles Hillary.

Cairo, Ill.—The Garrick, the moving picture and vaudeville show on Sycamore street near Twenty-first, was sold to Messrs Moore and Jackson, a couple of colored theatrical men.

Little Rock, Ark. W. H. Marple has purchased the Rest Theater, formerly occupied by H. A. Peckham.

Rome, N. Y.—The new school lately erected on Liberty street is installing moving pictures of education to help the pupils in their studies.

New Bethlehem, Pa. Thomas Buzzard has sold his moving picture theater to H. C. McEwen.

Bangor, Me. The permit for a moving picture theater which was applied for was turned down by the building inspector.

Hackettstown, Pa.—A new moving picture theater is being planned for this section by Willard Daubert and Ira Lee, which will be known as the Grand Opera House.

Easton, Pa. The Palace Moving Picture Theater at 22 Main street threw open their doors last week and have been receiving a good business from their patrons ever since.

Joliet, Ill.—The latest moving picture theater to throw open their doors to the public is the New Weed Five Cent Theater on State street.

Montgomery, Ala. The Old Montgomery Theater here has been converted into a moving picture theater. It will be under the proprietorship and management of M. Fenton of the Grand Theater.

West Warren, Mass. A new moving picture theater is being planned for this vicinity for Joseph Slarkiewlek.

Delevan, Wis. N. O. Francisco has opened a moving picture and vaudeville theater in his Opera House here.

Watertown, Wis. A. Davis has sold his moving picture theater, the Lyric, to Messrs. Richards and Brittan, proprietors of the Empire Theater, who will operate it in the same successful manner as they are doing the Empire.

Lansing, Iowa.—Will Dunlevy has bought out the interest of Fred Wolfe in the moving picture business, and took possession.

New London, Wis. Camden will have another moving picture theater which will be one of the largest and best in this city.

Milwaukee, Wis. The Unique Theater on Main street has been sold to George B. Hellison.

Watertown, Wis. About January 1st, Joseph Heon will open a five-cent moving picture theater in West Main street.

Beloit, Wis. A new moving picture theater has opened in this town under the management and proprietorship of J. P. Schaefer and F. J. Kratz.

Rockville, Ind. A new moving picture theater is to be erected in this town.

Portsmouth, Ohio. The Columbia Theater is being remodeled and enlarged.

Spokane, Wash.—Ed Erickson has purchased a local moving picture theater in the town which will be able to seat about 275 persons.

Paterson, N. J. Fred Kvandal's Moving Picture and Vaudeville Theater which for the past two months has been under the course of construction has at last been completed. The seating capacity is about 150 and is situated on Rea avenue.

Brooklyn, N. Y. A new moving picture theater is being erected in this city which will be under management and proprietorship of Cross Brothers, to cost about $15,000. The situation of this new enterprise is at the southwest corner of Pitkin avenue and Amer street.

Atlantic City, N. J. The Stella Amusement Company will open a new moving picture theater at 1509 Atlantic avenue.

Bay City, Mich. E. E. Smith's store on Broadway is being remodeled and will be occupied by a nickel show.

Cleveland, Ohio. What is claimed to be the largest moving picture theater in Cleveland is to be built on a vacant lot on the north side of Euclid avenue, just east of 83d street, which will be able to seat about 1,200 or 1,500 and will be under the proprietorship of the Atlas Amusement Company. Another picture house is being erected by Baird & Saurbrey for the Madison Avenue Amusement Company on West Madison avenue near 26th street which will be able to seat about 300 persons. Still another is being planned by Glenside Amusement Company on Woodland avenue near Buckeye road.

Hagerstown, Md. The Family Theater here has been sold to Thomas Spielman.

Norfolk, Va. The motion picture show recently opened at Pythian Castle by Ford Brothers is attracting large crowds daily and the pictures shown are of the very best.

El Paso, Tex.—L. S. Chenoweth of 318 Ross avenue announced that he will establish a chain of twenty-one motion picture shows in the Texas cities.

Rutland, Vt.—J. H. Lincoln has opened his moving picture show in the Wilson & Grace Opera House.

Los Angeles, Cal.—A. S. Hyman, proprietor of the Royal Motion Picture Theater, is having two of the moving picture and vaudeville theaters constructed and has also purchased the Angeles Picture Theater for $30,000.

Passaic, N. J.—The Spring Dell Association have filed plans for the erection of a high class moving picture theater to be established on Sylan street.

Holyoke, Mass. Papers have been passed for the transfer of the Globe Theater in the Rackliffe building on Suffolk street from Wood and Cavanaugh to Charle Higginbotham, proprietor of the Grand Theater on High street.

Kansas City, Mo.—Twenty thousand dollars is to be spent in overhauling the building at 15 West Tenth street, for a moving picture theater.

York, Pa.—H. G. Duttera has sold his local moving picture theater to Theo. Beck.

Albert Lea, Minn.—James W. Latham has purchased an interest in the Gem Theater here.

Jersey City, N. J.—Plans have been completed for the erection of a high class moving picture and vaudeville theater to be built on the westerly side of Ocean avenue, between Forrest and Oak streets.

New York City.—Arrangements have been made for the conversion of a building at 76 Catherine street into a moving picture theater for Martin Garone.

Stroudsburg, Pa. Clarence Somers will open a new moving picture theater.

Myerstown, Pa. George Stein, proprietor of several local moving picture theaters in this town has opened up another in the P. O. S. of A. Hall and will give moving picture entertainments every Thursday evening.

Los Angeles, Cal. The California Moving Picture Company has leased a tract of land near Zaferia where they will erect a moving picture plant.

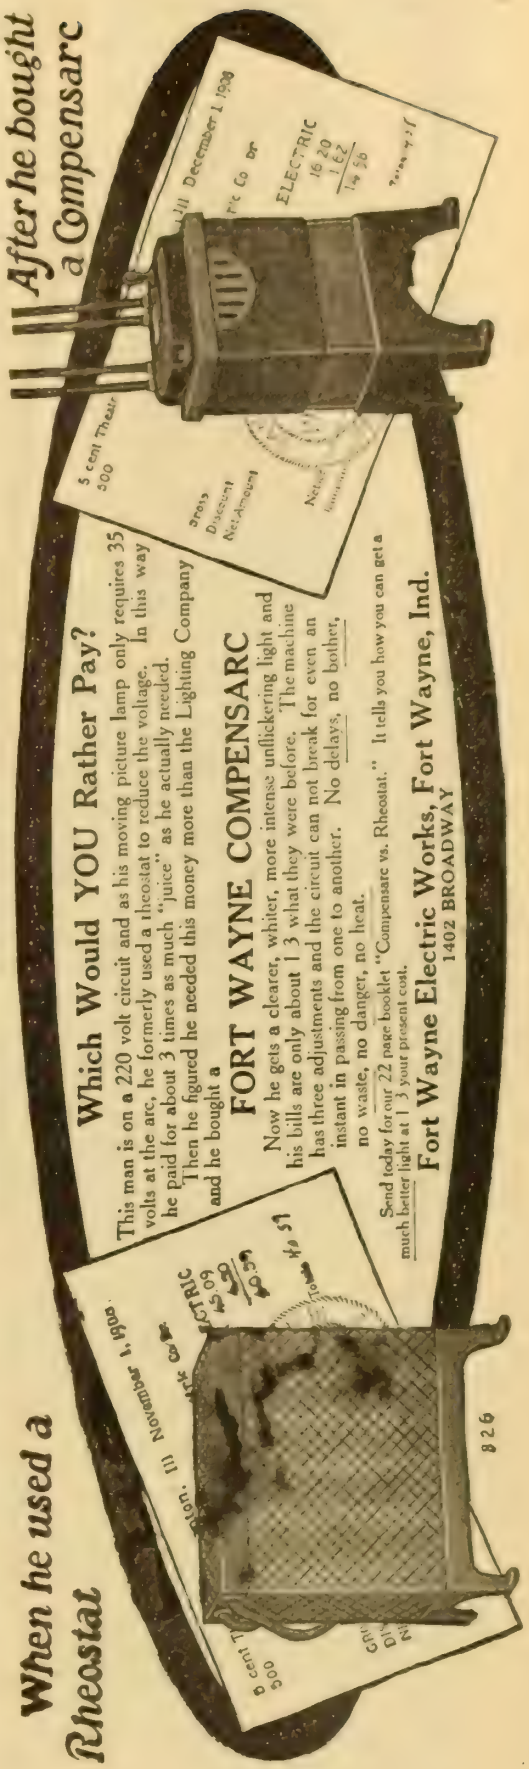
Grand Rapids, Mich. A. J. Gilligham and E. M. Smith where they will erect a moving picture theater.

Philadelphia, Pa. A new moving picture theater is being planned for this vicinity at 425 South street for Max Katzman.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—Building permit was granted to Thomas Maloney for the erection of a moving picture theater at the northeast corner of Burnet and Hickory street to cost about $6,200.

Winchendon, Mass. A new moving picture theater is expected to open in Rome within a week or so.

Atlantic City, N. J.—The Stella Amusement Company will open a new moving picture theater at 1599 Atlantic avenue which will be ready for business about December the 1st.



After he bought a Compensarc
Which Would YOU Rather Pay?
This man is on a 220 volt circuit and as his moving picture lamp only requires 35 volts at the arc, he formerly used a rheostat to reduce the voltage. In this way he paid for about 3 times as much "juice" as he actually needed.
Then he figured he needed this money more than the Lighting Company and he bought a
FORT WAYNE COMPENSARC
Now he gets a clearer, whiter, more intense unflickering light and his bills are only about 1/3 what they were before. The machine has three adjustments and the circuit can not break for even an instant in passing from one to another. No delays, no bother, no waste, no danger, no heat.
Send today for our 22 page booklet "Compensarc vs. Rheostat." It tells you how you can get a much better light at 1/3 your present cost.
Fort Wayne Electric Works, Fort Wayne, Ind.
1402 BROADWAY
When he used a Rheostat

WANTED—Young man for perforating room of film laboratory. Experienced or with knowledge of operating and some mechanical skill. Address, PROMPT, care of M. P. World.

¶ Put in our Easels and Poster Frames and watch your attendance grow.

¶ We make mechanical attractions, Electric signs, or anything special in the theatrical line. ¶ Ideas developed—Low Prices—Best Work—DON'T DELAY but write to-day.

THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.
717-719 Sycamore St., Cincinnati, O.

ADVERTISING : ANNOUNCEMENT SLIDES

Genre Transparency Company
507 N. Clark Street : : : Chicago

THIS WEEK'S PROGRAM OF INDEPENDENT FILMS.

Monday, December 19.

American—Her Fatal Mistake (Dr.)
Eclair—The Child of Two Mothers (Dr.).....545
Eclair—The Museum of Sovereigns (Dr.).....400
Imp—The Crippled Teddy Bear (Dr.)
Yankee—A Ward of Uncle Sam (Dr.)

Tuesday, December 20.

Bison—The Cattle Baron's Daughter (Dr.)
Powers—Jack Logan's Dog (Com.)
Powers—The Bachelor's Finish (Com.)
Thanhouser—Looking Forward (Dr.).....1000

Wednesday, December 21.

Ambrosio—Little Peter's Christmas Dinner (Dr.)
Atlas—The Arm of the Law (Dr.)
Champion—His Mother (Dr.).....950
Nestor—A Desperate Remedy (Com.)

Thursday, December 22.

American—Her Husband's Deception (Com.)
American—A Troublesome Parcel (Com.)
Imp—Little Nell's Tobacco (Dr.)
Itala—Who Was the Culprit? (Com.)

Friday, December 23.

Bison—The Pale Faced Princess.....
Lux—Bill Plays Bowls (Com.).....423
Lux—Rosalie's Dowry (Com.).....492
Solax—The Pawnshop (Dr.)
Thanhouser—The Childhood of Jack Harkaway (Dr.).....1000

Saturday, December 24.

Columbia—The Cattleman's Feud (Dr.)
Great Northern—The Necklace of the Dead (Dr.)
Itala—Greediness Spoiled Foolshead's Christmas (Com.)
Powers—A Father's Love (Dr.)
Reliance—The Refuge (Dr.)

INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES.

AMERICAN.

Nov. 21—Starlight's Devotion (Dr.).....960
Nov. 24—Nothing But Money (Com.).....740
Nov. 24—A Big Joke (Com.).....220
Nov. 28—Regeneration (Dr.)
Dec. 1—A Touching Affair (Com.)
Dec. 5—Vera, the Gypsy Girl (Dr.).....930
Dec. 8—Two Lucky Jims (Com.).....955
Dec. 12—The Rummage Sale (Com.)
Dec. 15—The Binding Shot (Dr.)
Dec. 19—Her Fatal Mistake (Dr.)
Dec. 22—Her Husband's Deception (Com.)
Dec. 22—A Troublesome Parcel (Com.)

ATLAS.

Nov. 16—The Hand of Providence (Dr.)
Nov. 23—Cast Thy Bread Upon the Waters (Dr.)
Nov. 30—Saved by a Vision (Dr.)
Dec. 7—Nature's Nobleman (Dr.)
Dec. 14—Brothers (Dec.)
Dec. 21—The Arm of the Law (Dr.)
Dec. 28—The Outcast's Salvation (Dr.)

CAPITOL FILM CO.

Sept. 17—Round Trip $5.98 (Com.)
Sept. 24—Bill Mason's Ride (Dr.).....700
Oct. 8—All's Fair in Love and War (Dr.)....
Oct. 15—A Shot in the Night (Dr.)
Oct. 22—The Locket (Dr.)

CHAMPION.

Nov. 9—The Ranchman and the Miser (Dr.)...950
Nov. 16—The Way of the West (Dr.).....950
Nov. 23—Let Us Give Thanks (Dr.).....950
Nov. 30—The Indian Land Grab (Dr.).....950
Dec. 7—Hearts of the West (Dr.).....950
Dec. 14—The Sheriff and the Detective (Dr.)..950
Dec. 21—His Mother (Dr.).....950
Dec. 28—The Golden Gates (Dr.).....950

COLUMBIA.

Oct. 15—Tracked Across the Sea (Dr.).....
Oct. 22—Breaking Home Ties (Dr.).....
Oct. 29—In the Web (Dr.).....
Nov.12—The Heroine of 101 Ranch (Dr.).....
Nov. 19—Oklahoma Bill (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 26—Stage Coach Tom (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 24—The Cattlemen's Feud (Dr.)
Dec. 31—Trapped (Dr.)

DEFENDER.

Oct. 13—The Tale the Camera Told (Com.).....
Oct. 20—The Heart of a Cowboy (Dr.).....
Oct. 27—A Clause in the Will (Dr.).....
Nov. 3—Cohen's Generosity (Com.)
Nov. 10—The Last Straw (Dr.).....
Nov. 17—The Education of Mary Jane (Dr.)..
Nov. 24—Forgiven (Dr.)

ECLAIR.

Nov. 28—The Wreck (Dr.).....565
Nov. 28—A Difficult Capture (Com.).....380
Dec. 5—The Price of a Sacrifice (Dr.).....833
Dec. 5—The Laundry Girl's Good-Night (C.).....82
Dec. 12—The Bowling Craze (Com.).....445
Dec. 12—Our Dear Uncle From America (Com.) 470
Dec. 19—The Child of Two Mothers (Dr.) 545
Dec. 19—The Museum of Sovereigns (Dr.) 400
Dec. 26—The Lock-Keeper (Dr.).....537
Dec. 26—The Fear of Fire (Com.).....390

CINES.

Eclair.

Sept. 23—Tontolini as a Ballet Dancer (Com.)..236
Sept. 30—Giovanni of Medici (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 7—Giorgione (Dr.).....1006
Oct. 14—The Mad Lady of Chester (Dr.).....965
Oct. 21—The Last of the Savelli (Dr.).....800
Oct. 28—Tontolini Is in Love (Com.).....480
Oct. 28—The Pretty Dairy Maid (Dr.).....480
Nov. 4—A Wooden Sword (Dr.) 800

GREAT NORTHERN.

Nov. 12—World's Wrestling Champions.....
Nov. 12—Mother-in-Law Arrives (Com.).....
Nov. 19—The Diamond Swindler (Dr.).....
Nov. 26—Kean, or the Prince and the Actor....
Dec. 3—The Birthday Present (Dr.).....
Dec. 3—The Ohami Troupe of Acrobats (Sc.)..
Dec. 10—The Poacher (Dr.)
Dec. 17—A Christmas Letter (Dr.)
Dec. 17—Dickey's Courtship (Com.)
Dec. 24—Necklace of the Dead (Dr.).....

IMP.

Nov. 28—The Revolving Door.....
Dec. 1—A Child's Judgment (Dr.).....
Dec. 5—Aspirations of Gerald and Percy (Dr.).995
Dec. 8—Twixt Loyalty and Love (Dr.).....990
Dec. 12—Faithful Max (Dr.) 500
Dec. 12—A Clever Ruse 500
Dec. 15—The Poor Student (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 19—The Crippled Teddy Bear .....
Dec. 22—Little Nell's Tobacco (Dr.) .....
Dec. 26—The Unexpected Honeymoon (Dr.).....995
Dec. 29—Unreasonable Jealousy (Dr.).....990

LUX.

Dec. 2—Necessity Is the Mother of Invention (Dr.) 449
Dec. 9—What It Will Be (Com.).....491
Dec. 9—And She Came Back (Com.) 452
Dec. 16—How He Won Her (Com.) 344
Dec. 16—Her Favorite Tune (Dr.) 550
Dec. 23—Bill Plays Bowls (Com.).....423
Dec. 23—Rosalie's Dowry (Com.).....492

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO. ("Bison.")

Nov. 25—Cheyenne Love for a Sioux (Dr.)....
Nov. 29—The Ranchman's Personal (Dr.).....
Dec. 2—A Child of the West (Dr.).....
Dec. 6—A Sioux's Reward (Dr.) .....
Dec. 9—A Brave Western Girl (Dr.) .....
Dec. 13—An Indian's Test .....
Dec. 16—A Girl of the Plains (Dr.) .....
Dec. 20—The Cattle Baron's Daughter.....
Dec. 23—The Pale Faced Princess.....

ITALA. (By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Dec. 8—A Soldier of the Cross .....
Dec. 10—Foolshead Knows How to Take Precautions (Com.) .....
Dec. 15—The False Accusation .....
Dec. 17—The Mother's Shadow (Dr.) .....
Dec. 17—Thieves as Quick Change Artists .....
Dec. 22—Who Was the Culprit? (Com.).....
Dec. 24—Greediness Spoiled Foolshead's Christmas (Com.) .....

AMBROSIO. (By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Nov. 16—Mermaid .....
Nov. 16—Tweedledum's Corporation Duty (Com.)
Nov. 23—Gounod Ave Maria (Dr.).....
Nov. 30—The Jenda's Money (Dr.).....
Dec. 7—The Tell Tale Portrait.....
Dec. 7—Tweedledum Learns a Tragical Part..
Dec. 14—Dido Forsaken by Aenea .....
Dec. 21—Little Peter's Christmas Dinner.....

NESTOR.

Nov. 2—The Girl From The West (Dr.).....
Nov. 9—The Woodsman (Dr.).....960
Nov. 16—The Ranchman's Bride (Dr.) .....
Nov. 23—A Deal in Indians.....1000
Nov. 30—Valley Folks (Dr.).....
Dec. 7—The Conquering Hero (Dr.) .....
Dec. 14—The Pilgrim (Dr.) .....
Dec. 21—A Desperate Remedy (Com.).....

POWERS PICTURE PLAYS.

Dec. 17—His Gypsy Sweetheart (Dr.) .....
Dec. 20—Jack Logan's Dog (Com.) .....
Dec. 20—The Bachelor's Finish (Com.) .....
Dec. 24—A Father's Love (Dr.)) .....
Dec. 27—The Station Agent's Daughter (Dr.)..
Dec. 27—Freddie's Courtship (Com.).....
Dec. 31—A Daughter of Virginia (Dr.).....

RELIANCE

Nov. 19—Moulders of Souls (Dr.).....
Nov. 26—So Runs the Wat (Dr.).....
Dec. 3—When Woman Wills (Dr.).....
Dec. 10—A Dispensation (Dr.) .....
Dec. 17—The Thin Dark Line.....
Dec. 24—The Refuge .....

REVIER.

Dec. 21—Love's Sorrow (Dr.).....950
Dec. 28—Thoughtfulness Remembered by the Ute (Dr.) 950

SOLAX COMPANY.

Nov. 25—One Touch of Nature (Dr.).....
Dec. 2—What Is to Be, Will Be (Dr.).....
Dec. 9—Lady Betty's Strategy (Dr.) .....
Dec. 16—Two Suits .....
Dec. 23—The Pawnshop (Dr.).....
Dec. 30—Mrs. Richard Dare (Com.).....

THANHOUSER.

Dec. 6—Rip Van Winkle (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 9—The Girls He Left Behind Him .....
Dec. 9—The Iron-Clad Lover .....
Dec. 13—Love and Law (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 16—The Millionaire Milkman (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 20—Looking Forward (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 23—The Childhood of Jack Harkaway (Dr.) 1000

YANKEE.

Dec. 5—In the Czar's Name (Dr.).....
Dec. 9—Western Justice (Dr.) .....
Dec. 12—A Fight for Millions (Dr.).....
Dec. 16—The Old Miner's Doll (Dr.) .....
Dec. 19—A Ward of Uncle Sam (Dr.) .....
Dec. 23—The Terror of the Plains (Com.).....
Dec. 26—The Insane Heiress (Dr.).....

NEW SLIDES

For the Following Songs—JUST OUT

The Vale of Dreams.
I'd Give the World to Call You Mine.
Dougherty.
In My Dreams Of You.
They've Won Every Nation's Battles But Their Own.
Get a Girl to Love You.
My Rose From The Garden of Love.
You Are the Light of My Life.
Where the Desert Meets the Nile.
Lou
Take Me Back To Dear Old Dixie
You Are The Light Of My Life
Put Your Arms Around Me.
Winter.
Gee-Whiz, Sweety, I'm Stuck On You.
Cowboy
That's When Life's One Grand Sweet Song.
Only One Daisy Left
Oh, That Boog-a-boo Man
Any Place Is Heaven When You are with the Girl You Love
When June rolls around with its roses

DeWITT C. WHEELER
120 W. 31st St., N. Y. City

THE Motiograph

Pictures are the Best because of the
Patented double Cone Shutter
Short, heavy, non-vibrating Sprocket Shaft
Accurate Star Cam and Sprocket
(and many other special features)

Wears the Best
because it has
Star and Cam enclosed in Oil Bath
Gears in Dust Proof enclosure
Gears made of Steel
Shafts made of Tool Steel
and

Therefore is the Best

(Send for catalog giving many more reasons for Motiograph superiority)

Manufactured and Jobbed by Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co., 564-572 WEST RANDOLPH ST. CHICAGO, ILL.

J. H. HALLBERG, Agt. 36 E. 23d Street, New York City
EDWARD H. KEMP, Agt. 833 Market Street, San Francisco, Cal.
J. F. BROCKLISS, Agt., London, Paris and Berlin

USE THE "PERFECTO"

The New Calcium Light Outfit

The Initial Cost is Less than that of any other and it can be Maintained for Less.

$25.00 Complete with Burner

At last a calcium gas making outfit that produces the maximum light at the minimum expense can be had. The "Perfecto" solves the problem. In this light you get more gas pressure than in any other calcium light, hence a more powerful light, and at less expense because of its generating process. It is the simplest of calcium lights and naturally the best; is non-explosive, never gets out of order, and complete weighs only 15 pounds. There are no frills about the "Perfecto." It's just a plain calcium gas making outfit that produces the powerful light that you must have, and above all at the least possible cost. Every exchange and dealer in lighting outfits should handle this light, and every exhibitor who is forced to use a calcium light should use this one. It's the cheapest in every way, and the best. Write for more particulars, or will ship C. O. D. upon receipt of deposit. Price $25.00 complete with burner.

CAPITAL MERCHANDISE COMPANY,
225 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

SLIDES

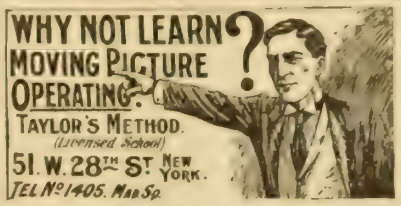
Here's your Christmas present, Mr. Exhibitor Send us 15c. and we will mail you a beautiful Merry Christmas and Happy New Year slide. Our revised catalog of slides just out. Send for it also

NIAGARA SLIDE CO., Lockport, New York

UNIFORMS AND CAPS FOR Moving Picture Theatres

Catalogues, Samples and Prices for the Asking

James H. Hirsch & Co.
208 East Jackson Boulevard
CHICAGO.



Correspondence Course. Special rates to the trade, send for free illustrated catalogue.

School class meets every morning and afternoon, with F. H. Richardson of Chicago, as chief instructor. Evening classes meet every Monday, Wednesday and Friday. We positively guarantee you a $15 position.

We have a Powers' Cameragraph No. 5 in A-1 condition for $85.00 and an Edison Exhibition Model Machine for $60.00

We carry a large line of electrical supplies and furnish everything for the theatre.

F. C. TAYLOR
49 West 28th Street New York City
Phone 1405 Madison Square

5c SHOW SOUVENIRS

IMPORTED CHINAWARE—Per 100	$3.00
ALL LEATHER PURSE—Per 100	3.00
TRICK MATCH BOX—Per Gross	.75
1911 AERIAL PLANS, Latest Novelty—Per Gr.	1.25
FANCY WOOD WHISTLES—Per Gross	.75
JAPANESE TURTLE-IN-GLASS BOX—Per Gro.	.90
FANCY COLORED RETURN BALLS—Per Gro.	1.25
HORSESHOE MIRROR, Asstd. Colors—Per Gro.	1.00
SKELETON ACROBAT NOVELTY—Per Gro.	1.50
FRENCH LIP AIR WHISTLES—Per Gro.	1.25
JAPANESE 4-INCH TRAYS—Per 100	1.50
IMPORTED STONE STEINS—Per Gro.	2.00
DECEPTION WINE GLASS—Per Gro.	1.25

Terms: Half deposit, balance C. O. D.

NEWMAN MFG. CO.,
641 and 647 Woodland Ave., Cleveland, Ohio.

DECEMBER FILM OFFERINGS

We offer for sale in our December list of films some very good bargains. All films are in good running condition at moderate prices.

We have several copies of the Reproduction of the Johnson-Jefferies Fight for sale at $125.00 per copy, Also other feature films.

CHICAGO FILM EXCHANGE
Chicago Omaha Denver, Col.
Salt Lake City

2 Sketches, 2 Recitations, 1 Monologue, End Gags, Cross Fire Act, Toasts, Patter, Satire on Plays, etc. All for 30 cents, stamps or coin. Just off the press and up to date. B. CRANDALL, 190 DUDLEY ST., PROVIDENCE, R. I.

MOTION PICTURE

and Vaudeville Theatres, large or small,

BOUGHT AND SOLD

We can sell yours or find one for you.

ROYAL REALTY & INVESTMENT CO.
84 Adams Street, Chicago, Ill.

WINNEBAGO WALTZES

A beautiful piece of music for piano, especially appropriate for motion pictures By mail, 12 cents per copy. With each order we send professional copies of all our illustrated song hits.

NUGENT BROTHER'S MUSIC CO.
KAUKAUNA, WIS.

In answering advertisers, kindly mention the Moving Picture World.

Stage Pockets
Signs
Theatre Supplies

Globe Electric Specialties Co.
363 W. 42nd St. - New York City

Ornamental :: Indestructible
Fire Resisting

THEATRE AND STAGE FRONTS
ARTISTIC CEILINGS

Designs Suitable to Any Building. Blue Prints, Suggestions and Estimates Free. Ask for Our Design Book M.

The Kanneberg Roofing and Ceiling Co., CANTON OHIO

W. E. Greene Film Exchange, Inc.

The oldest and largest Independent Film Exchange in New England

The House of Quality and Satisfaction

MR. EXHIBITOR:

If you are desirous of finding out how to improve your present service and increase your daily attendance call and have a confidential chat with us. If you are unable to call, drop us a line.

W. E. Greene Film Exchange
INCORPORATED
228 Tremont Street Boston, Mass.
Telephone 3790 Oxford

LUCIEN PRÉVOST
MECHANICAL ENGINEER

Formerly Chief Designer of Pathé Frères

OFFICE ADDRESS, 54 Rue Philippe de Gerard, Paris
WORKS : : 25 Bd de la Chapelle, Paris

Cameras
Perforating and Printing Machines (NEW PATTERNS)
Cleaning, Measuring and Joining Machines

IF YOU ARE INTERESTED IN THE MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS, YOU SHOULD SUBSCRIBE FOR THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD. $1.00.

HAVE YOU SEEN IT?
Or Have You Used It? If Not Get It.
It Will Save You Money, Time and Trouble

in making a neat, up-to-the minute announcement slide It doesn't take an expert, to make as pretty a slide, as you ever put on your screen, with our material. Testimonials coming in daily from satisfied customers, who are useing the following articles.

1 Bottle of "Slideine," a perfect slide covering. Enough to cover more than 50 slides.
1 Bottle of each of the following translucent colorings: Red, Green and Blue. Enough to cover more than 300 slides.
6 Prepared slides including A Merry Christmas and Happy New Year greeting slide, prettily decorated with Holly.
1 Roll of our superior slide binding.

All for $1.00—Cash with order—No checks. Immediate shipment. Full directions with guarantee.

POTTSVILLE NOVELTY CO., 319 N. Third Street, Pottsville, Pa.

Classified Advertisements

[Classified advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted.]

THEATER FOR SALE.

FOR SALE Moving Picture Theater in a town of 25,000. Good reasons for selling. A money maker for a hustler. THE LYRIC, Parkersburg, W. Va.

FOR SALE Moving picture show, doing good business. Owners unable to give attention. 240 seats. Good terms of sale. Address, "SHOW," care Moving Picture World.

FOR SALE—One of the largest Moving Picture and Vaudeville Theaters in Washington, D. C. P. O. Box 147, Washington, D. C.

FOR SALE or Rent. One best-class moving picture house, doing a good business. Good reasons for selling. J. P. DALEY, Daley's Corner, New Haven, Conn.

FOR SALE—10c Picture Theater, town 2,500; $1,100 cash, only amusement. 40 miles of Chicago. Address O. DUDLEY, Gen. Del., Chicago.

FOR SALE OR RENT Fine Picture House in a Conn. town of 1,400. All ready for business, price low, good reason. PAUL RUSSO, New Haven, Conn.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

FOR SALE A pair of General Electric Flaming Arcs for A. C. Used only a few months and in perfect condition. No reasonable offer refused. HARRY H. ROBERTSON, 128 Moffat St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

FOR SALE Edison exhibition M. P. Machine, fibre gears like Model "B" Complete. Write for particulars. E. W. LOGAN, 547 N. Salina Street, Syracuse, N. Y.

FOR SALE—350 folding chairs for sale cheap. PALACE THEATER, Spring City, Pa. Latest asbestos booth, for sale cheap. STAR THEATER, Royersford, Pa.

SITUATIONS WANTED.

AT LIBERTY—Trap Drummer with years of experience both in vaudeville and pictures. Carry special line of traps for moving picture effects. Member A. F. of M. Address, ANDREW FINLAY, General Delivery, Memphis, Tenn.

AM OPEN FOR ENGAGEMENT JANUARY 1.—Have operated a camera for a popular trust concern, which my books will show. Please grant interview. H. C. B., 272 Albany Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

ROSE IVY, the New Zealand prima donna dramatic soprano and comedienne. Big repertoire of greatest variety. At liberty. Vaudeville or best moving picture shows. References: Grand Central and Plaza, St. Louis. Address, 1032 OLIVE, St. Louis, Mo.

POSITION WANTED Expert operator with own Power's No. 6, outside N. Y. City. Address J. R., care Moving Picture World.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED—First-class Piano Player. Singer and Trap Drummer. Advise salary expected. RED MOON THEATER, Wilmington, Del.

MISCELLANEOUS.

WANTED—Picture theater or interest therein. Southern States preferred. (No postals.) L. G. SMITH, Wilmington, N. C.

WANTED—Power's No. 5 mechanism. Must be cheap for cash. State full particulars. Address, L. S., care Moving Picture World.

ARE YOU INTERESTED IN MOTION PICTURE FILM MANUFACTURING? If you have capital, write me. Have something will net 75 per cent. H. C. B., 272 Albany Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

WANTED—Moving Picture Machine and Hallberg Economizer. Must be in first class condition. Address, J. M. D., care Moving Picture World.

WANT Volume I, No. 1 of Moving Picture World—good condition. State price. Address, P. BARKER, Box 361, Anaconda, Mont.

FOR SALE—Educational and descriptive reels, cheap. Full particulars. Write. BIJOU THEATER, Edmonton, Alberta, Can.

More Money Every Month

You are in the theatre business to make all you can out of it—you are interested in anything that means larger profits. Our plan is just like "getting money from home." Brings you a check every month, makes your theatre more popular and better patronized, gives you a better standing with the other business men in your town.

NO COST TO YOU

That's the beauty of it. You don't buy anything, don't increase your cost in any way, don't have to make a single change in your theatre, film supply, operator or anything else.

Hundreds of theatre owners are getting our checks every month, making more money than they could without our plan.

You need us—we need you.

Paste this coupon on a postal card mail it to us today

T. R. WOODBURN & CO.
611 First National Bank Building
Chicago, Ill.

Name _____

Name of Theatre _____

Town _____ State _____

United States Film Brokers and Importers

41 Union Square West NEW YORK CITY
Broadway and 17th St.

The largest dealers in new and second hand Association and Independent Films in the United States.

Second-Hand Film $5.00 per reel upwards.

New Film 4c. per foot upwards.

Cameraphone Film, new, with two sets records.

Edison and Power's Machine, like new

All goods shipped subject to examination and partial acceptance on receipt of deposit covering express charges.

Complete lists sent free upon request.

MOVING PICTURE SUPPLIES

Get accustomed to write to American M. P. Supply Co. for their prices before you order any supplies elsewhere. It will pay. For example:

Tickets—roll of 2,000	$ .16
Bio Carbons 6 x 5-8 per 100	2.15
Electra Carbons 6 x 5-8 per 100	2.10
Announcement Slides, each	.25
Extra Heavy Carbon Holders, each	.75
Pure White Condensors, each	.75

SEND FOR CATALOGUE

American Motion Picture Supply Co.
61 West 14th Street, New York City

FILMS FOR RENT

New Films High Class Service

The Pioneer House, With 8 Years Experience and $250,000.00 Back Of It

Write To-day for Terms

EUGENE CLINE
57 and 59 Dearborn St., Chicago

OPERATORS' HANDBOOK, $1.50
MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE ENTERPRISE MODEL B

Portable Calcium Gas Outfit

Is the only Substitute for Electricity for projecting Motion Picture or Stereopticon views and is the

Only Satisfactory Portable Outfit

because it operates by WATER PRESSURE, IS CONSTANT, REGULAR AND RELIABLE and has no complicated spring valves to corrode, choke up and otherwise get out of order. Is patented.

"OXONE" in SQUARE CAKES Is most Satisfactory for the production of Oxygen Gas. Send for particulars.

For Sale by Dealers

Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co. MANUFACTURERS AND SALES AGENTS 564 and 572 W. Randolph St. CHICAGO

SPECIAL ROLL TICKETS

The Big Ticket. Any Printing Any Colors.

5,000	- - - -	$1.25	20,000	- - - -	$4.60	50,000	- - - -	$7.50
10,000	- - - -	2.50	25,000	- - - -	5.50	100,000	- - - -	10.00

Get the Samples Stock Tickets, 6 Cents

NATIONAL TICKET COMPANY - - - Shamokin, Pa.

FOLDING CHAIRS

For Moving Picture Shows Grand Stands Assembly Halls, etc. In sections if wanted.

Write for Catalog No. 2.

The Kauffman Manufacturing Co.
ASHLAND, OHIO

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES

ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. No. 31

The A. H. Andrews Co.

174-176 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill. Branches in all leading cities

CHEAP

Steel Frame Theatre Chairs

ABSOLUTELY Non-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small theatres and Moving Picture shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

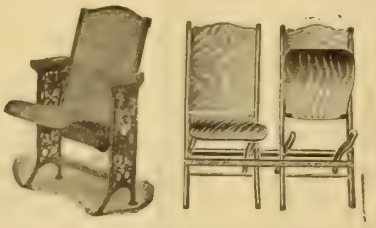
Second Hand Chairs

Also seating for Out-of-Door Use.

Address Dept. W.

STEEL FURNITURE CO., Grand Rapids, Mich.
New York Office: 150 Fifth Avenue
Boston Office: 224 Congress St., Boston, Mass.

Opera and Assembly Chairs



Most popular priced chairs on the market for picture show use.

Prompt Shipments Write for Catalogue

PEABODY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO.
NORTH MANCHESTER - - INDIANA
New York Agents—ROBERT J. EHLERS CO.
Lexington Ave and 43rd St. - New York, N. Y.

The Automatic Theatre Chair

It is a friend to the public.
It advertises your theatre and makes your business grow.
It folds automatically and can be revolving, stationary or self righting.
It is the only sanitary chair.
It is a space-saver, life-saver and money-saver.
It is the world's greatest theatre chair.
If you have not seen our latest models, investigate.
Write today for Circular A.

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO.
Canal Dover, Ohio, U. S. A.

FILMS FOR SALE. 50 Reels of Film
$8 to $16 per Reel
Second-hand one pin Edison machine, $100 00
MAYER SILVERMAN, 105 Fourth Ave., PITTSBURG PA.

PARAMOUNT

Webster defines the word as "Superior to all Others"

DO NOT READ THIS

if you are contented and happy with your present film service, but if you are one of the dissatisfied many and always on the lookout to better yourself

READ EVERY WORD AND THINK IT OVER

We are buying twelve reels of SELECTED Independent film every week. We say selected because they are selected and the very cream of the Independent output.

If you are in the Market for a Bang-up Independent service, just slip us a line stating clearly your requirements and we will quote you a price consistent with such a service.

Our system of locking the 2 reels without a break enables us to advise you just what your program will be for an entire week in advance and to top it off

We furnish FREE POSTERS with every reel

These are some of the reasons why we are the

Washington PARAMOUNT Film Co.
G. H. WALKER, Manager
428 NINTH STREET, N. W. :: WASHINGTON, D. C.

JONES
Duplex Check GATE

THE BEST WAY TO COUNT YOUR PUBLIC

This cut is from a Photograph of the Duplex Check Gates installed in Erie Station of the Hudson Tunnels.

Nearly 1,000,000 persons have passed through them this year. If it will work there, it will work in your place.

Perfect Count Smooth Operation

Manufactured by

JONES
Change Register Co.
INC.
18 Broadway :: NEW YORK

Columbia Film Co.

INDEPENDENT

We have withdrawn from the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Co., and will therefore sell direct to the Exchanges.

THE CATTLEMEN'S FEUD

OUR RELEASE OF DEC. 24th

is a Romance of the broad prairies of the West—of herds of countless cattle, of man's greed for pastured fields, ripening to resentment until the border is flamed to feud fury. After thrilling conflict between the Ranchers, peace finally triumphs through a union of loving hearts.

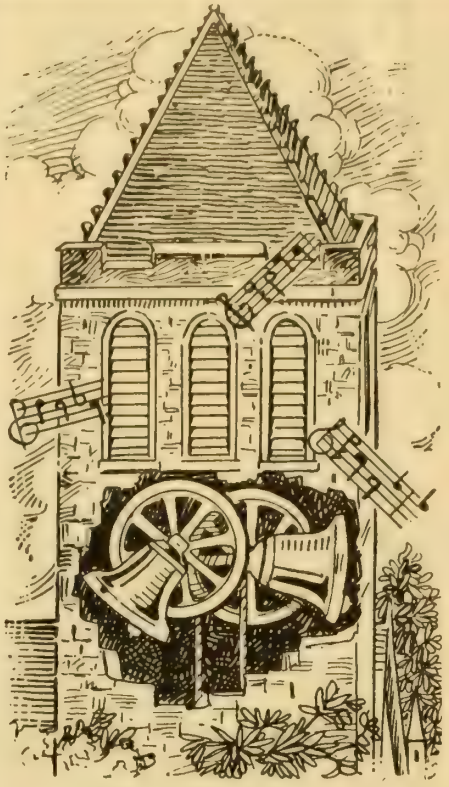
TRAPPED

RELEASED DEC. 31st, 1910

A thrilling drama portraying an incident in the life of a band of moonshiners and full of action. Very strong in its interpretation. Acted and photographed perfectly, with the natural surroundings of the West.

This is a picture of class and should be in the service of every Exchange. Notify us if your exchange cannot supply you with our Feature Releases.

The Columbia Film Co.
301 West 37th Street, NEW YORK



OUR
Cathedral Chimes

are the finest Imitation of Church Bells in the World and are used in all the leading theatres.

The price of the 4-tube outfit Complete as shown in cut is

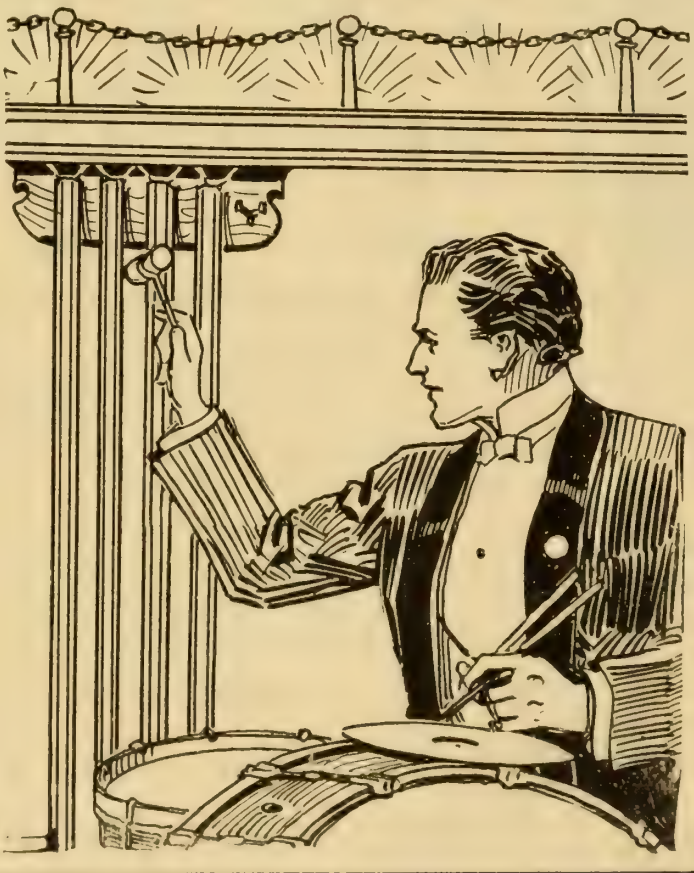
$22.50

We will send anywhere on 10 days trial upon receipt of $2 to guarantee express charges.

NOTE:—With this set you can furnish sound effects for any picture in which a bell is used from a door bell to church chimes.

J. C. DEAGAN
3800 N. Clark Street
CHICAGO, ILL.



PATHE PASSION PLAY FILM, ALSO PASSION PLAY FILM AND SLIDES

Several sets low price.

POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH $75. $215 MOTIOGRAPH, NEW, $150. MOTIOGRAPH AS NEW, $100.

Motion Picture Machines, $40, $50 to $85. Power's Cameragraph No. 5, low. Film 2c. per ft. Rheostats, Calcium Jets, Electric Lamps, Screens, etc., reduced. Many bargains. Get Sup. 33.

Motion Picture Machines Wanted.

HARBACH & CO., 809 Filbert St., Philadelphia, Pa

WANTED

Moving Picture Producing Plant, modern equipment.

Advertiser will purchase outright or furnish working capital to any amount.

ADDRESS IN CONFIDENCE

Syndicate

Care of Moving Picture World

Little Giant Carbon Sharpener

$3.50

Will save 25 per cent. of your carbon expense.

New principle—two knives which can be removed instantly for sharpening.

SPECIAL

5/8 x 12 Pink Label Electra Carbons $4.00 per 100. Moving Picture Machines, Dissolving Stereopticons $45.00 up. Oxy-Hydro. Gas. Gas Making Outfits; all Supplies and Repairs.

ERKER'S St. Louis, Mo.

JUST A MOMENT PLEASE

Mr. Exhibitor, have you sent us your order for one of our

Film Announcement Titles

Any of the following Announcements sent by mail upon receipt of price.

That's All, Good-Night—15 ft.
Hand Colored Trick Film.....$2.00
(Same Black and White) 1.50

Entire Change of Program To-morrow—10 ft.
Hand Colored 1.50
(Same Black and White)..... 1.00

We thank you for your patronage and ask you to call again—20 ft.
Hand Colored 3.00
(Same Black and White)..... 2.00

Next Show in Five Minutes—10ft.
Hand Colored 1.50
(Same Black and White) 1.00

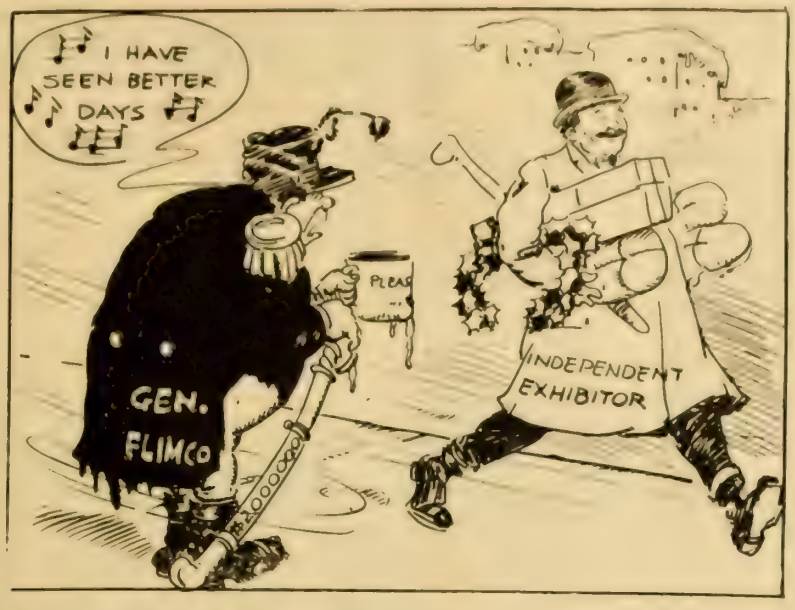
All that have not seen the entire Performance may remain for the next—20ft.
Hand Colored 3.00
(Same Black and White) 2.00

Any Announcement you wish made to Order at lowest Prices.

Send us an Order. Your money back if you say so.

French American Producing And Manufacturing Co.

918 Madison Street CHICAGO



Oh what a fall, my countrymen!

Only a few short weeks ago Gen. Flimco was big, fat, healthy and wealthy—and threatening to beat you on the bean with his trusty sword. Look at him now! Begging for your business and looking for a kind word from you, whom he sought to strangle! Forget him! Come to the man who can give you a film program of Independent subjects that will boost your receipts sky high.

Always buy your machines and accessories from me. Power's, Edison, Motiograph and other machines ready to ship at once!

Get an early booking on the "Imp" feature film "Romance of Count de Beaufort," Posed by the Count himself and members of the "Imp" Company. It's a scream! A feature! A knockout! Write!

CARL LAEMMLE, President

The Laemmle Film Service

196-198 Lake Street :: CHICAGO

OMAHA, NEB. MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

The biggest and best film renter in the world

EXHIBITORS BEWARE!

Don't run rainstorm and scratched films in your theatre when you can get first-class films in good condition.

We have equipped a special plant where all our films are renovated as soon as scratched, and our customers are guaranteed to get their films as good as new.

We have several openings for very late service.

If you are interested in this write or wire at once.

We have the following feature films:

Frontier-Days in Cheyenne
Original Wolgast-Nelson and Nelson-Gans Fights.
Custer's Last Stand
U. S. Military Tournament
Knight Templar Conclave
Reproduction of the Johnson-Jeffries Fight

CHICAGO FILM EXCHANGE
Chicago, Omaha, Denver, Salt Lake City

If you are in the Market for

SECOND HAND FILMS

Write to the largest and most reliable Dealers and Importers of these goods in the U. S.

International Film Traders
German Savings Bank Building
147 Fourth Avenue NEW YORK CITY

A Large Assortment of Licensed and Independent Film for sale at

1c.-5c. per foot, and

Many Beautiful Scenic and Feature Subjects New in the United States

for sale with exclusive territory rights. Correspondence solicited with responsible parties.

AMERICAN-LONDON CINEMATOGRAPH CO.
604 Matthews Building, Milwaukee, Wis.

(Ted Snyder, Publisher)

STOP! STOP! STOP!

Using junk song slides furnished by your film exchange, and give our service a trial. One consignment will convince you better than any argument we can present, that you ought to make a change. We charge

25 Cents a Set Per Week

Your week's supply forwarded in one consignment, and no charge made for time lost in transit.

The Largest Slide Exchange in the World

Chicago Song Slide Exchange
Sixth Floor, Portland Block
107 Dearborn Street Dept. 1 Chicago, Ill.

Advertising Copy Must be in Hand on Wednesday Afternoon

THE MIRROR SCREEN

——The Key to Success for All Moving Picture Theatres——

A REVELATION TO MODERN PHOTOGRAPHY
A "Mirror Screen" Theatre is Always the Home of Cosmopolitan Pictures

Read the Following Unsolicited Statement from One of the Leading Picture Theatres in the State of Iowa.

MR. H. F. BRYAN, General Agent,
Motion Picture Screen Co.,
160 Washinton Street,
Chicago, Ill.

My Dear Sir:

We wish to inform you that we have installed the Mirror Screen in our Lyric Theatre, and have been using it for the past two weeks with the greatest of success. We cannot say too much for the Mirror Screen; we would not run our theatre without it, nor would we part with it for three times the amount we have paid for it. It is giving our home a prestige that will increase our business 25 per cent. Our patrons claim that our pictures are the finest that they have ever seen, and the Mirror Screen is building a wall against competition that cannot be broken down with opposition pictures.

Wishing you the success that you richly deserve, we remain. Very respectfully yours,

BRYAN & ADAMS, Props. and Mgrs.,
LYRIC THEATRE.

Mr. Manager: If you improve your picture, does'nt it stand to reason that you will increase your business? The MIRROR SCREEN will improve your picture 100 per cent. It is endorsed by the leading Managers and Picture Critics throughout the country. It has revolutionized the Moving Picture Industry.

TAKE THIS TIP:—GET WISE BEFORE YOUR COMPETITOR DOES

Motion Picture Screen Company

SHELBYVILLE INDIANA

HARRY F. BRYAN, General Agent
Room 307—160 Washington Street
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

FRANK MANNING, Eastern Agent
355 Bedford Avenue
BROOKLYN, N. Y.

F. B. BLOOMFIELD, Eastern Agent
Majestic Theatre Building
MUNCIE, IND.

The Cincinnati-Buckeye Film Company

$100.000.00 incorporation, operating the CINCINNATI FILM EXCHANGE, 315 W. 4th Street, Cincinnati, Ohio, and the BUCKEYE FILM PROJECTING COMPANY, 309 Arcade Building, Dayton, Ohio. Biggest Independent Film Renting Concern in the UNITED STATES today. BUYING almost the entire Independent Output. Reference: SALES COMPANY, 111 E. 14th Street, New York. If you are looking for a real Film Service, drop us a line.

The Cincinnati-Buckeye Film Co.

315-317 W. Fourth St.
CINCINNATI, OHIO

309-321 Arcade Building
DAYTON, OHIO

The Independent Film Exchange of Pittsburg, Pa.

The Pioneer Independent Exchange of Western Pennsylvania buying the output of the Sales Company.

We have a few choice runs that we can let out at reasonable prices. Write us.

INDEPENDENT FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

A. S. DAVIS, Manager

415 Ferry Street, PITTSBURG, PA.

THE STANDARD FOR QUALITY

NONE BETTER

"Electra" PINK

Carbons LABEL

NONE SO GOOD

HUGO REISINGER

SOLE IMPORTER

11 Broadway :: New York

EDEN MUSEE

First Public Exhibition in New York

KINEMACOLOR

(Moving Pictures in Nature's own colors)

Every Day at 3 to 4 and 9 to 10 P. M.

EDEN MUSEE

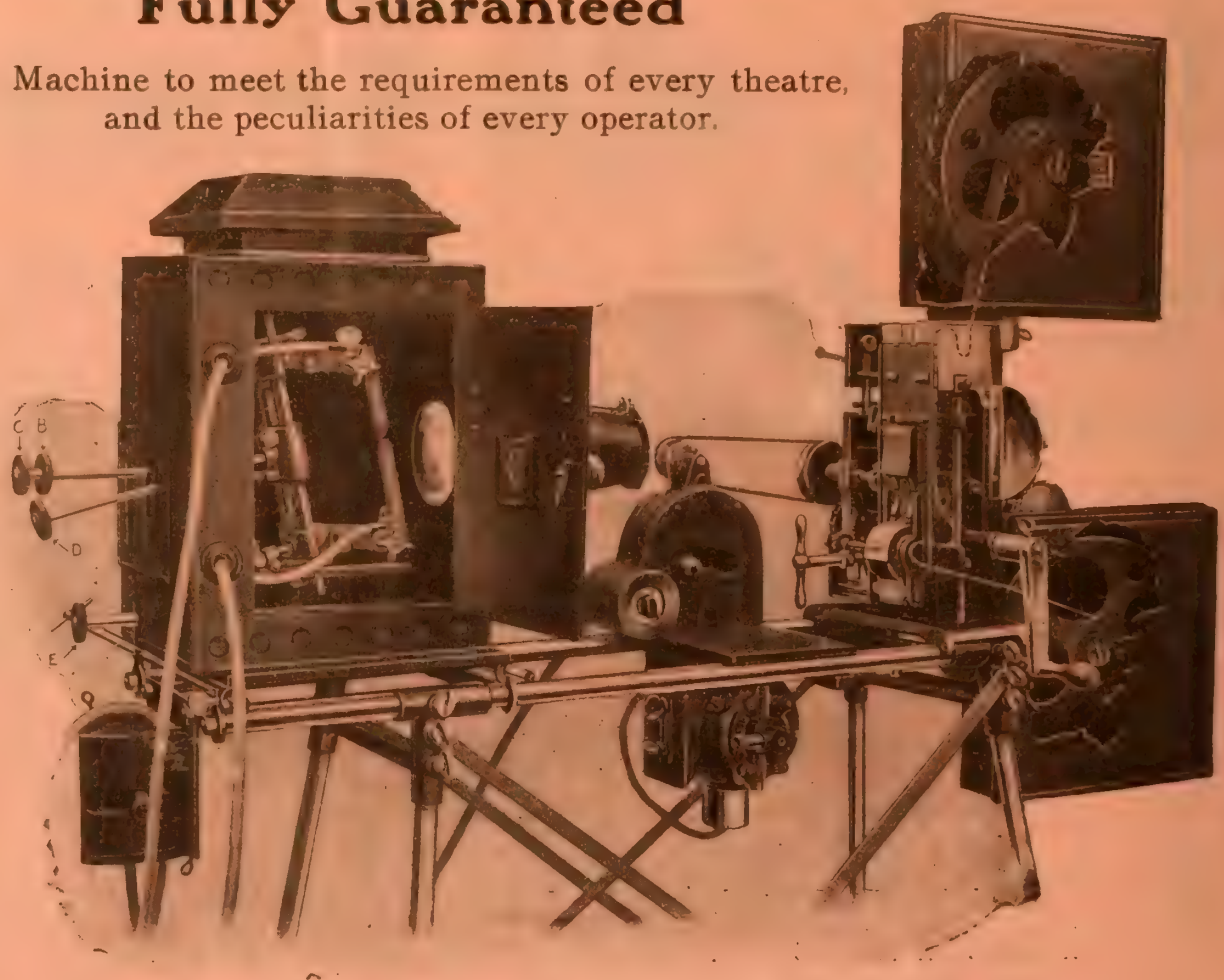
55 West 23rd Street NEW YORK CITY

"STANDARD"

THE MACHINE THAT GIVES RESULTS

Fireproof——Flickerless
Fully Guaranteed

A Machine to meet the requirements of every theatre, and the peculiarities of every operator.



Simplicity:—Does not require an expert to get results.
Durability:—Will outwear two ordinary machines.
Efficiency:—Projects a picture equalled by none.

We have been giving written guarantee for two years, but
STANDARD MACHINES
NEVER COME BACK

When you want perfect satisfaction, try one.

American Moving Picture Machine Co.

Dept. W 101 BEEKMAN STREET, NEW YORK

Vol. 7, No. 27. December 31, 1910 Price, 10 Cents

THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

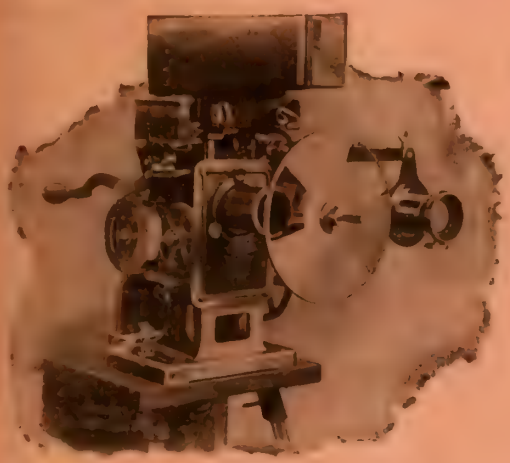
THE ORGAN OF THE PHOTOPLAY AND ALLIED INTERESTS

NEW YORK

POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH No. 6

The Perfect Motion Picture Machine

Is used by the most particular exhibitors all over the world. The following are only a few of the reasons why:



The pictures projected by it are flickerless, steady and brilliant.

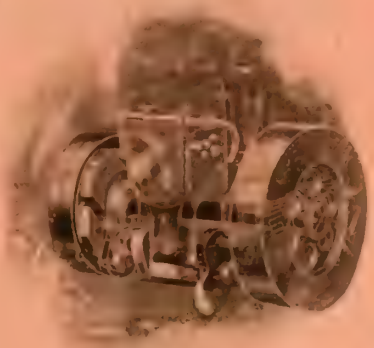
It has no pinwheel and star wheel, thus eliminating parts which are very delicate and subject to much wear.

Built to stand a hard grind, it has wide, spiral gears, thick spindles, wide bearings and a most substantial intermittent movement.

All parts are on the outside of the mechanism where they are accessible, easy to keep clean and well oiled.

The lamphouse, lamp and condenser mount is a delight to the operator.

Where 60 cycles alternating current is used specify the two wing exterior revolving shutter and Power's Adjustable Inductor instead of the rheostat. The three wing shutter is best for direct current.



No. 6 Intermittent Movement

SEND AT ONCE FOR CATALOGUE "G" DESCRIBING ALL MODELS

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

115-117 NASSAU STREET, : : : : NEW YORK CITY

FOR THIRTEEN YEARS THE LEADING MAKERS OF MOVING PICTURE MACHINES

A MERRY CHRISTMAS AND—

2-4-U

AND GOOD ONES, TOO!

THE THANHOUSER 2-A-WEEK

Release of Tuesday, January 3rd

"Oh, You Mystery Story!"

THE PASHA'S DAUGHTER

was a venturesome little lass with great liquid eyes—eyes that dazed and dazzled the men of her native Islam—and a foreigner who strayed there. The foreigner was a young American travelling for recreation. He became friendly with the Pasha father of the Girl With the Eyes and the friendship resulted in his arrest for conspiracy along with the old Turk. But the subsequent imprisonment has its good points for it enables him to win his way into the girl's good graces—and the girl enables him to win his way to freedom. The settings in this subject are most picturesque, close attention to detail distinguishing every scene. No. 173. Code Word, Pasha.

Release of Friday, January 6th

See the "Thanhouser Twist"

BASEBALL and BLOOMERS

is the best college comedy of the month and we'll make more like it if it pleases you. PLEASE YOU, IT WILL! We felt that settled as soon as we saw the first print. The main advertising stunt to be worked with this picture, as we see it, is the college end of it. Remember, the picture deals with a bunch of bright college boys and a bunch of brighter college girls. Now, there are numerous people in your neighborhood who have attended college. TELL THEM A VERY SPECIAL COLLEGE SUBJECT IS COMING TO YOUR HOUSE. Print and distribute the synopsis. This will serve to excite their interest enough to bring 'em in. AND THE PICTURE ITSELF WON'T DISAPPOINT 'EM. It'll back up everything you say about it—you have our word for that. No. 174. Code Word, Bloomers.

PHOTOFRAME MAXIM No. 27

A sure sign of a theatre's bum business is found in NO SIGN of a Thanhouser Photoframe outside

The Thanhouser Photoframe consisting of portraits of the famous Thanhouser "Stock" framed in solid oak, mission finished, 33 inches in width and 43 in depth complete with glass and easel (6 feet high) GOES TO YOU FOR $3.50 with order. This is the prize outfit that tickled-to-death exhibitors the country over are calling THE GREATEST LOBBY DISPLAY BARGAIN EVER KNOWN. For System's sake address: ORDER DEPT.

THANHOUSER CO., NEW ROCHELLE NEW YORK

2-4-U

AND GOOD ONES, TOO!

—A HAPPY NEW YEAR

TO THE TRUST EXHIBITOR:

If all other theatre owners followed your policy of fattening and supporting the trust there would be a very gloomy Christmas, indeed, for the film business of 1911! Why not let the trust handle the theatres it controls, and YOU join the happy family of independents, which is striving toward bigger and better things for the exhibitor. The independents do not COVET your theatre, as the trust does, but wants your patronage, permitting you to choose your own subjects from the following

PROGRAM

EVERY MONDAY

AMERICAN—American Film Manufacturing Company
ECLAIR—Eclair Film Company
IMP—Independent Moving Pictures Company
YANKEE—Yankee Film Company

EVERY TUESDAY

BISON—New York Motion Picture Company
POWERS—The Powers Company
THANHOUSER—Thanhouser Company

EVERY WEDNESDAY

AMBROSIO—New York Motion Picture Company
ATLAS—Atlas Film Company
CHAMPION—The Champion Film Company
NESTOR—David Horsley

EVERY THURSDAY

AMERICAN—American Film Manufacturing Company
IMP—Independent Moving Pictures Company
ITALA—New York Motion Picture Company

EVERY FRIDAY

BISON—New York Motion Picture Company
LUX—R. Prieur
SOLAX—Solax Company.
THANHOUSER—Thanhouser Company
YANKEE—Yankee Film Co.

EVERY SATURDAY

CAPITOL—Capitol Film Co.
GREAT NORTHERN—Great Northern Film Co.
ITALA—New York Motion Picture Company
POWERS—The Powers Company
RELIANCE—Carlton Laboratories.

List of BUYING EXCHANGES, December 24th, 1910

All others offering these brands for rent can supply only dupes or worn out subjects.

ALABAMA.

Dixie Film Co., 506 Chamber of Commerce Bldg., Birmingham.

CANADA.

Applegath, L. J. & Sons, 145 Yonge St., Toronto, Ont.
Canadian Film Exchange, Calgary, Alberta.
Gammont Company, 154 St. Catherine St., Montreal, Que.
Great Western Film Co., Kennedy Bldg., Winnipeg, Man.

CALIFORNIA.

California Film Exchange, 1065 Mission St., San Francisco.
Miles Brothers, 790 Turk St., San Francisco.
Western Film Company, 514 South Los Angeles St., Los Angeles.

COLORADO.

W. H. Swanson Film Exchange, 301 Railroad Bldg., Denver.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Paramount Film Exchange, 428 Ninth St., N. W., Washington.
B. & W. Film Exchange, 426 Ninth St., N. W., Washington.

GEORGIA.

Consolidated Film Exchange, Rhodes Bldg., Atlanta.

ILLINOIS.

Anti Trust Film Co., 79 South Clark St., Chicago.
Eugene Cline, 59 Dearborn St., Chicago.
Globe Film Service, 107 East Madison St., Chicago.
H. & H. Film Service Co., 98 Jackson Blvd., Chicago.
Laemmle Film Service, 196 Lake St., Chicago.
Standard Film Exchange, 155 East Washington St., Chicago.

INDIANA.

Central Film Service Co., 149 North Illinois St., Indianapolis.

KANSAS.

Wichita Film and Supply Co., 122 North Market St., Wichita.

LOUISIANA.

Dixie Film Co., 720 Maison Blanche Bldg., New Orleans.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Boston Film Rental Co., 665 Washington St., Boston.
W. E. Greene Film Exchange, 228 Tremont St., Boston.

MARYLAND.

B. & W. Film Exchange, 112 East Baltimore St., Baltimore.
Consolidated Amusement Co., 28 West Lexington St., Baltimore.

MINNESOTA.

Laemmle Film Service, 409 Sykes St., Minneapolis.

MICHIGAN.

Michigan Film and Supply Co., 1106 Union Trust Bldg., Detroit.

MISSOURI.

Bijou Film and Amusement Co., 1222 Grand Ave., Kansas City.
J. W. Morgan, 1310 Walnut St., Kansas City.
Swanson Crawford Film Co., Century Bldg., St. Louis.

NEBRASKA.

Laemmle Film Service, 1517 Farnam St., Omaha.

NEW YORK STATE.

Albany Film Exchange, 418 Broadway, Albany.
United Film Co., 1 First St., Troy.
Victor Film Service, 39 Church St., Buffalo.

NEW YORK CITY.

Empire Film Exchange, 150 East 14th St., City.
Exhibitors' Film Exchange, 203 East 15th St., City.
Great Eastern Film Exchange, 21 East 14th St., City.
Hudson Film Exchange, 138 East 14th St., City.
Peerless Film Exchange, 94 Fifth Ave., City.
Wm. Steiner Film Exchange, 110 Fourth Ave., City.

OHIO.

Capitol Film Service Co., 422 North High St., Columbus.
Cincinnati-Buckeye Film Co., 309 Arcade Bldg., Dayton.
Cincinnati-Buckeye Film Co., 315 West 4th St., Cincinnati.
Toledo Film Exchange, 319 Superior St., Toledo.
Victor Film Service, Prospect and Huron Sts., Cleveland.

OREGON.

Ind. Western Film Exchange, Swetland Bldg., Portland.

OKLAHOMA.

United Motion Picture Co., 112 Main St., Oklahoma City.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Eagle Film Exchange, 143 North 9th St., Philadelphia.
Ind. Film Exchange, 415 Ferry St., Pittsburg.
Philadelphia Film and Projection Co., 44 North 9th St., Philadelphia.

TEXAS.

Texas Film Exchange, 311 Elm St., Dallas.

WASHINGTON.

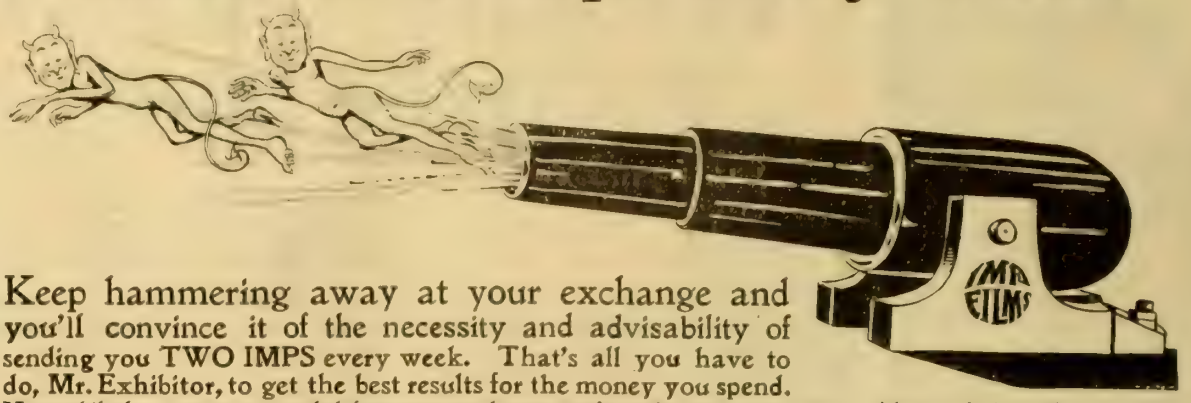
Pacific Film Exchange, Globe Bldg., Seattle.

WISCONSIN.

Western Film Exchange, 307 Enterprise Bldg., Milwaukee.

Motion Picture Distributing & Sales Co., 111 E. 14th St., N. Y. City

"Shoot Me 2 Imps Every Week!"



Keep hammering away at your exchange and you'll convince it of the necessity and advisability of sending you TWO IMPS every week. That's all you have to do, Mr. Exhibitor, to get the best results for the money you spend.

Meanwhile keep your eye peeled for some good news we're going to spring soon. Also read about the next two Imp releases:—

"THE WISE DRUGGIST"

This is a constant string of surprises and unexpected situations. It all hinges on an overcoat taken by mistake and a bottle of supposed "poison." Read the plot elsewhere in this issue and you'll realize what possibilities it contains. Released Monday, January 2nd.

"RE-UNITED"

A story of a boy and girl. The feature which will cause comment in this film is the fact that the Imp has a "fifteen-years-later" jump in the plot, yet does it in splendid shape—a thing which is considered one of the hardest achievements in staging a moving picture playlet. Before you put down this advertisement, make a note reminding yourself to tell your exchange to "shoot me two Imps every week."

Demand Two Imps Every Week

INDEPENDENT MOVING PICTURES CO. OF AMERICA
102 W. 101st Street, New York. Carl Laemmle, Pres.

All "Imp" Films Sold Through the Sales Co.

INDEPENDENT MOVING PICTURES CO. IMP OF AMERICA

EDEN MUSEE

First Public Exhibition in New York

KINEMACOLOR

(Moving Pictures in Nature's own colors)

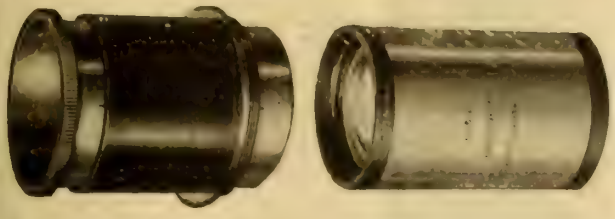
Every Day at 3 to 4 and 9 to 10 P. M.

EDEN MUSEE

55 West 23rd Street NEW YORK CITY

Three Important Announcements About

Gundlach Projection Lenses



¶ A complete stock is now carried by Nicholas Power Company, 115-117 Nassau Street, New York, and they will fill all orders as promptly and carefully as ourselves.

¶ We are furnishing all the special Lenses used by the Rothapfel Photoplane system of daylight projection now being installed in Keith's entire circuit of theatres.

¶ Our lenses may be ordered from all branches of the General Film Company, and every leading Film Exchange.

We guarantee absolute satisfaction

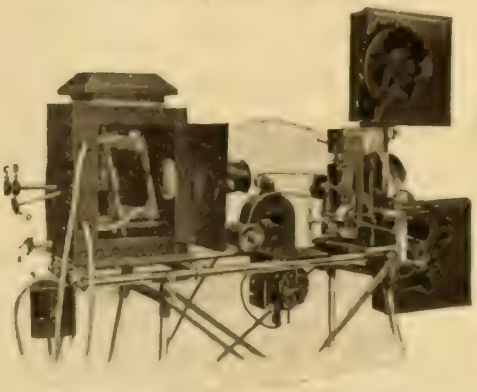
GUNDLACH-MANHATTAN OPTICAL COMPANY

808 CLINTON AVENUE, SOUTH :: ROCHESTER, N. Y.

"STANDARD"

THE MACHINE THAT GIVES RESULTS

FULLY GUARANTEED



We are selling more machines and receiving less complaints than any other manufacturer in the market.

The "STANDARD" is the only machine passed by the N. Y. Board of Fire Underwriters on which a motor is used.

AMERICAN MOVING PICTURE MACHINE CO.

101 BEEKMAN STREET :: :: NEW YORK

ELECTRA

LONGEST—LIFE

ELECTRA ·TRADE MARK·

STRAIGHTEST AND MOST UNIFORM

ELECTRA PINK LABEL CARBONS

COST NO MORE THAN INFERIOR GRADES OF CARBONS. THE USE OF "ELECTRA" PINK LABEL CARBONS INSURES A DEGREE OF BRIGHTNESS OF LIGHT COMBINED WITH STEADINESS NOT TO BE OTHERWISE OBTAINED.

SOLE IMPORTER

HUGO REISINGER

11 BROADWAY - - - - NEW YORK

MONTE CRISTO COMING!

POWERS PICTURE PLAYS

ARE PLAYING A HOT, OLD TUNE!

The Regular Tuesday "Split Reel" Scoop for January 3rd will be

The Pinkerton Man

A vivid tale of love, hate and villainy. The scene where sudden death from consumption stays a refugee's murderous hand is a thriller!

2 ON 1

Beaux Not Wanted

A funny story acted as it should be by real comedians. The woman in the case is the daughter of a dentist, who extracts all of her lover's front teeth, and when she sees her toothless admirer—!!!

Saturday Feature, January 7th

"A Woman Without a Heart"

A powerful Drama with a great moral. A heartless, artful dance house girl leaves her husband and falls in love with an artist for whom she poses. But her transient happiness is crushed by the sudden appearance of her husband on the scene—a climax as strong and stirring as your heart can desire.

THE POWERS COMPANY

241st Street and Richardson Avenue - - New York

SOLD THROUGH THE SALES CO.

Get Our Photo Frames with REAL Photographs For Lobby

EVERY FRIDAY THE WORLD'S BEST—BAR NONE EVERY FRIDAY

Messrs. Exhibitors and Exchanges

Permit us to wish you all A MERRY CHRISTMAS and A PROSPEROUS NEW YEAR.

Permit us also to say that you will go far towards insuring prosperity in every week of the New Year by insisting on the LUX Release in every weekly program.

BEGIN RIGHT NOW

Lux Films are Leaders in Europe as well as America

Release Friday, Dec. 30, 1910

Aunt Julia's Portrait

Comedy—547 Feet

Tim Writes a Poem

Comedy—375 Feet

Two corking comedies certain to cause convulsions.

Even the horses take a dislike to the portrait and show it in no unmistakable way, so you can hardly blame the rest of the family.

The catastrophe that closes the second half of this reel will make them roll off the seats. It is simply—!!!!!

LUX FILMS

FREE COLORED LITHOS.

GET LUX

See Other Pages for Synopses and Past Releases

R. PRIEUR

10 East 15th Street Phone 3427 Stuyvesant New York City

Sold only through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company.

RELEASES

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 30TH.

Mrs. Richard Dare

A sparkling society comedy—the kind that holds the attention of a restless audience

FRIDAY, JANUARY 6TH.

THE NIGHTCAP

(Split Reel.)

A screaming comedy, funniest ever.

Salmon Fishing in Canada

(Scenic.)

This is a very instructive and interesting picture.

This is the kind of combination that brings down the house.

Sold through
THE SALES COMPANY,
111 E. 14th St.
New York

RELEASES

FRIDAY, JANUARY 13TH.

The Girl and the Burglar

Bert gives a necklace to his fiancee. His necklace gets broken and Bert goes at repairing it. He sits admiring the pretty trinket, hears a noise in the next room and investigating finds a burglar in active operation. In the scuffle that follows Bert is knocked unconscious and is robbed of the necklace. The burglar meets Bert's fiancee and falls in love with her. He gives her the necklace that he has stolen from Bert. Ruth at once recognizes it. How the burglar meets his just deserts and how Bert is restored to the loving arms of his sweetheart is all told in a manner that reads of the touchy and every day human interest that is so much sought after.

Solax Company

Telephone
1864 Stuyvesant

147 Fourth Avenue
NEW YORK

GREAT NORTHERN

Stands For Quality!

Good films are the life of the moving picture business. Therefore, put life into your business by using GREAT NORTHERN film productions.

Release for Saturday, December 24th

NECKLACE OF THE DEAD

(Enacted by Actors of the Royal Theatre, Copenhagen)

A magnificent production of intense thrilling interest. The struggles of humanity in this awe-inspiring photo-play are revealed in a way that only REAL actors could portray. Scenes beautifully tinted and toned. Don't miss this big headliner!

Release for Saturday, December 31st

THE SCARECROW

A well constructed dramatic story of temptation, fall and redemption. A film of exciting situations and a capital climax.

BEAR HUNTING

COMEDY FILM

Mr. Exhibitor: If you have not received our new "Timetable" No. 2, write for one at once.

ALL FIRST-CLASS INDEPENDENT EXCHANGES HANDLE OUR FILMS

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO., 7 East 14th St., New York

Sold only through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company.

Champion Films

Days of the Early West

TO BE RELEASED JANUARY 4th

After reading the TITLE of our next release, you wont want to read another line You will anxiously await the coming of this reel. Because every one knows what the Days of the Early West means, and the next CHAMP release contains 950 feet of real Western life, dating back to the pioneer days, when living on the plains, with bands of marauding Indians on every side seemed an almost impossibility. THIS REEL WILL DRAW ALL THE CLASS YOU CAN HANDLE.

BOOK IT WITHOUT DELAY

Scene from "Days of the Early West,"

Don't Forget Champs on Wednesday

DON'T believe all you hear, investigate for yourself. Seeing is believing. We guarantee every CHAMP with a bank roll to be as steady as Gibraltar.

SEE RELEASE DATES FOR CHAMP FEATURES

CHAMP

THE CHAMP STAMP

CHAMPION FILM CO.

Mark M. Dintenfass
General Manager

12 East 15th Street
NEW YORK, U. S. A.

Laboratories at Coytesville on the Hudson

Sold only through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company
111 East 14th Street, New York City

Live Men Are On Our Mailing List—Are You?

Eclair Films

Withstand the Ravishing Hand of TIME!!

TIME PASSES ON—THE WONDERFUL EXCELLENCY OF ECLAIR FILMS REMAINS!

"The Proof of the Pudding is in the Eating!"

SEE FOR YOURSELVES

For January 2nd

FUNNYFILMS Two-in-One FUNNYFILMS

The Great Medal Competition

485 Feet

A Veritable "Scream" from Start to Finish—A Film that is FUNNY in the True Sense of The Word!

A Well Matched Marriage

480 Feet

An Entertaining Farce—Humorous to the Last Degree!

GET IN THE GAME—ORDER NOW!

ECLAIR FILM COMPANY

NEW YORK: 31 E. 27th ST.
CHICAGO: 35 E. RANDOLPH ST

Sold only through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Company.

JONES
Duplex Check GATE

THE BEST WAY TO COUNT YOUR PUBLIC

This cut is from a Photograph of the Duplex Check Gates installed in Erie Station of the Hudson Tunnels.

Nearly 1,000,000 persons have passed through them this year. If it will work there, it will work in your place.

Perfect Count Smooth Operation

Manufactured by

JONES
Change Register Co.
INC.
18 Broadway :: NEW YORK

Columbia Film Co.

INDEPENDENT

We have withdrawn from the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Co., and will therefore sell direct to the Exchanges.

TRAPPED

RELEASED DEC. 31st, 1910

A thrilling drama portraying an incident in the life of a band of moonshiners and full of action. Very strong in its interpretation. Acted and photographed perfectly, with the natural surroundings of the West.

This is a picture of class and should be in the service of every Exchange. Notify us if your exchange cannot supply you with our Feature Releases.

Queen of the Prairies

RELEASED JAN. 7th, 1911

A drama of the plains depiciting life in the South West in the early days—when woman, like man, was forced to contest every inch of the ground on which she stood. At a period and amid conditions which developed heroines of equal valor as the hero—a time when woman faced the hardships of the West, displaying those traits which seem even beyond human endurance. Such a drama is our "Queen of the Prairies." In our heroine we present a woman of that period—daring, tactful, masterful—a veritable Queen and properly the idol of the Cowboys' heart. A story embodying every element of the drama—every element of the true Western life—herd of Buffalo—cattle round-up—Bucking Horses, etc.—in fact the kind which every live exhibitor wants and the public demand. A picture which will live because of its historical value.

The Columbia Film Co.
301 West 37th Street, NEW YORK

Give Yourself a Free Xmas Present

Do you want to play to capacity all day, every day?

Will you spend two cents to find out how?

The system is absolutely free, and costs practically nothing to put into effect.

It was given to us by a man who has worked it successfully in eleven theatres, one after the other.

It has been worth hundreds to those who have tried it.

We offer it to you free, just to get acquainted.

Some day you may want something that we have to sell.

Mail us this coupon to-day and we will send you full particulars by return mail.

CHARLES L. KIEWERT CO.
89 CORTLANDT ST., NEW YORK

Sirs:

Please send me your continuous housefilling system. I understand that it is to cost me nothing, now nor at any other time.

_____

_____

_____

My exchange is _____

_____

_____

NO BETTER PROGRAM ANYWHERE!

Every week we buy 12 Reels of the most carefully SELECTED INDEPENDENT FILM:—

THE BEST BEFORE THE PUBLIC to wit:

AMBROSIO	LUX
AMERICAN	NESTOR
ATLAS	POWERS
BISON	RELIANCE
ECLAIR	THANHOUSER
IMP	YANKEE

Our system of locking two reels without a break gives you the advantage of knowing in advance your entire week's program.

We have just the kind of film you want.

Our service fills that long feet want.

Beautiful Posters Free with every reel.

Do a PARAMOUNT business by dealing with the

Washington Paramount Film Co.

G. H. WALKER, Mgr.

428 Ninth Street, N. W.
WASHINGTON, D. C.

"The Purtiest Gal That Ever I Saw—

Was Sucking Cider Through a Straw"

Did you ever "Hark Back" to a winter on the farm where you were reared 'mid Rural Surroundings? Would'nt You like to Breathe the Sweet, Pure air of the Country once again? You Can, Brother, and you can take along the folks who were'nt there, just to show them what they missed. We're going on

"A STRAW RIDE"

Party Starts from 10 East 15th St., New York on WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 4th, and will stop at Your House and take you along to Whitcomb's Homestead, reaching there in time for The Barn Dance. There will be plenty of Apple Cider, Hick'ry Nuts and Molasses Taffy for everybody. It is hoped there will be no trouble, although Zeb. Hawkins is mad as a hornet because Aaron Young stole his girl.

IMPORTANT:—"A Straw Ride" combines "Melodrama" of the highest class with Rural situations so novel and unusual that you have in this a vividly real, intensely interesting Film Story with settings, characters and costuming That FIT. ASK FOR IT.

Art Posters WRITE FOR ONE Get Bulletins

SOLE AGENTS

ATLAS FILM CO.

10 East 15th Street, New York

NELL PIERCE—DETECTIVE

THE best known and most popular Moving Picture Character in the world is "The Yankee Girl Detective," known as Nell Pierce. You've seen her in a hundred impersonations, you've tried in vain to penetrate her clever disguises. She has solved many mysteries for the lover of films. You'll be pleased to know she's coming again in the best of our Sleuth Series, so far.

UNCLE SAM FILMS — MADE BY YANKEE FILM COMPANY NEW YORK — TRADE MARK

Out Friday, Dec. 30

The Missing Bridegroom

A strange and unusual film narrative of life in high society having to do with the exploits of Nell Pierce, detective, in running to earth the abductors of a bridegroom on the eve of his wedding. Nell is seen in so many rapid fire disguises that she keeps the audience fairly wild with interest to follow them.

Big Monday Yank, Coming January 2

A Spectacular Wonder-tale of the Orient

The Royal Wish-Bone

With a cast of Thirty-five acting people. Twenty great scenes. A decidedly wonderful comedy that you'll talk about years from now. One you cannot well afford to overlook.

SEND FOR BOOK OF THE STORY AND SAMPLE POSTER

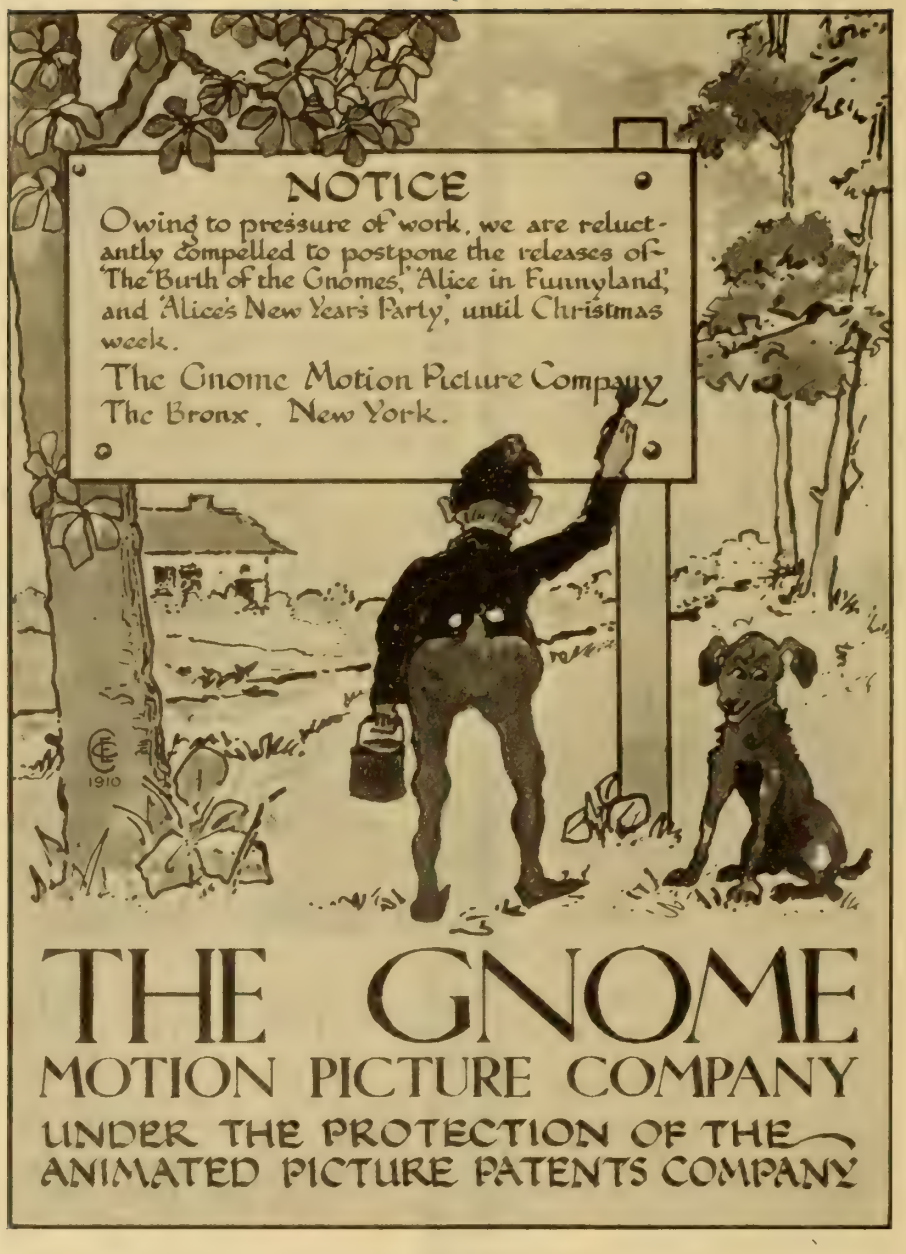
About Our Pictorial Posters By special contract with America's best known Theatrical Lithographers, The Metropolitan Printing Company, we now furnish with our releases high-art reproductions of actual scenes from the film, superbly done in five and six colors. These Lithographs are supplied free.

YANKEE FILM CO.

344 East 32d Street, New York

Telephone, 6170 Madison Square

Write Your Order to the Sales Company



NOTICE
Owing to pressure of work, we are reluctantly compelled to postpone the releases of 'The Birth of the Gnomes,' 'Alice in Funnyland,' and 'Alice's New Year's Party,' until Christmas week.
The Gnome Motion Picture Company
The Bronx, New York.
1910
THE GNOME
MOTION PICTURE COMPANY
UNDER THE PROTECTION OF THE ANIMATED PICTURE PATENTS COMPANY

NOT A MEMBER OF THE SALES COMPANY

Address All Communications to Us Direct

GNOME MOTION PICTURE COMPANY

S. W. Corner Park and Tremont Aves.

NEW YORK CITY

Moving Picture World

THE WORLD PHOTOGRAPHIC PUBLISHING COMPANY - 125 E. 23d Street, NEW YORK
(Beach Building) Telephone call, 1344 Gramercy

EDITORS: J. P. CHALMERS, THOMAS BEDDING, F. R. P. S.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Post free in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rica and the Philippine Islands.

ADVERTISING RATES: Whole page, $60.00; half page, $30.00; quarter page, $15.00; eighth page, $7.50; one inch (3⅜ in. wide), $3.00; one inch (2¼ in. wide), $2.00; classified (no display), 3 cents per word.

TIME DISCOUNTS: 5% two or more insertions, 10% three months order, 15% six months, 20% twelve months.

WESTERN OFFICE: 160 Washington Street, (Post Building, Chicago). Telephone Main 3145.

Entered at the General Post Office in New York City as Second-Class Matter.

Vol. 7 DECEMBER 31, 1910 No. 27

Summary of the Week.

Music and the Picture 1518
"Herod and the New Born King"—A Gaumont Masterpiece 1519
Photography in Natural Colors: A Review of the Latest Text Book 1519
Religious Possibilities of the Moving Picture 1520
Vitagraph Girl Night. By F. H. Richardson 1521
Notes from Pacific Coast Studios 1521
New York and the Moving Picture Theater 1522
The Animated Picture—Some Ancient History by T. B. 1523
New England Notes 1525
Trouble Department. By F. H. Richardson 1526
Music for the Picture 1531
The "Police Gazette" on the Screen 1532
Kinemacolor Demonstration in Boston 1533
Comments on the Films 1536
Chicago Notes 1540
"Lux Graphicus" on the Animal in the Picture 1542
Construction and Decoration. By John M. Bradlet 1543
Notes from Cincinnati 1544
Letters to the Editors: A Progressive Exchange—The Exhibitors' League—Special Lenses, etc 1544
Stories of Licensed Films 1546
Licensed Release Dates 1549
Stories of Independent Films 1550
Independent Release Dates 1554

NOTICE.

The new Western offices of the Moving Picture World, Rooms 307-309, Post building, 160 Washington street, Chicago, are now ready to receive World readers visiting Chicago. Mr. John M. Bradlet, Western representative of the World, will extend to every one a cordial welcome. They will find a complete file of manufacturers' catalogues and a bureau of information on films, theater construction, materials and supplies. They will also find desks and stationery for their correspondence, the services of a lady stenographer and a polite messenger boy to act as their guide or go their errands. We invite every exhibitor or person interested in motion pictures to make our Western office their headquarters when visiting Chicago.

A Happy New Year to all World Readers.

The Past, the Present and the Future.

It is customary, at the close of each year, for representative journals to print retrospects of the work with which they have been indentified during the past twelve months. This sort of thing is a kind of newspaper stock taking. Just as the merchant at the close of a year goes over his past transactions and takes his present stock with a view of outlining his future campaign, so your average newspaper or trade journal in the discharge of its duty to its readers, devotes some part of its space to retrospective surveys and future forecasts. This idea is the inspiration of the present article.

HAS THE YEAR SHOWN PROGRESS?

Dealing with the past, we cannot say there is much to record in the way of definite progress on the part of any branch of the picture industry. Speaking generally, the picture to-day is not much better in respect of quality, than it was a year ago. Truth, by comparison, is always difficult to arrive at, but we are inclined to the opinion, in this case, that the picture is at a standstill. By this we mean that the same hack subjects treated in the same hack way predominate just as largely as they did twelve months ago. We have no particular reason for complimenting the Edison Company on this occasion, but justice compels us to admit that on the whole, this company has shown more marked progress than any other American manufacturer. A year ago the Edison picture was not in demand. They even lagged so far behind their own licensees that Edisonian progress was in danger of becoming a by-word. No one realized this better than themselves and intelligent effort was directed to the picture. To-day they get good stories and they have them well acted and well photographed. They led the way in the employment of literary talent of world-wide reputation and they have lately issued several pictures of absorbing national interest, if not of vital importance. One more instance and we have done with individual progress. A year ago the Lubin picture was only in slight demand and that on account of its delicious inconsistencies and absurdities. To-day the Lubin picture is of photographic excellence and the stories are well chosen and well acted. But individual progress does not affect our argument. The Lubin picture is no better and no worse to-day than those of his competitors. The same may be said of the Edison picture and others, therefore our contention that the picture, qualitatively speaking, is practically at a standstill holds good. The average of quality is in inverse ratio to the increase in quantity. Progress on the independent side of matters has been chiefly marked by increase in numbers and the establishing of a unique selling organization which presents a phalanx of apparently prosperous manufacturers. Again, comparatively speaking, the quality of the product of many of these new concerns is equal to that of pioneers in the business. How much of this parallel stage of progress is due to the handicap of the latter by deflections from their ranks of trained employees and understudies is, of course, a momentous question. But forced supply, creating and keeping pace with inordinate demand, is no more conducive to definite progress than is the restrictive policy of monopoly.

What of the Public?

Undoubtedly, during the past year, the picture has increased in favor with the public. There are more theaters in existence and more people frequent the theaters. From what we can gather, the exhibitor has prospered and is prospering. The hold of the picture on the entertainment moving public is stronger than it ever was. From this it might be deduced that the future outlook is bright with the promise of further success. Is it? We are inclined to answer our own question in the affirmative, for apparent reasons. The volume of business throughout the world is greater than it ever was. And it will no doubt continue to expand for some time to come, if those at the head of affairs will do their part in promoting the business.

The Manufacturer Has His Responsibility.

Those at the head of affairs are the people who make the pictures and the people who present them to the public. There is a widespread call all over the country for better pictures, better shown. If that call be answered in the positive sense, there need be no doubt about the future of the moving picture business. If it be neglected, then the somewhat fickle public of this country is apt to turn its back on the picture and spend its money on vaudeville or some other form of entertainment. The chase for the dollar too strongly animates the moving picture business to-day. Get something out quickly that will bring in quick returns is the motto "uttered but not comprehended" of far too many people in the business. As it has recently been put to us: "You see, 100 copies mean $10,000, C. O. D. There is hardly any other business from which you can get such quick returns." A very short sighted policy. It would be safer, and in the long run, more profitable, we believe, if quality and not quick returns, were the guiding principle both of those in the business and of those who contemplate entering it.

Of course the national spirit is predisposed to the quick acquisition of wealth. That spirit is visible in the picture business. It, however, is such a young business, it is still so much in the making that its very facility for money making constitutes one of its dangers. People grow indifferent to the future. "Get it, and get out," is the common sentiment. While human nature remains what it is, neither we, nor anybody else can hope to annihilate such a principle. But, in the broader sense, we can at least point out the extreme menace to any business which is so largely conducted on this fallacious principle. If the latter be general, then the business itself must go, and quickly, too.

And a Glorious Future.

One sustaining factor of the situation is this: that the public want good pictures and will pay to see them, at least at the time of writing. So long as the public is prepared to do its part and the manufacturers do theirs, then the outlook is full of favorable augury. We have recently noted in these pages many signs of a disposition on the part of the lay press to relegate the picture to a position of decadence. Possibly, these newspapers reflect only a small part of public sentiment. We think they do. But this straw shows which way the wind may very possibly blow, if the manufacturers continue indifferent to public requirements. Let them turn over a new leaf, and give the public of the best that can be obtainable, and then the future is assured. For the present, then, we look forward full of hope and confidence in the immediate future of the picture business.

Music and the Picture.

Pathe, of New York, have taken a step in furthering the association of suitable music with the moving picture which we desire to applaud. One of their releases shortly to be in the hands of the exhibitor, is the story of Trovatore. This is an Italian subject, worked out and acted in Italy by the Pathe-Italian company. It deals with the familiar themes of love, hatred, revenge, and the like. It has all the glamor, movement, mystery and enthralling interest of Italian melodrama. Of course, as the educated reader of this paper knows, the story of Trovatore was set to music by Verdi and forms one of the most popular operas in the repertory of the New York Metropolitan Opera House. To emphasize the popularity of Trovatore, we may say that the music is very familiar to the general public. It long ago achieved the glory of being placed on the street organ.

Now, when this release comes out, the exhibitor will have an opportunity of suiting the action of the play to the music, or rather suiting the operatic music of Verdi to the action of the play, as shown in the film. Pathe engaged the services of a competent man to prepare the music of the opera for use when the film is projected. So it comes about that for something like fifty cents, the exhibitor can procure the music of Trovatore, especially arranged for simultaneous use with the film. All that will be required will be to place the music in the hands of the pianist, who will take his cues from the subtitles on the film. Thus: suppose we reach the legend of the Count recognizing his long lost brother, then that would be the cue for the pianist, who would play the music under that caption. Plainly and simply it amounts to this, that for the first time accompanying music for a feature film has been provided by Pathe. We hope that the exchanges and the exhibitors will take advantage of this offer, not merely because we want to see Pathes' experiment a success, but also, because, as we have over and over again urged, we want to see the picture on the screen accompanied by suitable music from the orchestra—whether that orchestra simply consists of a piano or a number of pieces.

It is no use lamenting the past, but we wish this sort of thing had been carried out before on an extensive scale, because then we should have been farther along the line of progress in the popularity of the picture than we are at present. Several men interested in the selling of sheet music have spoken to us on the subject of the provision of suitable music for the picture. It is unquestionable that there is much to be done is this respect and money to be made thereby. The absurdity of accompanying the presentation of a picture on the screen with unsuitable music has been dwelt upon so often in these pages that, though the evil is great, we have not the heart to repeat our displeasure. On the contrary we try to help matters along by devoting a page each week to "Music For the Picture," and we gladly welcome the stimulus to much needed improvement in this little evidence of Pathe enterprise.

There should be a large sale for the Trovatore music. The exhibitor in advertising the film should draw special attention to the fact that the music of the opera accompanies it. By such means he will stimulate the interest of the public in this particular picture, and in the picture generally. If it were generally known that appropriate music always accompanied the picture on the screen, the interest of the public in the picture would be increased. As has been pointed out in these pages and elsewhere, there seem to be signs that the interest of the public in the picture is inclined to wane, and it therefore behooves all concerned to use every legitimate endeavor to retain that interest. If every exhibitor throughout the country saw to it that suitable music accompanied the pictures, there would be something done towards refuting the allegations of the enemies of the picture, that the picture has seen its best days.

"Herod and the New Born King."

By Rev. W. H. Jackson.

This recent Gaumont production is without doubt one of the best Biblical pictures ever put before the public. As a work of art it deserves great praise, and as an attempt to reproduce one of the most wonderful scenes in history it reflects great credit upon all who took part in it. In watching the unfolding of a story of this kind, one feels somewhat as though a section of an Oberammergau scene were being presented, in that one looks for something very real and true, being fully cognizant of the standard which must be attained as well as that delicacy of approach which must mark the demeanor of all taking part, making "acting" subordinate to truth of reproduction, which is the requirement of these sacred subjects. It is worthy of note that those participating (not acting) in these scenes have been largely successful, thereby contributing much to the value of the production. The opening scene, the "Shepherds watching their flocks by night," is a good picture, and the approach of the "heavenly host" very impressive, although perhaps the angels were too stationary, giving the effect of a painted scene rather than one full of life and joy, as it really should be. The stable scene in which the shepherds come to worship the infant Saviour is very realistic, causing audible appreciation, yet, strange to say, from these appreciative remarks comes the occasion for perhaps the one strong cause for criticism in the whole series. The infant is too attractive to feminine minds. The complimentary remarks, "Isn't he cute," is, while true, yet a fault. The baby child should impress in such a way as to draw forth comments of reverential wonder —as it really did with the shepherds—rather than to be attractive to the eye and by its innocent mannerisms cause comments of a "cute" nature.

Again it must be pointed out that this one weak feature is a result of departing from the "written word." We are told "the babe was wrapped in swaddling clothes," and as such it should have been faithfully, carefully and reverently reproduced; instead of this an unclothed child, evidently some six or eight months old, instead of so many days, lies kicking in its manger bed. Certainly it was "cute" but not proper. Further than this it must be noted that the infant child is the sacred center of the subject, and as such must not be tampered with or humanized according to modern ideas; indeed it seems that greater efforts were expended upon a faithful reproduction of every other character than that of the child Jesus. A properly clothed, week-old babe, could have been handled by Joseph and Mary with as much or more commending reverence than the one used here.

The visit of the "wise men from the East to Herod" is good; the Oriental travel with all the local color makes a most satisfactory scene. Herod is particularly good in his plotting with the queen; both are seen to great advantage, and as this is an occasion where the "written" instructions are lacking, no outrage has been done to an important occasion. The departure of the wise men when the star appears, the consternation of Herod and his queen when they also see the star, is a commendable picture and gives interest to the consultation which Herod holds with his advisers and the queen, the outcome of which is the order for the death of all children under two years of age. These scenes upon which the manufacturers have had to draw upon their own interpretation of the occasion, are exceedingly good and therefore ought to be commended here; the representation of Herod is particularly good in every way. The appearance of the wise men at the manger cradle with their offerings of gold, frankincense and myrrh is both reverential and elaborate, and produces in the mind of the beholder that feeling which it is rightly intended to inspire. The departure into Egypt is in accordance with traditional pictures. The scene in which the holy family is seen crossing the desert is very good, but one cannot help wondering if the sleeping at the foot of the Sphinx is not somewhat manufactured; nevertheless, it does not necessarily outrage the sentiment of the occasion. As a whole the series must be favorably commended, and because of the series much be favorably commended, and because of its distinct advance upon the majority of earlier Biblical pictures, it is to be hoped that it marks a new era in the production of this class of pictures. A continuance of the life of Christ from this point on is awaited with reverential interest.

Photography in Natural Colors: The Latest Text Book.

A Review by Thomas Bedding, F.R.P.S.

Photography in Colors. A text-book for amateurs, with a chapter on Kinematography in the colors of nature. By George Lindsay Johnson, M.A., M.D., B.S., F.R.C.S., F.R.P.S. With eight full-page plates in colors and numerous illustrations in the text. London, Ward & Co., 34 Craven street, Charing Cross, W. C. 1910.

In the course of my recent series of articles on moving pictures in natural colors which an ignorant charlatan was allowed, by a presumably reputable firm of New York printers, to select as the excuse for venting his mingled ignorance and ill-nature, a list was given of the text-books available for those who wanted to take up a study of the theory and practice of color photography, in its possible adaptation to moving pictures. To that list I must now make an addition in the shape of the volume under review. This little book is the latest, and in some respects, the best to deal with color photography. The last book on this subject printed in the English language was issued four years ago. Then practically nothing was known of Kinemacolor. But in Dr. Johnson's book, there is a chapter devoted to the subject. I must congratulate the author on giving us a very interesting, concise and clear precis of Kinemacolor.

Dr. Johnson, who is an acquaintance of mine of many years' standing, is, like myself, entitled to the use of the mystic initials, "F.R.P.S." But he is something more than this. He is a very high authority on theoretical and applied optics. What he does not know about the eye, vision and color, is not worth considering. In the book before me, he traces the scientific evolution of color photography. He compares the eye with the camera and the retina with the color plate. Then, having compared the spectrum sensitiveness of the eye with that of the color plate, he quits theory, which he explains very lucidly, indeed, and gives a short account of all known methods of making photographs in natural colors on glass, paper and film. As far as possible he prints practical details for working each process. In the appendix there are many useful tables in relation to exposure, development and other branches of dark room work. There are many colored plates in the book, made from colored photographs. Altogether in a condensed form, one gets an exceedingly good idea in this little book of the present position of photography in natural colors.

Outside the description of the Urban-Smith process (Kinemacolor), Dr. Johnson's book will, perhaps, not be of the most striking value to the moving picture maker. It won't tell him how to make motion pictures in natural colors; but it will, at least, inform him of what has been accomplished in making color prints on glass and paper. The volume is rather in the nature of a stimulant to further experiment. It marks the steps of progress that have been made in recent years.

It is worthy of note that the Friese-Greene process, to which fulsome reference has been made in some unauthoritative publications, does not figure in Dr. Johnson's book. Having regard to the claims of the inventor published on both sides of the Atlantic, we should be surprised at this, but are not. For Dr. Johnson is a man of well cultivated knowledge and would not include in his book any process that has not been tried out and found successful.

We may say that if any of our readers desire to obtain a copy of this book, which is printed and published in London, they may do so by ordering it from our publishers The World Photographic Publishing Company, 125 East Twenty-third street, New York City.

The Religious Possibilities of the Moving Picture.

Extract from a Sermon by the Rev. Herbert A. Jump, New Britain, Conn.

When Jesus desired to set forth the essential meaning of Christianity in a universal language that should speak to men of every age and all races, he chose a dramatic story. He told the parable of the Good Samaritan, and therein gave an example of ideal preaching which many preachers of the present day, alas! seem to have completely overlooked.

Note some of the details of that sermon-story. It was not taken from the Bible—the Old Testament used as a Bible by Jesus' auditors—but from contemporary experience. It was the sort of thing that might have happened any day and to any one in his audience. Secondly, it was an exciting story. Robber tales always thrill the emotions, and much more in the ancient world perhaps than to-day, because then the risk and the likelihood of such deeds of violence were immeasurably greater than now. Thirdly, this narrative-sermon frankly introduces morally negative elements and leaves them negative to the end of the chapter. Was it not dangerous to the church establishment of that day to have its priest and Levite pictured as failing so utterly in the grace of compassion, held up to ridicule as hypocrites and poseurs? And as for the robbers themselves, not only did the story give a most realistic description of precisely how they perpetrated the cowardly crime of violence, but it leaves them victorious in their wickedness, scurrying off with their booty, unrepentant of their sins, probably chuckling at the folly of the traveler for venturing upon the notorious Jerusalem-Jericho road without a caravan to protect him from the highwaymen. And yet, despite these three dubious characteristics of not being Scriptural to the people who heard it, of being exciting, and of having realistic and morally negative features in it, who dare assert that the story of the Good Samaritan has wrought harm in the world? Rather, has it not earned for itself recognition as being the central parable of all the Master's teachings? Has it not exhibited in complete and convincing fashion the very heart of the Gospel? Has it not urged more men into lives of ministry and helpfulness than any piece of literature of equal length which the race has ever known?

Prejudice Against Moving Pictures.

We have delayed thus on the story of the Good Samaritan in order to disarm if possible that mood of antagonism with which some of you approach the general subject of motion pictures. You "know that they are bad," because they are exhibited in a theater that charges only five or ten cents admission. You have never seen many of them, perhaps not any of them; but from various sources, you hardly remember whence, the suspicion has been bred in your mind that the motion picture is evil and evil altogether. To assert, therefore, that there are any "religious possibilities" in the motion picture strikes you as the acme of absurdity. It is as though one were to announce a sermon on "The Spiritual Value of the Clog Dance." You have heard that motion picture stories are likely to represent crime, that they are exciting, and that scarcely a phase of modern experience has been overlooked by the manufacturer as he scoured the universe to find novel subjects for his motion picture films.

And now we come to the point: the objections which you and others thus make against the religious use of motion pictures can all of them be urged with equal force against the use of the most conivncing parable which the Christ ever uttered. The films that have value for religious education to-day are those which portray the truth as the Good Samaritan portrays it:—in a dramatic story, of contemporary experience, exciting in character and thus interesting even to the morally sluggish, picturing negative elements such as crime, accident, ignorance, sin, and thus commending itself as true to life, but in the end showing the defeat and expulsion of these negative elements by positive qualities, virtuous souls. God-like traits. The only thing needed to make the parable of the Good Samaritan a conspicuously successful motion picture is a new title. Call it "The Adventure of the Jerusalem Merchant," and it would appeal perfectly to the habitue of the dime theater, and he would catch the noble moral of it far more swiftly, perhaps, than do many of the more well-to-do Christians, who hear it rather than see it, when it is droned forth from the pulpit by the preacher on a Sunday morning as the New Testament lesson.

The Motion Picture as a Religious Tool.

First, it can help the church merely as an entertainment device. The spiritual value of the church sociable has long been admitted; the indirect possibilities of religion in the oyster stew and bean supper are commonly conceded. Let the church that wishes to minister to the masses do what a few Roman Catholic churches are doing, what Rev. Charles Stezle of New York is doing in his new Labor Temple—provide free picture shows, as it provides free concerts and organ recitals.

Secondly, the motion picture can help in giving religious instruction in the Sunday school. Pictures of travel through Palestine, of Biblical scenes, of events in the history of the church are available and ought to be used extensively.

GRAPHIC MISSIONARY EDUCATION.

Thirdly, the motion picture film can do more for foreign and home missions than any agency yet utilized by our assiduous and ingenious missionary secretaries. The reason for the skeptic's opposition to missions is usually found in his ignorance of how mission work is done and of what social conditions it aims to transform. Films dealing with travel and ethnology are very numerous—they enlighten the latter half of this ignorance; and after the real critic has looked at films picturing the operations of medical and industrial missions in distant lands, he is a sluggish egotist indeed if he doesn't entertain a more tolerant mood toward the "skirmish line of the Kingdom of God."

Fourthly, the church needs to be an agent of broad civilization in its community; one aspect of its religious ministry should be the social education of the needy. The church should assist in this process of social illumination, and it can use no more potent aid in doing this work than the motion picture. Especially should cities where there are large alien populations, have the advantage of such dramatic instruction on the lantern screen as needs no interpretation. A picture is a sort of graphic Esperanto, a universal language; and social and domestic and personal hygiene may well be taught through its aid.

THE MOTION PICTURE SERMON.

Fifthly, the crowning possibility of the motion picture, though, is its usefulness to the preacher as he proclaims moral truth. It will provide the element of illustration for his discourse far better than it can be provided by the spoken word. It will make his gospel vivid, pictorial, dramatic, and above all, interesting. The motion picture preacher will have crowded congregations, not because he is sensational, but because he is appealing to human nature more successfully than his fellow-clergymen, because he is adapting his message to the psychology of his hearers, because he is employing a better pedagogical method.—New Britain, Conn., "Herald."

[Since quoting the above extract from Rev. Mr. Jump's sermon, we have received the complete copy in pamphlet form—it having been printed by special request. Readers of the World may obtain a copy by addressing Rev. Herbert A. Jump, New Britain, Conn., not forgetting to enclose 5 cents postage for each copy desired.—Eds. M. P. W.]

A VITAGRAPH GIRL NIGHT.

F. H. Richardson.

By invitation of Miss Florence Turner, the Vitagraph Girl, I journeyed through the hole kindly provided by Mr. McAdoo under the Hudson, to Jersey City, the occasion being Vitagraph Girl night at "The Academy," situate at 342 Central avenue, a location almost requiring the services of a Sherlock Holmes to discover. Once arrived in sight of the theater, however, there was no manner of doubt but that something was "doing." I was literally amazed! The lobby of the theater, the sidewalk and half the street was jammed solid with a good-natured, shoving, jostling mob, intent only on reaching the interior of the theater which, by the way, was already full to the limit of its capacity. Across the street and in a cross street facing the theater, stood men, women and children, evidently dubious about tackling the throng massed in front of the playhouse. A tribute, indeed, to the popularity of Miss Turner, the charming young lady who has, by her clever work, won the title "Vitagraph Girl," and endeared herself, not only to thousands, but literally to millions of men, women and children all over the civilized world.

After a time we succeeded in forcing our way to the door where B. Richardi, the owner and manager, welcomed us, meanwhile mopping perspiration from his steaming brow—the coldest night of the winter too. Back of the scenes Miss Turner was found surrounded by friends, happy as the elt of laughter she is. And well she might be for Mr. Speedon of the Vitagraph Company had just finished presenting her, on behalf of the theater management, a really marvelous life size portrait of her charming self in colored crayons, by G. Richardi, brother to Mr. Richardi, owner of the Academy. The picture was marvelous, I said, and so it was, by reason of the fact that while Miss Turner's likeness was perfect, the artist had only a small Vitagraph bulletin picture to work from. The result was, taking this fact into consideration, nothing less than magnificent. Not only had Miss Turner been made the recipient of this but a superb bouquet of American Beauty roses on behalf of Mrs. Richardi, to the accompaniment of shouts of approval by the audience.

All this, combined with the fact that the audience had given enthusiastic reception, certainly provided excuse for the smiles which wreathed the mobile countenance of the Vitagraph Girl. As we shook her by the hand she exclaimed, with characteristic impulsiveness: "Isn't it all perfectly grand!"

Truly it was to us a revelation. That those who pose for the Silent Drama gain a tangible hold on their audiences we were aware. That the popularity of the Shadow Girl would cause a small riot by reason of the eagerness of those who knew only the "shadow" to greet the reality was, to say the least, a surprise. In a way, too, it was an enlightening illustration, or demonstration, of the hold the moving picture itself has on the people.

Speaking of Miss Turner reminds one of the interesting question of how many times she has had her "photygraf tuk"? Should she only appear in one full thousand feet of film each week it would mean 832,000 photographs per year.

In closing let me say that the projection light at The Academy was well handled and free from shadows, but some of the song slides were quite dirty. The operator was not, however, working under normal conditions that night. Given the opportunity I believe he could and would do good work. I did not learn his name.

NOTES FROM THE COAST STUDIOS.

Biograph Studio to Be Permanent.

The Los Angeles studio of the Biograph Company, rapidly approaching completion, is to be the permanent studio of the company. A large tract of ground in the center of the city has been secured and is being put into shape for the arrival of the company, who will arrive about January 1.

Selig Notes.

The recent beautiful Selig marine release, "A Tale of the Sea," was written by Hal Reid, the playwright. The scenario was an adaptation from Mr. Reid's poem, "Jim and Joe."

The new steel and glass studio of the Selig Company's local plant is now in use. The refraction of the sunlight through the glass heats the studio like a battery of steam radiators.

Selig Company to Take Pageant.

The Selig Company have completed the negotiations held with the Tournament of Roses Association of Pasadena for recording in moving pictures the annual pageant of the Rose Carnival, which will be held on New Year's Day. The warm Winter sun of Southern California has hastened the flowers which are unusually plentiful, so that beautiful flower-bedecked floats and equipages will be seen in the parade in profusion. Pasadena promises the finest pageant in the history of the event. The pageant corresponds in many ways to the Mardi Gras, the Portland Rose Carnival, and other annual pageants. Last year an unfortunate heavy rainfall almost ruined the event, but a second visitation is unlooked for, since last year's rainfall was the first one in twenty years to mar the festival.

Pathe Takes Auto Races.

The local studio of the Pathe Company recently repaired to Santa Monica and took the Santa Monica road races. The cars of the racers tore around the twelve-mile course at record speed, one of the cars averaging a speed of 78 miles per hour over the entire course, and making as high as 98 miles in the stretches. The meet was well attended. One feature of the six hours' racing was the absence of accidents, not one serious accident occurring to either drivers or spectators. The course is acknowledged to be one of the best constructed and most scenic in the country, and the film should be of great interest to motorists and the sport-loving public generally.

R. V. S.

New York and the Moving Picture Theatre.

The Times Square Theater, Broadway, New York City.

AN ANOMALY AND AN APPEAL.

Newspaper braggadocio and braggartry assigns to New York the premier place amongst cities of the world. We read in the newspapers that in a few years, it will be bigger, greater, vastly more populated than London, Paris and Berlin combined. But the New York newspapers are only to be trusted in respect of this one feature: that of gross exaggeration. It seems as if every writer on the New York newspaper press, or most of it, is given free editorial reign to exaggerate to his heart's content, when the question of New York as a city is in question.

A friend of ours recently visiting this city, delivered himself of the opinion that New York might be a tolerable place when it is finished. A well-known artist is quoted as saying that New York, æsthetically, was "hell, and unfinished hell" at that, etc. New York, we deliberately assert, is vastly overrated in every single respect in which it is written about, save one thing, namely, its cosmopolitanism, lawlessness and commercial immorality, to say nothing of other conditions.

But a truce, dear reader, to generalizations that are not germane to the subject of the picture. We want to compliment the proprietor of the Times Square Theater (moving picture theater), Broadway, New York City, on the excellent manner in which this nice little house is conducted. We pass it day and night. After sundown, when we poke our noses into the little place, it is generally well filled with patrons: the pictures are well shown, and we hope those responsible for the control of the Times Square Theater ar making lots of money out of the venture. If we know anything about the moving picture game, they certainly have the opportunity.

THE TIMES SQUARE THEATER.

The Times Square Theater is situated on Broadway, at Fortieth street. Just over the way and round the corner on Forty-second street is another theater called, we think, the "Bryant." This, like the Times Square, is a ten cent house. Both of these places seat between 200 and 300 people. On top of the Victoria Music Hall, at Forty-second street and Broadway is a roof garden, and there Mr. Hammerstein is showing moving pictures to ten cent patrons. We believe that these three enterprises are doing very well with the picture.

Now, dear reader; you, who live at a distance from New York—you in Denver, or Duluth, Baltimore or Birmingham, Ala.—no matter where you are, or who you are. We write to, and for, you who are holding this very page of this publication. Look on the little cut which is in the middle of this article—does it not figure a nice, neat, small, unpretentious little picture house that would not be out of place in a provincial city of 5,000 inhabitants? Bless your heart and soul, The Times Square Theater occupies no mere provincial location; it is in the center of the greatest amusement artery, namely Broadway, of one of the greatest cities of the world, namely, New York! To the right of it, to the left of it, in front of it, and in its rear are some of the grandest, greatest theaters in all the world. The Metropolitan Opera House is over the way. Within a radius of three or four hundred yards there are probably thirty or forty more theaters. There are the mammoth hotels. There are the vaudeville palaces. In short; the Times Square Theater is in the center of the very hub of the wheel of amusement that is constantly whirling round the Great White Way.

We know very well that the building laws of this city restrict the erection of moving picture houses holding larger audiences than three hundred. What a scandal! What an absurdity! You can run any number of theaters devoted to the legitimate; but you cannot build a large handsome ornate theater, devoted to the silent drama, that would do the silent drama justice. Why is this? Is it impossible to get this absurd law modified or abrogated? Must New York always lag behind in the progress of the moving picture industry? Why should the principal city of the North American continent be denied a privilege which every other city in the United States and Canada possesses, namely, that of erecting suitable picture houses?

Surely, it should be worth the while of some capitalist interested in this matter to call the attention of those responsible for the local building laws to the absurdity of the present state of things. New York City with its five hundred or so moving picture houses does not boast one worthy of the name of "picture palace." Week by week, month by month, we give reproductions of the picture houses of other cities: Boston, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Chicago. All the great cities of the Union have their picture palaces represented from time to time in our pages.

When we illustrate these fine picture theaters we do so with something like a feeling of shame that the Empire City of the East, should have to stand behind her sister cities in other parts of the country and be content with such band box like looking places as that figured in our cut of the Times Square Theatre.

Who will take the lead in altering this stupid state of things, so that New York may come into its own? Is it not strange that with all its braggadocio and braggartry, the New York press, which in recent times has manifested some sympathy towards the moving picture, should not agitate for the erection of proper picture houses in this much overrated city of alleged hustle, enlightenment and progress?

The Animated Picture.

Some Records of the Past With a Bearing on the Present.

By Thomas Bedding, F.R.P.S.

[I am indebted to my friend, Mr. William N. Selig, of Chicago, for kindly loaning me the volume of an annual of which I was formerly editor. This is the "British Journal Photographic Almanac," the largest and most widely circulated photographic annual in the world. In this book for the year 1898 I devoted a series of chapters to the then aspects of animated photography. This treatise was written in the Fall of 1897, that is, exactly thirteen years ago. The matter reads, I am told, as if it were written to-day. Some of the chapters are here appended. I have a personal reason for reprinting these articles. It is a final reply to the ignorant charlatans and upstarts who not only have the impudence to pose as authorities on moving picture matters, but are deliberate perverters of facts relating to myself and others.—T. B.]

[Concluded from page 780, May 14, 1910.]

III.—Animated Photography in Practice.

From the foregoing exposition of the general principles involved, the reader will, doubtless, easily perceive how they are applied to practice. It all comes to this, that a strip of sensitised celluloid film, varying in length as may be desired from sixty feet to hundreds of feet, and perforated at its edges, is wound down in the focus of the view lens, behind which it is held in register for a fraction of a second. The quicker the exposure is being made, the shorter the rest; but, assuming twenty pictures a second to be taken, then the pause will equal one-fortieth of a second. A rapidly moving shutter acts between the lens and the film, which is obviously obscured for a fraction of a second, during which it moves on, and another portion of the film has arrived in position on the focal plane.

In projecting the positives on to the screen exactly the same principles prevail. Each little picture is given a momentary pause behind the projecting lens, and the light is temporarily, although not appreciably, obscured by the shutter.

The Edison standard gauge film measures about 1½ in. wide, the actual dimensions of the image being about 1⅛ in. by seven-eighths of an inch, the perforations numbering four on each side of the picture; the Lumiere film has the same measurements, but has only two perforations, one on each side. Some specially made cameras for taking animated photographs admit of films measuring as much as 3¼ ins. wide being used, but the advantages of large pictures are not, it may be supposed, universally admitted.

The operation of taking the photographs after a little practice is an extremely simple matter. The camera is set upon a stand, which cannot be too rigid, and, the view or scene having previously been focused, the exposure is made by winding off the film behind the lens, the rapidity of movement being, of course, governed in the same manner as with ordinary instantaneous photography—that is to say, the factors of lens aperture, speed of emulsion, and rapidity of shutter, are of equal value in the one kind of photography as in the other. The quicker the objects move, the shorter the exposure. It is well to bear in mind that, theoretically at any rate, in this class of work there is a gain in respect of depth of definition, i.e., the short focal length of kinematographic lenses clearly having an advantage over longer focus lenses used in ordinary work. It must also be borne in mind that, as most Cinematgraph apparatus is worked by hand, the rapidity of the exposure may be differentiated at will, so that the operator can adapt his exposures to the speed with which the objects in the field of view are moving.

I insert this elementary outline of the method by which animated photographs are taken in order that those readers who are not interested in the theoretical and historical parts of my subject may better understand the way in which the apparatus, described in the next chapter, is manipulated.

V.—The Biograph.

Considerable success in this country has attended the exhibition of animated photography on a larger scale than usual, by the Biograph, the invention of an American, Mr. Casler. There are certain features about the method of obtaining and projecting the photographs with this machine that are new to be interesting, and I therefore give the following particulars, for which I am indebted to an article in the Scientific American, here much condensed. The camera frame is mounted by means of three adjustable legs upon a triangular turn-table, which may be placed upon any suitable support. Upon the top of the frame is bolted a two horse-power electric motor, which is driven by a set of storage batteries. The combination of the turn-table and the vertical adjustment before mentioned enables the camera to be shifted so as to take in the required field. In the front end of the camera is fixed a lens, capable of gathering a great flood of light and producing an image of exceedingly clear detail. Above this lens, on the front face of the camera, is fixed a finder, which gives the same sized image as the main lens. Inside the camera is a strip of film two and three-quarter inches wide, and about 100 feet in length, which is wound upon a small pulley or drum. The length of the film varies for different subjects, and, in the case of a prolonged scene, it may extend to several thousands of feet.

The film is led through a series of rollers and caused to pass directly behind the lens of the camera, and finally is wound upon a second drum. The object of the rollers is to cause the film to pass behind the lens with an intermittent instead of a continuous motion. At ordinary speeds this would seem to be a matter of simple accomplishment; but, when we remember that impressions are taken at the rate of forty a second, and that the film, which is running at the rate of from seven to eight feet a second, has to be stopped and started with equal frequency, it can be understood that the problem was no easy one to solve. The film comes to a rest as the shutter opens, a phase or image is deposited, and the film starts again as the shutter closes. The impressions vary in actual exposure between one-hundredth and one four-thousandth of a second. While the ordinary speed is forty a second, the Biograph can take equally good pictures at the rate of one hundred per second if it is necessary. The higher speed would be used in photographing the flight of a projectile or any object that was in extremely rapid motion.

The Biograph for projection purposes is similar in its general appearance and construction to the apparatus for taking the photographs. There is a similar arrangement of rollers and mechanism for controlling the movement of the film, and the machine is driven, as before, by an electric motor, and controlled by a resistance box.

* * *

VI.—Development.

Upon the subject of the development of the negative and positive films it is hardly necessary to speak in detail. A reference to Chapter III. shows how, in the Lumiere system, the camera used for taking the negatives is also employed for exposing them in contact with the film upon which the positive is made.

A somewhat more elaborate system for employment on a large scale is due to Mr. Jenkins, of New York, whose method is described in the Scientific American.

It consists of reels supported on suitable upright standards holding respectively the sensitive ribbon film and the negative film. The film from the negative supply reel is carried along over the sensitive film reel, and both pass in contact, in continuous motion, under an exposing chamber illuminated by white light, either incandescent electric light or a Welsbach gas light, thence over the toothed sprocket driving wheel to the winding reels, the exposed film being wound first. It will be noticed that the reels are interchangeable, hence, to make duplicate copies, it is only necessary to remove the negative spool from the winding-up end to the supply spool standard of the apparatus and begin over again. The perforations in the edges of the film are of specially square shape, and give the square sprocket teeth of the propelling pulley a better pull on the film. The teeth pass through the perforations of both films, causing both to move exactly the same, and at all times to keep in perfect register. The speed of the film, passing under the exposing chamber, must be uniform, and this is obtained by propelling the sprocket wheel by an electric motor or by a spring motor. The electric motor is behind the light chamber. The axle of the motor has worm gear operating a cog wheel on the main shaft. A V-shaped elastic band holds the frame (in which is a ground glass) in contact with the films, producing a sort of tension on the film. To the left of the light chamber is a supplementary tension, adjusted by screw nuts.

Referring to the above illustration, there will be seen two slotted diaphragm cards. These are placed over the ground glass just mentioned, at the bottom of the light chamber, and are for the purpose of regulating the amount of light that acts on the negative. If the negative film, as a whole, should be thin, then the card with the narrow slot is used, which allows a shorter exposure to be made, as the negative and film are passed under it. If the negative is full of density, then the narrow card is removed and the wider-slotted card substituted, which allows a larger volume of light to act upon the negative film. The exposed film is wound around large open reels from its spool, and developed by passing through troughs of developer solutions.

* * *

The necessity of providing apparatus to quickly reproduce positive impressions from the negative ribbon films is one of the reasons why this simple device was invented, and its novelty consists in the fact that the film moves continuously under a uniform source of light without any intermittent motion or the use of shutters.

Whatever the mechanical details of the particular system of printing employed may be, it is obvious that the main principle of passing the negative and the positive film in intimate contact before a constant light at a uniform rate of speed cannot be departed from in practice.

The actual method of development of negative and positive is extremely simple. I believe that the plan mostly favoured is to wind the film round a revolving drum, which passes through the developing solution. The only plan I have actually seen in operation is that adopted by Mr. Birt Acres. He uses a rectangular frame, the top and bottom bars of which each have a row of small wooden beads. The film is wound taut round this frame, the wooden beads engaging in the perforations. The ends of the film being secured to the frame, the whole thing is placed in a vertical bath containing the developer, and is fixed and washed in similar vessels. This appears to be a simple and economical way of working, especially on a small scale.

* * *

VII.—Some Defects of Animated Photographs.

Bearing in mind that the exigencies of projecting animated photographs frequently demand their magnification by hundreds of diameters, the prominent appearance of light and dark streaks, splashes and lines in the pictures can hardly be wondered at. Apparently we are far from the time when these pictures will have all the purity and brilliancy of a first-class lantern transparency; but there are distinct signs of improvement, and it may be conjectured that, when the photography of the subject receives a little more attention in detail, marked advances in the technical qualities will be made.

The chief defect, however, from which projected animated photographs suffer is the "flicker" of the image on the screen. Numerous are the theories put forward to account for this unmistakeable drawback. The alternation of light and shadow caused by the use of the shutter; the inaccurate perforation of the film and its consequent inability to engage in the sprockets; non-registration of the pictures as they pass the projecting lens and unsteadiness of the apparatus in taking and showing the pictures are among the explanations advanced.

There are many ingenious mechanicians at work to overcome this defect; but it is as well not to be too sanguine that the much-needed improvement will be universally realised very quickly. I do not exaggerate in saying that, during the last year, I have been made the recipient of the confidences of at least a dozen persons who have brought the Kinematograph to perfection; some of the machines have not yet seen the light, others have, but they have fallen short of expectations.

There is another point which it is permissible to suggest should receive greater attention, and that is the use of the lens under such conditions as will ensure the very highest degree of definition in the negative. The objective usually employed for the purpose is one of the portrait type, working at an aperture of f-3 approximately, with a focus of about 2½ inches. The covering power of the lens is obviously more than equal to the requirements demanded of it; but a little care in the selection of a lens giving the best obtainable definition is not thrown away.

With the exception of a Biograph noticed in a previous chapter, which is actuated by an electric motor, hand power is exerted in taking and projecting the pictures, and, on the whole, is most suitable, as the convenience of differentiation of speed is obtained.

IX.—Stereoscopic Animated Photographs.

Whether it is feasible to realize the dream of some inventors to project animated photographs that may be viewed stereoscopically is hard to say; but it has escaped general notice that the veteran mechanician, Mr. F. H. Wenham, to whom photography is under many a recognized obligation, some time ago (English Mechante, June 7, 1895) narrated some experiments he made, with the idea of imparting stereoscopic relief to Zoetropic pictures. Here is Mr. Wenham's description of his experiments:

"The description of the arrangement of Mr. Edison calls to my recollection some experiments in this direction made by myself in the year 1852. It then occurred to me that, if the series of figures in the Zoetrope, or wheel of life, were taken photographically and duplicated in the stereoscope, and both series viewed simultaneously with each eye, that, instead of a mere flat moving diagram, we should obtain the effect of a solid figure in motion. Accordingly, two large circular millboard discs were mounted on spindles rotated in opposite directions by means of a crossed band of common clock chain running on spiked pulleys on the spindles. The next step was to take the photographs. This, being the early days of the collodion process, was a tedious operation, as from eight to ten seconds were required for each exposure. The camera used was a stereoscopic one, giving two pictures simultaneously. Ten pairs of negatives were taken, from which twenty prints were obtained. Ten of these were mounted at equal distances on each side of the flat discs for the commencing half of the movement of the figure, and the corresponding ten of the receding one, so that there were twenty pictures on each disc, the first starting from zero, and the last again reverting to the first. In each of the intervals between the pictures a slit was cut for securing a momentary vision of each, and the whole was rotated with the pictures well lighted and facing a looking-glass. The subject selected was a little man with a head so bald that it was aptly compared to a bladder of lard; he was seated in a chair in the sunlight. Before him was placed a garden vase to represent a mortar; a pestle was extemporised. At the end of this was nailed a lath about fifteen inches long, marked off in ten divisions. In the first position our sitter rested the end of this lath on the bottom of the mortar; a pair of stereoscopic pictures were then taken. Next, one-tenth was sawn off the end of the lath for another picture, and so on through the ten divisions. The finished prints were then carefully spaced and mounted on the two discs. On rotating these before the looking-glass, the effect was extremely grotesque. The whole of the little man's body, while frantically pounding in the mortar, was in a state of quivering and violent emotion, and his bald, shining head bobbing up and down gave the whole display such a ludicrous effect as invariably to elicit roars of laughter, and the astonished sitter remarked, 'I never worked like that.' Another set of stereoscopic pictures were produced on a larger scale. A hand saw was marked off in divisions, and side-view pictures on each, of a carpenter sawing a deal on a stool, were taken. This was intended for a public exhibition, but circumstances prevented the arrangement from being completed; and, after all, unless the pictures are very numerous, there is the usual tremulous motion common to all Zoetropes, and the subject is scarcely one of much scientific interest. The converse of this is to take a portrait, while the sensitised plate is moved uniformly from a radius during the time of exposure. The result is a horrible smear, having no recognisable likeness; but, if a print from this picture—or, better still, any number of them—is mounted on a rotating disc of similar radius, and, while in rotation, viewed through a small aperture, the effect of the motion is to foreshorten the picture in the direction of the transit, and reproduce it in due proportion."

I reproduce Mr. Wenham's observations because some aspiring inventor may derive from them a hint as to the point from which the problem of stereoscopic animated photography may be attacked. To me, however, the extract is chiefly interesting from the fact that, over forty-five years ago, Mr. Wenham appears to have attempted the adaptation of photography to zoetropy, and that to him belongs whatever credit may be due for being the first to suggest the combination.

X.—Conclusion.

I am obliged, by exigencies of space, not only to leave several branches of my subject without mention, but to confine my remarks within narrow limits; hence I trust the reader will forgive the somewhat fragmentary nature of these chapters.

As I remarked at the outset, this branch of photography is probably still in the very early stages of development.

It has not been altogether in favour of its progress and perfection that its adaptability for entertainment purposes forced animated photography, practically at its birth, into the hands of those who supply the public with amusement. The sudden demand for films and projection apparatus was not favorable to the production of the best photographs and the means wherewith to make them, and the consequence obviously was, that innumerable pictures were shown all over the country which had many defects.

The problem of providing a noiseless camera and projector, which does not destroy the film at its perforation, and abolishes vibration and flicker in the projected images, is one with which, in all probability, only a highly skilled mechanician can cope. I do not despair of seeing some of the apparatus extant at the present moment (November) much improved upon, and the most cogent reason for my optimism in this regard is that there is just now the keenest competition going on among many skilled mechanical engineers and others to secure a degree of perfection in the working parts of apparatus for animated photography such as has not hitherto been achieved.

Finally, it appears to me this branch of photography is destined to have something more than a transient existence, and that, as an adjunct to the optical lantern, as a means of preserving records of scenes and occurrences, and for scientific and entertaining purposes, we have only just commenced to tap its possibilities.

New England Notes.

T. H. Kintry has opened his reconstructed Dreamland Theater, Bellows Falls, Vt. This house has been remodeled to meet the requirements of the times and is now large and spacious.

New Power's Cameragraph No. 6 has been installed in the Ward Street Theater, Brockton, Mass,, by McCue & Cahill, the proprietors and managers.

Hathaway's Theater, Brockton, also owned by Messrs. McCue & Cahill, has installed a stock company in place of the pictures and vaudeville which have been shown.

George D. Mackay has recently been placed in charge of the new Colonial Theater, Nashua, N. H. Mr. Mackay brings a good record with him, both as a manager and writer. Several of his playlets have been successfully produced.

The Colonial Theater, Lowell, Mass., has been temporarily closed, and expects to reopen soon.

The Empire Theater, Lowell, is now running moving pictures only, with neither vaudeville nor illustrated songs. The admission fee has been reduced to equal the reduction of the performance.

Hathaway's Theater, Lowell, Mass., has been closed temporarily. Manager Shannon gives out a report stating that he has found so much difficulty in procuring good vaudeville acts to be used in connection with his picture program that he has been forced to close for a short time in order to straighten things out. Some impartial observers state that the reason might be found in the ante-holiday dullness, and the very strong competition of the Merrimack Square Theater, also showing moving pictures and vaudeville in Lowell.

The entire proceeds of the Scenic Temple, East Boston, for Wednesday, December 21, will be given to the Lyman School fund. This work is commendable. For one thing it is charity; for another, it certainly brings much advantageous advertising to the theater.

The Hudson Opera House, Hudson, Mass., was recently closed owing to defective heating apparatus. The house has been under lease to Messrs. Barton & Murray. There seems to be quite a little story about this closing. This Opera House is owned by Messrs. Coughlin & McNamara, of Clinton, Mass., and leased from them by P. J. Gallagher of the Boston Amusement Company. The latter sub-leased it to Messrs. Barton & Murray. The latter may institute proceedings against the Boston Amusement Company in that the company leased them a theater containing no heating apparatus which is adequate, and are not willing to install any new heating arrangements.

W. J. Nelson, manager of Portland office for the Boston Film Rental Company, has returned from a trip through Maine and New Hampshire, and reports a successful trip. Managers all report business excellent. Mr. Nelson said that he was receiving his share of the business, and by giving the exhibitor constant attention and arranging programs to suit their patrons, his success in that locality is assured.

BOSTON, MASS.

The World is again vindicated as regards the daily change abuse. Much has been written in the World concerning that absurdity. The following is practical proof of the fact. The Theater Comique, Tremont Row, which has for approximately eight months been changing their films daily, has recently reverted to the policy of three changes weekly. Thus in one short sentence an important fact to all exhibitors is noted. The Comique, one of Boston's oldest, best known, and most prosperous moving picture houses, after giving the idea a long, fair trial, found it a poor plan. It shows conclusively that this change daily mania is not a money maker. Let exhibitors throughout the country who read these columns, take warning and thus avoid trying a very costly and useless experiment.

Manager Appleby of the Star Theater was caught within the iron grip of the law. Boston has a new law which makes expectorating on sidewalks criminal. While on business at the City Hall, Appleby attempted to expectorate in a cuspidor. His intentions did not equal his aim, and a watchful officer nabbed him. He paid a fine of $5. The boys at the General Film Company, whence Appleby's films come, are a great bunch of "kidders," and up to date, six cuspidors have been presented to him. These squibs were written on them: "Take this one to bed with you, it will save you money while you sleep!" "Carry this one around your neck; use it when expectorating!"

A local Boston operator, Harry McQuarrie, has brought considerable attention to himself, due to the fact that Eugene Farnsworth, the noted lecturer, has signed a three-year contract with him to do all operating work. Mr. Farnsworth delivers lectures, aided by moving pictures and is considered one of the best in his line. His itinerary includes both North and South America, Mexico, etc.

We were glad to note that at least one Boston moving picture house is giving more time and attention to the illustrated song. A miniature airship was floating in the lobby of a local moving picture house, with a Teddy bear at the wheel. This novel advertisement was made to feature, "Come, Josephine, in My Flying Machine," an illustrated song—or rather a "pictorial ballad," as they are now termed. Exhibitors are awaking to the fact that the illustrated song is an important part of the moving picture theater; and needs care and attention.

It has been stated that the Back Bay Theater, Dartmouth street, will soon reopen under new management. The house was recently closed by order of the sheriff, as was noted in these columns.

The Globe Theater, Washington street, has reverted back again to its regular dramatic attractions. It is wondered whether the Premier and Unique Theaters will raise their admission prices to the 10c. which was asked before the Globe made its last quick change to moving pictures and vaudeville.

The ante-holiday dullness in all theatrical lines reached Boston moving picture houses. Managers gave out bad reports of business, but, as they stated, it was the same thing last year at this time.

Frank L. Browne, formerly manager of the Pastime and Beacon Theaters, Boston, and since August, general manager of the Old South and Washington Theaters, has tendered his resignation to take effect at once. The cause of Mr. Browne's resignation from these two theaters is laid to lack of harmony with certain stockholders of the corporation.

ANOTHER GOOD SUGGESTION.

Moving Pictures in Railway Depots.

At the recent meeting of the Exhibitors' League of Ohio, held in Columbus, a movement was started to introduce theaters in railroad stations where the time of the train can be shown on the slides and report whether it is late or not to the waiting audience, who would drop in to see the show to put in the time. It was urged that depots would be very profitable places for moving pictures, and M. A. Neff, president of the League, has already started negotiations to have theaters installed in three of the largest union depots in the country, and expects to install one in the Union Depot in Cincinnati when that becomes a fact.

"It is a far look ahead," said Mr. Neff, "but some day the League hopes to have a picture show on trains, along with observation cars, the libraries, barber shops and other luxuries furnished the passengers to pass the time."—Cincinnati "Enquirer."

Department Rule Card.—The editor of this Department has, on a number of occasions during the past year, called the attention of Mr. Wynkoop, who has direct charge of affairs pertaining to the examination and licensing of operators, to the fact that it is neither rhyme, reason, justice or common sense to threaten to take away an operator's license in event he violates any of the rules of the department in his operating room, while it is a practical impossibility for the man to find out what the rules of the department are. Whether this has caused the action or not, I cannot say, but anyhow, the department has just issued a heavy cardboard placard about 16 x 18 inches, designed to be tacked up in each operating room. On the card is printed the law under which operators are licensed, and certain information and rules, in part as follows:

"An applicant for moving picture operator's license must fill out, under oath, a blank form of application, which may be obtained at the registry office of the Bureau, Room 1717, Park Row Building, Borough of Manhattan, New York City. It is no longer required that the applicant shall appear in person to register. . . . Examinations will in all cases be conducted in the presence of at least two examiners, who will endeavor, through observation as well as questioning, to ascertain the candidate's competency, by testing his practical knowledge of the following subjects:

"A. The handling of the head, lamp, appliances and wiring.

"B. Wire sizes and insulations, and the various house wiring systems.

"C. Testing for voltage and for electrical defects in lamp and wiring.

"D. The use of the various safety appliances, mechanical and electrical.

"E. General precautions to be observed in operating moving picture apparatus and its connections.

"Examinations will be held each Monday, beginning at 10 a. m., at Room 2333, Park Row Building. Extra days will be designated for holding of examinations, if found necessary.

"No candidate who fails to pass an examination will be re-examined within three months of the date of his last unsuccessful examination.

"A certificate, which shall also serve as an indentification card, will be issued as promptly as practicable to each person who shall have passed the prescribed examination.

"The Commissioner reserves the right to revoke or suspend a license for any of the following causes:

"Failing to display operator's certificate where moving picture apparatus is being operated.

"Making of false statements in the application for license.

"Smoking, or permitting smoking, in the booth at any time.

"Permitting any fire or open light in booth while audience is in the building.

"Allowing the door of booth to remain open while operating.

"Permitting an unlicensed person other than the manager or an authorized city official to be or remain in the booth while audience is in the building.

"Having more than three films per machine in booth at one time.

"Having any film exposed in booth at any time, other than the one film in process of transfer to or from machine or from upper to lower magazine.

"Allowing films to be rewound in booth while machine is being operated.

"Over-fusing, or making improper electrical connections.

"Lending a certificate to any other person, to enable the latter to operate.

"Failure to test apparatus and connections prior to each performance.

"Operating a defective machine.

"Operating a machine of a type not approved by the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity.

"Maintaining a dirty booth.

"Latching door on inside, removing handle from outside of door or otherwise delaying access of authorized persons.

"Operating or assisting in the operation of any picture machine apparatus employing a lamp served by oxy-hydrogen or acetylene gas.

"Failing to report promptly to the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity the occurrence of any film fire, and the apparent cause thereof."

These placards will be distributed in the immediate future. I believe they can be obtained even now by application at Mr. Wynkoop's office.

A certain obscure publication has branded as false my recent statements that all cards issued during 1910 were good for one year from date of issue, regardless of how the card itself might read. I wish to say in this connection that this information was given the editor of this Department personally by Mr. Wynkoop, who reiterated it no longer ago than Tuesday, December 20. It is to be presumed that Mr. Wynkoop knows what he is talking about, probably better than does our beloved friend Mr. Saunders.

Velvet Curtains.—H. W. Wolff, manager Lyric Theater, Sacramento, Cal., orders a handbook and favors us with the following: "I have read the Trouble Department with the greatest interest ever since its beginning and can conscientiously say I know of no more reliable assistance to perplexed operators and managers than it has been. I recently noticed an inquiry concerning satin curtains. Inquirer asked if anyone has had experience with them, and with what result? I have for some time been using an aluminum curtain with excellent results, but was recently persuaded to try a satin screen instead. By allowing two feet of the picture to extend over off the satin and on the aluminum I found that my old aluminum curtain showed the picture to at least one-third better advantage. On the satin curtain, however, a snow scene, or any similar light scene, showed up very beautifully—restful to the eyes—a result not to be attained with the aluminum, which, in such pictures, shows the mark of the paint brush and reflects a light so intense as to be disagreeable in a picture lasting any length of time. There are not enough such pictures, however (snow scenes, etc.), to justify the expense of purchasing a satin curtain, the first cost of which is considerable, and in all other pictures I found my aluminum screen the most desirable.

"I prepared my 18 by 20 foot aluminum screen as follows: I used common sheeting as wide as I could get. To 2 lbs. of best white glue, thoroughly dissolved in warm water (Neighbor Wolff doesn't say how much water), I added two pounds of aluminum bronze, stirring constantly. After the bronze was mixed with the glue I added one tablespoonful of glycerine. This preparation must be applied warm, and I found it necessary to re-heat it several times in the course of painting the curtain, as the aluminum rises to the surface as soon as the preparation begins to cool. In applying this paint, care must be taken to paint in one direction only, otherwise the brush marks will be visible and the result will be a very unsatisfactory curtain.

"I have been in this business for the past 15 years and helped organize Local No. 162 of San Francisco, and Branch No. 2 of Sacramento. As I said before, I have been more than ordinarily interested in your Department and wish it were so we had a man on the Coast to give us the benefit of expert criticism as you have done in the East. To the operator or manager desirous of improving, such criticism could only be a stimulus for increased efforts."

I am, of course, very glad, Neighbor Wolff, that you like the Department. My whole endeavor has been and will be to make it of really practical value. I do not care anything about big words, scientific formulas or niceties of grammar. My endeavor is to make the Department of practical worth to the operator and manager, and I am indeed thankful that there are so many who say I have succeeded in that effort. My earnest wish is that it will be of more benefit to the exhibitor and operator in the future even than it has been in the past. On behalf of our readers I cordially thank you for your information concerning the satin curtain and aluminum screen.

Lamp Leads.—From Salt Lake City comes the following: "Friend Richardson: I noticed in The Column recently, an article regarding the burning off of lamp leads. I take pleasure in sending you my remedy which I have used for the past three years. I have not burned off, in all that time, more than three or four. This largely comes of the fact that I have a habit of going over my connections every day to see that they are tight. I believe that is the reason a great many operators have trouble with their leads. If they would watch carefully, never allowing connections to become loose, the wires would not get hot and burn off so readily. Conditions here are pretty bad at present. Operators are only getting about $21 for seven hours a day, but we hope to improve that in a short time. I wish for yourself and the World a Merry Christmas and a happy and prosperous New Year."

Many thanks to you, Salt Lake City, for the sketch, which requires no special knowledge to determine that it is entirely practical. Your practice of looking over connections daily is most excellent—most excellent indeed. You are, however, wrong in one particular. Copper when subjected to the action of heat has a most decided tendency to oxidize. The fine strands of asbestos covered cable present a very large outer surface as compared to their area, and the oxidization, therefore, eats into them with great rapidity, soon very largely lessening their carrying capacity, and it is this fact that is, to a great extent, responsible for the leads burning off. By this I do not wish to be understood as saying anything against your looking over these connections every day. It is something every operator ought by all means to do; and once each week he should take all connections apart and clean them thoroughly, particularly where the wires join the binding posts of the rheostats and lamp. I trust Salt Lake operators will be able to obtain better salaries and better conditions in the near future.

Framing the Title.—From Chehalis, Wash. (R. N. Wheeler), comes the following: "Friend Richardson: I received your Handbook in good condition and will say that it is a dandy. If such a book had been put out years ago, moving pictures would not to-day be spoken of as the 'flickering drama.'

"I notice an article from an operator who looks through his projection lens to frame his picture when threading. Would like to offer my method. On receiving your films see that your leader is patched in frame with title. In threading up, set the patch on the bottom of the aperture opening. You will find that with one day's practice you can get it right every time without any trouble at all. Set framing lever central and examine every patch, to be sure they are made right and you will be surprised to see how much better your picture will be. I believe you get the best results by setting your framing lever central when threading. All reels should be carefully examined. It takes a couple of hours to do this and see that all patches are in good condition and made right, but it pays in the long run.

"Ashland has a good idea for his rewind. Here is mine: I have a small rewinding bench just big enough to clamp the rewinder to and put it on front wall of booth, close enough so that you can rewind and run the machine at the same time. Have your film storage can directly underneath it and as soon as the firm is rewound, open your film storage can door. Stand on your left foot and put your right knee under the reel full of film. Pull the gear pin and catch the reel on your knee; then put it in the can. Start your gear pin in again enough to hold it so it won't drop out, but so you can slip in your empty reel; then put your right knee under empty reel, put the pin in and catch the reel as before. Put your fingers into the holes inside of the reel and with the bottom of the hand push the gear pin in enough to hold it. Then turn the reel around until the keyhole in the reel is on top and shove the pin all the way in. This is a very long explanation, but it is all right after you catch on to it and there is no noise of the reel dropping on something."

My dear boy, that is easy—mere child's play, in fact. All the operator has to do is turn the crank, watch his picture, manipulate the lamp, handle a reel full of film, shove in a pin and perform a few other stunts. Such laziness is positively degenerating. I do not see any reason in the world why that operator cannot tie a broom to his left leg and sweep out the operating room while he is doing [illegible] other [illegible] things. Chehalis, I have given space to the description of your [illegible] stunt, but, frankly, I do not think anything of it at all. That man never was born who can do two or three things at the same time and do them all well. When the man who is running the operator has absolutely no business at all doing anything but attending strictly to the projection of his picture.

The Handbook.—Princeton, N. J., inquires as to the contents of the Handbook. He wants to know if it explains how to tell the focus of condensing lenses, etc., how to go about measuring films and how to remedy breakdowns. He also wants to know if I could recommend the Taylor School and if a position is guaranteed when course is completed. Continuing, he says: "I see Elwood, Pa., is having trouble with ghost in picture. Would suggest that his trouble consists in not using the right focal length of condenser."

As regards the Handbook, you will find a list of its contents in a recent issue of the World. It teaches you how to find the focal length of condensing and other lenses. It teaches you how to prevent breakdowns as well as how to remedy them. It tells you also how to measure films.

As to the Taylor School, I can recommend the course to any man who will come here, attend the school, stay long enough to master the details of the business and apply himself to good, hard study. The man who does that and who is of ordinary intelligence most certainly will get his money's worth and will leave the school fully equipped with the technical knowledge necessary to good projection. Mr. Taylor also gives students as much practical experience as they desire in the larger operating rooms of New York City, every student being given the opportunity of working as helper in an operating room as long as he wishes after the course is completed.

THE SEASON OF INCONSISTENCY

An Interesting Cartoon.—Duluth, Minn., comments on a recent article in the Department entitled "An Outrage," of which same article he thoroughly approves. He also sends in a cartoon that will be found in another portion of the paper this week. In this cartoon the policeman (Board of Censorship) is seen tacking up a sign, "Moral Pictures Only," over the doors of a moving picture theater, into which are entering the children of the poor, that being about the only amusement they and their parents are able to purchase in these days of high cost of living. Adjoining it is seen one of the large theaters with the sign over the door, "Salome," and a crowd of plug hats passing within. Comment is unnecessary and the cartoon could scarcely be more forcible. It has the virtue also of portraying the absolute truth. Dirty and filthy, suggestive plays, such as "Salome," are nightly paraded before the Knights of the Stovepipe Hat and their wives, daughters and children. But be it noted that these same "Knights of the Silken Tile" set themselves up as heaven-appointed guardians of the poor, and hold up their hands in holy horror at the frightful scenes (?) thrown on the curtain of the "silent drama." Piffle and punk! Somewhere I have heard that people who live in glass houses should be careful about heaving stones. Also that it is always well to clean your own dooryard before you rubber over into your neighbor's and make too many comments.

The Handbook.—From our good friend Walter Turnpaugh (Fort Worth, Tex.), who announces in a mighty nice letterhead the fact that he is "The Picture Show Man of Fort Worth! Steadiest, clearest, brightest pictures. Electrician, mechanical expert and A-No. 1 manager," comes the following: "Your Handbook received and am very well pleased with it. It is something out of the ordinary and exactly what I have been looking for for a long time. I wish to say for it that no enterprising, up-to-date manager or operator should ever think of being without it."

Please spare our blushes, Mr. Turnpaugh, and accept our thanks for your kind words.

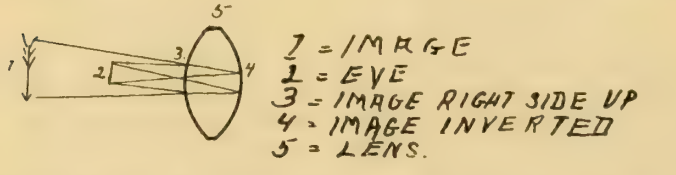
Power's No. 6 Trouble.—Mr. H. A. Wachter, manager Edisonia Theater, Lancaster, O., sends in for the Handbook and inquires: "What is the best exhaust and circulation fan to buy? I am using a Power's No. 6. When I frame picture below center, the machine makes a loud grinding noise. When framed at center or above center it runs very smooth. Must oil cup on machine show oil all the time? How many oil holes on the Power's No. 6? I sometimes think operators miss oiling some parts."

The Kimball Electric Company fan is a good article, but you should specify that the fans be equipped with General Electric motors. As regards the Power's No. 6, I would recommend that you see to it that the sliding bar, behind the flywheel, on which the small idler gear rides, fits snug in its ways. If it is loose, tighten the two set screws in the edge of the front way, back of the large gear wheel. Do not get these screws too tight, however, or the framing lever will work hard.

The only oil holes the operator is at all likely to miss would be the one back of and beside the shutter shaft, which has a tube, the one next the oil casing on the intermittent shaft and the one just above it on the cam shaft. Also he should be sure to oil the small gear on the sliding bar before referred to. Use heavy engine valve oil or vaseline on the gears of this machine.

That Lens Matter Again.—From my good friend, A. W. Crowe, Watertown, S. D., comes the following: "In the World of November 12 you gave me a problem of the image in the aperture opening reflected on the back of projection lens right side up. I would have answered at once, but thought I would see if any brother operator would have anything to say about it At first I thought that you were trying to 'kid' me a little and still I may be wrong in my idea of the matter, as it is easy to prove yourself wrong in this refraction of light rays at your very next experiment.

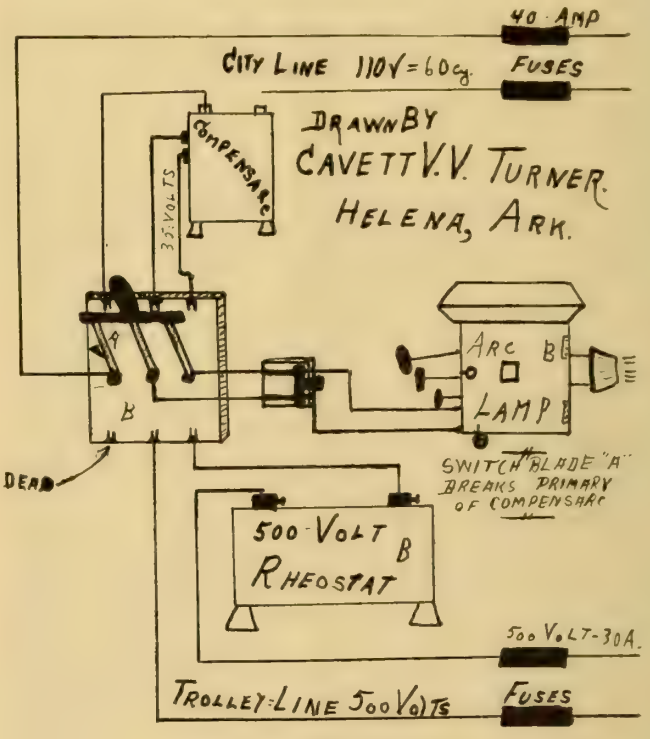
"Here is what I think causes the image to be right side up: It is the reflection of the image against the concave surface of the lens (see enclosed drawing). Now I think this has nothing to do with the projection of the picture as it is only a reflection as from any highly polished glass surface. Take a watch crystal and hold it so as to reflect the image is right side up; now turn it around so as to look into the concave side and the image is upside down and only one image, as with the lens you have two, one right side up and the other bottom side up. Now, brother, tell me what you think of this."



Friend Crowe, I refuse to be interviewed. I was not trying to "kid" you at all. Really, the worst trouble the Editor of this Department encounters is that on questions of this kind he has not the time to make extended experiments. By the time he attends to the correspondence of this department, lectures an hour every day, inspects and passes on from 10 to 15 moving picture mechanisms, answers fifteen to twenty personal letters and performs a few other stunts on the side, the time for examining closely into questions of this kind is somewhat limited. I made some short experiments into the matter some time since and found some things that looked queer. I am patiently awaiting a promised article from the Bausch and Lomb Company, and I wish they would kindly take note of that fact because I am not the only one who is waiting for that article by any manner of means.

* * *

Three-pole Switch Connection.—From Cavett V. V. Turner, Helena, Ark., comes the following: "I am a regular reader of the Moving Picture World and have noted a number of sketches therein regarding T. P. D. P. switches for two sources of current for the operating room. Enclosed find drawing for a moving picture machine with three P. D. T. switch for using either 110 volt D. C. or 500 volt D. C. Of course, a D. P. D. T. switch would answer the purpose, but by using a three-pole switch the extra blade will control the primary of the compensarc and prevent same consuming current in the core and windings while the 500 volt current is being used. You will note that the other two blades of the switch break the secondary of the compensarc. The 500 volt circuit is only used in case of emergency, but the sketch will prove valuable to any operator who has both circuits in his booth. The idea is an original one of my own."



I publish Friend Turner's drawing for the reason that it contains some features slightly different from others heretofore published. I would suggest, however, that the sketch has one very bad feature, namely, that the rheostat is at all times "alive" and charged with a voltage of 500, which would make it more or less dangerous. It would also be necessary to install a secondary switch on transformer side in case one wished to do any work on it. Many thanks for the submission of the sketch, and I hope Friend Turner will accept my criticisms with good grace.

Electrical Books.—Portland, Ore., orders a handbook and inquires: "Does your Handbook contain anything on electricity? If not, can you refer me to some good book that does not go so deep that a beginner cannot master it?"

The book, Portland, contains elementary instruction in electricity. As to such an electrical work as you desire, it is a very hard thing to find. The only thing that I know of that I consider of much real practical value to the beginner are certain text books of the International Correspondence School, but they cannot, I believe, be obtained without taking a course which costs $40 to $50. The trouble is the kind of instruction desired by the operator is, in nearly all electrical works, either conspicuous by its absence or else too fragmentary or too technical to be of value.

Operator Wanted.—Alabama (name of town suppressed) has asked me to supply him with a first class operator: The man must be A No. 1; salary $25 per week of seven days. I have sent Alabama the name of one man whom I had cause to believe would fill the bill. If he does not, I should like the names of other men who can prove their ability by a record of performance in the past. Nothing else goes. Alabama may be satisfied with the man already proposed, and he may not. In any event, I should like to have the names of a few first class men, since calls of this kind are likely to come at any time.

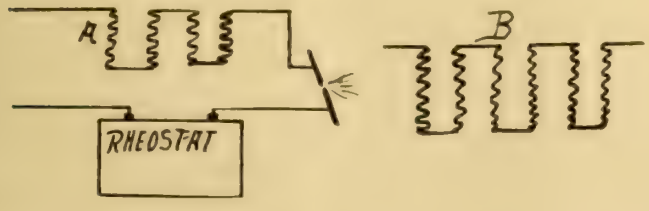
Resistance Problem. Medicine Lodge, Kan., submits the following: "I find your Handbook to be a great help in my business, but there has arisen one question which does not seem to be covered and my partner and I are having trouble in settling a dispute about it and have failed to come to any definite conclusion. I am writing you for your opinion, enclosing 10 cents to cover your trouble and postage. We are using A. C. 110 volts and one of Edison's coil rheostats. I used all resistance except two coils and got a good light, but when I cut all the coils in my light was not so good. I was away for a week and during my absence my partner got an idea in his head that in alternating current the flow went back and forth the same on both wires, and inasmuch as a rheostat was installed on one wire only one side was getting any resistance. He therefore wound four or five coils of wire and cut it in on the other side (or line), thinking it would balance his current. Now, here is something that seems funny to us. Before cutting those coils in, I had to cut out two coils of resistance. Now I use all of the Edison resistance and also the resistance of "A," and seem to get as good results.



"Will you please answer the following: Does it make any difference as regards a steady light or better current by having a rheostat on each wire, or are we trying to imagine something that is not true? We are not electricians and are seeking information.

"Now, here is another question: I take a piece of wire, say 100 feet in length, and wind it into coils (or a coil). Will the resistance be any different than if the same wire be stretched out straight? Do the turns up and down (see 'B' in sketch) have anything to do with resistance? The idea I received from your book is that it is the metal which resists the current, not the turns it makes, but the people here try to tell me that the turns it makes creates the resistance, and I want to know what is right. The question is: Both pieces of resistance wire being 100 feet in length, the same size and material, one made up into coils and the other stretched out in a straight line, what difference is there in resistance, and if there is any difference, why?"

In the first place, Medicine Lodge, 10 cents would not pay for the stenographer's time in writing the answer to your letter, to say nothing of my own. I, therefore, answer you in the usual way, through The Column. Personal replies are only given when $1 or more is enclosed.

Your first question has me considerably puzzled. There is something twisted in your statement somewhere. The greater amount of resistance you cut in, the less current you get. It doesn't make any difference which wire you have your resistance on, nor would it make any difference if you had half of it on one wire and half on the other. On page 4 of the Handbook you will find a description of alternating current and a synopsis of its action. Alternating current flows first in one direction and then in the other. You will readily see that no matter which way it may be flowing, it has to pass through the resistance (rheostat), whether it be all on one wire or divided up and placed on both. What I do not understand, though, is this: You say, in effect, that you were getting a good light with two coils of your Edison rheostat cut out. Then you proceed to say that you cut in the other two coils, and in addition cut in 100 feet of resistance wire on the other line and still got the same light. That, my dear sir, is a physical and electrical impossibility. There is a colored gentleman concealed somewhere in that particular woodpile. If our readers can offer any suggestions as to what the solution of this matter is, let them stand forth and be heard. The winding up of the resistance wire into coils has a little effect with alternating current, inasmuch as the coiled wires set up a magnetic field, which operates to some slight extent to reduce the current over and above the reduction effected by the metal of the wire itself. This, however, is not of sufficient amount to be given consideration (possibly 1 volt additional drop). There would be very little difference between 100 feet of resistance wire stretched out straight and 100 feet coiled up in the usual manner. If the current were D. C. there would be no difference at all. The turns, as seen at "B," cut no figure at all.

An Address Wanted. J. W. Jack, Vancouver, B. C., writes: "I notice in November 12th issue in the Trouble Department an article on gaslight by Mt. Pleasant, Utah. Could you let me know by card, or through the Department, what kind of an outfit Mt. Pleasant uses, or could you give me his address so I could write him personally, as he seems able to produce unusually good light? Your operators' Handbook has been duly received and I am much pleased with it."

The mass of correspondence is so large, Vancouver, that only that which there seems some likelihood of being needed for reference is kept for file. I cannot find Mt. Pleasant's letter and would request him through The Column to forward his address at once to Mr. J. W. Jack, Vancouver, B. C.

Next!—Ottawa, December 6, a newspaper clipping says: "Enlisting officers for the Navy find that of a large number of men offering on both coasts, 75 per cent. are rejected because of the cigarette habit or moving picture eyes."

I have heard of goo-goo eyes, and various other varieties of "lamps," but the moving picture eye is a new one. Next!

Operators Licensed.—From Youngstown, Ohio, T. A. Kelty writes: "Dear friend Richardson: Find enclosed newspaper clipping concerning the matter of licensing operators in this city. Projection in Youngstown is poor but improving. I received your Handbook in due time and find it very beneficial. If every operator had one you would not have to work so hard on the Trouble Department."

The newspaper clipping referred to reads: "Fire Chief W. H. Loller and Building Inspector C. C. Knox, committee who examine those desiring licenses as moving picture operators, have concluded their labors and have announced that sixteen have passed, as follows: James S. Thomas, S. Bevan, Jr., Ole J. Myers, Eugene Welsh, Steven K. Goffey, Oreste Olivieri, William Daley, J. J. Piatt, Isaak Dietelbaum, John J. Smith, Tod A. Kelty, Clyde Ruth, J. Cullinan, A. J. Rochell, Meade Alexander and Homer C. Burr. These young men have all been given their certificates."

Now will some kind soul tell me what in the name of heaven a fire chief and a building inspector know about examining a moving picture operator? Why in the name of common sense didn't they at least have one operator on that examining board? Do you think a railroad company would have its superintendent of bridges and its chief of detectives examine its locomotive engineers and pass upon their qualifications? Not on your merry-go-round—not in four hundred thousand years. But as soon as a moving picture operator is to be examined our wise, wise, wise law-makers or officials proceed to select as examiners a chief of police, who knows as much about moving picture operating as the editor of this Column knows about the New Jerusalem, or some other gentleman equally proficient along some other line of human endeavor than motion picture operating. It is to laugh!

Tension.—Jacksonville, Fla., writes as follows: "Can you tell us any way by which we may determine when the tension springs are set just right? That is to say, is there any rule by which the proper amount of tension may be determined?"

The best method I know of of setting the tension springs or telling when the tension is just right is as follows: Suppose you are running along at 60 feet per minute. You increase your speed suddenly to 65 or 70 and under the increased movement you see the picture move up slightly on the screen, sagging back into its original position when the speed is again decreased. This is an evidence that your tension is too weak, and you may utilize the idea in setting your tension. Loosen the tension springs until the above phenomena occurs and then gradually tighten them until they are just stiff enough to prevent the picture moving up on the screen under reasonably increased speed. Your tension will then be just right. With some tension springs it is quite difficult to do this, but with care the feat may be accomplished. The matter of tension is one of extreme importance to which too little attention is usually paid.

Another Film Cement Formula.—Neighbor Richard F. Foote, Archibald, Pa., writes: "Enclosed find check for Handbook and Announcement Slide Outfit. Have noticed request in Trouble Department for film cement formula: a small piece of blank film, say about an inch and a half long, cut in fine strips and dissolved in a half ounce of acetic ether makes a satisfactory cement. Acetic ether lists at about 60c. per pound."

On behalf of our readers I thank you for the receipt, friend Foote. I take it this cement is for inflammable film only?

* * *

Several Things.—From North Carolina (name of town suppressed) comes the following: "Enclosed please find $3.50 in payment of your Handbook and for subscription to the World. I am the owner of an Independent theater in this city called 'Joyland,' and am at present making extensive improvements in same, increasing my seating capacity from 200 to 400. I have a side throw like the enclosed sketch which I can use, only I have no way to test out the focus on the left of the screen. Can you advise me if there will be any material effect? I can, of course, get perfect focus by placing screen on right angle with throw, but this will not look well from the floor. Am getting splendid results with Independent pictures, and wish to publicly boost such pictures as 'The American and the Queen,' 'Thann,' 'Delightful Dolly,' 'Fairies Hallowe'en,' 'Robinson Crusoe,' 'Starlight,' 'Women of the West,' and others of the same ilk.

"But why do not the producers, when they have a letter in picture, employ someone that can write legibly instead of the scrawl that most pictures have, one-half of which cannot be read?

"I am running on A. C. with rheostat connected up with an old Westinghouse compensator, current being about $40.00 per month for seven hour show. Have about 20 sixteen c. p. lights, 110 volts. Do you think a compensarc or a Hallberg would reduce my current?

"I shall have a throw of about 47 feet. Can I get a picture 10 by 12 with this throw? I now throw about 52 and get picture 8 by 10. What is the best support for an Edison machine, so as to do away with vibration?

"Do you think a dark maroon color for side walls of wood, with burlap wainscoting will affect the light on screen? What is a good color for wooden ceiling?

"Will painting the frame around screen black improve the picture? I pay my operator well and expect good results, and have gotten them so far. I do not believe in economy in the operating room. Trusting that I have not imposed upon your time, I close, with best wishes for, and appreciation of your Department."

As regards Independent film, it is steadily and rapidly improving in quality; that is beyond the question of a doubt. Above all things, however, the Independents are in need of better perforation and (whisper) I think that there is a surprise in store within the next two months on that particular proposition which will perhaps place Independent film on a par with the best so far as perforation goes. I do not know this to be the fact, but I have examined an embryo perforator now being perfected by one of the leading manufacturers in that class of mechanism and it certainly looks as though it would deliver the goods. It is radically different from anything the writer has seen in the way of a perforator.

No, I very much doubt if you can save anything if you are only paying $40 per month for current for a seven-hours-per-day show. I would consider that very reasonable indeed, and I do not believe I would do any experimenting on that proposition unless the party selling you the new appliance would guarantee either a reduction or a material improvement in your present projection light. I am of the opinion that you would be very unwise to attempt to project a picture on a 47-foot throw, locating your operating room as is shown by sketch. I very much doubt if the result would be at all satisfactory. You can get a 12-foot picture at 47 feet, or even a much larger picture than that, but on those short throws it is difficult to get sharp definition except with very small pictures. When you add to the difficulty by as heavy a side throw as is indicated in sketch, I would say that the result would be, to say the least, very doubtful.

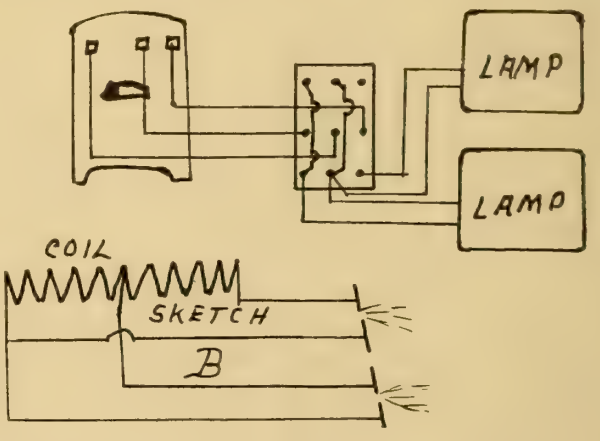
Dark maroon for side walls will be all right, so far as the picture is concerned. I would have the ceiling some very much lighter shade of a harmonizing tint. Some good color schemes were given in The Department a week or two ago. I would not have the wood painted with a gloss, but have the paint mixed about half oil and half turpentine. That, however, only expresses my own individual preference. Yet, outlining the picture with black (dry black, not glossy) materially brightens the picture, but the black should be brought right up to the outline of the picture to get the best effect. Where rolling, drop curtains are used it is well to have one for the moving picture and one for the stereo, each painted with non-gloss black right up to the outline of the picture or else covered with black cloth. Many operators set their machines on a brick, or concrete pier built on the operating room floor. The weight of the pier effectively eliminates vibration. Anchor bolts for machine and lamphouse must be set, of course, as the pier is built. Use pressed brick, white enamel glaze, set in cement, with round nose brick at corners.

You are talking good, plain, hard common sense when you say you do not believe in economy in the operating room. By this you, of course, mean you do not believe in false economy—a thing the writer has been fighting for lo! these many moons. Good management means the best of everything in the operating room. You are pursuing the right course in paying your operator a good salary and then demanding good results. Would that there were more like you!

Machine Cost.—St. Joseph, Mo., promulgates the following query: "Friend Richardson: I find it impossible to get a standard, late model projection machine outfit for less than $225.00. I do not know whether there is a machine trust or not but they all seem to demand exactly the same figure, which looks like it. It seems to me $225.00 is too much for such an outfit and I would like very much to have your opinion on that point."

My opinion on a proposition of that kind could not be of much value since no matter what I might say it would have absolutely no influence in bringing about a change. I have, however, a most decided opinion and it is that the figure named is not too high but, on the other hand, is altogether too low. I would much prefer to see projection machine outfits listed at $400 to $450. I have more than one reason for saying this. In the first place, if machines sold at, say $450, the margin of profit would be such that manufacturers could put out a really strictly first-class, high grade machine, a thing which is impossible of performance at present prices. In fact it is marvelous that they succeed in doing as well as they do for the amount of money involved. In the second place, if Mr. Exhibitor had in his operating room a machine that cost $450 or perhaps two or three of them, he would not be quite so keen to place it, or them, in charge of a $12 a week imitation operator. In the third place, if equipment were more costly, the butcher, baker and candle stick maker would not be quite so ready to jump into a game concerning which he has absolutely no knowledge at all. I think, St. Joe, this fully answers your query.

It Won't Work.—Detroit, Mich., contributes the following: "As regards Brother Nagorsky's three-pole connection for a Power's inductor and combination dissolver, I do not like his idea of connection in series, for the reason that in throwing his switch from Side No. 1 to Side No. 2, he would put out the bottom lamp and then in order to light the top one he would first have to re-light the bottom one, or at least he would have to freeze both sets of carbons and light both lamps. If he wishes to use a three-pole connection I would suggest he do it as per enclosed diagram, which doesn't put the lamps in series."



Your diagram, Detroit, reminds me of the Irishman's engine. Pat had invented a new kind of steam engine and when it was finished called in his friends to view the masterpiece. Everybody admired it and congratulated Pat upon its beauty. "Yes," says Pat, "'tis a foine engine entirely. Sure 'tis a bir-rd, ut is! They do be only wan trouble wid ut—the dom thing won't run!" That expresses the situation exactly. Your plan, Detroit, is a mighty fine plan, the only trouble with it is, it won't work! In effect, you have produced a condition shown in Sketch "B," in which one lamp is run at very high voltage the other one at low voltage, half the coil loaded quite lightly and the other half overloaded. The practical result is that when you light one lamp the other one immediately proceeds to go out. I publish the diagram in order that none may attempt to wire a combination transformer that way.

I have noticed a tendency among some pianists to play to the details of a picture rather than to the story itself. While I do not wish to pose as a taskmaster to those who are conscientiously endeavoring to fit their pictures correctly, I must again point out the importance of carrying out the general impression which the story is intended to convey. Our photoplays are often composed of short and rapidly changing scenes and at first glance an alert mind will frequently note the most conspicuous object and give it an unmerited prominence. He thus throws his picture out of balance and destroys an impression he might otherwise have retained. I am speaking particularly of those stories which are on the sympathetic order. The music is an important factor in these, and can help or mar the picture according to whether it is applied correctly or incorrectly. To make my meaning clear, I will cite as an illustration a recent release "A Dixie Mother." In the first part of the story (which is laid in the time of the Civil War) one of her sons is killed. The father vows eternal hatred to the North. After the war is over the other son marries a Northern girl and is thereby cut off from his parents. These incidents all develop toward the one point, viz.: the spartan mother's pride has kept her silent, though her heart is hungry for her boy. Later she receives a letter saying her son and his wife are waiting at a nearby station, asks for a reconciliation, and that a carriage be sent for them. The father refuses, but finally, unknown to her, he relents and drives away. The next scenes alternate quickly, showing the despairing and half crazed "Dixie mother" and the carriage on its way; its arrival, the meeting between the father and son, the return trip and the arrival at home. This journey is shown in a number of scenes, and after each one the mother is shown. The whole picture is full of pathetic Southern tunes, and when it comes to this latter part of it your audience should be keyed to that pitch where the tears come easily. From now on keep them there. Run a plaintive from the letter scene until she comes into the room where the old cradle stands. Change to the theme you played in the first part when her dead boy was brought in ("Massa's in the Cold Ground" will answer) as her memory has gone back to those days, and hold this theme to the finish even though the intervening scenes are of a different character. The meeting between father, son and daughter-in-law may not look pathetic, nor the drive forth and back, but you are not playing to them; they are only details whose sole value lies in their relationship to the central idea. You are playing to the "Dixie mother" and all the interest about her must be sustained; a stop or a change in the music would break this tension, which is something you have been trying to hold throughout the latter half of the picture. At the "tag" or finish of the picture you may change your music or simply swell to forte without change as you see fit. It is immaterial.

"The Lesson," though not so deeply emotional, is worked along similar lines. You open the picture with something of a quasi-plaintive character ("Apple Blossoms" will do) which will play until the son's return home. Pause until he enters room of his father. Pathetic until the sister finds him in barroom. Agitato for the struggle, then pathetic till finish of picture.

The points I am trying to bring out are these: don't pay too much attention to the little details and accessories of a picture unless they have an important bearing on the scene or the story. Rather, try to grasp the impression the picture is intended to convey and give that all the assistance you can. I saw a picture last week wherein one scene opened showing an empty chair in the foreground. Though the most conspicuous object in the scene, this chair had no more to do with the story than the clock on the wall, yet because it was so plainly visible the musician switched to the "Vacant Chair." Had this chair been placed there to suggest a dead or absent one, and had the action carried out this suggestion the music would have been correct. As it was, it was absurd. Another instance I heard when the judgment was at fault—this time it was playing to the costumes of the characters instead of the action of the play. The story introduced a couple of Spaniards in a prominent way and their presence was always a signal for a Spanish waltz or habanero, with tambourine and castanets. In the lighter scenes this was all right enough, but in some of the dramatic scenes it was wholly out of place. One does not usually associate dance music with either a fight or a death bed—though had the characters in question heard this particular music they might have fought and died in earnest. A priest was hearing the confession of a dying woman, and because of her Spanish dress the castanets clicked all through the solemn scene. These instances are bona fide. There is no need to mention where I heard them as such things are of too frequent occurrence. It is only another instance of observing unimportant details and overlooking the essential points, errors which every ottenest among those who are sincerely trying to work up their pictures correctly and really believe they are succeeding.

* * *

I am in receipt of a letter from C. J. Alden, Orpheum Theater, Bisbee, Ariz. Brother Alden believes in the superiority of the orchestra over the piano in working up pictures and he speaks of his own experience. I am sorry I cannot quote the letter as it is a lengthy one as well as interesting. However, he makes two points which I will hand out to the constituency. I quote his words: "It must be remembered that there can be but one leader in the pit and he must be the pianist." And again: "I was instrumental in placing the orchestra in the Royal Theater, also the Orpheum, in this city. The orchestra was tried as an experiment in both places, and now neither manager would be without one." Good work, Brother Alden. As to your first assertion (as herein quoted) it all depends. W. L. King, manager of the Orpheum Theater orchestra, Chicago, has two violinists (Messrs. Kipkowsky and Teller) each of whom "dopes out" the picture on his own shift, and their work looks pretty good to me. At that I believe your method would work out best in most cases. I would like to hear from some of the rest of my readers and learn what they think of it.

AGAIN—VAUDEVILLE.

In the French fables of Lafontaine, so full of good moral lessons, we find one of "the thieves and an ass." Two thieves stole a donkey and while they were fighting to know who would ride the animal, a third thief appeared and stole the donkey.

It is about what we have in motion pictures. While the Motion Picture Patents Company are fighting the Independents to know who is going to have the business we find a third party in the shape of vaudeville houses, killing the pictures.

The American Music Hall in Chicago is offering twenty-two vaudeville acts, a solid three-hour show; and the Orpheum of Cincinnati is offering eighteen vaudeville acts.

In other cities we will also find similar competition. It would seem that certain vaudeville managers have decided to kill the motion pictures if they have to lose money for the time being. The vaudeville managers will never pardon the moving picture exhibitors for having lowered vaudeville to 5c. and for having encouraged a lot of cheap and worthless actors to make their way upon the stage.

We are sorry to compare motion pictures to the fable, yet the characters are not unlike those represented by Lafontaine, and the shrewd reader will be able to draw his own conclusions.

We have made several appeals, directly and indirectly, for relief from this menace to the picture. We have a letter from a licensed manufacturer who writes that vaudeville should be divorced from motion pictures, yet we see no efforts being put forth. Why? Because the minds of both the licensed and Independent manufacturers are so busy scheming against each other that they have no time to watch the common enemy. Each faction hopes to win and, when master of the situation, to reform the abuses. Is it wise? Will it not be too late?

THE "POLICE GAZETTE" ON THE SCREEN.

(By a Well-Wisher of the Picture.)

I am, I suppose, one of a numerous class who, while taking an interest in the moving picture as a form of agreeable entertainment, being in fact simply an ordinary member of the public, yet try to get a little closer to the heart of things than most of my fellow members of the picture-going public. This will explain why it is that I am a reader of your journal, which, though it is written exclusively for trade use, contains, I think, much that would interest the picture-going public. It is usually so readable that it deserves a large sale in every moving picture house in the country.

Two articles in your last number attracted my attention, and I carefully read them. The one headed, "Christmas on the Screen," seemed to me to state a cause, namely, the film makers' indifference to the real requirements of the public; the other article, written by your correspondent, "Lux Graphicus," stated an effect of that cause, namely, the assumed decline in the popularity of the moving picture.

As one of the public, I do not go quite so far as "Lux Graphicus." He writes, it looks to me, from an inside knowledge, consequently his perspective is somewhat violent. I have no direct interest in the matter; and I cannot see any distinct signs that the picture is losing its hold. You and your staff, however, are, I admit, better judges than a mere outsider. If, therefore, it be the case that the picture is on the decline, I do not think it would be difficult to assign several causes for its failure.

With your permission I will cite one or two evidences of some symptoms that are at work in a direction not favorable to true progress. Mr. Harrison, in the same number of your paper from which I am quoting, had an article entitled "Managerial Stupidity." With his permission I would like to paraphrase his headline, and write of "Manufactorial Stupidity."

Sympathizing with the desire of the Independent manufacturers to gain a footing in the business, I have followed individual manufacturer's progress with great interest, and in particular I have watched the efforts of the Reliance films. I have obtained some copies of their publication entitled, "Film Fancies." In the November 19 number I read an article which undertakes to explain why moving pictures retain public favor, and why, weighed in the scale of supply and demand, these pictorial playlets give biggest value of anything in the world. In the same number of "Film Fancies" I read the plot of a Reliance film called "So Runs the Way." I quote literally, and hope you will print the extract as I give it:

"A maelstrom of human emotions—love, hate, jealousy, anger, vengeance, despair. The vanity of the poor bank clerk's bride and the covetousness of the cashier for the beautiful woman fling the characters upon a stream of life which whirls them to destruction.

"The plot is startling and amazing. To remove her husband, anguished by her perfidy, she connives to cast suspicion of theft upon him, sending him to a felon's cell, and securing a divorce, marries the guilty cashier.. Removal from humble surroundings to a palatial residence fans to a glowing heat her burning desire for costly raiment and glittering gems, and her new husband is forced to greater and greater defalcations. Still not content, she accepts presents of jewels from an admirer, and when bitterly reproved she taunts the cashier to a frenzy of madness in which he takes her life. Then follows the arrest—the examination of the books—the confession and conviction, and the bowed, manacled entrance into the penitentiary, where a dramatic meeting takes place with the clerk, his innocence established, is about to be relieved of his prison garb.

"There are many scenes of intense dramatic interest—the theft of the bonds—the prison life—the convict's escape and recapture—the coquettish conquests of the woman, etc., etc."

As a well-wisher of the picture, I do not think this kind of story is calculated to advance either the interests of the Reliance Company or those of the moving picture as an entertainment. The story belongs to the dime-novel kind. It deals with the seamy side of life. It is lurid, sensational, unhealthy, unnecessarily exciting, and hardly the kind of literary fare which, if put out in book form, I would place in the hands of young children who form such a large percentage of the patrons of moving picture theaters. Still another Reliance film is called "When Woman Wills," and is so described in "Film Fancies":

"The experience of an unsophisticated girl for whom a trap was laid by a young roue. The intervention of a wealthy, honorable man, incensed at the diabolical plot, extricates her from a distressing dilemma. The winsomeness and purity of the maid win his love. Later, as his wife, and holding a deep affection for him, her rural prettiness transformed by culture and magnificent raiment into dazzling beauty, she wreaks havoc with the heart of the rake who sought her ruin and crushes him with an avalanche of scorn, excoriation and ridicule, in the presence of her husband."

Surely, Mr. Editor, any story, whether in book or film form, which deals with an "unsophisticated girl transformed by culture and magnificent raiment into dazzling beauty, and wreaking havoc on a man," is not a particularly edifying example of womanliness to hold up for approbation. This sort of thing strikes me as being the essence of ultra-sensationalism. I deprecate its dissemination by picture makers. Are there not other and less innocuous subjects open for them to choose from for their pictures without diving into the tainted records of Mulberry street?

W. H. J.

[Our correspondent would have no cause for surprise at the unsuitability of the film stories he condemns if he were aware of the mental equipment of those responsible for their production. The descriptive matter he quotes comes from the hand of the man who, when he had charge of a Chicago publication, used all the invective at his command to denounce and deprecate the very form of film story which he is now exalting in his capacity as a house organ hireling. Such a person is naturally incapable of appreciating good, clean, wholesome, simple stories. Then again, the responsible minds behind these Reliance films have not been prepared either by training or experience for such delicate work as the production of photoplays. These people are under the delusion that mere expenditure of money and blatant house organ advertising are efficient substitutes for literary and artistic judgment, and an appreciation of public requirements, in the making of suitable moving pictures. "The cobbler has not stuck to his last." There are a number of people who have mistaken their vocations and entered the realm of art and literature with the dismal result that they entirely fail to exclude their own personality from the pictures made and sold under their direction. That is why pictures of the type adversely criticised by our correspondent are produced and why the business in general is suffering from the deplorable condition. The two plays outlined above reek of the minds of those who make and sell them. Here we do not include the artists who play the parts. They may and do have better motives. They are capable of better things, but cast in the wrong environment, their efforts are worse than wasted.

It would, in our opinion and in that of others, be vastly to the interests of the business as a whole if the ignorant and mercenary elements which are creeping into the manufacturing end of it were eliminated. Public sentiment will revolt against such stories as "So Runs the Way" and "When Woman Wills."

We have hesitated to comment on these films because our motives might have been misconstrued as an excuse of "sour grapes;" but when the grapes are really bad and have disagreed with our correspondents—exhibitors and spectators—it is our duty to give voice to public opinion. We have praised the acting, the staging and the photography in many of these films—the work of the skilled artisan and the trained actor. It has been a matter of regret to us that we have not been able to give equal commendation to the stories and sentiments of the pictures.—Eds. M. P. W.]

MOVING PICTURE INQUIRY IN NEW YORK CITY.

Commissioner Fosdick Expected to Advise Special Legislation.

Commissioner of Accounts Fosdick will report to Mayor Gaynor at an early date on the investigation which he has been conducting into the moving picture business. The Commissioner said recently that he did not care to discuss the matter until his report was prepared, but inferred that he will recommend several important changes in the methods of city supervision.

It is known that the Commissioner has brought out evidence sufficient to show that the conditions under which the moving picture business is conducted in this city are bad from sanitary, moral, and other points of view. It is expected that he will recommend the enactment of a special law by the Legislature to deal with this business, having found that the theater, tenement house, and common show laws do not entirely cover the situation.

The Commissioner continued his investigation of the Board of Elections, and brought out further evidence of laxity in the examinations for election officials. It is understood that he will call the members of the Board as witnesses before the end of the week.—The New York "Times."

KINEMACOLOR DEMONSTRATION IN BOSTON.

Written Expressly for the World by Henry.

On Friday evening, December 16, 1910, an exhibition by the Kinemacolor Company of America of moving pictures in the color of nature was given under the auspices of the Appalachian Mountain Club at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Boston, under the personal direction of Gilbert H. Aymar, a former Bostonian.

The exhibition was attended by nearly 2,000 people, all fire laws being disregarded, owing to the unusual amount of people wishing to see "the eighth wonder of the world" as some call it. It must be distinctly stated that the audience was practically wholly comprised of scholars, students of photography, professors of botany, etc. It was one of the finest and most learned audiences ever present at a moving picture exhibition in this city. The trade was not in evidence at the meeting. Therefore, it must be remembered that the very great majority of those present were interested in Kinemacolor as a photographic marvel—not in its practical value to the moving picture industry.

Mr. Aymar exhibited these pictures: "Floral Fiends," showing heath, chrysanthemum, gladiola, etc., in their natural colors; "Motor and Yacht Boating in England;" Lake Garda, northern Italy; "Farm Yard Friends;" "Scenes in Algeria;" "Biskra and the Sahara Desert," and "From Bud to Blossom." In some respects the World's New England representative was greatly pleased with the exhibition. The colors were most exquisite and life-like, and gave a hint of what moving pictures may some day become. But we noticed some faults in the process, of sufficient gravity to make it doubtful whether, at the present stage of the process, it can be of practical use to the moving picture theater. The films were very hard on the eye. The features of such people as were shown in the pictures could not be easily made out. Their general outlines and characteristics were plain enough, but the minute reproductions of their facial expressions were at no time easily made out. The pictures seemed hazy, as if a light, filmy covering of some sort were upon them. During the course of one of the films, Mr. Aymar had the picture stopped, and the plain black and white version of the same picture was shown. The relief to the eyes was extraordinary. The process at present is of intense interest to the trade as showing what we will have when Kinemacolor—or some other process—has reached perfection. At present it is of intense interest and value to botanists and students of photographic phenomena. But to the trade, looking at it from a purely practical and commercial viewpoint, much must be done with the Kinemacolor process, before it is available for trade usage. Throughout the exhibition the colors red and green greatly predominated, with purple hardly ever shown. Orange, mahogany colors of all shades, were well reproduced.

Mr. Aymar answered many questions which were asked of him by the audience during the course of the evening. From the questions it could easily be seen that they were asked by students of photography, not by ordinary moving picture people. Mr. Aymar gave the most concise explanation of how moving pictures are taken and exhibited that it ever has been our good fortune to hear. The audience was absolutely lavish with its applause, which was bestowed very generously on each film. We noticed that the films were shown on a light blue sheet, not the usual white screen as is usually in use. We wish to state that the World's New England representative made a nuisance out of himself in order to question some of the audience as regards the criticism he has written. The points mentioned in this review were upheld by those questioned, otherwise we would not have presumed to criticize the process. Kinemacolor is the best effort as yet to reproduce a moving picture in the natural colors which is of practical and commercial value to the trade. But it is not the last word on the subject.

SALESROOM FOR EDISON KINETOSCOPES AND REPAIR SHOP IN NEW YORK CITY.

Harry A. Mackie, who is well and favorably known through his twelve years' connection with the moving picture, has been fortunate in securing the exclusive agency for Edison Kinetoscopes in New York City. He has opened offices in a most convenient location at 853 Broadway, corner of Fourteenth street, where he will carry a complete line of Edison machines and all parts for same. A repair shop will be a feature of Mr. Mackie's business, where operators can obtain first aid to decrepit machines—and get it prompt and well. He also carries a full line of parlor and professional stereopticons and opaque projectors of the well-known Williams, Brown & Earle manufacture.

FLICKERS.

Good morning, have you used parcels post?

* * *

From guard duty on a scab taxi to censoring films is not considered too much to expect of a New York cop.

* * *

Did you ever hear of the "vaulting ambition that overleaps itself"? For further particulars write Mr. Adams Ex. Wells Fargo Ex. United States Ex. American Ex. and a few others.

Perhaps in a few years you will see the "ex" in front instead of behind.

* * *

The Mayor of Marion, Ohio, has directed the police to allow nothing but soft pedal pictures.

* * *

Picture makers who go to aviation meets: if you can't come home with five or six flyers on a negative you might as well stay at home.

* * *

After reading a few lengthy articles in quasi financial magazines, on how to start a picture palace on $500 and run it at a profit of 1,000 per cent., we feel like getting in on the ground floor ourselves.

* * *

The preachers who declare it wrong to compel actors to work seven days a week without rest are evidently not conversant with certain periods of rest in the actor's life, known as "open time" and "laying off."

* * *

Extract from speech by Edward H. Chandler, secretary Twentieth Century Club, before the Mothers' Club, Boston, Mass.—"Moving picture plays, like 'Peter Pan' and 'Blue Beard,' which are especially adapted to children, are few and far between."

By all means let us have a film of "Blue Beard" and the twenty gory wives hanging by their necks, including the addition of the twenty-first, for the children.

* * *

Having seen moving pictures entered in the stock market reports of the Toronto "Globe," and observed them lined up in the same column with Atchison, B. & O., N. Y. Central, copper, smelters, St. Paul and the rest of that bunch, you will pardon us if you have noticed anything "stuck up" about us of late.

A HUNCH.

Profiting by the lesson told in a thrilling safe blowing drama in his moving picture establishment, at 268 West Forty-fifth street, New York, Herman Bauer took home all but $20 of his receipts Saturday night. When he reached his theater the next morning he found that burglars had forced an entrance to the office safe and stolen everything of value.

A JOKER.

Henry Fishbeck, whose moving picture place is at 91 Newark avenue, Jersey City, came around to the City Hall police station and said that he had been robbed. He hired a picture machine operator on trial Saturday afternoon, he said. No, he didn't get the fellow's name, but he looked all right.

YES—HOW DID THEY KNOW?

Incidentally, one cannot help wondering how the deaf-mutes who made the unpleasant discovery of swear words in moving pictures acquired their proficiency to read that particular kind of language so readily.—Albany (N. Y.) "Journal."

THAT YOUNGSTOWN LICENSE.

Those exhibitors who think they have to pay high license ought to congratulate themselves that they are not doing business in Youngstown, Ohio, where the moving picture houses are taxed $3 a day, or approximately $1,100 a year. To our present knowledge, that is the highest license for moving pictures in the world. What does the exhibitor get from the city in return for it? Answer—Nothing. In fact, less than nothing, because aldermen's families are notorious dead-heads, especially on Saturdays, Sundays, or holidays, when the showman needs all the space he has got.

HANDBOOK OF MOTION PICTURE PROJECTION
By F. H. Richardson.
Cloth bound, $1.50. Postage free.

NESTOR

"Rarely Equalled—Never

Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men

Nestor Films to Exhibitors and Exchange Men!

Wind up the old year with

"ELDA OF THE MOUNTAINS"

For Release Wednesday, Dec. 28th, 1910 Length, 930 Feet

2 TO THE FORE

ALWAYS WELCOME!

Nestor Pictures are always welcome on our program.

A. L. BERNSTEIN,
Penn Theatre,
169 Penn Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

NEVER A BAD ONE!

I think a lot of Nestor Films; have run many of them and never found a bad one.

B. A. RADABAUGH,
Palace Theatre, Hartford City, Ind.

2 MORE

BEST OF ALL!

Our patrons say that Nestor Films are the best of all.

ST. DENIS THEATRE,
Queen St., W., Toronto, Ont.

Scene from "Elda of the Mountains"

LIKES TO GET 'EM!

I get Nestor Films and like to get them.

M. W. McCLUNG,
Gem Theatre, Salem, Mass

EXHIBITORS!

We are not going to say much about "ELDA OF THE MOUNTAINS" as we do not wish to spoil so good a picture with words words, words! READ the synopsis of the storiette, remembering the while that synopsis do not a picture make. The thing to do is to GET THIS FILM! Place your ORDER NOW and make it IMPERATIVE!

REMEMBER THE NESTOR RELEASE OF

Wednesday, January 4th, 1911

"AT CEDAR RIDGE"

It's a Veritable Jewel!

The early bird catches the worm! If you don't want to miss this Bird of a Picture, ORDER NOW!

For Bulletins Synopsis, and other advertising matter, write to "NESTORLIST 1004", 147 Fourth Avenue, New York City.

DAVID HORSLEY, German Savings Bank B

FILMS

rpassed—Often Imitated"

NESTOR — MADE BY DAVID HORSLEY — FILMS

Let The Past Bury Its Dead!

IF YOU'RE ON this progressive list, firmly resolve to STAY ON

IF YOU'RE NOT on, GET ON this very instant and STAY ON!

IT PAYS TO BE ON THE LIST OF

EXCHANGES BUYING NESTOR FILMS

For Release Wednesday January 4, 1911

"At Cedar Ridge"

A Western Jewel in a Magnificent Western Setting

LIST OF EXCHANGES:

Albany Film Exchange	418 Broadway, Albany, N. Y.
Anti-Trust Film Exchange	79 South Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.
Applegath, L. J., & Sons	145 Yonge Street, Toronto, Ont.
Bijou Film and Amusement Co	1222 Grand Avenue, Kansas City, Mo.
Boston Film Rental Co	665 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.
B. & W. Film Exchange	412 East Baltimore Street, Baltimore, Md.
California Film Exchange	1065 Mission Street, San Francisco, Cal.
Canadian Film Exchange	Calgary, Alberta, Vancouver, B. C.
Capitol Film Exchange	422 North High Street, Columbus, O.
Central Film Service Co	119 N. Illinois Street, Indianapolis, Ind.
Chicago Film Exchange	48 Jackson Boulevard, Chicago, Ill.
Cincinnati-Buckeye Film and Projecting Co.	309 Arcade Building, Dayton, O. 315 West Fourth Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.
Consolidated Amusement Co	Rhodes Building, Atlanta, Ga.
Co-operative Film Exchange	320 Atlas Block, Salt Lake City, Utah.
Eagle Film Exchange	43 North Ninth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
Empire Film Exchange	150 East Fourteenth Street, New York City.
Dixie Film Co.	503 Chamber of Commerce Bldg., Birmingham, Ala.
Gaumont Co.	Montreal, Que.
Globe Film Service Co	107 E. Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.
Great Eastern Film Exchange	21 East Fourteenth Street, New York City.
W. E. Greene Film Exch. (Inc.)	28 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.
H. & H. Film Service	8 Jackson Boulevard, Chicago, Ill.
Independent Film Exchange	415 Ferry Street, Pittsburg, Pa.
Independent Western Film Exch.	Swetland Building, Portland, Ore.
Laemmle Film Service	196 Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.
Laemmle Film Service	1517 Farnam Street, Omaha, Neb.
Michigan Film and Supply Co	1106 Union Trust Building, Detroit, Mich.
Pacific Film Exchange	Globe Building, Seattle, Wash.
Paramount Film Co.	428 Ninth Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.
Philadelphia Film Exchange	34 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
Standard Film Exchange	155 Washington Street, Chicago, Ill.
Swanson-Crawford Film Co	723-734 Century Building, St. Louis, Mo.
Swanson, W. H., Film Exchange	301 Railroad Building, Denver, Colo.
Texas Film Exchange	311 Elm Street, Dallas, Tex.
Toledo Film Exchange	319 Superior Street, Toledo, O.
Victor Film Service	Prospect and Huron Streets, Cleveland, O.
Western Film Company	108 E. 4th Street, Los Angeles, Cal.
Western Film Exchange	307 Enterprise Building, Milwaukee, Wis.

THIS WEEK'S ADDITION:

United Film Company.....Troy, N. Y.

For Release Wednesday January 11, 1911

"Sleepy Hollow"

A Picture That Will Make You Sit Up And Take Notice

One Nestor Out Every Wednesday!

NESTOR FILMS are distributed through THE SALES CO.

ling, 4th Avenue, and 14th Street, New York

"The Police Force of New York" (Edison).—A good picture of some of the phases of police life in New York. It is a good companion film to the one illustrating the mounted police of the Northwest. It gives an accurate representation of the drill and the actual method of working. The first picture showed how a small body of men control a relatively large territory. This one is almost the opposite, showing how a large body of men cover a relatively small territory, though really the second city of the world. The scenes showing how traffic is controlled will interest those who have actually seen it and others who have not. The others are none the less interesting and perhaps novel to many.

"The Greater Call" (Essanay).—The story of a mother who became an actress, leaving her child behind; but years after, when it was supposed the child was dying, she listened to the greater call, forsook the stage, even in the midst of a play, and went to the child's bedside, to see her recover. The picture is emotional and dramatic. The actors have performed their parts with sympathy and discretion, but it does seem improbable that the woman should refuse to heed the call all those years and then depart so unceremoniously. Perhaps this was done to increase the dramatic effect, and if so it succeeds admirably. The other actors simply assist. The leading woman in this instance is the whole picture.

"His Cinderella Girl" (Gaumont).—The fairy story of old translated into modern action. A nephew comes home, but because he looks poor he is ill-treated by his uncle's family. He discovers in the slavey another cousin subjected to the same unhappy conditions. He makes love to her; she is summarily discharged, and then he announces he will settle upon her his vast fortune. Of course there is consternation, and of course the young people live happily ever after. There isn't much dramatic strength but the picture has many elements of interest.

"The Kingdom of Flowers" (Gaumont).—A collection of rare hothouse flowers in vases turning upon a pedestal. The stereoscopic effect of the picture is unusual, and that combined with the marvelous coloring make an unusually charming picture. It would be difficult to conceive anything more delicate and artistic.

"The Light in the Window" (Vitagraph).—A girl refuses to marry a young man because her parents need her care. He goes away to sea, and for years she keeps a light burning in the window for him. Long years afterwards he returns, finds her waiting and marries her. A pleasing drama, made so largely by the fact that the couple are eventually united. The dramatic interest of the picture is not injured in any way by this happy ending, and it is much more satisfactory to see faithfulness rewarded in this life than it is to think of it as having to wait until the next.

"The Joke They Played on Bumptious" (Edison).—Some club men worked upon Bumptious' imagination until they made him believe he was intoxicated. When he was apprised of the fact he turned the tables by appearing actually intoxicated and smashing all the breakable things in the place. The first part of the picture is funny. There is a delicate humor in making Bumptious believe he is intoxicated, and his actions, including his facial expressions, are funny. The last part is not so good. It partakes of the slambang order, quite out of harmony with the delicately humorous first part. It would have been quite as funny for Bumptious to appear badly intoxicated, emitting war whoops, and making the jokers care for him, as it is for him to smash everything in the place. That partakes too much of the rough house and does not add to the fun. In this picture the fun is in the acting, not in what the actor does. The film would be improved by changing the ending so as to eliminate the slapdash and break part.

"The Little Spreewald Maiden" (Kalem).—Miss Gene Gautier appears in a German play, part of which is in Germany along the Spree, and part in America. It involves the fortunes of a little German girl who comes to America as a nurse girl and shortly educates herself to take an office position, in which she is so capable that her employer proposes to her. She refuses because she has promised Hans, who was left behind. Going home she finds Hans has courted another girl, and withal the old home is so primitive and forbidding that back she comes to America, into the same office, and shortly the employer proposes again, this time successfully. The picture will please, first with the sympathetic acting of Miss Gautier and next by the picturesque scenery along the Spree. The American scenes are characteristic and typical and will be recognized as accurate. Wherever there are Germans this film should be popular.

"The Runaway Motor Car" (Pathe).—What happens to a man who undertakes to operate a car. It runs away with him, finally exploding, hurling him many feet. Then when his promised horseless carriage does arrive it is not a motor car at all. The explosion is sensational and the close is a laughable comedy.

"Max Goes Ski-ing" (Pathe).—A comedy representing the difficulties of a novice in this uncertain sport. The picture is devoted to a series of illustrations of his awkward attempts to master the skis and ends with a rousing snowball battle in which the village boys are making it lively for the unfortunate Max.

"The Tyrant of Florence" (Urban).—A story of the times when a tyrant's word was law, and because a certain family did not bow to his hat, as he directed, the father and mother were condemned to death, but the daughter was spared. Years after she succeeds in ingratiating herself with the tyrant, merely to be avenged for her parents' death by putting poison in his cup. The acting and staging are no doubt accurate reproductions of the times and the people. While the story may be interesting because it contains much of history, it will be somewhat unintelligible to a larger proportion of any audience.

"The Chamois Hunt" (Urban).—A reproduction of a chamois hunt, showing the chamois themselves feeding and the way the hunters operate in getting near enough to shoot them. The pictures of the almost inaccessible fastnesses of the mountains add much to the interest.

"A Tenderfoot Messenger" (Essanay).—A Western story turning upon the cleverness of Shorty Blair, an express messenger, who assumes to be a tenderfoot and outwits a gang of desperadoes that follow him for the package of money he carries. Nell, the daughter of the hotel proprietor, in return for a slight kindness, informs him of the scheme to rob him. He is able because of this to escape by means of a window, and ultimately get the drop, as they say, on the entire gang, relieve them of their arms and lead away their horses. The play has some thrilling scenes, especially the one where he holds up the whole gang, and the audience is visibly pleased when he escapes. It is a novelty to see him scatter the pistols along the road, as well as their horses. Meanwhile the discomfitted highwaymen congratulate themselves that the wily agent didn't turn them all over to the officers when he had them unarmed and at a disadvantage.

"Herod and the New Born King" (Gaumont).—An illustration of the first part of Chapter II of the Gospel of St. Matthew. No more beautiful and artistic film has been shown during the year. Every scene is a marvel of accurate representation. The scene which Hoffman has so graphically portrayed as the "Repose in Egypt," is one of the most impressive ever shown on a motion picture screen. An extended review of this film appeared in the Moving Picture World two weeks ago. It would be impossible to add anthing to what was there said. It depicts the search of Herod for the new born King and details the flight into Egypt to escape his jealous rage. A reading of that chapter in the Bible will supply a synopsis more graphic than any that could be written now.

"Saved by Divine Providence" (Pathe).—The story of a little boy lost by his parents and adopted by a poor woman with whom he lives some years until she dies, then he is forced to go into the streets and pick up his living as he can. He is taken in by some newsboys and given a share in their home under a pier. He sells papers on the street, and having finished he wanders into a church. While dozing there a vision of Christ appears and comforts him. His mother enters his nursery at this time, undisturbed since he left it, and as she dreams Christ appears to her and in a series of visions shows where her boy is so plainly that she

"THE SIGN OF THE FLYING A"

FOUR AMERICAN WINNERS

Perfect Photography Perfect Plots
Perfect Production

Monday, December 26th

Girlies

COMEDY

A comedy of three girls and three men; young, frolicsome and funny.

Monday, January 2nd

Mrs. Gaylife's Visitors

COMEDY

An American "screech." A comedy of errors.

Thursday, December 29th

The Squaw and the Man

DRAMA

A Western drama of the Apache country. A masterpiece.

Thursday, January 5th

The Tenderfoot's Roundup

COMEDY

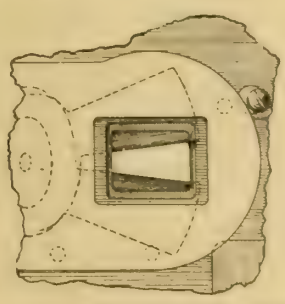
Bucking Bronchos; real ranch life, and oh, so funny.

THREE Comedies, including one Western
ONE Drama made in the real West

Ask your exchange to book you these American films

AMERICAN FILM MFG. COMPANY
BANK FLOOR, ASHLAND BLOCK, CHICAGO, ILL.

Our films sold exclusively through the Motion Picture Distributing and Sales Co.



THE REASON WHY

THE MOTIOGRAPH

Projects a much better picture than other machines is because it is the only one with a

Patented Double Cone Shutter.

This shutter does what others will not do because it shortens the time by two-thirds on both the opening and closing of the aperture.

The result is a much more brilliant picture and no flicker to tire the eyes.

No Other Machine Has the Double Cone Shutter. It is Patented and Belongs to the Motiograph Exclusively.

Remember the Motiograph has proved that it will outwear other machines. Send for our catalogue.

Manufactured and Jobbed by ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. CO., 564-572 West Randolph Street CHICAGO, U. S. A.

J. H. HALLBERG, Agt.
36 E. 23d Street, New York City

EDW. H. KEMP, Agt.
833 Market Street, San Francisco, Cal.

J. F. BROCKLISS, Agt.
London, Paris and Berlin

is able to find him. The story is well told and at this season it makes a deep impression upon almost any audience. But the old question arises about the good taste of having the vision of Christ such a prominent feature. An angel could have been utilized quite as well for the purpose and would have prevented any possible feeling of sacrilege. While in this instance the vision is managed with discretion the impression cannot be dispelled that it is out of place.

"A Dixie Mother" (Vitagraph).—A story of the Civil War embodying all the most important sentiments, the love of country, the love of home, the love of mother and the love of wife. It is a somewhat complicated story, involving the death of a young Southern man at the hands of a party of Union soldiers, and the love of a Union officer for the sister of the slain man and the marriage of a brother of the slain man with a Northern girl and the parents' refusal to be reconciled to the North and the changes that war wrought in their family. The picture contains many elaborate dramatic scenes, but the most affecting are those where the mother receives a letter that the son is coming home with his Northern wife, which is followed by the father's refusal to see them. But the cradle and the knowledge that there is a grandson to fill it softens his heart, and in one of the most touching scenes ever put on a motion picture screen the family is reunited, and, as the little one grasps the flag all the sentiments stated at the beginning are so strongly depicted, that they make an impression which leaves scarcely a dry eye in the audience. The Vitagraph people have achieved a success well worth while bragging about in this production. It would be difficult to improve upon it.

"The Lesson" (Biograph).—At one time the Biograph Company had quite a reputation for sermons. Here is one which has much of the original flavor, representing a young man disobeying the wishes of his father, a minister, to become a preacher; sinking lower and lower until just as his father dies he kills a man in a saloon brawl, and but for the plea of a sister would have been taken to prison, even as his father died. Whatever may be thought of this type of picture individually, the power it exerts upon an audience cannot be questioned. Like the horrible examples graphically shown in the goody goody Sunday school books these films possess a fascination which cannot be denied, yet perhaps few would care to acknowledge its influence. The dramatic attractiveness in this particular instance consists in reproducing a domestic scene, unhappily too common, in some of its aspects at least, in such a way that the events seem to be transpiring before the audience. It is a graphic and impressive illustration of the commandment to honor, which means obey, one's parents.

"The Dead Letter" (Lubin).—A love story having as its principal motif a letter lost for twenty-five years. The letter was sent to call back a lover, who, misunderstanding a young woman's attitude left her abruptly. Long years afterward it was discovered by a nephew of the man among some old letters sent to the dead letter office from a building where they had been lost. It was not too late to make up for part of the loss at any rate, and the couple were happily reunited. The details of the picture are worked out with considerable care and a semblance of the flight of time is given by the change in looks and environment. The incident of the love affair of the nephew of the man and the niece of the woman adds one more interesting touch. The audience was visibly pleased.

"Get Rich Quick" (Pathe).—A somewhat graphic account of the machinations of a gentleman who made his money by the deception of others. Eventually he is discovered at his nefarious business by his daughter's fiance, but when he returns his ill-gotten gains the matter is patched up and no exposure follows. It is all quite conventional, even to hushing up the matter. Undoubtedly the picture was made for some purpose, but it would be difficult to determine just what. It contains little of interest and it does not appeal to the emotions in any way. This being true it seems like a waste of good film to make it.

"Hunting Sea Lions in Tasmania" (Pathe).—The average outdoor picture by this house is a joy, and the one under this title is no exception. It brings a distant land to the fireside of thousands and they are able to enjoy a sport as novel as it is exciting. The mechanical work has been done with care and the picture cannot fail to excite interest.

"John Dough and the Cherub" (Selig).—A delightfully complicated fairy story with witches and elves, and fairies and prophecies galore, each appearing in unexpected places and performing unexpected stunts. Such a film is hard to describe since its peculiar attraction lies in actually seeing its surprising combinations.

"Old Norris' Gal" (Melies).—A Western picture affording opportunity to depict the character of a plucky young attorney who defied the liquor power and brought offenders to justice, regardless of personal threats. A love story is interwoven which adds to the interest, but the best part is the scene where the young man hangs over a precipice at the end of a rope under which a fire is burning. Unless he retracts and promises not to prosecute further he will drop to the bottom. But he refuses and just before this catastrophe occurs the sheriff and his posse arrive. The evildoers are taken into custody, the young man wins his fight and the girl and the story ends happily. There is plenty of action and excitement and a disposition to develop the most the situations hold.

"The County Fair" (Selig).—Here is the famous drama which has charmed hundreds of thousands transferred to the films with all the favorite characters retained. It is all there, just as it used to be when Neil Burgess played Aunt Abby so successfully and Taggs rode Cold Molasses to victory and won the purse that paid off the mortgage on Aunt Abby's farm. No manager will make a mistake by featuring this picture.

"His Sister-in-Law" (Biograph).—Two sisters love each other very much. They vow that nothing will separate them, but the elder one gets married and although the little one is invited to make her home with the young couple she finds herself very much in the way and returns to her aunt. Not much of a story; in fact, there is no story, and that is just where this picture silhouettes itself out from the usual thing and gives us the consoling thought that the era of the picture is not on the wane and the illimitable field of subjects has yet been barely scratched. Yes, there is still hope when a picture maker can take up such a threadbare theme and build upon it a twenty minutes' panorama of human emotions so deftly portrayed and so enthralling that at the end the blase audience in the old Union Square Theater breaks into loud applause. There is no straining after effect, simply skillful portrayal and natural action. Only in the closing scene is there any strong appeal to the emotions, when the lonesome child discovers the baby in her sister's arms and is requested to stay with the new playmate. It is a beautiful picture.

"The Musical Ranch" (Lubin).—A comedy representing a variety of musical geniuses upon a Western ranch. The honors go to the man who couldn't play anything yet succeeded in winning his lady's favor by the introduction of a phonograph.

"The Red Cross Seal" (Edison).—An interesting picture because it tells a story about the little red seal that seems to make it more of a personal appeal than ever before. The story of the girl's sacrifice, after her struggle and victory, make her final reward seem all the more righteous. Then comes the description in graphic pictures of the conditions which breed consumption and the means by which modern science is fighting it. And the little seal which indicates that you have done something to help in the fight costs only a penny. The company has worked out the dramatic portion admirably, and it is, perhaps, well worth while that the explanation of conditions and illustrations of means for preventing and curing are made so plain. Pictures of this class should not be restricted in circulation, neither as to the time or place of their exhibition.

"The Indian Mother" (Kalem).—With its scenes laid in Hudson Bay territory, this picture is another illustration of the call of the Indian blood in a half-breed girl which was exerted even after she had been trained in the ways of civilization. It tells the usual story graphically enough. The accessories seem to be in harmony with the picture and the occasion. Sometimes one wonders why the call of the white blood in such cases as this isn't strong enough to induce the half-breed to go to civilization.

"Little Snowdrop" (Pathe).—A fairy story, depicted in a colored film and told in an interesting way. There is the abused stepdaughter and the wicked stepmother who desires to have her killed because the young woman is so beautiful she attracts more attention than the wicked mother. Happily a prince appears after the girl has been poisoned and revives her, much to the discomfiture of the wicked stepmother.

"Playing at Divorce" (Vitagraph).—How two children at play caused their parents to become reconciled, even after application had been made for a divorce. The acting of the little people is admirable. The story itself possesses no special claim to distinction.

"International Motorboat Races" (Vitagraph).—A reproduction of the motor boat races at Larchmont, N. Y., last August. The picture of the Dixie II., the winner and the fastest boat afloat, is graphic, and when an aeroplane sails over the Sound the combination is unique.

INDEPENDENT.

"Jack Logan's Dog" (Powers).—Jack has three interesting things, a sweetheart, a rival and a dog. The rivals fight, but are separated. Afterward one falls over a cliff and the dog shows his ability by carrying a warning of the accident to friends, who bring help. The principal source of interest is the acting of the dog. What animals do in a picture always pleases an audience, and this one is no exception.

"The Bachelor's Finish" (Powers).—He writes a proposal of marriage, but forgets to mail it. Seeing a particularly disagreeable sample afterward he is glad he didn't, but finds his valet has. Here comes some of the funny things that happen when he tries to regain the letter. He gets in at last, and is then chagrined to receive one from the lady proposing to him. Overcome, he accepts, but the probability is that his difficulties are less than he anticipated.

"Looking Forward" (Thanhouser).—The story of a young man who puts himself to sleep for one hundred years. He finds a lady mayor when he awakes, and wins her hand after a time, although he makes it plain that he is to be master in his own house, even though she is a suffragette.

"The Arm of the Law" (Atlas).—A melodramatic recital of how a detective runs down a murderer and forces him to confess his crime. As is often the case the opening scene of the story is laid in a saloon, where everybody is drinking. The murder follows, with some clever detective work and the weakening of the prisoners under the third degree inquisition. There is no particular dramatic power in it, but it will please because very many people like a story of this sort.

"His Mother" (Champion).—A temperance story with a drunken husband, ultimately brought home dead, a drunken son who leaves for the West and ultimately sends for his mother, who arrives only to find him in a saloon drinking with his employer. The mother dashes the glasses from their hands and they take the pledge. It is much like the old-time Sunday school book.

"A Desperate Remedy" (Nestor).—Temperance must have been on the minds of all the producers, since three of this day's Independent releases dealt with that subject. In this picture a drunkard's children devise a number of different ways of frightening their father until they induce him to take the pledge. That is all there is to the story. While the action is lively it doesn't amount to very much, nor could it have been worked out along these lines to be any better.

"The Cattlemen's Feud" (Columbia).—This picture, taken on Miller's 101 ranch, in Oklahoma, is a good reproduction of ranch life, showing large herds of sheep lazily grazing on the plains, then being stampeded by a herd of cattle during the round-up preceding the branding. This latter part, by the way, is intensely interesting, as it shows the young bulls being caught and thrown by the cowboys in the corral, then the application of the red-hot branding irons. The picture throughout is typical of the West with an abundance of bad horses and good riders. Being photographed and acted amid the natural surroundings of the far West, we are glad to note the work of getting away from the usual thing is at last a reality.

"The Child of Two Mothers" (Eclair).—The story of a child kidnapped when little and brought up as her own by one woman finding her real parents, and represented as pining for the foster mother. A happy settlement of the difficulties is reached by arranging so the child can have the love of both mothers. The story is rather improbable, though not impossible and possesses no important dramatic scenes.

"The Museum of Sovereigns" (Eclair).—A collection of portraits of well-known rulers, including King Alphonso, Victor Immanuel, Nicholas II, and others, the first three represented in close proximity to a tomb. There are other celebrities including Mr. Roosevelt and to close a caricature of the President of France.

"Thieves as Quick Change Artists" (Itala).—A comedy representing a number of thieves in a series of amusing changes. The novelty consists in combining the two and suggesting possibilities which develop considerable fun before the picture closes.

"His Gypsy Sweetheart" (Powers).—The story of a wealthy girl who for a lark transformed herself into a gypsy temporarily, and while acting as a gypsy a young man fell in love with her. This lover proves to be very ardent, and out of this combination comes a real adventure which probably taught her a lesson, while giving the audience a number of thrills. The picture has no claims to dramatic quality, but is interesting because it depicts a lively and probable escapade.

"A Crippled Teddy Bear" (Imp).—Discharged for assisting a man ill on the street, a father is reduced to the last extremity. Then his little daughter decides to pawn her Teddy Bear, her dearest possession. The gentleman whom her father assisted sees and follows her and learns of the family's situation. Then comes a purchase of the bear and he concludes a Christmas tree at the bachelor's home, fuses and all manner of delightful things, but best of all an envelope containing the appointment to a new position. There isn't much drama about it, except the drama of a child doing childish things in an altogether childish way. The heart interest is there and a suspicious moisture lurks around the eyes when the little one trudges away with her bear, her most valuable possession, to secure for her parents the necessaries of life which they cannot provide.

"A Ward of Uncle Sam" (Yankee).—A rather bumptious story, representing the United States as forcing Russian officers to release a prisoner, who is not only an American, but a soldier with an enviable record. Of course a picture like this is interesting, partly because it plays upon the vanity of the audience and seems to assure them that Uncle Sam's fighting characteristics are always on tap. However, this one violates the probabilities in some degree, though possibly it is intended in only a figurative sense. On the other hand a feeling of exultation develops as the prisoner is released, and he, his mother and blind sister are taken on board the war vessel, bound for the land of freedom, where cruel and lecherous Russian officers can never frighten, or harm them more. As emphasizing the oft repeated assertion that this country offers a safe asylum for all such cases this film is helpful and should be seen in many localities where true patriotism runs low.

"A Christmas Letter" (Great Northern).—A tender little picture for Christmas. A little girl undertakes to post a letter to Santa Claus detailing the misery of her mother and the baby. A lady helps her and seeing the superscription, investigates and makes the family comfortable. While the picture possesses no dramatic merit, it repeats a story so common that it touches the heart and moistens the eyes with its appeal. The various parts are naturally acted, and the photography is excellent.

"The Binding Shot" (American).—A drama that will please with its intensity and by the straightforward character of the story it tells. The play works out to a logical and satisfactory conclusion, affording the actors opportunities to do some excellent work. It is a strongly dramatic subject, adequately handled and suitable for any theater. It will hold your audience without a waver of interest from the beginning to the end. Not only has the dramatic work been well done; the photography is above the average, being clear and sufficiently artistic to make the pictorial portion unusually attractive. While these may seem small things individually, the combination makes a series of scenes difficult to surpass.

"The False Accusation" (Itala).—A drama which presents some interesting phases of the false accusation which gives the picture its title. The actors have done well and the photographer has presented a picture of which no criticism can be made of the mechanical work.

"How He Won Her" (Lux).—Not every man would be small enough to dress as a poodle to fool the mother of the girl he wanted, hence this picture contains considerable novelty. Anyhow, the young man succeeded in gaining entrance to the house this way, and the rest was worked out in such fashion as suited him and the young woman. The important feature is that they ultimately secured ma's consent.

"Her Favorite Tune" (Lux).—A pathetic child story, illustrating how a little girl, stolen by some enemies of her father, was found by her brother who played her favorite tune on his violin. She responded by singing and speedily the little one was released and the kidnappers brought to justice. The picture contains much sentiment, though as a drama it has little merit.

"Two Suits" (Solax).—A comedy which depicts the difficulties into which two men were plunged because they were unfortunate enough to purchase suits alike. One was arrested as a bigamist and the other was unceremoniously thrown out of the window of his bride's home. But ultimately they got together and explanations unravelled the tangle.

"The Millionaire Milkman" (Thanhouser).—Comparatively few are troubled with wealth sufficient to make a woman want them. Perhaps if such occurrences were common this picture would have less interest; but as it is there is considerable novelty about it. The millionaire suspected the girl and upon test found his suspicions were correct. She only wanted his money. Then he congratulated himself that he found out the true state of affairs before it was too late and proceeded to finish up the drama in a way more to his liking. The life and action which characterize the Thanhouser productions are all present, while the photography is satisfactory and helps to make a good picture.

"Dickey's Courtship" (Great Northern).—A lively comedy, depicting the adventures of Dickey during his eventful courtship. It will make your audience laugh more than once before it closes.

"The Poor Student" (Imp).—A lively story of the love affairs of a poor student, whose sweetheart loves him. But there they are balked in one way and another by circumstances and the working out of the problem is what makes the story. The actors appreciated the possibilities of the picture and have performed their various parts with sympathy and skill. The situations are strong and appealing. In fact, the audience will enter into the real story with more than ordinary interest and sympathy and will make the difficulties of the two lovers their own. Perhaps the truthfulness of art is represented in this. The photography is excellent and the story told is plain enough to be understood.

"THEIR FIRST QUARREL."

A Good Imp Comedy.

We would not be at all surprised if there was not something more than acting in the work of Miss Mary Pickford and Mr. Moore in the pretty Imp comedy that bears the above title. The loves, jealousies, quarrel and make-up of the two newly-weds in the story are so perfectly portrayed that one cannot help feeling it is all real. The scenes are also well chosen, some of the settings being really artistic and the photographer has done some excellent work. It is a pretty, pretty film, and should have a very popular run.

The director of Champion interests must have been dreaming of strange things, for he has produced a film that has a very subtle meaning. It is entitled "The Golden Gate," and contains a scene or scenes that are a great flight of imagination on the part of the picture producer. It is bound to create a sensation and drive home a good lesson.

* * *

An order to show cause why they should not be restrained from using the name of Buffalo Bill in their advertisement has been served on the Yankee Film Company by W. F. Cody, George F. Lillie and the Buffalo Bill Film Company.

* * *

The Eclair Company inform us that preparations for the erection of their new American factory are rapidly proceeding. This factory will be situated at Fort Lee, N. J.

* * *

R. Prieur, the managing director of the Lux Company, recently arrived in New York City for the purpose of looking after the local interests of his company.

* * *

Mr. Mainwaring, of the Warwick Company, who has been in the United States for some weeks, returns to London.

* * *

Several manufacturers are wondering what Santa Claus Lacombe will bring them this year.

Chicago Notes.

On my way home the other evening I was attracted to the York Theater by a large crowd waiting on the outside, and naturally I had to stop and take a look also. And I certainly got an "eye full." The York is located on Michigan avenue and Twenty-second street, and is a very ordinary house in appearance in so far as the buildings and decorations are concerned, and when I entered the lobby I couldn't quite figure out the cause of such a large attendance at this plain little picture house. But after I got in range of the screen I soon found out why the people crowd to get in. Good management and excellent projection are the features here, and they are features in every sense of the word. The manager, R. L. Paddock, makes his audience feel at home the minute they reach the entrance, and they are treated just as well by the operator, J. Fuqua. The picture shown here belong in the A-1 class; in fact, it can't be improved upon. An Edison and a Biograph, with an illustrated song, composed the program, which "went big" with the audience. An elderly gentleman sitting beside me made the following remark to me while I was making a few notes: "It will be a mighty cold day when you'll see a better picture theater than they have here; and," he added, "I know, for I go to a picture show every night." And still some exhibitors have the nerve to say that people can't tell the difference between a good and a poor picture. Like the York, you don't have to have a palace for a theater, but you must have good projection and courteous management to pack them in like they are doing.

After attending one show where the projection was so good, I felt as though I might be able to live through another, so from the York I hied myself to the Forest on Thirty-fifth and Forest. It must have been my lucky night, for here, too, the projection was far above the average. The Forest is nothing to rave about either, in appearance, but the combination of manager and operator get the business. C. R. Thompson, the manager, acts as door man, and his polite reception to the patrons certainly creates an impression. Jack Lindenberger, the operator, is also in the A-1 class, and the pictures shown were really worth while. The program consisted of three licensed reels and two songs; a trifle too long, in my estimation, and especially on a five-cent admission. Two reels and a song ought to satisfy the most ardent "fan" when the program is changed daily. But that is another matter just now. The reason I have mentioned the York and the Forest was on account of the projection. It would do some of the Chicago operators good to lay off some night and see it for themselves. J. V. K.

The World's Chicago office was favored by a visit from Eric Morison, secretary of the American Moving Picture Machine Co., last week. Mr. Morison was on a flying trip from New York in the interests of his company, and his stay in the "Windy City" was brief; nevertheless, he used his time to advantage by calling on the trade and extolled the merits of the machine that "never comes back," for which he claims there is an ever-increasing demand. Come again, Mr. Morison.

R. A. Grombacher, secretary of the Pacific Film Exchange, Seattle, Wash., was a visitor at the offices of the World on Tuesday. Mr. Grombacher, who is one of the most strenuous boosters of the film game in the West, is en route to New York City, where he will endeavor to absorb what knowledge and new ideas the East has to offer, which he can use to advantage in the West.

Among the new Independent arrivals in the field of photoplay this week, is the new Gayety Theater, which, under the management of George H. Holcomb, will open its doors to the public for the first time, in the little city of Ottowa, Ill. The new house will book two reels of the Independent production daily, to be used as finales to their vaudeville performances.

The Gayety is conceded to be one of the most beautiful little show houses in the State and is fully equipped with the most up-to-date fixtures and properties. S. G. Gay, owner and proprietor, gives the approximate cost at $25,000.

MOTION SLIDES.

This mere title is going to create a sensation. A slide of your baby, that you can make cry, smile, laugh in perfect motions, without flickers or any of the drawbacks of the film, is the latest thing in amusements. This new invention is not intended to show regular plays, but as long as we can show on mere glass slides the expressions and contortions of a human face or body in perfect motions, we have a right to anticipate great things for the future. The principle is there; ingenious brains may yet adapt it to the playlet.

Skeptics are everywhere and we can expect a general laugh at the title "Motion Slides." Many will say "Impossible." Well, this word "impossible" is no more entitled to a space in the great dictionary of this wonderful twentieth century. We have seen it and will have more to say anon.

J. M. B.

ZENITH SIGN—SOMETHING NEW.

This sign is specially made for the interior, to display the program. It is made of a frame with a number of slots. A slide made of a frame with a glass back, has a removable front glass, between the two glasses, is placed the name of the picture, of the singer, or of any other announcement. These names are formed by letters perforated on metallic sheets. When the name is formed the front glass is locked and the whole slide pushed in the slot. In the rear of the frame and behind each slide are electric lights to illuminate the different announcements. A series of switch buttons will illuminate all the slides at one time or one after the other, as the program progresses.

The back glass of the slide can be made in different colored glasses, adding color effects to the beauty of the sign.

This sign placed on the stage near the curtain can be seen from any part of the house, is an ornament and at the same time of great utility, as if you enter the theater while a picture is on the screen, you look at the program sign to find the name of the picture. The manufacturers are completing arrangements to put this new sign on the market.

THE MAN BEHIND THE BOOKING SHEET.

You have no doubt read considerable regarding the different branches of the moving picture industry, from the making of the picture to its projection on the screen; but there is one very important branch of the business to-day about which very little is known by the general public; though little is known, much less is written; nevertheless, this branch is one of the biggest factors to the success of the industry.

Yes, I am referring to the booking department of the exchanges, and the "booking man." The booking man is not exactly the "power behind the throne" but he is "some power" just the same, as every exhibitor will admit, for he has been led to realize it on some occasion or other. The "booker" is always a busy man, and talk about your storehouse of knowledge, Mr. Booker "is there" when it comes to knowing all about film releases.

Chicago is fortunate in having a number of real live-wire booking men, prominent among them being Thomas P. Norman, the man behind the booking sheet at Laemmle's. Mr. Norman started in the picture business as an operator, in the days when crank-turning was mere recreation, taking into account all the other duties he had; general utility man would have covered the job better, but they were called operators to lend dignity to the position. At any rate, Tom turned the crank until he was able to distinguish between a "leader" and a "sub-title"; then the old crank had no more charms for Tom. He broke into the film game proper shortly after the Standard Film Exchange came into existence, where he received the schooling that has been of such great value to him ever since. One year with the Standard and then Tom cast his lot with the then Theater Film Exchange, remaining with that concern over a year and a half. While employed by these firms, he gained a very large circle of friends among the exhibitors throughout the country, and a thorough knowledge of every release put out under the M. P. P. Co.'s patents.

Then it came to pass that a man named Laemmle was looking about for a good booking man—with the result that Tom is now the "big noise" behind the booking sheets for the "biggest and best film renter in the world." His Monday morning brainstorm now consists of Imps, Nestors, Bisons, Reliance, etc., instead of Biographs, Vitagraphs, Seligs, etc. Laemmle's customers all "swear by" Tom; some "swear at" and others "swear with" him, but, nevertheless, they go where Norman goes, so when he moved to 190 Lake street, they moved also; they simply insist on being booked by Tom. Isn't that strong proof that he is "some booker"?

The above is a "still picture" of Mr. Norman; it does not do justice to his winning smile, however. It's contagious, too, that smile of his. Many an exhibitor has changed his mind about "bawling him out" after seeing that smile. May it never vanish!

MOVING PICTURE STATISTICS IN NEW BRITAIN, CONN.

By Rev. Herbert A. Jump, Pastor, South Church.

In order to ascertain the vogue of the motion picture in our own city, I secured the co-operation recently of the principal of a public school situated so that its body of pupils truly represented the complex and polyglot population of a Connecticut manufacturing center. The statistics were gleaned from 350 scholars from ten to fourteen years of age. All but 34 out of this number said that they went to the moving picture shows; 183 went as often as once a week, 130 went twice a week or oftener, 9 children went every day, of which number, however, 3 went because of business connections with the theater, selling popcorn, etc., 6 others averaged six times a week. Of the 316 pupils who attended, 130 said they went without parents or older persons to accompany them, and only 20 limited their attendance to afternoon performances. Seventy-five went to Sunday evening performances. Having exhausted the list of inquiries which she had in mind, the principal asked: "Do you think of any other question I ought to put to you?" And one young hopeful piped up: "Wouldn't you like to know which theater we think is the healthiest—has best ventilation, etc.?" And when the teacher asked that question she got as rank an answer as she had received to her other queries.

[According to these statistics, if there are any theaters that change pictures daily they must be doing it for the benefit of those nine kids that go every day.]

The American Moving Picture Supply Company, formerly located in the offices of the Paramount Film Exchange, 61 West Forty-first street, having outgrown its quarters through the purchase of another supply company by Mr. Brode, will permanently locate in the offices of the Wm. Steiner Film Exchange, at 110 Fourth avenue, with a more complete line of film supplies and accessories than heretofore carried.

Mr. Brode is having a large and descriptive catalogue published, which can be had for the asking.

We extend the company our best wishes for a prosperous New Year.

The attention of our operating readers is drawn to the offer of the Charles L. Kiewart Company, of 30 Cortland street, New York City. This company invites operators to write them on the subject of the handling of the moving picture arc lamp. For each letter up to the number of 100 descriptive of the best way of handling the lamp, the Charles L. Kiewert Company will send a copy of Richardson's Motion Picture Handbook. The information obtained from the contributing operators will be distributed amongst all competitors. The competition closes on December 31, so there are several days left for the operator to get into communication with the Kiewert Company.

A new photoplay theater is to be erected in Beardstown, Ill., by M. H. Harris and E. E. Nicholson, of that city. Plans will be secured at once, and details arranged so that work may commence as soon in the Spring as the weather will permit. The structure will have a seating capacity of 800, including the balcony. It will be modern in design and will have all the conveniences of an up-to-date theater, with a ladies' retiring room, toilet, telephone, etc. The building will be constructed with the ultimate view of converting it into a first class playhouse if occasion demands. Mr. Harris is at present conducting the Gem, one of the prettiest photoplayhouses in that part of the State, and Mr. Nicholson is editor and manager of the daily and weekly "Illinoian-Star."

Skowhegan, Me., Nov. 11.—The Rev. Robert Morris, of the First Baptist Church, Skowhegan, Me., replaces the regular service Sunday evening with a moving picture entertainment. He has illustrated the life of Moses, and the songs that are sung during the service are shown on the screen. From the present outlook there are many churches in this vicinity that will follow the Rev. Robert Morris in this undertaking.

To my mind, two of the most interesting spots in New York City are the building occupied by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals on the corner of Madison square at its junction with Madison avenue, and the Bide-a-wee Home on Lexington avenue just above Twenty-third street. Both of these institutions daily teach the lesson of kindness to animals. Outside the former building on any fine day you may see a fine flock of pigeons being fed and usually there is a crowd of sympathetic onlookers studying the pretty scene. The Bide-a-wee Home takes care of dogs, cats and the like. So even in swift living New York this pretty sentiment of a kindly attitude towards dumb animals is not lost sight of. New York is not a kind place. Generally speaking, it spares neither man nor beast. Everybody agrees that it is a cold, heartless, hurrying, scurrying place mainly devoted to the race for the dollar, and the expenditure thereof in pleasure.

* * *

New York, in the main, is not an animal loving city. I have seen more half-starved cats in New York than anywhere else; likewise homeless dogs of the mongrel kind. On the other hand you have the contrasting spectacle of the Fifth avenue society woman, lavishing on her canine pets that devotion which should more properly be given to little children. But, of course, the Fifth avenue fashionable woman does not believe very much in children. They interfere with her pleasure, whilst a puppy does not. It looks as if these ladies, while advocating and practising race suicide, would not for worlds be deprived of the compensating companionship of some of the lower animals.

* * *

So "there is some soul of goodness in things evil"—race suicide being, according to Theodore Roosevelt, a distinct evil. There was an article in these pages a few weeks ago headed "The Animal in the Picture," which I was pleased to learn excited approval. If the writer of that article was at all instrumental in promoting a greater love for animals than at present exists here, he should be doubly repaid. Animal subjects, I observe, are always popular with a moving picture audience. Again, they do not, in any sense, perplex the censors. Animals, as a rule, are well-behaved, unselfish, devoted and lovable creatures. I have a warm corner in my heart for any film which deals with animal subjects. If there are good horses and other animals in a Cowboy or Indian picture, I think I could even tolerate Cowboys and Indians on the screen. So, I believe, would a great many. For the animal, mostly is genuine and sincere. Cowboys and Indians have to be taken pretty much on trust. They are probably not genuine, and if they are, I am told they are very poor trash indeed. Don't shoot, you Cowboy and Indian lovers! I and the great moving picture public make you an unconditional present of your proteges. Dogs, horses, cats and other animals are quite good enough for me.

* * *

I had the animal-in-the-picture sentiment in my mind one day this week when the Eclair Company invited me to a look at some of their forthcoming releases. Most of these pictures will be dealt with elsewhere in the World in the usual course. But, to one of them I feel compelled to assign particular notice on this page. It is called "The Animal Hospital." Such an institution exists in Paris. The Eclair Company photographed it, and have made out of the subject a film of such entrancing interest that it will, I think, appeal successfully to any moving picture audience anywhere.

* * *

You see the staff of the hospital at work, just as you would the staff of a hospital devoted to the amelioration of human suffering. Thither are brought dogs, cats, horses, monkeys, etc., that are sick or crippled. The surgical staff handles the brute patients skilfully and attentively. They operate upon them, or otherwise treat them. When necessary, they bandage them up; they place them in a convalescent ward; when they are cured they are restored to their grateful owners.

It is surprising to note how wonderfully well the animals behave under treatment. The poor suffering things seem to realize that what is being done to them is to their ultimate benefit, and they submit quietly. "They take their medicine," they endure their detention with meekness, and altogther you have a very touching picture of what I would call the human side of the life of the animal kingdom.

* * *

The contemplation of suffering of human beings is bad enough, but to see unrelieved suffering in animals is, I think, far more pathetic. The poor things cannot tell you how they feel; you have to guess it for them. Nothing has ever been so grateful to me as the lick of a wounded dog whom I have helped out of pain, or a hungry dog whom I have fed. Similarly I believe that most men feel a peculiar sensation of gratefulness when a pet animal rewards a kindness by a little touch of recognition.

* * *

As we all, therefore, agree upon the beauty of these sympathetic animal pictures—as they command universal approval, let me, at the risk of repeating myself, beg the makers to give us more of them. Not too much animal in the picture, but just animal enough. I would recommend the film makers to register a few New Year's resolutions to insist upon their producers handing out a few more animal subjects. Braving the curses of Fourteenth street, I would specially ask the Independent manufacturers to take the hint I am giving, and substitute for some of the Western blood and thunder which they are giving us, more human subjects. But, let them also be humane subjects. A day after I was looking at the Eclair picture, "The Animal Hospital," I saw a very fine Pathe representing the hunting of sea lions in Tasmania. The effect "artist" made the animals in this picture howl so naturally, that the film made rather a repellent than an attractive impression on me and others. Moreover, when the hunter began to cut up one of these sea lions, the realism was striking to the point of disagreeableness. This is the sort of thing that I am not particularly pleased in seeing on the screen. It struck me as carrying realism too far. On the other hand, I recognize that hunting necessarily involves a certain amount of suffering on the part of the hunter. A sea lion, however, is a "timorous beastie" and does not have much of a chance when you get after him with a gun. He has not the same chance as "Br'er Fox," an animal to which I was authoritatively compared the other day.

There is to be said in favor of the moving picture theater that as yet such rank productions as "The Girl from Rector's," "The Girl with the Whooping Cough," "The Soul Kiss," and "The Easiest Way" have not found their way to any alarming extent into films. This is all an unpleasant subject; but it seems necessary to dwell upon it in order to convince the public that, despite the fact that young minds have possibly been inflamed by melodramatic picture plays and shows of a dime novel order, the moving picture itself is not entirely bad, and that, with proper encouragement and hedged in by intelligent restrictions, it may be the source of much good.—Buffalo "Courier."

MOVING PICTURES; TOWN DARK.

Moline, Ill., Nov. 17.—Sherrard, thirty-five miles from here, was shrouded in darkness the other night because the city lighting power was exhausted by a moving picture machine.

For four hours the police force of the city was busy endeavoring to locate the trouble when a happy thought struck one of the officers and he rushed to the moving picture house. The connection was broken and the city lights once more allowed to glimmer. The operators have been asked to leave town.—Chicago "Blade."

When one stops to consider the highway robbery, the chicken stealing and the love making that might have been going on in Sherrard, while the lights were off, there can be nothing but words of praise for the vigilance of its police force, as well as for the electrical knowledge employed by the officers in tracking the offenders to their rendezvous. Hereafter, operators playing the town are expected to bring along their own "juice." You have three guesses as to the population of Sherrard.

CONSTRUCTION DECORATIONS

T. H. Smith, of Wilton Junction, Ia., writes as follows: "I have just come across your write-up on the proper way to design a picture house. You are quite right, as I have worked for some time on these lines with the result that our pictures show fully fifty per cent. better than others. Please find enclosed a sketch of a curtain I designed some two years ago, etc."

Mr. Smith claims that his special curtain will be of great benefit to persons who cannot invest in a Mirror Screen, as it is inexpensive and can be easily prepared by the exhibitor himself. The frame of the curtain, or as much as possible around said curtain, and the ceiling for a space of from six to ten feet, according to the length of the auditorium, are to be painted with a dead black. Mr. Smith claims that several theaters have adopted his suggestion and have obtained some good results. He also claims that with such an arrangement he can partly light his theater without injuring the projection and that he can use lighter decorations for the upper parts of the walls and of the ceiling.

* * *

Mr. Berkson's poster arrangement referred to last week may become a general feature, as the authorities of many towns object to any movable furniture placed in the lobby. The objection is based on the fact that in case of a panic, movable furniture can be in the way and trip up many of the panicstricken people. In some cities, the police are carrying this order to the extreme. In Plainfield, N. J., where Mr. Proctor leased the old theater on Front street to turn it into a moving picture house, he also leased a large store to make a sort of waiting-room and passage to the auditorium. Mr. Proctor's original plans were to have seats against the walls and some artificial palm trees, to make the place look cheerful. The police forced Mr. Proctor to remove everything and to leave the large room bare of furniture and of decorations on the ground that nothing should be allowed in the way of a panicstricken crowd. It is well to provide all the means of safety, yet such precautions should not be carried too far. In the above case, while we admit that movable furniture can be in the way and trip some persons, we believe that the room was large enough to allow some stationary benches against the walls, and said benches would have been a great comfort to ladies and children.

The exhibitors of to-day are no longer satisfied to display the poster of the feature film, but they want to display several posters, even three and four of the same picture, believing that a great display of posters will draw the crowd. It is because so many exhibitors overcrowded their lobbies with posters and easels that the authorities had to take steps to prohibit anything in the lobbies and waiting rooms.

Mr. Berkson's arrangement may create a possibility. The manufacturers, instead of spending money in posters, most of the time not the correct reproduction of the picture to be shown, could furnish enlarged reproductions of scenes from their films with a synopsis, and as such pictures would be placed in the frames of the walls and under glass, they would be protected from the effects of bad weather.

It is well for a circus, a side show, or a cheap theater to use posters as an advertising medium, but motion pictures are too high-class to be advertised in a cheap manner, and if you want to create the impression that your show is of the highest character, you have to put a little style in your advertising. Clean photos with a short but neatly printed synopsis would certainly improve your lobby 100 per cent. We hope that the manufacturers and exhibitors will consider this new feature of advertising the weekly program, and if they should agree to do away with ugly posters, they would certainly do a good turn to the renters, as a poster department is more than a nuisance to the exchanges.

* * *

An exhibitor from a small Western town complains that the local electric plant is too small to supply a regular current to the increasing demand for electric light and for the suburban trolley. He claims that at certain hours, when more lights are burning in the town and when there is a heavy traffic on the trolley road, he fails to obtain enough current to show a good picture.

This complaint is not an isolated case, but is general, and because so many exhibitors are suffering from an inadequate local electric plant we have advised many of them to put in a private plant to produce their own electricity.

The Detroit Engine Works have perfected what seems to be an efficient electric plant for motion picture theaters, the same is low in price and light in weight. Although the manufacturers claim that many dollars can be saved by using their electric plant, we do not consider so much the money-saving part as the fact that with a private plant, entirely under the control of the exhibitor, he is sure to have the proper current to obtain a good projection and can give a first class show at any time of the day or night.

The electric light plant offered by the Detroit Engine Works is direct current, sixty-volt system. Although a low voltage, every bit of the current generated goes to the machine and gives an intensely brilliant white light. With the high voltage systems, from one half to seven eighths of the current for which the exhibitor pays is lost to him and wasted in the shape of heat given out by the rheostat. With the plant of the Detroit Engine Works a rheostat is really not necessary, although it is advisable to use one, but the resistance would be very slight. The pressure contact spring should never be farther over than the second button of the rheostat.

Actual experiment has proven that with a 220-volt alternating current system, a machine drawing eighty amperes at the arc gave a light of 4,500 candle-power, whereas the same machine operated with one of the Detroit Moving Picture Electric Light Plants of 60-volt direct current gave a light of 5,000 candle-power, while drawing but twenty amperes at the arc.

These outfits consist of the Detroit Stationary Governing Kerosene Engine, and 60-volt direct current Detroit Dynamo, mounted on the same oak skids, connected by an endless leather belt, together with field rheostat and all necessary wiring to make them absolutely complete in every respect.

This question is of such vital importance that many other manufacturers of electric appliances are working with a desire to place on the market an efficient private electric plant of small dimensions and light weight.

The Chas. A. Strelinger Company, also of Detroit, are placing on the market an electric plant that they have perfected for moving picture theaters, and as soon as we receive the description they promised us we will be pleased to study the merits of their invention. J. M. B.

WEEDING OUT THE ADVENTURER.

In the face of all the adverse criticism it may seem foolhardy to put in a good word for the silent drama. Yet, one feels constrained, after careful study of the situation, to do so. No denial is made of the bad points of the "nickelodeon"; for, when facts that are unassailable point toward an undesirable state of affairs, it is for the public then to get to work and right matters. A distinction, though, should be drawn between the moving picture itself, the moving picture theater, and the man who conducts it. The fault wherever there is fault, will generally be found to center in the individual. The moving picture as an institution is as sound as regular drama, and the five-cent theater as moral as the two-dollar house.

While the class of show people first attracted into the moving picture world by promises of quick returns on their investment were of the kind that submerge ethics, morals, and common decency to inordinate desire to make money quickly, the demands the public is now making on moving picture people are fast weeding out these adventurers and making intelligence and education a prerequisite of success in this new business. It is true that any articles purporting to cover the moving picture industry would be inadequate and superficial if they failed to dwell at some length upon what may fairly be described as the vices of the business; yet it does not seem necessary to second unreservedly all the condemnations one hears and reads.

NOTES FROM CINCINNATI.

Business is not what it should be. The exhibitors are studing the cause of the dull season and many of them are scheming to try to find some novelty or something to popularize the pictures.

Most likely the Orpheum, with its eighteen vaudeville acts, is one cause, yet there is a more serious cause and if the ladies will pardon me, I will accuse them of being at the bottom of the lagging interest for motion pictures. You cannot enjoy a good show in Cincinnati because you cannot find a seat from which you can see the screen without some Merry Widow hats or large plumes in the way. It is an outrage and the women of Cincinnati have no respect for the men nor even for members of their own sex. They will wear the largest hats made; in some cases they will wear automobile veils over their big hats and plumes and as such veils are fastened at the neck, those sitting in the rear can only get an occasional glimpse of the picture between the hats. When men and women pay 5c or 10c. for motion pictures they do not care for a display of millinery and as the Cincinnati managers are doing nothing to relieve such a state of affairs, thousands of persons do not care to patronize the shows. The other day at the Bijou Theater, three girls with lids out of proportion, had to occupy five seats to have one seat between each of them, to make room for the big brims and long feathers of their hats. I had the misfortune to occupy a seat just behind this collection of Merry Widow hats and as I could see nothing I moved to another part of the theater where I had the misfortune to have a lady with her big hat and automobile veil to sit in front of me. I changed four times and at last I walked out. At the Pastime they display a slide asking the men to remove their hats but the women are not mentioned.

To my friends of Cincinnati I would advise them to display the following slide: "The management has provided mirrors and hat pins for the ladies to adjust their hats. Elderly ladies are not required to remove their bonnets."

As every woman wants to be sweet sixteen they would all remove their hats so as not to be classed as "elderly." Try this slide and see if you do not increase your receipts.

The pictures of to-day are high class and many of them are on the dramatic line. To fully enjoy such pictures you do not want to be disturbed by having to move from your seat to allow some one else to move in or move out. At the Gaiety you cannot enjoy the pictures. The seats are of the most comfortable pattern—they could be termed parlor chairs—but the rows are too close and when seated the knees fairly touch the seats in front of you and no one can pass, unless you get up and raise the seat of your chair.

The Alhambra, the new house and the only house on picture row to show Independent films is enjoying a good patronage. Tom Emmans, the popular sketch singer, is the special attraction and although he has been with the Alhambra for some months, he still calls for encores, a proof that the public is not blase and is always ready to support a good singer and good management.

The Colonial is doing well, they have good projection, even light and a steady picture; and this means a good deal to the lovers of motion pictures. The Colonial has very good music but the management is contemplating improvements in this line, as they believe that the beauty of a picture can be greatly enhanced with the proper music and sound effects.

All the moving picture theaters are dressed for the holidays, evergreen and Christmas bells are seen everywhere, yet these cheerful decorations do not draw the crowds, for the good reason that people are too busy shopping.

WHAT IT COSTS TO PRODUCE.

To produce a play in which Lillian Russell starred a few years ago cost only seven hundred and fifty dollars, while "Brewster's Millions" required an expenditure of fourteen thousand dollars, seven thousand of which went into one scene. The cost of producing regular plays ranges between three thousand and one hundred thousand dollars, with a general average somewhat below the ten thousand mark. The usual cost of Frohman productions is about fifteen thousand dollars.

As compared with these figures special moving picture films have sometimes called for expenditures of twenty-five thousand dollars and more. The production of "Rigoletto," for instance, cost upward of twenty thousand dollars to stage. The reason for these high figures may be found in the great care that is exercised to get correct atmosphere.—Buffalo "Courier."

IF YOU ARE INTERESTED IN THE MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS YOU SHOULD SUBSCRIBE FOR THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD. $1.00.

Letters to the Editors.

A PROGRESSIVE FILM EXCHANGE.

Cleveland, Ohio, December 19, 1910.

Editors Moving Picture World:

Gentlemen—Enclosed find clipping which appeared in Friday's issue of the Cleveland "Plain Dealer." The subject, as you will note, is the recent issue of the Edison Company, entitled "Red Cross Seal." Whilst we are on the subject, please permit us to state that we have closed negotiations with the Cleveland Anti-Tuberculosis League whereby they are giving exhibitions throughout the city of such films as the "Healing Faith," "Fly Pest" and "The Man Who Learned." We will also, within a fortnight, add to the list the "Red Cross Seal" picture, which is now playing to crowded houses, both in this and other cities. The object of the League, as its name so well implies, is to stamp out the white plague. We call such exhibitions—health exhibitions, as their object is to bring before the people in a striking manner, the importance of cleanliness and attention, not only to food and clothing, as also the habitation. Within the last thirty days we have supplied several exhibitions consisting of the above mentioned titles and also "Little Drops of Water" to the State Board of Health of Ohio, which exhibition was given at the Sinton Hotel, at Cincinnati, Ohio, also an exhibition for the Health Department of the city of Toledo, Ohio. Exhibitors throughout this section are beginning to realize that an exhibition of a film such as the "Red Cross Seal" is a boost for the theater, this due to the fact that a picture of this nature receives quite a bit of publicity, thereby creating a demand with the general public to see it as soon as issued. We believe it is perfectly safe on our part to make the statement that, this without any self-praise, we have undoubtedly done more in the past in the way of supplying scientific and educational exhibitions than any other, in fact more than all other exchanges taken collectively.

Yours truly,

THE LAKE SHORE FILM AND SUPPLY COMPANY,
E. Mandelbaum, President.

THE EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE.

Cincinnati, Ohio, December 17, 1910.

Editors Moving Picture World:

Gentlemen—It is apparent there is too much scheming and politics practiced by the film manufacturers. If more time was given to the manufacturing of high class pictures, instead of trying to absorb exchanges, the exhibitors would be greatly benefited by it and the public would be better pleased. The manufacturers seem to lose sight of the fact that the public does not desire long drawn out death scenes, nor are they good for them. Neither do they desire murder scenes depicted. Death scenes, murder scenes and suicide scenes should be very few and extremely short. There should be more high class comedy, and if the manufacturers would pay a higher price for their scenarios, it would be appreciated by every exhibitor in the world, as well as by the public. Manufacturers cannot expect to receive high class scenarios for the price some of them are paying, and they must get the idea that the public is becoming daily more critical and difficult to please. Some pictures that are now produced and used should not pass the censors.

The costumes and staging in the pictures should be closely scrutinized as well as the murder, suicide and death scenes. The manner of dressing and acting in some pictures is so suggestive that it appeals to the vicious. Such pictures should be eliminated, and while it might not please the manufacturers of these kinds of pictures, there is no doubt that it would please the exhibitor and his patrons. I visited one of our largest moving picture theaters recently, and I saw people get up and go out of the theater because they were very much displeased. Whether it was the intention of the manufacturer, or whether it was overlooked by the censors, I will not attempt to say; but the offensive part was displayed and it made it none the less unpleasant. It is not conducive to the high morals of the public or the finances of the exhibitor to show this kind and character of picture. No one can estimate the costs to an exhibitor when he is forced to use suggestive or immoral pictures. The manufacturers must recognize the fact that after they have manufactured a picture the exhibitor under present conditions must use it; and every time a poor or suggestive picture appears on the curtain there is just that much damage done to the picture business. In many localities the moving picture theaters have many enemies; therefore, it behooves the manufacturers to produce the very best pictures possible. What does $5 or $10 amount to, if the grade of pictures can be improved upon.

If there was less money spent in weekly meetings and wine suppers and more spent in manufacturing higher grade pictures the business would have more friends and everybody would receive benefit. The women's clubs and other clubs and associations throughout the country are closely scrutinizing all the pictures, and if the manufacturers are wise they will not use any subjects that are suggestive, as it is only a matter of time until a first class picture house cannot afford to run that class of pictures. The public does not want to visit picture shows for death, suicide or murder scenes. What they want is clean drama and light comedy. Imagine the working man going into a five-cent theater for a little rest and amusement, and has death, murder and suicide scenes placed before him for his evening's entertainment, when one good laugh would cheer him on his way, while the death scenes often leave him in an unpleasant frame of mind, and instead of light pleasing comedy or clean drama, he goes against death, murder and suicide scenes, which are not elevating to say the least, consequently they should be eliminated as far as possible. Very truly yours,

M. A. NEFF.

Myersdale, Pa., December 19, 1910.

Editors Moving Picture World:

Gentlemen—We gave our first anniversary Wednesday, December 14, 1910, at our house in Myersdale, Pa. On this occasion we had a special program and an added attraction, "A Moonlight Skating Carnival," the first one since we opened the Auditorium. And it was a great success. We also ran two reels of motion pictures in connection with the skating. We gave a free show for all the school children at 6.30 P. M. and the house was packed—we had over 700 school children for the first show. We ran a Thanhouser film, "Ten Nights in a Barroom," and it certainly made a hit. We also ran a great Powers picture play, "The Adventures of a Millionaire Tramp." The costumes and the photographic work was the best we have ever seen in a Powers picture and it made a hit with the people. We are using a Power's No. 6 machine and we certainly have a great picture. We have a throw of 95 feet and we show a picture 15 x 20 feet and strangers have come to me to ask what machine we were using, and they said they had never seen a better picture than the one we are making. We were running licensed pictures when we first opened, but we went Independent about eight months ago and I am sorry we ever run licensed pictures as I like the Independent pictures and the people also like them, because we are doing the business. We get our service from A. S. Davis' Independent Film Exchange, Pittsburg, Pa., and he is certainly giving us the pictures. Everybody is talking about the anniversary. I wouldn't mind having one every week.

PHILIP REICH, Manager.
Reich's Auditorium.

[Mr. Reich will please pardon us for making use of his letter, but it sounds so optimistic we could not withhold it. The part which interests us most is where he speaks of having such good projection. A 15 x 20 picture that is so clear and steady that people talk about it is the keynote of success.—Eds. M. P. W.]

SPECIAL LENSES.

Rochester, N. Y., December 13, 1910.

Editors Moving Picture World:

Dear Sirs—We have received your list of manufacturers of motion Picture machines and thank you for this favor.

Our attention has been called by the Consolidated Amusement Company, of Baltimore, to an article in your issue of December 10, by Max Stearn, manager the Exhibit Theater, Columbus, Ohio, and as Mr. Stearn does not go into details we think you will be interested to learn that he is using one of our lenses and he ordered a special lens upon our recommendation. Our recollection is that Mr. Stearn required a lens of 7½-inch focus and naturally a lens of 1¾ inches diameter (or an ordinary ¼ size objective lens) of this focal length will not give sufficient illumination, so we advised Mr. Stearn to order one of our No. 2 projection lenses of suitable focal length so the working aperture or illuminating power of the lens would be equal to that of a ¼ size lens of normal focus. We have supplied a great many other exhibitors with similar lenses ranging in focal length from 6½ to 9½ inches, and they have been thoroughly satisfied with the result in every case. We do not see that the exhibitor with working conditions of this kind has any option but to order a special lens to suit his conditions and the growing tendency on the part of exhibitors to increase the length of their theaters makes lenses of longer focus a necessity.

We have already suggested to one prominent manufacturer of machines the advisability of furnishing machines ready to take a ½ size lens instead of a ¼ size lens. The latter can easily be fitted to the larger flange with an adapter while it means considerable trouble and expense to make a change to a larger flange afterward.

Yours very truly,
GUNDLACH MANHATTAN OPTICAL COMPANY.

DISCRIMINATING EXHIBITORS.

Toledo, Ohio, November 7, 1910.

Editors Moving Picture World:

Gentlemen—Not long ago we had the pleasure of running two releases of the American Film Manufacturing Company and wish to state that the photographic quality of these films, together with the subjects, is positively the best that have ever been placed upon the market by the Independent film manufacturers. It is needless to say that, if in the future they continue to produce pictures of this quality, they will reach the zenith of perfection, and will, beyond doubt, be the topnotchers of the film industry in this country. We heartily wish them all the possible success in the future and we shall be ever ready to give them a boost.

Thanking you in advance for your kind consideration, we wish to remain, Respectfully yours,

RUSSELL SHEATS,
CARL KOCH.

[We gladly give space to the foregoing boost by satisfied exhibitors, but we suppress their equally emphatic knock at another Independent manufacturer. We agree with them that some people have been long enough at it now to realize that they never did and never can make pictures. If other exhibitors would promptly send back to their exchanges stuff that they do not consider fit for their audiences, the picture would take on a new boom in the eyes of the public.—Eds. M. P. W.]

December 20, 1910.

Editors Moving Picture World:

Gentlemen—F. H. Richardson wants to know what becomes of "leaders." A gentleman told me that operators, while waiting for trains in the Erie station, Jersey City, would unwind several feet of firm from each reel, tear it off and throw it in a waste paper receptacle. He inquired what they did it for, naturally. These men had just come from New York with reels for the day's run and were en route to Passaic and Paterson. Kindly suppress my name and location. Very truly,

A COMMUTER.

Rockford, Ill., November 10, 1910.

Editors Moving Picture World:

Dear Sirs—The bonehead who put a sickbed or deathbed scene in a poster ought to be put to a steady job making tombstones. The people like a picture that shows action or something of interest; but your poster people have either to put in a scene that looks like murder, or sickbed scene, or some slush love couple. I've had my attendance often ruined by a poster. The Vitagraph manufacturers and others have made the average public who like to be amused, mighty scared of these depressing pictures, and it means a big falling off of business to put a sickbed scene in the window, and the satire of it is, a lot of those sickbed scenes are not very serious, if the scared ones had come in. Let's have common sense besides artistic sense and asinine sense.

Yours very truly,
W. CLARKE.

St. Louis, September 14, 1910.

Editors Moving Picture World:

Gentlemen—I enclose herewith some reading matter relating to the St. Charles Theater, at 521 St. Charles street, St. Louis, Mo. I also enclose herewith a photograph of that theater. I sincerely trust that you will find space for the same in your paper.

I am president of the company operating this theater and also of two other companies operating first-class picture theaters in this city, and of a fourth company which is now erecting a fireproof, reinforced concrete theater.

I am a subscriber for your paper and read it diligently.

Truly yours,
JOHN T. FITZSIMMONS.

P. S.—I observe in the last issue of your paper that you now have a St. Louis correspondent. I am much obliged to you and to him for the nice notice which you gave to our operating company in the last paragraph of his letter.

J. T. F.

BIOGRAPH.

WINNING BACK HIS LOVE.—Mrs. Wallace is possessed of a disturbing premonition that her husband's love is waning, and truth to say her fears are well grounded, for, although she doesn't know of anything conclusively, still there is a reason, and that reason is Vera Blair, a show girl, who, believing Frederick Wallace to be a single man, is attracted by him and successfully fascinates him. He has spent several evenings in her company and now finds her irresistible. Hence, when he receives a note asking him to accompany her to a little after the show supper, he hastens to comply. This note falls into the hands of the wife, who is beside herself with grief, when Bob Martin, a friend of the family, appears. Upon learning the cause of her woe, he suggests a plan to cure Fred of his folly. This remedy is to pay him back in his own coin, to wit: visit the cafe in his company and pretend a reckless abandon, thereby putting the "shoe on the other foot." Repugnant as this procedure is to her, she is induced to consent as it will mean one thing or the other decisively. Fred has arrived at the stage door and meeting the girl, he is just leaving for the cafe when the wife and friend appear in the distance. They follow and secure the adjoining private booth to that occupied by Fred and the girl. It isn't long before Fred hears the clink of glasses and a hilarious laugh that is unmistakably his wife's. Stealthily drawing the curtain dividing the booths aside the sight that greets him freezes his blood, for there is his wife, with an empty wine glass in her hand, apparently in a state of mild intoxication, accompanied by their dearest friend. In an instant he is towering with rage. His wife in such a place drinking with his friend, outrageous! Ah! but he doesn't yet appreciate the enormity of his own fault. Getting the girl into another room by subterfuge, he bursts in upon what he deems the guilty pair. Urged by the friend, the wife continues to play her part, though her heart is well near breaking, and almost rebels. At this point the girl returns for her gloves which she dropped and learns now that he is a married man. She scorns him with even more vehemence than his wife appears to do, and departs, the wife leaving at the same time. Left alone, he now realizes his profligacy and the value of his wife's love, which he imagines he has lost. As he sits there alone, he is in the depths of desperation when he espies on the table a water glass filled with wine—it is now clear to him. His wife did not drink, but poured the wine into this glass and pretended intoxication to show him the error of his way, which he now sees only too clearly. What a wretch he has been. What a jewel she is to suffer indigity for his sake. Jumping up from the table, he rushes home with a firm purpose of amendment, bestowing upon her the love and attention she hungered for.

HIS WIFE'S SWEETHEARTS.—Little did Jenkins dream of the trouble he was cooking up for himself when he, in a spasm of generosity, bought his wife a beautiful fur-lined coat and picture hat. But such is fate. Entering with these above mentioned articles of feminine apparel, they excite the covetousness of the servants. We all know that the most serious servant question is "How do I look in Madam's clothes?" Mr. Jenkins starts off on a business trip and Mrs J. sits and dozes in a Morris chair. Fine for the housemaid, who has a date with her sweetheart. She wears the coat and hat, intending to show her beau how she looks in fine feathers. Jenkins, meanwhile, has arrived at the railroad station and finds his train an hour late. He will go back home for the time, and on the way sees what he imagines his wife in the arms of a strange man. Rushing up, he proceeds to annihilate the supposed wrecker of his home, while the coat and hat with its wearer disappear. When Jenkins enters and finds his wife asleep and the articles in place, he is mystified, satisfied in a measure that he was mistaken. Sheepishly he exits and starts back to the railroad station, where he is this time just one second too late. Nothing to do now but go home and wait for the train. On the way back, he espies the coat and hat, the wearer in the arms of a sailor. This time it is the kitchen maid. With a cry, "What, another?" he springs at the sailor, and is effectively done up by the burly tar, the kitchen girl having "beat it," putting the coat back where it is later appropriated by the colored maid. Mrs. J. awakes and discovering the loss, gives alarm and a policeman is put on the trail. This policeman finds the missing duds in Jenkins' possession for he has caught the maid and taken them from her. Things look conclusive as to Jenkins being the thief and he is arrested, his wife notified, and through her identification is released. Jenkins' little act of generosity cost him several cases of heart failure, an arrest, a bedraggled suit of clothes and two black eyes.

AFTER THE BALL.—Brown might have known that he took his life in his own hands when he accompanied Smith and Jones to the masque ball, being fully aware of the violence of his wife's temper. Having braved the situation thus far, he might have returned to his home early. But no, the fun was too fast and furious and there is something coming to him on his return, for Mrs. Brown is waiting for him with a rolling pin which she intends to bounce off his head. It is the wee hours of the morning and yet Brown cometh not. Mrs. Brown at length gets tired and retires. She has hardly done so when Brown and his friends enter still wearing their masquerade costumes, Smith as a burglar, and Jones as a copper. The sight of the rolling pin lying on the table arouses Brown's realization of what he may expect. In the throes of his terror a scheme which seems good if it works, occurs to him. Jones as the copper must hide, Smith as the burglar is to overpower Brown, the skirmish to awaken Mrs. B. Well did the scheme work? It did in the start out, but a false move on the part of the trio discovered them and then—well we draw the curtain.

EDISON.

AN OLD SIVER MINE IN PERU.—In this film we see the miners, their forms bent to the earth from toil, carrying the ore up from the depths of the mine. Dumping their loads at the mouth of the mine, they return for more, while others arrive, fill their "capachas," or small leather bags, with the ore and carry them on their backs to the Chill mill. This consists of a huge stone roller propelled by water power, and on it and under it are tossed shovels-full of the ore to be ground up in water. The mixture is then conducted to large vats where it is allowed to settle, the water is first drained off, the ore reduced by treatment with quicksilver, and then follows a native process of smelting which is crude in the extreme.

With the wonders of steam and electricity now made common, every-day events, the film seems to give us a glimpse back into the Dark Ages.

A MOUNTAIN MAID.—The story opens in the office of a prominent theatrical manager and shows conversations first with his leading man and, after the latter's departure, with the little leading lady of a new play called "The Mountain Maid," which is to be put out when the Fall season opens. Both of the young players, who are unknown to each other, decide to go after local color, and by one of the chances of fate they select the same part of the Tennessee mountains. Of course they meet, and the manner of their meetings and the things that happen to them make up the story. In order to live up to the character fully, the little leading lady dresses as a mountain girl when she arrives at the cottage where she has engaged board, and a very attractive mountain maid she makes. For the same reason the leading man attires himself in native costume, and makes a stalwart and heroic looking mountaineer. They meet accidentally several times and the acquaintanceship ripens slowly.

Finally, one day late in the Summer, while wandering through the woods together, they discover some moonshine whiskey buried under the leaves, showing that a still is not far off. Understanding the situation the young man promptly replaces the whiskey and takes the girl away from the spot, but they have been seen by the moonshiners who believe the man to be a revenue officer in disguise. They surround his house that night, but fortunately the girl, who has gone to their trysting place and hidden there to surprise her lover, happens to overhear the plot to capture the young man, and is able to reach his house ahead of the crowd of moonshiners and notify him so that he can get away. Consequently, when in the moonlight the armed men face his door and call upon the young man to appear, he fails to respond to the summons.

And then comes the last scene of the play, the first rehearsal of "The Mountain Maid" on the stage.

PIGS IS PIGS.—The story begins with the ordering of two guinea pigs for Mr. Morehouse's small boy, to be shipped to the familiar express office where Mike Flannery, the thick-headed express agent insists that the rate on two guinea pigs should be thirty cents, because "dago pigs is pigs." Mr. Morehouse points to the rates on pets, which is twenty-five cents, and a violent argument ensues, the end of which is that Mr. Morehouse retires from the office in a high dudgeon, refusing to pay the amount or to accept the consignment.

He writes to the company. The letter is received; then Mr. Morehouse gets a reply at the end of a couple of weeks referring him to the Claim Department of the company. He is very wroth and proceeds to write a rebuke to the corporation. Meanwhile the little family of two pigs has increased somewhat.

Mr. Morehouse again receives a reply referring him to the Tariff Department in the matter. His rage now exceeds all bounds and he proceeds to lay himself out and the company as well. Again there is a long lapse of time while the company considers the matter and passes it through the usual channels. Meanwhile the family of pigs in Flannery's care is constantly growing.

Finally the express company refers the matter of the classification of guinea pigs to a professor who is supposed to be in Atlanta, Ga., who is in reality at the farthest end of the earth and who consequently does not receive the letter asking his opinion until some months have passed.

Then the company, receiving the professor's learned decision, decides that guinea pigs are not pigs but pets, and informs Mr. Morehouse that he may have his consignment at the twenty-five cent rate. He calls at the office in triumph with half of the village behind him to see his glory at having downed a great corporation. Of course Flannery is delegated at being relieved of his great burden and gladly offers Mr. Morehouse his consignment, which now consists of several thousand guinea pigs. Mr. Morehouse, however, has no notion of taking more than two, and when the stormy scene finally ends Flannery is still possessor of the pigs.

ESSANAY FILM CO.

THE GREATER CALL.—The first scene opens on the stage of the Comedy Theater, showing a part of the wings and Claudine Durand's dressing room. The curtain has fallen on the last act and the star, assisted by her maid, is dressing for the street when Richard Grey, an admirer of Mlle. Durand, enters and is admitted to Claudine's dressing room. The actress greets him effusively, and after a short love scene Grey proposes and is accepted.

The scene changes to three years later. The two have married and their marriage has been blessed with a wee girl. The little domestic scene ushers in the first hint of Claudine's dissatisfaction with her life and her longing to return to the stage. Richard has noted his wife's melancholy and trembling reproaches her for her lack of interest in her home and child. Claudine tells her husband that the lure of the stage is too great and that she must go back to it.

Ten years have elapsed and we find Claudine in her dressing room at the Comedy Theater, when she is interrupted by a call boy who hands her a card bearing Richard's name. In a moment she wavers and tells the boy to admit the gentleman.

Richard has brought with him the little girl, now a young lady of thirteen, who but faintly remembers her mother, and who for a moment clings to her father. Then there is an embrace in which the pent-up love of the mother breaks down all restraint in Claudine as she takes the little one to her heart.

The scene is interrupted by the call boy who calls "Overture," and Claudine responds, without even a parting word of good-bye.

Richard and the little girl leave the theater.

A few weeks later shows another scene on the stage of the Comedy Theater, with Claudine at her mirror in her dressing room. A messenger boy enters and hands Mlle. Durand a telegram which the woman hastily opens and then sinks fainting into her chair. In a moment, however, she has recovered and seizing her wraps runs madly from the room, the message gripped in her hand. The stage manager stops her as she runs to the door; there is a moment's altercation during which Claudine shows him the message: "Come home at once. Your baby is dying," and it is signed by Richard.

The manager implores her to continue until the close of the performance, but Claudine is deaf to his entreaties and entering a waiting cab is driven away.

At home the little girl is just approaching the crisis of the fever and the doctor and Richard are waiting with sinking hearts for the bare hope of retaining the little white soul. It is then that Claudine enters and runs sobbing to her child, but the doctor holds her back until the child stirs and slowly opens her eyes. With a faint smile she holds out her arms to her mother, who sinks on her knees and lifts her eyes in thanks.

HANK AND LANK.—Always on the lookout for easy money, "Hank and Lank," our favorite comedians, see an opportunity to get a square meal when they are inspired by the methods of a blind man, preying upon public charity.

"Hank and Lank" decide that it is easy to imitate the blind man, and hie away just too late, however, to see the supposed blind man arrested for imposing upon the public.

Hank has the first chance, and after painting a sign which is attached to his coat, he takes a position at a busy corner. Donations come quick and fast. Every passerby drops a coin into his little cup.

Lank, who has watched the operation with considerable interest, is anxious to try his hand at the graft and the two stroll away to the spot where they had seen the first beggar. For a time Lank is successful until a policeman, who had arrested blind man No. 1, comes on the scene, and after a struggle takes Lank away to the lock up.

The film ends here with Lank struggling with the policeman, and Hank making a rapid getaway.

THE BAD MAN'S CHRISTMAS GIFT.—Andy Carson, puncher on the Lazy X ranch, is in love with Gladys, daughter of Col. Pierce, the ranch owner. Gladys likes the young puncher, but when Jack Brinsley, a young Eastern friend of her father, comes to spend Christmas at the ranch, she speedily transfers her affection to the Easterner.

Carson, embittered by his failure in love, broods upon the matter, until his disappointment breeds a desire for revenge, and, to his mother, he threatens the life of his successful rival.

However, his mother tries to dissuade him, and, believing that she has succeeded, gives no further thought to her son's threat. The wedding day arrives, and after the ceremony the guests are assembled at supper in the ranch house, when Carson rides up, and slipping to the open door, fires at Brinsley, fortunately missing him.

He is gone before a pursuing party can be formed, and although they strongly suspect him of the Attempted murder there is no proof. Carson determined to make sure of his vengeance the next time, waits for a favorable opportunity.

It comes Christmas Eve when Carson is sure that a large party will be at the ranch. However he knows that the sheriff is keeping a close watch upon him and that any attempt will be frustrated by the vigilant officer.

His first move therefore is to get the sheriff out of the way, and going to the office he leaves a note reading:

"I missed my man at the wedding but will get him next time." He then conceals himself and has considerable amusement over watching the sheriff read the note. He then covers the astonished man with his revolver, disarms him and forces him to shackle himself. Placing a cigar in the helpless man's mouth, he lights it for him, laughs and goes out.

At the Last Chance Saloon the cattlemen are planning their Christmas celebration. One of their number is to impersonate Santa Claus, and carry the gifts to the Lazy X Ranch. Carson enters the saloon and hears their plans, but they do not invite him to participate, for he has made himself an outcast among them by his recent actions. However, he sees a splendid opportunity to carry out his threat, and slipping away, he hides and waylays "Santa Claus" at a lonely corner of the corral, forces him to take off his costume and locks him in a shed.

Arrayed in the Santa Claus garments, and carrying the sack of presents, Carson goes to the ranch house, intent upon murder. Upon one package addressed to Brinsley, he writes, "To-night is the Night."

The sheriff, released by a chance visitor to his office, hastens to the ranch house to warn Brinsley of his danger. Carson, as St. Nick, arrives, distributes the presents, and is taken by all for the ranchman who had been chosen to play the part. Brinsley's present, with the ominous warning, is handed out last, and the young Easterner, never suspecting Carson's real identity, confides in him, to the extent of allowing Santa Claus to examine his revolver and make sure that he is prepared for defense.

Carson had many opportunities to kill Brinsley, but the Christmas spirit is mastering his desire for revenge, and time after time he stays his hand. Suddenly another guest arrives, in the person of Carson's mother, who has heard of her boy's action at the sheriff's office and has come to find him. Even she fails to recognize him, but her presence there is the last straw that is breaking his desperate resolve, and Carson, thoroughly repentant, and bad man no longer, throws off his disguise, and confesses to his entire plans. The sheriff is determined to arrest him, but Gladys, her father, and even Brinsley, speak against his marring of the Christmas festivities, and Carson, grateful, joins the hands of Brinsley and Gladys with the words, "This is my Christmas gift to you."

GAUMONT.
G. Kleine.

CAIN AND ABEL.—Genesis iv. 3-16. And in the process of time it came to pass, that Cain brought of the fruit of the ground an offering unto the Lord.

And Abel, he also brought of the firstlings of his flock and of the fat thereof. And the Lord had respect unto Abel and to his offering:

But unto Cain and to his offering he had not respect. And Cain was very wroth and his countenance fell.

And the Lord said unto Cain, Why art thou wroth? and why is thy countenance fallen?

If thou doest well, shalt thou not be accepted? and if thou doest not well, sin lieth at the door: and unto thee shall be his desire, and thou shalt rule over him.

And Cain talked with Abel his brother: and it came to pass, when they were in the field that Cain rose up against Abel his brother, and slew him.

And the Lord said unto Cain, Where is Abel thy brother? And he said, I know not: Am I my brother's keeper?

And he said, What hast thou done? the voice of thy brother's blood crieth unto me from the ground.

And now art thou cursed from the earth, which hath opened her mouth to receive thy brother's blood from thy hand.

When thou tillest the ground, it shall not henceforth yield unto thee her strength; a fugitive and a vagabond shalt thou be in the earth.

And Cain said unto the Lord, My punishment is greater than I can bear.

Behold, thou hast driven me out this day from the face of the earth; and from Thy face shall I be hid; and I shall be a fugitive and a vagabond in the earth; and it shall come to pass, that every one that findeth me shall slay me.

And the Lord said unto him, Therefore whosoever slayeth Cain, vengeance shall be taken on him sevenfold. And the Lord set a mark upon Cain, lest any finding him should kill him.

And Cain went out from the presence of the Lord, and dwelt in the land of Nod, on the east of Eden.

KALEM CO.

THE GIRL SPY BEFORE VICKSBURG.—The opening scene of our story shows a Union powder wagon making its way down the road conveyed by a company of mounted Union soldiers. The scene at this point is a beautiful one, the soldiers marching by and the wagon. Nan, a girl [illegible] crouched in the underbrush at the roadside, is called to headquarters and learns of a secret expedition of the enemy. [illegible] Nan is furnished with a Union uniform, mounted on a fast pony and sent on [illegible] previously provided with a forged order successfully signed by a Union general which is to [illegible] through the lines. Nan started a-cutting through the Union lines and quickly locates the ammunition train taking up the march with them. When night arrives the convoy goes into camp, posts its sentinels for no especial fear of danger as they note they are well within the Union lines. Nan however watching her opportunity, slips up behind the lone sentry placed over the ammunition wagon and having rendered him unconscious drags him away from the wagon and takes his place. Watching her chance Nan plants a dynamite cartridge under the wagon, lights a fuse and makes a quick run out of the danger zone. Suddenly there is a loud explosion and all there is left of the ammunition wagon is a heap of charred embers. Attention is drawn to Nan while she is attempting to escape owing to a crash in the underbrush caused by tripping her foot and falling. A pursuing party is sent out after the daring spy who has had the hardihood to perform such a daring deed. Closely pursued by Union soldiers Nan rushes through the underbrush on foot finally reaching a nearby river where she plunges in diving under water and remains there until the Union soldiers had retired from the scene. Coming up to the surface she quickly swims ashore and takes her way rapidly to the Confederate army headquarters where she reports the successful ending of her mission, then on to her home to relieve her mother's anxiety.

THE STRANGER. An old man comes walking along the road. He approaches the home of a typical Cracker family. Careless disorder and discontent permeate the place. The husband picks up his dinner pail and his wife demands him to bring home his wages in full that night. Just at this time the old stranger pauses at the open doorway, speaks cheerily to the woman within and asks if he may sit and rest awhile. Picking up a child he begins to play with it, she watching him. The mother, impressed by the old wanderer's influence, invites him to remain. That night the husband returns slightly under the influence of liquor. His wife demands his weekly wages and is handed only a couple of dollars. This angers her and she strikes them from his hand. He, ugly from the influence of drink, raises his hand to strike. The old stranger appears at the door with his cheerful smile and the hand of the husband drops slowly. The stranger tells the husband that his wife has been so kind as to invite him to supper. The old stranger becomes an accepted member of the family and through his influence leads the husband from his evil ways bringing contentment to the household. When his labors are finished the little old man passes down the road.

LUBIN.

ART AND THE LEGACY.—Carl Mayfield and Alice Bennett were artists. That is, they had studies and dabbled with colors on canvas and hoped, some time, to make Rembrandt and Raphael look like "pikers." Carl's father was the head of a big steel mill and Carl could have a job at $5,000 a year any time he gave up painting. The young people took their paintings to a dealer named Fleecum who demanded a commission of 50 per cent. on all he sold. But he never sold any and so, didn't get rich on their commissions. Then Alice, one day, received $200, a legacy from an aunt. She was just about to rush to Carl's studio with it when she thought of a better plan. She hurried to Fleecum's shop and bought one of Carl's daubs for $200, swearing Fleecum to strict secrecy. In due time Carl received a check for $100, the price of his picture less Fleecum's commission. Of course, he thought he was hot on the trail of Rembrandt and Raphael and was about to hurry to Alice's studio and show her the check. But he neglected that she would be disappointed because none of her paintings had been sold. So he went to Fleecum's and bought one of her pictures for $100 and in due time she received her share, $50. Carl happened to be there when the money came and enjoyed her delight. As soon as she could slip away to Fleecum's she bought another of Carl's masterpieces for $50 and Carl, of course, received $25 which he immediately invested in one of her pictures. Eventually they discovered each other's subterfuge. By that time the legacy had dwindled to $6.25 which was Carl's share of a painting Carl Alice had bought for $12.50. At the same time a letter arrived from Carl's father offering him, for the last time, a position at the steel mills, at $5,000 a year. Then Carl and Alice woke up and decided to let Rembrandt and Raphael keep their laurels. Carl wired his acceptance of the position, "Coming to-morrow with my wife." There is an abundance of humor throughout the novel plot of this story and it is a sure winner.

G. MELIES.

IN THE TALL GRASS COUNTRY.—Look before you leap at hasty conclusions. Nell is a sweet girl and Bob is a good fellow; Nell is a typical [illegible] and Bob [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

the sheet of paper. The lawyer looks and sees the cross tattooed on Denny's wrist. All now overwhelm him with congratulations.

CATALAN, THE MINSTREL.—The fame of Catalan, the famous minstrel of Queen Beatrice of Savoy, was known far and wide. King Philip of France, desiring to hear him, asked his fair cousin if she would send him to his court for a short while. Beatrice acceded to the desire of Philip and despatched Catalan, entrusting to his care some rare Eastern perfumes as a present for the King. At the approach to Paris, Catalan ascertained from a peasant girl, Juliette, the spot where the archers who were to meet him were located. Desirous of obtaining the perfumes, the archers provoked a quarrel with Catalan and killed him. They returned to Paris and told the King that they had not met his guest. Left dying in the woods, the minstrel was found by Juliette, and he with his last breath begged her to carry to the king Queen Beatrice's written message. The king, at the girl's earnest request, gave her audience and learned of his archers' treachery. He immediately confronted his archers and accused them of the death of the bard. They denied their guilt, forgetting that the perfumes they had spread on their hair and garments irrefutably proclaimed them as the assassins. The king ordered swift punishment to be meted out to them and had a cross erected over the spot where the famous minstrel had been so cruelly slain. Juliette, who had been struck by the minstrel's handsome appearance, mourned him more than any and came frequently to the cross to pray.

THE YAQUI GIRL.—A Mexican troubadour, Pedro, and his sister are singing and playing in the streets for a livelihood. An Indian girl of the Yaqui tribe, by name Silver Arrow, is fascinated by the handsome Mexican. She follows him when he goes to play in front of the old convent, and is delighted when he exchanges a few words with her. Passing a flower seller, she buys a bunch of roses, and proceeding to the cottage where the handsome Pedro is sitting in the garden, she watches her opportunity when he goes inside for a minute, to lay the flowers, tied with a band taken from her hair, on his chair. Watching from behind a wall, she sees him take a rose and pin it on his coat. She then sees his sweetheart Marguerita come up and kiss him, and seeing the flower, she accuses him of deceiving her. She soon forgives Pedro and vents her jealousy by trampling on the flowers. Silver Arrow is morose, and seeing that she is not preferred to Marguerita, swears vengeance. A few days later the Indian maid is up in a tree recovering a bird she has shot with her arrow, when Pedro comes along disguised as a cowboy. Keeping quiet, she sees him hold up the express messenger as he rides along, and taking the booty, hide it among some shrubs. Stealing up to the cottage, she is about to stab Marguerita with a dagger when Pedro in the nick of time shoots it out of her hand. She denounces Pedro as a bandit and goes on her way. Marguerita ascertains from Pedro that the Yaqui girl's words are true, and insists that they must prevent the girl from informing the authorities. They follow after her, and soon catching up, overpower her and bind her on the back of a large white horse without bridle or saddle. They send him with his burden towards the boundless prairie. An Indian on a hill sees the horse and rushes to a nearby camp and obtains the aid of the cowboys, who are celebrating a roundup. They all mount and after a long chase one of the boys manages to lasso the white horse. Unbound, Silver Arrow tells her story and they all proceed to the Mexican's cottage. He sees them coming, led by the Indian girl, and knows that all is up. Shots are exchanged, but with so many against him, Pedro is soon riddled with bullets. Marguerita falls and weeps over his body and as she turns and sees Silver Arrow, says: "This is your work; see what you have done." But the Indian girl, satisfied at her revenge, without a tremor replies: "I swore if I no have him, you no have him."

VITAGRAPH.

PLAYING AT DIVORCE.—A mother and father prominent in society and well provided with this world's goods, yet unhappy in their marital relations, decide to get a divorce and begin proceedings to that end without delay. While they are busy in separating themselves their children are forgotten and neglected.

The youngsters inadvertently learn of their parents' intention and after an explanation from the oldest one they suggest that they play the girl is getting a divorce from her younger brother while the older boy sits as judge upon the merits of the case. The judge concludes that a divorce shall be granted. The little girl asks his honor about her dolly who represents their child.

The question is a knotty one and he takes the child (Dolly) in one hand and a sword in the other, after the manner of Solomon, and proceeds to sever the doll in twain. The girl cries, "No! Let me keep it." At this moment the mother and father return from their lawyers' offices and listen to the proceeding with humiliation and sorrow.

They ask the children what they are doing. The children tell them and show them the clipping from the newspaper, announcing their own divorce proceedings. They look at each other with tears streaming down their faces and rush into each other's arms in forgiveness and reconciliation; then, clasping their little ones in their arms, the family are happily reunited and the love of the parents is welded by the love and blessings of their children.

THE INTERNATIONAL MOTOR BOAT RACES.—The first part of this film shows the trial races for the selection of the motor boats as American defenders of the Motor Boat Club of America. Nothing has had so great an international interest as these races, which took place August 20, 1910, at Larchmont, N. Y., on Long Island Sound, for the Harmsworth trophy. The contestants are the Duke of Westminster's "Pioneer"; Daniel Hambury's "Zigarella," representing the Motor Yacht Club of Great Britain.

Representing the Motor Boat Club of America were Frederick K. Burnham's "Dixie II" and "The Nameless," owned by Commodore H. H. Melville and August Heckscher. The trophy was won by "Dixie II," the fastest boat that has ever been launched or sails any body of water.

A beautiful and extraordinary picture is shown at the close of the races when Clifford Harmon is seen flying over the Long Island Sound in his aeroplane just as the boats are crossing the line.

A DIXIE MOTHER.—"The Dixie Mother" embodies a variety of emotion. These emotions are the mother love, the wife love, and the love of home and country; the latter confined to that part of the Union, the South in the confederation and rebellion against the North. The love of country is environment or local infused and governed by the love of home and strengthened by the birthplace of those most near and dear to her.

Surrounded by the Union troops the Dixie mother's younger son is afraid to venture outside the house and rejoin his regiment. She urges him to go forth and battle for the cause; places a sword in his hand and again tells him to go, and inspires him with the zeal of her own feelings.

He has hardly left the old mansion with his brother when he is shot dead by a detachment of Union soldiers and his brother is wounded. Rushing from the house, the mother looks upon her dead son, accuses the Union officer of the deed; he shows her he has only a sword and it must have been done by a bullet fired by one of his men. The officer is very courteous and expresses sorrow for her bereavement.

The boy's body is carried into the house. The young officer and the scouts depart, taking prisoner the wounded son who is sent to a hospital tent of the Union encampment. After the soldiers have gone, the father comes from the secret chamber where he hid upon the approach of the enemy, beholds the body of his boy and swears eternal enmity against the North.

While the wounded son is in the hospital he is attended by a young nurse, a Northern girl, with whom he falls in love and at the same time he and the young officer become fast friends.

After the war the son goes North, marries the young nurse and one year later returns South and sends a letter, knowing his father's hatred, telling his father that he, his Northern wife and baby are at the crossroads. He would like his father to meet them and let the past be forgotten and forgiven in a happy reunion at the old homestead.

The mother gets the letter during her husband's absence. She shows it to him when he gets back. He refuses to listen to her appeal to forget his vow and welcome their boy and his family to their home and hearts. While this is going on, the old colored servant, following his mistress' orders, brings down the cradle in which she had rocked her own children and is now to be at the service of her grandchild.

Heart-broken and worn out by the conflict of country and the greater conflict of her own soul, the poor mother enters the home and when she sees the cradle, her mind gives way at the recollection of her dead boy who once occupied the little bed. Her husband comes into the room, realizes the condition of his wife, relents, kisses her and goes to the cross-roads, meets his son and family who are accompanied by the young officer whom we saw at the time of the younger son's death, coming back to see the daughter whom he loved at first sight.

They are welcomed by the father and reach the old home just as the mother in her derangement is about to pierce her heart with a sword which is gently taken from her by the Northern officer. Her son places his child in her arms and gradually as she fondles the little one her reason returns with the natural instincts of mother love. She holds the child up to her husband and kisses its tiny hand which holds the stars and stripes in its grasp while he fondly clasps his wife in loving embrace indicative of reunion and peace.

THE LIGHT IN THE WINDOW.—Although she is ardently wooed by Seth, Lavinia refuses to marry while her mother, who is aged and infirm, lives. When her younger sister is married, Seth is still more persistent, but she just as persistently holds to her resolution to stand by her mother. Seth gets angry and goes to sea. The vessel in which he sails is wrecked and he manages to save himself and a little boy whose parents with all the others on board, are lost.

Lavinia reads a newspaper account of the wreck saying that all hands on the ship were lost. She grieves for the loss of her lover and her mind is ever with those on the deep and she always keeps a light in the window which looks out upon the sea as a sort of a memoriam and a beacon to those who sail upon its waters.

Twenty years have passed and many changes have taken place—Lavinia's mother has died; Seth has been prosperous and is now a retired sea captain; the child he saved from the wreck, he has adopted as his own son. Lavinia's younger sister has a family and her daughter, now a young lady, comes to live with her aunt Lavinia to be as a companion and daughter to her.

Seth, about this time, longs to go back to the scenes of his boyhood and see how the old place looks; he takes his son with him. He recognizes Lavinia's old home and all its pleasant associations and thinks he would like to see who lives there now. He finds his old sweetheart still in possession, makes himself known, they renew the old flame and agree to get married. Lavinia's niece now appears with Seth's boy and they too are very fond of each other.

Seth and Lavinia are now married and living at the old home where their early courting was done.

THIS WEEK'S PROGRAM OF LICENSED FILMS.

Monday, December 26.

Biograph—Winning Back His Love (Dr.) 994
Lubin—Making a Man of Him (Dr.) 980
Pathe—The Atonement (Dr.) 656
Pathe—The Bowling Fiend 344
Selig—The Rustlers (Dr.) 990

Tuesday, December 27.

Edison—Flora, the Fruit Girl (Dr.) 1000
Essanay—Girls Will Be Boys (Com.) 1000
Gaumont—The Adventuress (Dr.) 995
Vitagraph—In Neighboring Kingdoms (Dr.) 995

Wednesday, December 28.

Edison—A Family of Vegetarians (Com.) 990
Kalem—The Girl Spy Before Vicksburg (Dr.) ...935
Pathe—Running Away From a Fortune (Com.) ...540
Pathe—The American Fleet in French Waters (Sc.) 125
Pathe—In Full Cry (Sc.) 331
Urban—A Mexican Romance (Dr.) 650
Urban—Coaching in Devonshire, England (Sc.) ...348

Thursday, December 29.

Biograph—His Wife's Sweethearts (Com.) 682
Biograph—After the Ball (Com.) 311
Lubin—Blue Horse Mine (Dr.) 990
Melies—In the Tall Grass Country (Dr.) 980
Selig—Justinian and Theodora (Dr.) 1000

Friday, December 30.

Edison—The Romance of Hefty Burke (Dr.) 1000
Pathe—Catalan, the Minstrel (Dr.) 768
Pathe—Carnival of Japanese Firemen in Tokio (Sc.) 230
Kalem—The Stranger (Dr.) 1005
Vitagraph—Crazy Apples (Com.) 986

Saturday, December 31.

Essanay—A Gamble of the West (Dr.) 1000
Gaumont—The Doctor's Secretary (Dr.) 981
Pathe—The Yaqui Girl (Dr.) 1000
Vitagraph—Where the Winds Blow (Com.) 987

AMONG THE EXHIBITORS.

Mena, Ark.—The Unique Theater is the name of the new moving picture theater to be opened on De Queen street, which will be under the proprietorship of Miss Eleanor Brooke.

Jacksonville, Fla.—A new moving picture theater is to be built here which will be known as the Mirror. The situation for this new amusement house is at 311 Main street.

Chester, Pa.—A new moving picture theater will be erected on Sixth street for Charles W. Gorsuch.

Houghton, Mich.—W. H. Mason will erect a two-story moving picture palace on Quincy street.

Lockport, Ill.—Moving picture exhibitions are now being given in the Ward Building.

Mongo, Ind.—A new picture house is being established for D. D. Larue.

Lena, Ark.—The Unique Theater is the name of the latest moving picture theater to be established in this town which will be under the management and proprietorship of Miss Eleanor Brooke.

Baltimore, Md.—A big feature amusement building that will feature vaudeville and moving picture shows is to be erected at the intersection of Frederick avenue and Gilmore streets for the Empire Theater Company. This theater, it is said, will be one of the handsomest of picture palaces ever erected in this town.

St. Louis, Mo.—A new moving picture theater is being planned for the corner of Jefferson avenue and Gravois, for the Vaudeville Theater Construction Company.

Hornell, N. Y.—The management of the State Soldiers' Home at Bath have decided to build a moving picture theater so as to give aid to the old veterans.

New York City.—A new moving picture theater has opened at 76 Catherine street which will be under the management of Martin Garone.

Waverly, N. Y. Clarence Cowells, the Broad street picture show man, has leased the Opera House restaurant store and will move his picture show to that place.

Brazil, Ind.—M. C. Stewart, of the Stewart Vaudeville Theater, is planning for the remodeling and enlarging of his theater.

Altoona, Pa. The new Family Theater, a beautiful and up-to-date moving picture house on Twelfth street between Seventh and Eighth avenues, owned by Robert Gamble, is nearly completed and will be ready for business within a couple of weeks.

LICENSED RELEASES.

BIOGRAPH.

Oct. 27—The Proposal (Com.) 466
Oct. 31—Two Little Waifs (Dr.) 997
Nov. 3—Waiter No. 5 (Dr.) 997
Nov. 7—The Fugitive (Dr.) 996
Nov. 10—Simple Charity (Dr.) 993
Nov. 14—Sunshine Sue (Dr.) 998
Nov. 17—The Troublesome Baby (Com.) 492
Nov. 17—Love in Quarantine (Dr.) 505
Nov. 21—The Song of the Wildwood Flute (Dr.) .996
Nov. 24—His New Lid (Com.) 563
Nov. 24—Not So Bad as It Seemed (Com.) 432
Nov. 28—A Plain Song (Dr.) 997
Dec. 1—Effecting a Cure (Dr.) 997
Dec. 5—A Child's Stratagem (Dr.) 998
Dec. 8—Turning the Tables 416
Dec. 8—Happy Jack, a Hero (Com.) 576
Dec. 12—The Golden Supper (Dr.) 998
Dec. 15—His Sister-in-Law (Dr.) 998
Dec. 19—The Lesson (Dr.) 994
Dec. 22—White Roses (Dr.) 588
Dec. 22—The Recreation of an Heiress (Com.)..410
Dec. 26—Winning Back His Love (Dr.) 994
Dec. 29—His Wife's Sweethearts 682
Dec. 29—After the Ball (Com.) 311

EDISON.

Mountains in Canada (Scenic).....440
Nov. 8—The Lassie's Birthday (Com.).....560
Nov. 9—The Ship's Husband (Com.).....1000
Nov. 11—The Adoption (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 15—Into the Jaws of Death (Dr.).....990
Nov. 16—The Stolen Claim (Dr.) 1000
Nov. 18—The Toymaker; The Doll; and The Devil (Com.) 990
Nov. 22—His Mother's Thanksgiving (Dr.).....995
Nov. 23—Through the Clouds (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 25—A Daughter of the Mines.....995
Nov. 29—The Greater Love (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 30—Arms and the Woman (Dr.).....975
Dec. 2—The Cowpuncher's Glove (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 6—The Winning of Miss Langdon (Dr.)...995
Dec. 7—The Life of a Salmon (Ind.) 440
Dec. 7—Amateur Night (Com.) 550
Dec. 9—The Captain's Bride (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 13—An Old Silver Mine in Peru (Ind.) ...250
Dec. 13—A Mountain Maid (Dr.) 750
Dec. 14—Pigs is Pigs (Com.) 1000
Dec. 16—The Red Cross Seal (Dr.).....
Dec. 20—The Police Force of New York City (Scenic) 995
Dec. 21—The Joke they Played on Bumptious (Com.) 990
Dec. 23—A Christmas Carol (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 27—Flora, the Fruit Girl (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 28—A Family of Vegetarians (Com.) 990
Dec. 30—The Romance of Hefty Burke (Dr.) ..1000

ESSANAY FILM CO.

Nov. 8—Hank and Lank "Life Savers" (Com.) 560
Nov. 12—The Marked Trail (Dr.) 1000
Nov. 15—Love at First Sight (Com.).....978
Nov. 19—The Little Prospector (Dr.).....960
Nov. 22—That Popular Tune (Com.).....
Nov. 22—Hank and Lank (as Sandwich Men) (Com.) .....
Nov. 26—A Western Woman's Way (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 29—The Tie That Binds (Dr.).....953
Dec. 3—"Circle C" Ranch's Wedding Present (Com.) 1000
Dec. 6—Love's Awakening (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 10—A Cowboy's Vindication (Dr.) 950
Dec. 13—A Tangled Masquerade (Com.).....1000
Dec. 17—The Tenderfoot Messenger (Dr.) 997
Dec. 20—The Greater Call (Dr.) .....
Dec. 20—Hank and Lank (Com.) .....
Dec. 24—The Bad Man's Christmas Gift (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 27—Girls Will be Boys (Com.) 1000
Dec. 31—A Gambler of the West (Dr.).....1000

KALEM CO.

Nov. 11—The Attack on Fort Ridgely (Dr.)...1000
Nov. 16—A Drama of the Present (Dr.) 990
Nov. 18—Jim Bridger's Indian Bride (Dr.)...1000
Nov. 23—The Lad from Old Ireland (Dr.)....1000
Nov. 25—The Roses of the Virgin (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 30—The Touch of a Child's Hand (Dr.)...870
Nov. 30—Up the Thames to Westminster (Dr.)..125
Dec. 2—Elder Alden's Indian Ward (Dr.).....945
Dec. 7—Rachel (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 9—The Rescue of Molly Pitney (Dr.) .1007
Dec. 14—Seta's Temptation (Dr.) 955
Dec. 16—Her Indian Mother (Dr.) 995
Dec. 21—The Little Spinewald Maiden (Dr.)....985
Dec. 23—When Lovers Part (Dr.) 963
Dec. 28—The Girl Spy Before Vicksburg (Dr.) 995
Dec. 30—The Stranger (Dr.) 1005

LUBIN.

Nov. 3—Mike the Housemaid 990
Nov. 7—The Taming of Wild Bill (Dr.).....990
Nov. 10—The Mystery of the Torn Note (Dr.)..550
Nov. 10—The Gambler's Charm (Dr.).....450
Nov. 14—The Street Preacher (Dr.) 990
Nov. 17—Right in Front of Father (Com.) 990
Nov. 21—Caught by the Camera (Dr.).....
Nov. 24—Romance of the Lazy K Ranch (Dr.).
Nov. 28—Shadows and Sunshine (Dr.).....
Dec. 1—Spoony Sam (Com.) .....
Dec. 12—An Exile's Love (Dr.) 990
Dec. 15—The Musical Ranch (Dr.).....
Dec. 19—The Dead Letter (Dr.) .....
Dec. 22—An American Count (Dr.) .....
Dec. 26—Making a Man of Him (Dr.) 980
Dec. 29—Blue Horse Mine (Dr.) 990

GAUMONT.

G. Kleine.

Nov. 12—A Trip to the Blue Grotto, Capri, Italy (Sc.) 309
Nov. 15—Both Were Stung (Com.) 696
Nov. 15—Picturesque Majorca (Sc.) 276
Nov. 19—Lisbon, Before and During the Revolution (Sc.) 727
Nov. 19—Spanish Loyalty 280
Nov. 22—Cast Into the Flames (Dr.).....381
Nov. 22—A Woman's Wit (Com.).....595
Nov. 26—Samson's Betrayal (Dr.).....519
Nov. 26—Calino Travels as a Prince (Com.)....489
Nov. 29—The Flat Next Door (Com.).....722
Nov. 29—Tarascon on the Rhone (Scenic).....243
Dec. 3—Lured by a Phantom (Dr.).....712
Dec. 3—Nancy's Wedding Trip (Com.).....273
Dec. 6—A Man of Honor (Dr.) 834
Dec. 6—Professor's Hat (Com.) 171
Dec. 10—The Revolt (Dr.).....942
Dec. 13—The Phantom Rider (Com.).....279
Dec. 13—Closed Gate (Dr.) 676
Dec. 17—Herod and the New Born King (Biblical) 965
Dec. 20—The Cinderella Girl (Dr.).....769
Dec. 20—The Kingdom of Flowers (Botanical)..220
Dec. 24—The Old Home (Dr.) 732
Dec. 24—Cain and Abel (Biblical) 279
Dec. 27—The Adventuress (Dr.).....995
Dec. 31—The Doctor's Secretary (Dr.).....931
Jan. 3—The Artist's Pay Day (Dr.).....972

URBAN-ECLIPSE.

G. Kleine.

Nov. 2—Tragical Concealment (Dr.) 640
Nov. 2—Crossing the Andes (Sc.) 350
Nov. 9—Secret of the Cellar (Dr.).....788
Nov. 9—A Trip Through Scotland (Scenic)....217
Nov. 16—The Rival Barons (Dr.) 860
Nov. 16—An Alpine Retreat (Sc.) 142
Nov. 23—Behind a Mask (Dr.).....516
Nov. 23—Nantes (Scenic) 450
Nov. 30—The Return at Midnight (Dr.).....634
Nov. 30—Ramble Through Ceylon (Scenic).....319
Dec. 7—Death of Admiral Coligny (Dr.).....992
Dec. 5—On the Mexican Border (Dr.) .....
Dec. 8—Reggie's Engagement (Dr.) .....
Dec. 14—The Little Matchseller's Christmas (Dr.) 749
Dec. 14—Scenes in British India (Sc.) 253
Dec. 21—The Tyrant of Florence (Dr.) 676
Dec. 21—A Chamois Hunt 332
Dec. 28—A Mexican Romance (Dr.).....650
Dec. 28—Coaching in Devonshire, England (Scenic) 348

G. MELIES.

Oct. 27—Under the Stars and Bars (Dr.).....970
Nov. 3—Birthday Cigars (Com.).....
Nov. 3—Generous Customers (Com.).....
Nov. 10—A Mountain Wife (Dr.).....986
Nov. 17—His Sergeant's Stripes (Dr.).....950
Nov. 24—The Cowboys and the Bachelor Girl (Dr.) .....
Dec. 1—Pals (Dr.) .....
Dec. 8—What Great Bear Learned (Dr.) .....
Dec. 15—Old Norris' Gal (Dr.) .....
Dec. 22—A Western Welcome (Dr.) 980
Dec. 29—In the Tall Grass Country (Dr.) ...980
Jan. 5—The Chinese Scales (Dr.) 980

PATHE.

Dec. 3—The Maid of Niagara (Dr.) 995
Dec. 5—The Clever Domestic (Com.) 485
Dec. 5—The Mexican Tumblers 470
Dec. 7—An Animated Armchair (Com.) 650
Dec. 7—Government Plantation (Sc.) 348
Dec. 9—Saved in the Nick of Time (Dr.) ...880
Dec. 9—Soap in His Eyes (Com.) 184
Dec. 10—Her First Husband's Return (Dr.) ...980
Dec. 12—In Her Father's Absence (Com.) 544
Dec. 12—The Jokans 287
Dec. 14—Hebrews' Xmas (Com.) 550
Dec. 14—Charlie and Kitty in Brussels (Sc.)....400
Dec. 16—Little Snowdrop 1000
Dec. 17—Saved by Divine Providence (Dr.).....985
Dec. 19—Get Rich Quick (Dr.) 735
Dec. 19—Hunting Sea Lions in Tasmania (Scenic) 266
Dec. 21—The Runaway Motor Car (Com.).....555
Dec. 21—Max Goes Skiing (Com.) 430
Dec. 22—The Lucky Charm (Fairy Tale).....697
Dec. 23—Betty's Fireworks (Com.) 594
Dec. 24—Sunshine in Poverty Row (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 26—The Atonement (Dr.) 656
Dec. 26—The Bowling Fiend 344
Dec. 28—Running Away From a Fortune (Com.) 540
Dec. 28—The American Fleet in French Waters 125
Dec. 28—In Full Cry (Sc.) 371
Dec. 30—Catalan, the Minstrel (Dr.) 768
Dec. 30—Carnival of Japanese Firemen in Tokio (Sc.) 230
Dec. 31—The Yaqui Girl (Dr.) 1000

SELIG.

Nov. 10—The Vampire (Dr.) 1000
Nov. 14—Mr. Four Flush (Com.) 990
Nov. 17—Gratitude (Dr.) 1000
Nov. 21—No Place Like Home (Com.) .....
Nov. 21—The Dull Razor (Com.) .....
Nov. 24—The Merry Wives of Windsor (Dr.)..1000
Nov. 28—The Queen of Hearts (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 1—The Stepmother (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 5—The Widow of Mill Creek Flat (Dr.)..1000
Dec. 8—In the Wilderness (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 12—A Tale of the Sea (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 15—County Fair (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 19—John Dough and the Cherub (Mystical).1000
Dec. 22—Overland to Fremont (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 26—The Rustlers (Dr.).....990
Dec. 29—Justinian and Theodora (Dr.) 1000
Jan. 2—The Argonauts (Dr.) 1000

VITAGRAPH.

Nov. 25—A Four-Footed Pest (Com.).....
Nov. 25—The Statue Dog.....
Nov. 26—Love, Luck and Gasoline (Dr.).....
Nov. 29—A Woman's Love (Dr.).....
Dec. 2—Jack Fat and Jim Slim at Coney Island (Com.) 951
Dec. 3—The Poacher's Wife (Dr.) 1001
Dec. 6—A Tin-Type Romance (Com.) 998
Dec. 9—He Who Laughs Last (Com.).....927
Dec. 10—The Color Sergeant's Horse (Dr.) ...978
Dec. 13—The Law and the Man (Dr.) 1010
Dec. 16—Playing at Divorce (Dr.) .....
Dec. 16—The International Motor Boat Race (Sc.) .....
Dec. 17—A Dixie Mother (Dr.) .....
Dec. 20—The Light in the Window (Dr.).....
Dec. 23—Clancy (Dr.) .....
Dec. 24—Jean and the Waif (Dr.).....
Dec. 27—In Neighboring Kingdoms (Dr.) 995
Dec. 30—Crazy Apples (Com.) 986
Dec. 31—Where the Winds Blow (Com.) 987

MOTION PICTURE
and Vaudeville Theatres, large or small,
BOUGHT AND SOLD
We can sell yours or find one for you.
ROYAL REALITY & INVESTMENT CO.
4 Adams Street, Chicago, Ill.

THE ONE BEST SOUVENIR
S. R. O. EVERY NIGHT
5c. EACH
$5.00 Per Hundred

This beautiful Souvenir Spoon is guaranteed Solid Silver Plated French Gray Finish and the latest design. Write today for sample and 3 plans that will fill your house to capacity.

UNITED STATES FACTORIES CO. MANUFACTURERS 40 Dearborn Street, Chicago

Independent Film Stories.

LUX FILMS.

AUNT JULIA'S PORTRAIT.—A lady enclosed a letter with her gift, in which she informs her niece and nephew that, in honor of her birthday, she is sending them her portrait, and shortly contemplates paying them a visit. Though the lady is delighted, the gentleman is most decidedly not, and taking advantage of his wife's absence, he hangs the aforesaid portrait in his daughter's room. That young lady cannot understand the reason why work is so difficult until, glancing at the likeness of her Aunt Julia, she decides it must be removed, and that immediately. Accordingly she hangs it in her brother's room, but the boy objecting to it, they give it to the stout cook. She in turn presents it to the coachman, but even he cannot stand it, so at last the despised portrait is hung, its face to the wall, in the stables, though the horses in vain signify their disapproval. Shortly after, Aunt Julia arrives in person, and is warmly welcomed by her niece. At once the old lady demands to see her portrait, and is shown into the study. Here her nephew suddenly remembers that he had stealthily placed it elsewhere, and accordingly, a visit is paid to the girl's room. She in turn takes them to her brother's room, then onward to the kitchen, and the coachhouse, with Auntie's face growing longer and longer. There is certainly some excuse for her anger when she finds her portrait hanging in the stables, and even the face turned to the wall! This is the last straw, and in spite of her niece's tearful pleadings, Auntie orders her carriage. But the very horses are frightened as they catch a glimpse of the likeness, and bolt for their lives, leaving Auntie stranded.

TIM WRITES A POEM.—Tim, a long-haired individual, is most poetically inclined, and is more than proud when he receives a note from an editor saying that he would be pleased to have a romance submitted to him. Tim bundles everybody out of the room, and taking off his coat, commences his task. Ideas flow upon him, when he is interrupted by the arrival of his landlady, who demands instant settlement of her account. Tim, groans, and paying the necessary sum, hustles her out. Again a little peace, to be rudely broken by the arrival of his wife, who is desirous of showing him her new hat. This is too much for Tim, who catching his spouse by the shoulders, sends her spinning through the door, and, the unkindest cut of all, tears her latest creation to pieces. He settles down to write a few more glowing lines, when the table begins to move in a most unaccountable fashion. The reason is not far to seek, for in the room below the owner is having a hanging-lamp fixed, and the stalwart workman is hammering away at the ceiling for all he is worth. Then it has to be tested, and just as Tim has arrived at a most dramatic point, the ceiling gives way and he rapidly disappears, falling, a most tragic figure, amid showers of plaster, ink, dust, etc.

CHAMPION.

DAYS OF THE EARLY WEST.—Wending their way across the prairie are Peter Standish and wife, and Enos Stilling with wife and son, and brother Abram, of whom, Joseph Stilling and Mary Standish are newly wed and this trip is as a honeymoon of nowadays. Brother Abram is a stern preacher.

Arriving at a desirable location these settlers build a temporary cabin, etc., etc. Their immunity from attack is of short duration, however, for the blood-thirsty redskins are on the warpath, and subsequently bear down upon the settlers, driving them to refuge within the cabin. The little band repels the onslaught to the last ounce of powder, whereat Brother Abram exhorts them to courage with religious prayer. This method of the savior is too trying for young Joseph who inscribes a note hastily on paper, gives it to Shep the collie and sends it off for aid.

This infuriates the red warriors who set fire to the cabin with intent to burn them out but our brave defenders prefer incineration to torture by them. The faithful dog dashes into the barroom of the settlement, delivers the note, and leads on the rescuers to the succor of the harassed victims, where they soon scatter the Indians, the settlers rushing from the burning cabin as it is about to fall in on their heads.

AMERICAN.

TWO LUCKY JIMS. The two Jims loved the same girl. One was exceedingly fat, and the other equally exceedingly slim. Slim Jim was the father's choice and fat Jim the mother's favorite. Both Jims and the girl's parents had their plans in connection with their respective favorites, but the girl had a lover. The father did not like the lover and forbade him the right of the house, so he sneaked in surreptitiously.

One day in the midst of his arduous, surreptitious courting, the approach of Slim Jim made it necessary for the girl to hide her idol in a barrel where he was compelled to sweat and fume. She finally appeased Jim's wooing by promising to elope. The lover then emerged from his place of concealment and was again comfortably established with his sweetheart, when Fat Jim approached. The necessity for hiding her lover was once more apparent to the girl, and she hid him under a clothes basket and proceeded to entertain the fat man. She succeeded in getting rid of him in a similar manner.

Fat Jim, while waiting for the young lady evolved a plan of elopement. Slim Jim's mind worked along the same lines, and he resolved likewise. After waiting for about an hour after the original time set for the girl to meet them, they each one separately started towards the ranch house with a view to ascertaining the reason for the delay. In their search they unexpectedly met each other, and finding one another on the same mission, in indignation decided to investigate the situation. They discovered that in the interim an elopement had taken place, and that the girl had departed with her personally favored suitor. They aroused the parents, who came forth in their negligee, and in great ire called down the wrath of the gods on the individual who had stolen their daughter from them and without their consent. The two Jims immediately set out in pursuit of the lovers on the only two horses in the stable, and the deserted parents, upon donning a few garments, were forced to follow on a stubborn burro. With a good start on the irate lovers and parents, the elopers were soon at the office of the Justice of the Peace, and there they met opposition. The Justice hadn't eaten his breakfast, and refused to marry them on an empty stomach. A 44 calibre gun in the hand of the would be bridegroom caused him to suddenly change his mind. When the two unlucky Jims arrived, the door of the Justice of Peace was barred against them. They demanded admission and were refused.

The fond mother rode in about the same time on her husband's back, the burro having balked quite some distance out of town. Both Jims and the parents held a consultation, and a battering-ram was applied to the Justice's door. Cupid beat them to it, however, and the happy couple came forth victoriously.

A few years elapsed and the two Jims, still nursing their wounded hearts, went to visit the home of their successful rival. They found him sweatily engaged at the wash-tub, while his indolent wife sat by bossing the job. The ardent lover had degenerated into a henpecked husband.

After witnessing several violent demonstrations of domestic tranquillity punctured by a lot of bawling kids, the two Jims stole away and congratulated each other on their lucky misfortune.

IMP.

THE WISE DRUGGIST.—Tom Lyte and his wife, Vera, are the happiest couple in existence, until trouble starts when he and Tom Rand attend a bargain sale of overcoats and purchase a coat apiece. Shortly after this, in their hurry to leave the office Lyte gets Rand's coat, and Rand puts on Lyte's.

The next morning Tom and Vera have a most enjoyable breakfast, interspersing their eating with kisses, which delays Tom, and in his hurry he forgets all about his overcoat. Vera discovers it and tries to call him back but is too late and returning to the house, handles the coat rather carelessly, when a bundle of love letters drop from one of its pockets. Almost prostrated by the apparent evidences of her husband's perfidy, she decides to commit suicide. She tries several means for doing so, but the thoughts grow so unpleasant to her that she gives them up. As a last resort she decides upon poison. The druggist diagnoses her case instantly, and provides her with a little bottle of powdered sugar. Hastening home, she decks herself in her wedding gown, and finally succeeds in swallowing a goodly portion of the sugar, and then wisely telephones poor hubby of her deed.

Tom Lyte rushes home, seizes the bottle, takes it to the drug store, and begs for an antidote. The druggist explains the nature of the dose, and in order to illustrate its harmlessness takes some himself. Tom returns home relieved and happy, but proceeds to teach his wife a lesson. He bids her a long farewell, and takes a dose of the alleged poison himself, she using every means in her power to prevent him. After thoroughly frightening his wife, Tom explains the joke to her, and rubs the balance of the sugar into her face, then telling her he can no longer live with a woman so jealous, he starts to leave. She seizing him by the coat tails, drags him back into the room and begs his pardon. Of course he forgives her.

When Tom Rand comes to regain his coat, the young couple tender him a very warm reception, and after beating him over the head with his own coat, etc., etc., they drive him into the street.

REUNITED.—Mr. and Mrs. James Elkins and Mr. and Mrs. Dent were warm friends. The Dents had a little boy named Harry, while the Elkins had a little girl, Maud.

These two children were playmates and were always teasing each other. One day while playing, Harry sprang up and pursued Maud, who ran away as fast as her little legs could carry her. She goes a long way and turns into a deserted street. A gypsy happened along, took her by the hand and led her away. Harry followed and arrived just in time to see Maud disappear with the gypsy.

Harry then returned home as fast as he could and informs his parents and Mr. and Mrs. Elkins. Careful search was made, but no trace of her could be discovered.

Fifteen years elapse—Maud's disappearance is now a mere memory.

Harry, grown to manhood, is riding, in his auto mobile, past a gypsy encampment when the chauffeur discovers that the machine requires water. Harry goes to the camp to procure some, and while there, meets a girl, with whom he falls in love. He pays a second visit some days later, and proposes marriage to her, is accepted, and married.

The couple do not succeed very well in life, and soon reach the end of their slender resources. Then through worry and exposure Harry is taken sick. It is then that the wife, resuming her gypsy dress goes forth in an endeavor to obtain aid for her husband. She goes from place to place but always with the same result—nothing. She finally falls exhausted by the roadside, where she is soon afterwards discovered by the Elkins and the Dents, who are passing in their automobile. They get out of the machine, and pick her up, and as soon as they revive her, she tells about her husband, and gives his name.

The two families then hurry to Harry's bedside and subsequently he is removed to his parents' home. Greatly to the joy of all concerned, the wife is found to be the little girl, who had disappeared fifteen years before.

THANHOUSER COMPANY.

HYPNOTIZED.—May Smalley is a simple little country girl with whom Jack, a youth whom she has known since childhood, is very much in love. When a traveling show, consisting of a hypnotist and a Hindoo magician comes to the opera house in their little town, the two young people are among the other interested spectators who flock to see the performance.

May's youth and beauty attract the hypnotist, who plans to lure her away from her home. He sends May a message that he has a communication for her from the spirit world. Against the protests of Jack, her escort, May goes behind the scenes after the performance to meet the great hypnotist, who fascinates her with his wiles. The hypnotist is an unscrupulous villain, and seeing that May is thoroughly impressed with his few tricks and considers him quite superhuman, he induces her to follow him when he leaves the town.

How Jack proves himself to be a youth of resource as well as courage, and the important part he played in May's deliverance, by the Hindoo fakir, is well told by the picture. Finally the hypnotist is shown in his true light. May is disillusioned, and comes to decide that Jack is just about the kind of protection she needs in a world of uncertainty.

THE VICAR OF WAKEFIELD.—The Vicar of Wakefield, although a man of culture and learning, is a poor man at business. Despite the fact that he inherited a large fortune, he loses it through the dishonesty of others, and at the age of fifty we find him living in an humble cottage, fighting desperately to support his large family. At this juncture two strangers introduce themselves to the Vicar. One is the young squire who owns the cottage in which the Vicar lives, and the other, Sir William, the squire's uncle. Sir William, however, does not disclose his rank, but poses as a simple country gentleman.

The squire becomes infatuated with the Vicar's elder daughter, Olivia, and against the warnings of her father, she is induced to elope with him, the squire having arranged for a mock marriage.

Later Olivia discovers how she had been tricked, and leaves the squire, who visits his wrath upon the entire family by having the Vicar imprisoned for debt. In prison the Vicar inspires the admiration and affection of all his fellow prisoners, to whom he teaches the comfort of religion. Among his converts is the squire's tool, who arranged for the wedding of Olivia and the squire. On learning that Olivia is the daughter of the Vicar, this fellow confesses that to play a trick on the squire, whom he really hates, he had furnished him a real minister, instead of a bogus one. The squire's uncle, Sir William, on learning the true state of affairs, forces the squire to ask Olivia's pardon on his knees, and the two are reunited. Sir William then discloses his identity and asks for the hand of Sophia. The Vicar is released from prison, and he and his family look forward to a future of happiness and plenty.

SOLAX COMPANY.

MRS. RICHARD DARE.—Captain Richard Dare, an army officer, has just married the girl of his choice, and two loving hearts beat happily but with a single cloud in the horizon of their bliss—Captain Dare's millionaire relative.

Young Mrs. Dare leaves home one bright morning on a shopping expedition. Shortly after her departure, Dare is surprised to receive a note from his Uncle Henry telling him he is in town enroute to Europe and sails that evening at 5 o'clock.

Captain Dare has been ordered to report to military headquarters by 4 o'clock. His wife is out visiting a friend. He glances at his watch: it is 2 o'clock. Summoning a messenger, he writes a note to his wife requesting her to call upon his uncle at 4 o'clock. He despatches the note by the messenger.

We next see the captain about to leave for the post of duty when the messenger boy returns and reports that he has been unable to find Mrs. Dare. Only one half hour left—what can he do? He will get one of his girl friends to call upon his uncle

ECLAIR.

THE GREAT MEDAL COMPETITION. One of the Paris Newspapers has proposed a sensational competition. There were hidden a medal in Paris, and whoever should be the lucky finder of same will receive a book he can embezzle [illegible] and Lance." Mr. Penniless cannot afford to overlook so vast an opportunity and accordingly he [illegible] and to [illegible] leave me alone entrusted' he [illegible] so vigorous [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the Sultan orders them to scatter roses about the sailor turkey; Zuleika and her handmaidens gather round and fold him in their warm embrace and Sandy is the happiest man bird in all Mohammed's realm.

ATLAS.

A STRAW RIDE. As you sit beside your "best gal" in the old bobsled, filled with straw, your thoughts are not with the troubles of yesterday but centered on the joys of to-night. Then you reach the big, red barn and the fun begins. Neighbors for miles around are there to greet you; the spirit of the occasion takes possession of you and you shout for joy. The "fiddler" begins to tune up and before you know it you are whirling around with Mandy, then with some other girl and finally you kiss your "pardner."

Of course, some critter in the party spoils the fun by getting jealous. Your best girl has found favor in his eyes and he shows it by a measly, if you're disabled by a bullet wound and the critter downright, dirty trick. You get mixed up in a complication of circumstances and before you know escapes.

To carry you along with the rest of the story would only be telling what you already know, so get the film, and you will know it all.

COLUMBIA.

QUEEN OF THE PRAIRIES.—A drama of the plains depicting the southwest, in the early days when woman, like man, was forced to contest every inch of the ground on which she stood; at a period and amid conditions which developed heroines of equal valor as the hero; a time when women faced the hardships of the West, displaying those trails which seem beyond human endurance. Such a drama is our "Queen of the Prairies." In our heroine we present a woman of that period—daring, tactful, masterful, a veritable queen and properly the idol of the cowboys' heart. A story embodying every element of the drama, every element of the true Western life. Herd of buffalo, cattle round-up, bucking horses, etc., in fact the kind which every live exhibitor wants and the public demand.

GREAT NORTHERN.

THE SCARECROW.—A man drops his pocketbook containing some notes, and this is found by a man tramping in search of work, whose first instinct is to return it, but who, in the end, tempted by his pressing necessities, keeps his find. The owner soon discovers his loss, and retraces his steps. Seeing a man hurrying away, he gives chase, but is unable to overtake the other. He accordingly telephones the police, who set out on bicycles. Meanwhile, the thief passes a scarecrow in a wheat field, and conceives the notion of hiding his prize in the old coat which adorns the bird scarer, proposing to return when the hue and cry has abated. No sooner said than done. The police overtake the thief, now walking quite slowly, with an air of conscious rectitude. He is searched, but the constables are baffled at not finding any evidence of guilt, and have to let their man go. The pocket-book is found in quite an unexpected fashion. The owner goes into a river to save a boy who is in danger, and who turns out to be the thief's son. His coat is stolen while he is in the water, and he borrows the one on the scarecrow. In the pocket he finds the lost notes, and tells the police. A smart detective devises a plan to entrap the man whom the police now suspect more strongly than ever. He dresses up as a scarecrow and takes the place of that object, waiting patiently for the bird to hop into the net spread for him. Sure enough, the thief returns, and as he fumbles for the pocket-book, he is clasped by strong arms and held fast. In the end, however, the man who was robbed cannot bring himself to prosecute the man whose son he saved, bringing to mind the old adage that a man's affection goes out to those whom he benefits.

NEW INCORPORATIONS

Pueblo, Colo.—The Photoplay Theater Company, capital $5,000. Directors: H. Loyd Kent, Oliver T. Curtis and B. D. V. Reeve.

Indianapolis, Ind.—The Central Film Service Company, capital $10,000. Directors: E. H. Ackmann, J. E. Hennessy and Max Flaskamp.

Wilmington, Del.—The Exhibitors' Film Supply Company, capital $100,000. Directors: D. A. Grant, George H. B. Martin and S. C. Seymour.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—The Rex Motion Picture Company, capital $25,000. Directors: Allan A. Deutsch and Anna Gardiner.

Newark, N. J.—The Ross Amusement Company, capital $100,000. Directors: S. Rose, H. S. Eisenberg and S. H. Levy.

Union City, Mo.—The Star Theater Company. Directors: Harry Platt, Sam. D. Smith and J. J. Browning.

Columbus, Ohio.—Doan Amusement Company, capital $10,000. Director: A. E. Bernstein.

New York City.—The Buffalo Bill and Pawnee Bill Film Company, capital $100,000. Directors: Pliny P. Craft, Thomas Evens and James Watson.

Hartwick, N. Y.—The William Steiner Film Exchange, capital $10,000. Directors: Bernard F. Conham, Karl S. Deitz and Gerald E. Terwilliger.

Among the Exhibitors.

Granite City, Ill. The New Washington Theater which for the past months has been in the course of construction will be ready to throw open their doors about November the 30th, with E. A. Dodge as manager. This amusement house is said to be one of the finest of picture theaters in this town, being able to seat 756 people. The Columbia Amusement Company are the proprietors.

Jacksonville, Fla. The New Pastime Theater opened its doors to the public and are receiving a good patronage from the surrounding neighborhood.

Myerstown, Pa. A new moving picture theater will be opened in the Keystone Hall at Newmanstown in a couple of days.

Grand Forks, N. D.—Frank L. Gaffey is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theatet here.

Moline, Ill.—Edward T. Dolly and W. W. Wilmerton will erect a new vaudeville and moving picture theater in Rock Island.

Bonanza, Ark.—H. F. Rudule of Lahoma, Okla., has opened a new moving picture theater here.

Red Wing, Minn.—R. N. and H. Davenport have opened a new vaudeville and moving picture theater here.

Creston, Oowa.—The Comet Amusement Company has opened a new theater here.

Southbridge, Mass.—Blanchard Bros. are planning the erection of a new moving picture theater here.

Dows, Iowa. Manager Carmichael of the Dreamland theater is making extensive improvements to the building.

Atlantic City, N. J. Joe Canter is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater at 1509 Atlantic avenue.

Austin, Tex. Dr. J. M. Loving's moving picture theater here was completely destroyed by fire.

Georgetown, Ill. J. W. Fugatt, of Chrisman, has purchased the White City Theater from Joseph Wilson, and took possession.

Fargo, N. D.—R. J. Ferguson has opened a new moving picture theater at 112 Broadway, it is known as the Palm.

San Francisco, Cal.—The Premium Theater Company has commenced the erection of a new theater on Fillmore street.

Marcus, Iowa.—Messrs. Peters & Kurth are preparing to open a new moving picture theater here.

Sheridan, Wyo.—Leon Dusseau and Roy Phelps have purchased the Electric Moving Picture Theater here from G. D. Keith, and took possession.

Wyoming, Ill.—John Conger has purchased the Electric Theater from Frank Warren, and took possession.

Independence, Kan. R. V. Barclay has opened a new moving picture theater here.

Salt Lake City, Utah.—F. T. Bailey of Montana is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Sabula, Iowa. Jack Brooks has opened a new moving picture theater here.

Moline, Ill.—George Mills of Springfield is planning to open a new moving picture theater here in the August Rydback building.

Warwick, R. I.—The Thornton's moving picture theater in Warwick, was completely destroyed by fire.

Dallas, Ore.—M. F. Fenton, of Portland, is planning the erection of a new moving picture theater here.

Stuart, Iowa.—Hand & Price have sold their moving picture theater here to Mr. Haven of Greenfield.

Falls City, Neb.—John W. Powell is planning the erection of a modern moving picture theater here.

Sacramento, Cal. The Cypress Theater Company has been incorporated with a capital stock of $25,000 for the purpose of operating vaudeville and moving picture theater. The incorporators are Allen Ballau, J. S. McMahon of Oak Park, and others.

Rock Island, Ill.—E. T. Dolly and R. W. Wilmerton have completed arrangements for the erection of a new vaudeville and moving picture theater here.

New York, N. Y.—Frank Gersten has opened a new theater at the corner of Prospect avenue and 160th street.

New Bethlehem, Pa.—Thomas Buzzard has sold the Lyric theater here to H. C. McEwen.

Salt Lake City, Utah.—F. T. Bailey will open a new moving picture theater on Main street.

Baltimore, Md. John Cowan has been awarded the contract for the erection of a new moving picture theater at 1435 W. Lafayette street for the Eureka Amusement Company.

Tempe, Ariz.—William Goodwin has purchased the Vance Airdome here.

Scranton, Pa.—MacDonald & Lewis are preparing to open a new moving picture theater at 824 Capouse avenue.

Princeton, Ind.—W. H. Hornbrook has purchased the Kidd Theater here.

Gary, Ind. Jack Meehan is making arrangements for the erection of a new moving picture theater here.

Dalton, Ga.—The Dalton Opera House Company has leased the local playhouse to B. L. Dickinson of Chattanooga, who will make extensive improvements.

Lincoln, Neb. John Flaxell is planning the establishment of a new moving picture show here.

Gillett, Wis. Architect P. T. Benton, of Green Bay, has completed the plans and specifications for the erection of the new opera house here for F. F. Koske.

New York, N. Y. Alfred L. Kehoe & Co., architects, have completed the plans and specifications for the erection of a new moving picture theater at 76 Catherine street for Martin Garone.

Dayton, Ohio. E. M. Abbott and G. W. Hunter have opened a new moving picture theater at Fifth and Wayne streets.

Abingdon, Ill.—Mrs. Zat Zan and Mr. Helm have leased the Illinois Theater here.

Walkerton, Ind.—J. Tite is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Laurium, Mich. Adrien C. Cooley is making arrangements to start a new moving picture show here.

Sterling, Ill. A. R. Lewis and C. V. Martin have opened a new moving picture theater here.

Davenport, Iowa.—Messrs. Miedke & Woodyatt are making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here. It is known as the Lyric.

Port Arthur, Tex. E. W. Watson has purchased the Olympic Picture Theater here from Henry C. Stearns.

Lost Nation, Iowa.—P. B. Skelly has opened a new moving picture theater here.

Baltimore, Md.—Architect Paul Emmart is preparing plans for the erection of a large moving picture and vaudeville theater on Frederick avenue for the Empire Theater Company.

Rock Island, Ill. I. N. Martin has opened a new moving picture theater at 1805 Second avenue. It is known as the Colonial.

Philadelphia, Pa. Architects Sauer & Hahn are preparing plans for the erection of a $20,000 moving picture theater at 2420 N. Twenty-seventh street for the North Penn Amusement Company.

Klamath Falls, Ore.—J. V. Houston is making arrangements to start a new moving picture theater here.

Port Arthur Texas.—Thomas Hanley is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater in the Bash building.

Pekin, Ill. Ed. Forrest is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Chester, Pa.—D. P. Carr, of Rochester, N. Y., is contemplating the erection of a new theater here.

Sterling, Ill. Robinson Bros. are contemplating the opening of a new vaudeville and moving picture theater here.

Birmingham, Ala.—The New Franklin Theater on Avenue F will be ready for business within the next two weeks.

Goshen, Ind. Franklin Fox, for two years manager and proprietor of Foxey's Picture and Vaudeville here is to build a new theater in this same town which will be able to seat about 800 patrons and will be absolutely fireproof and modern in every respect.

Crandon, Wis.—Harold E. Brady has decided to start a new moving picture theater here.

Anoka, Minn.—E. S. Douglas has opened a new moving picture theater here.

Mt. Pulaski, Ill.—Gingery & Gingery have opened a new moving picture theater in the Roth building.

St. Louis, Mo.—O. T. Crawford has purchased a lot at Fifteenth and St. Louis avenues, upon which he contemplates the erection of a new vaudeville theater.

Escondido, Cal.—J. M. Platts has bought the moving picture theater here of Claude Sheets, and has taken possession.

Indiana, Pa.—J. N. Stitt and N. E. Horwick, of Blairsville, are preparing to open a new moving picture theater here.

Villa Grove, Ill.—Elmer McCoy and Ed. Landis are making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Middleport, Ohio.—Wm. Engler and John Mayer are preparing to open a new moving picture theater here.

Hayward, Wis.—M. E. Vance has purchased an interest in the Unique Moving Picture Theater here and has taken possession.

Logansport, Ind.—G. Frank Shaffer is making arrangements to open the Crystal Moving Picture Theater here.

Maquoketa, Iowa.—Joe Roberts has sold the Pastime Theater here to Peter Broderson.

Cleveland, Ohio.—Architect Franz C. Warner has let to Sebek Bros. a contract for the erection of a new theater at Cedar and Thirty-fourth streets for the Zeidler Amusement Company.

Long Branch, N. J.—Myers & Levine have decided to erect a new moving picture theater here.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Harris Harris and Fred A. Landick are planning the erection of a new theater here.

Catawba, Wis.—J. E. Gruber's opera house here was destroyed by fire.

Defiance, Ohio.—The Defiance Opera House Block Company has been incorporated. R. W. Wortman, F. J. Miller and others are the incorporators.

Creston, Iowa.—Lloyd & Hooper have sold the Gem Theater here to the Creston Amusement Company.

Muskegon, Mich.—Carl Ray has purchased the interest of A. J. Gillingham in the Temple Moving Picture Theater here.

Marengo, Ill.—F. D. Babcock and E. Troyer have purchased the Bijou Theater here.

Fairbury, Neb. Marvel & Parker have opened a new moving picture show in the Kesterson building.

Bismark, N. D.—A new moving picture theater is to be opened in Hettinger.

Waterbury, Conn.—A new moving picture theater is being erected here which will be known as the New Scenic Theater, to be located on Bank street in the Buckingham building and to be under the management of Walter De Palacios.

St. Louis, Mo.—Arrangements are being made for the erection of a high grade moving picture theater on the west side of Grand avenue, between Hartford and Juniata streets, to be built for the Orpheum Amusement Company at a cost of $100,000.

Hackettstown, N. J.—Mr. Lee, who has been operating a moving picture show in the local Opera House here, has surrendered his lease to a large theatrical syndicate.

Dixion, Ill.—The Moss building, on First street, is being remodeled into a moving picture and vaudeville theater which will be under the proprietorship of Charles Derr.

McCausland, Iowa.—D. M. Allison is completing arrangements to open a first-class moving picture theater here.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Henry H. Downe is erecting a modern vaudeville and moving picture theater at the corner of William and Monroe streets.

Lansing, Mich.—Christian and associates are making arrangements for the erection of a modern moving picture and vaudeville theater here.

Broken Bow, Neb.—W. B. Kennedy is making arrangements to start a new moving picture theater in the Caldwell building.

Pawnee City, Neb.—Floyd L. Musgrove is preparing to open a new moving picture theater here to be known as the New Lyric.

New Bedford, Mass.—Alfred Labarte disposed of his interest in the Comique Theater to H. A. Chenworth.

Salt Lake City, Utah.—The Rand Amusement Company has purchased the Daniel Theater here.

New York City.—A new moving picture theater is being erected at 146th street near Fifth avenue for the Mital Realty Company.

Salt Lake City, Utah.—The Shubert Theater, which has been purchased by Harry Revier, proprietor of the Majestic Theater, and C. E. Taylor, will be thoroughly remodeled and converted into a first-class moving picture and vaudeville theater.

Marseilles, Ill.—E. F. Milburn has purchased the interest of his partner, C. E. Mullen, in the moving picture theater here.

Atkins, Minn.—Frank Carlson and James Yates are making arrangements to open a theater which will be considered the largest moving picture theater here.

Winchendon, Mass.—New management has taken hold of the National Theater here and will continue running it in the same successful manner.

Harrisburg, Pa.—The latest and handsomest moving picture theater has been erected and opened in the Einstein building under the proprietorship of the Harrisburg Amusement Company. The new enterprise will be known as the Pastime Photoplay Theater and will operate nothing but the best of independent pictures. No vaudeville will be run. The admission will be five cents.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—J. G. Barnwell is preparing plans for the erection of a new moving picture theater here.

Genoa, Ill.—H. H. King and A. E. Pickett are making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Trenton, Mo.—O. R. Spore is making arrangements to erect a new moving picture theater here.

Creighton, Neb.—C. L. McDonald is making arrangements to start a new moving picture theater here.

Pelican Rapids, Minn.—Lawrence Hovey has opened a new moving picture theater here.

New York City.—A new moving picture theater is being planned for 529 Sixth avenue for the Specialty Amusement Company to cost about $5,000.

Springfield, Mass.—The Building Commissioner issued a building permit to M. H. Lyons for the erection of a new moving picture and vaudeville theater at Indian Orchard, to cost about $8,000, which will measure 27 x 65 feet.

Birmingham, Ala.—H. H. Cagle, manager of the Masonic Theater in New Decatur, has bought the lease of the theater and will convert it into a moving picture and vaudeville house.

De Kalb, Ill.—Charles Derre is planning for the erection of a moving picture theater here.

Mexico, Mo.—A new moving picture theater is being planned for this town which will be under the proprietorship of Mr. Syngelder.

Sacramento, Cal.—The Cypress Theater Company, capital $25,000. Directors, Allen Baton, I. Chrystie and Joseph Holmes.

Coffeyville, Kan.—Mrs. C. H. Munroe & Son have leased the Princess Theater at 819 Union street and are now in charge.

Barker, Ga.—A new moving picture theater is being erected here which will run all of the latest and best moving pictures.

Polo, Ill.—George Robertson and Joseph Glavin are making arrangements for the erection of a high class moving picture theater here.

Manistigue, Mich.—J. S. Chisholm has leased the State Street Theater here and will convert it into a moving picture palace.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Mrs. L. M. Tubbs has secured a permit for the erection of a new moving picture theater at 1629 South Central avenue.

Calumet, Mich.—The new moving picture theater which for some time has been under course of construction has at last been completed and has thrown open its doors to the public. It will be known as the People's Theater, situated on the old Baptist Church property on Hecla street.

Columbia, Pa.—Lyncn Howe's moving picture exhibition made an excellent hit at the Fulton Opera house here.

Troy, N. Y.—A new moving picture theater is being planned for here which will be located in the Knights of Columbus Hall.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Lexington Village is to have a moving picture theater erected in one of its town halls.

Taunton, Mass.—A new moving picture theater is being built in the Foresters Hall here.

Port Jervis, N. Y.—A new moving picture theater is being planned for this section and will be under the proprietorship of Robert Wagner.

Lorain, Ohio.—The new Kohlmeyer Theater which for the past few weeks has been under course of construction has at last been completed and has thrown open its doors to the public.

Hanover, Pa.—Lam E. Miller, proprietor of the Hanover Vaudeville Theater, is installing a new Power's machine.

Griffin, Ga.—A new moving picture theater has opened in this section.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Plans have been filed for the erection of a high class moving picture theater to be built at 20 North Twenty-seventh street for the North Penn Amusement Company.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—James Meyers has purchased the moving picture theater in the Odd Fellows' Temple building and has taken possession.

Rhineland, Wis.—Herman Zander is making arrangements to open a new moving picture theater here.

Dewitt, Neb.—Eddy & Clark have opened a new moving picture theater here.

Pipestone, Minn.—J. F. Knapp, of Aberdeen, has purchased the Gem Moving Picture Theater here from Mr. Seglinger and has taken possession.

Aberdeen, S. D.—DeWitt Hull has opened a new moving picture theater here.

Tampico, Mex.—Mr. McClellan's moving picture theater here was completely destroyed by fire.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—The Victor Theater Company has been incorporated with a capital stock of $40,000. The incorporators are W. H. Cowgill, Charles S. Bell, Robert M. Scott and others.

Farmington, Iowa.—E. Kuse is making arrangements to start a new moving picture theater here.

Hutchinson, Kan.—Messrs. Davis and Geary Read have opened a new moving picture theater at 102 South Main street. It will be known as the Crystal.

Indianapolis, Ind.—The Central Amusement Company is planning the erection of a new theater, which will be devoted to moving pictures, at 139 North Illinois street.

Fall City, Ore.—Jack Wagener is making arrangements to start a new moving picture theater here.

Chicago, Ill.—The Kedzie Amusement Company has secured a permit for the erection of a new moving picture theater to be located at 3208 West Madison street.

New Centre, Mass.—A new moving picture theater has been erected here.

Harrisburg, Pa.—The moving picture theater which has been under construction for some time past has at last been built and has thrown open its doors.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—A new moving picture theater is being planned for Cortelyou road, near Sixteenth street.

Baltimore, Md.—A new moving picture theater is being planned for 1940-1942 West Pratt street.

Mena, Ark.—The Unique Theater is the name of the new moving picture theater opened on De Queen street, which will be under the proprietorship of Miss Eleanor Brooke.

Hartford, Conn.—The Pastime Moving Picture House, a local picture palace in this city situated at the corner of Main and High streets, has been forced to close on account of very poor business.

Stafford Springs, Conn.—John Sena has leased a local hall here and will open it as a high grade moving picture theater.

Paris, Ill.—The Nickelodeon here has moved from the north side to the Fowler building.

Findlay, Ohio.—A new moving picture theater is being planned here.

Salt Lake City, Utah.—Max Florence, proprietor of several moving picture theaters here, has sold them all to some unknown party.

Springfield, Mass.—W. C. Wiggin, who recently purchased the vacant lot at the corner of North and Main streets, is making arrangements for the erection of a picture theater on it.

Dedham, Mass.—Charles Hubbard has opened a new moving picture theater known as the Premier here.

Harrisburg, Pa.—A new moving picture theater is being erected at 221 Market street which will be under the management and proprietorship of Silverman Brothers, which will cost about $15,000.

Wichendon, Mass.—George A. Merris, who has been running a moving picture show in the National Hall for the past three months, has sold out to Guy S. Bridge.

Falmouth, Mass.—A new moving picture theater is to be built in the Crocker Block.

Taunton, Mass.—The Armory Hall Bowling Alleys are being converted into a moving picture theater.

North Brookfield, Mass.—The Old Union Church is being converted into a high grade moving picture theater which will be able to seat about 500 patrons.

Falls City, Ore.—Jack Wagner will open a new moving picture theater here which will be able to seat about 300 people.

Omaha, Neb.—Danbury will soon have another moving picture theater. This one will be erected on the Kesterson building.

Philadelphia, Pa.—A new moving picture theater is being planned for the south side of Market street between Lehy ranch and Seventh streets which will be ready to open for business about February 1. The new enterprise will be known as the Coliseum Theater and will be able to seat about 1,200 patrons.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Hyde & Behman have purchased a vacant lot on Fulton street, between Washington street and Twombly place, where they will erect a new theater which will cost about $100,000.

Phoenix, Ariz.—Work on the new moving picture theater under the proprietorship of W. H. Clone is nearly finished and the theater is expected to open about January 1. This new amusement house will be able to seat about 1,500 patrons.

Tampa, Fla.—W. L. Hill is planning for the erection of a high class moving picture and vaudeville theater on the property east of the Curry building on Florida avenue and Cass street, which will cost about $30,000.

Louisville, Ky.—Two moving picture theaters are to be added to the string of picture palaces here. One will be situated on Eighteenth street and Broadway for the Royal Theater Company at a cost of $10,000, and will be ready to throw open its doors about January 1. The other will be situated at 736 West Broadway for the West Broadway Theater Company at a cost of $12,000, and will be ready for business about May 1.

Danbury, Conn.—The Hudson River Amusement Company, which owns the Majestic Moving Picture Theater in this city, is making arrangements for the conversion of a building into a high class moving picture theater in Norwalk.

Scranton, Pa.—The Moran Nelson Fight Pictures were forbidden to be run at the Columbia Theater in this town.

Joliet, Ill.—A new moving picture theater will be started in the Ward Block here.

Norwich, Conn.—L. B. Bassett, manager of the Clark Opera House on West Main street, is planning for the erection of a moving picture theater on East Main street.

Lee, Mass.—J. Joseph Carey has leased the Memorial hall and will convert it into a moving picture theater.

Atlanta, Ga.—The Dalton Opera House Company has leased the local playhouse to B. L. Dickinson, who will convert it into a moving picture theater.

Dayton, Ohio.—A new moving picture theater known as the Photoplay Theater, corner of Wayne and Fifth streets, has opened. The amusement house will be under the management of E. M. Abbott.

Adrian, Mich.—Carl Hibitt has taken a long lease on the Bijou Theater here and will convert it into a moving picture theater.

Arctic, R. I.—The Temperance Hall here has been converted into a moving picture theater which will be under the proprietorship of the Thornton Brothers.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—A new moving picture theater is being planned for a building opposite the new Liberty Theater for Benjamin Mindlin.

Niwood, Ind.—The Union Traction Rooms are being converted into a moving picture theater which will be under the proprietorship and management of Chase Gillespie and Ernest Bouilettle.

Brazil, Ind.—The New Stewart Theater has thrown open its doors and is doing an excellent business.

Minneapolis, Minn.—A new moving picture theater is being planned for 307 Central avenue.

Pueblo, Colo.—F. Grahek is making arrangements to start a new moving picture theater here.

Baltimore, Md.—Arrangements have been filed for the building of a moving picture theater at 333 Market street for the Motion Picture Company of America.

Grandon, Wis.—Harold E. Brady, one of the editors of the Forest Republican will erect a $5,000 moving picture theater here.

Oakland, Cal.—W. A. Newman has plans in preparation for a nickelodeon to be erected for P. H. Dahl on Shattuck avenue near Center street in Berkeley to seat about 250 patrons.

Philadelphia, Pa.—A new moving picture theater is being erected on the east side of Front street, north of Onterio street for George W. Chapman.

Shinnstown, W. Va.—The Nickelodeon in the Wyatt building which for the past weeks has been closed to the public have again thrown open its doors.

Wheeling, W. Va.—The Spragg Amusement Company which controls a number of moving picture theaters in this section has added on another to their list which will be known to the public as the Pastime.

Duluth, Minn.—John Thompson will open a new moving picture and vaudeville theater on the property formerly known as the Pierce Opera House.

Marinette, Wis.—Henry Vendenberg will open a new moving picture theater in the I. O. O. F. Hall which wil be conducted as an up-to-date picture palace.

Boise, Idaho.—M. Larkin, the proprietor of the Electric Theater here has leased the lower floor of the I. O. O. F. Hall and will convert same into a moving picture theater.

Dubuque, Iowa.—William Dunlevy has bought out the interest of Forest Wolfe in his local moving picture theater.

Fargo, N. D.—A new picture theater is being planned for the Hanson block.

¶ Put in our Easels and Poster Frames and watch your attendance grow.

¶ We make mechanical attractions, Electric signs, or anything special in the theatrical line. ¶ Ideas developed—Low Prices—Best Work—DON'T DELAY but write to-day.

THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.
717-719 Sycamore St., Cincinnati, O.

Lang's Rewinder No. 2
Price, $5.00 Net
Send for latest catalogue
Lang Manufacturing Co.
OLEAN, NEW YORK

THIS WEEK'S PROGRAM OF INDEPENDENT FILMS.

Monday, December 26.

American Girlies (Com.) .....
Eclair The Lock-Keeper (Dr.) 537
Eclair The Fear of Fire (Com.) 390
Imp The Unexpected Honeymoon (Dr.) 995
Yankee The Insane Heiress (Dr.) .....

Tuesday, December 27.

Bison (Title not given.)
Powers The Station Agent's Daughter (Dr.)...
Powers Freddie's Courtship (Com.) .....
Thanhouser The Vicar of Wakefield (Dr.) ...1000

Wednesday, December 28.

Ambrosio (Title not given.)
Atlas The Outcast's Salvation (Dr.).....
Champion The Golden Gates (Dr.) 950

Thursday, December 29.

American The Squaw and the Man (Dr.) .....
Imp Unreasonable Jealousy (Dr.) 990
Itala (Title not given.)

Friday, December 30.

Bison (Title not given.)
Lux Aunt Julia's Portrait (Com.) 547
Lux Tim Writes a Poem (Com.) 373
Solax Mrs. Richard Dare (Com.) .....
Thanhouser Hypnotized (Dr.) 1000

Saturday, December 31.

Columbia Trapped (Dr.) .....
Great Northern The Scarecrow (Dr.) .....
Great Northern Bear Hunting (Sc.).....
Itala (Title not given.)
Powers A Daughter of Virginia (Dr.) .....
Reliance (Title not given.)

INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES.

AMERICAN.

Dec. 1—A Touching Affair (Com.).....
Dec. 5—Vera, the Gypsy Girl (Dr.).....930
Dec. 8—Two Lucky Jims (Com.).....955
Dec. 12—The Rummage Sale (Com.) .....
Dec. 15—The Binding Shot (Dr.) .....
Dec. 19—Her Fatal Mistake (Dr.) .....
Dec. 22—Her Husband's Deception (Com.) .....
Dec. 22—A Troublesome Parcel (Com.) .....
Dec. 26—Girlies (Com.) .....
Dec. 2[illegible]—The Squaw and the Man (Dr.) .....
Jan. 2—Mrs. Gay Life's Visitors (Com.).....
Jan. 5—The Tenderfoot's Round-up (Com.) ...

ATLAS.

Nov. 23—Cast Thy Bread Upon the Waters (Dr.)
Nov. 30—Saved by a Vision (Dr.).....
Dec. 7—Nature's Nobleman (Dr.).....
Dec. 14—Brothers (Dec.) .....
Dec. 21—The Arm of the Law (Dr.) .....
Dec. 28—The Outcast's Salvation (Dr.).....
Jan. 4—A Straw Ride (Dr.) .....

CAPITOL FILM CO.

Sept. 17—Round Trip $5.98 (Com.).....
Sept. 24—Bill Mason's Ride (Dr.).....700
Oct. 8—All's Fair in Love and War (Dr.)....
Oct. 15—A Shot in the Night (Dr.).....
Oct. 22—The Locket (Dr.) .....

CHAMPION.

Nov. 16—The Way of the West (Dr.).....950
Nov. 23—Let Us Give Thanks (Dr.).....950
Nov. 30—The Indian Land Grab (Dr.).....950
Dec. 7—Hearts of the West (Dr.) 950
Dec. 14—The Sheriff and the Detective (Dr.)..950
Dec. 21—His Mother (Dr.) 950
Dec. 28—The Golden Gates (Dr.).....950
Jan. 4—Days of the Early West (Dr.) 950

COLUMBIA.

Oct. 22—Breaking Home Ties (Dr.).....
Oct. 29—In the Web (Dr.).....
Nov.12—The Heroine of 101 Ranch (Dr.).....
Nov. 19—Oklahoma Bill (Dr.).....1000
Nov. 26—Stage Coach Tom (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 24—The Cattlemen's Feud (Dr.) .....
Dec. 31—Trapped (Dr.) .....
Jan. 7—Queen of the Prairies (Dr.) .....

DEFENDER.

Oct. 13—The Tale the Camera Told (Com.).....
Oct. 20—The Heart of a Cowboy (Dr.).....
Oct. 27—A Clause in the Will (Dr.).....
Nov. 3—Cohen's Generosity (Com.) .....
Nov. 10—The Last Straw (Dr.).....
Nov. 17—The Education of Mary Jane (Dr.)..
Nov. 24—Forgiven (Dr.) .....

ECLAIR.

Dec. 5—The Price of a Sacrifice (Dr.).....833
Dec. 5—The Laundry Girl's Good-Night (C.).....82
Dec. 12—The Bowling Craze (Com.) 445
Dec. 12—Our Dear Uncle From America (Com.) 470
Dec. 19—The Child of Two Mothers (Dr.) 545
Dec. 19—The Museum of Sovereigns (Dr.) 400
Dec. 26—The Lock-Keeper (Dr.).....537
Dec. 26—The Fear of Fire (Com.).....390
Jan. 2—The Great Medal Competition (Com.)..485
Jan. 2—A Well Matched Marriage (Com.) 480

CINES.
Eclair.

Sept. 23—Tontolini as a Ballet Dancer (Com.)..236
Sept. 30—Giovanni of Medici (Dr.).....1000
Oct. 7—Giorgione (Dr.) 1000
Oct. 14—The Mad Lady of Chester (Dr.).....965
Oct. 21—The Last of the Savelli (Dr.).....800
Oct. 28—Tontolini Is in Love (Com.).....480
Oct. 28—The Pretty Dairy Maid (Dr.).....480
Nov. 4—A Wooden Sword (Dr.) 800

GREAT NORTHERN.

Nov. 19—The Diamond Swindler (Dr.).....
Nov. 26—Kean, or the Prince and the Actor....
Dec. 3—The Birthday Present (Dr.).....
Dec. 3—The Ohami Troupe of Acrobats (Sc.)..
Dec. 10—The Poacher (Dr.) .....
Dec. 17—A Christmas Letter (Dr.) .....
Dec. 17—Dickey's Courtship (Com.) .....
Dec. 24—Necklace of the Dead (Dr.).....
Dec. 31—The Scarecrow (Dr.) .....
Dec. 31—Bear Hunting (Sec.).....

IMP.

Dec. 5—Aspirations of Gerald and Percy (Dr.).995
Dec. 8—Twixt Loyalty and Love (Dr.).....990
Dec. 12—Faithful Max (Dr.) 500
Dec. 12—A Clever Ruse 500
Dec. 15—The Poor Student (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 19—The Crippled Teddy Bear .....
Dec. 22—Little Nell's Tobacco (Dr.) .....
Dec. 26—The Unexpected Honeymoon (Dr.).....995
Dec. 29—Unreasonable Jealousy (Dr.).....990
Jan. 2—The Wise Druggist (Dr.).....995
Jan. 5—Reunited (Dr.) 995

LUX.

Dec. 9—What It Will Be (Com.).....491
Dec. 9—And She Came Back (Com.) 452
Dec. 16—How He Won Her (Com.) 344
Dec. 16—Her Favorite Tune (Dr.) 550
Dec. 23—Bill Plays Bowls (Com.).....423
Dec. 23—Rosalie's Dowry (Com.).....492
Dec. 30—Aunt Julia's Portrait (Com.) 547
Dec. 30—Tim Writes a Poem (Com.) 373

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.
("Bison.")

Nov. 25—Cheyenne Love for a Sioux (Dr.)....
Nov. 29—The Ranchman's Personal (Dr.).....
Dec. 2—A Child of the West (Dr.).....
Dec. 6—A Sioux's Reward (Dr.) .....
Dec. 9—A Brave Western Girl (Dr.) .....
Dec. 13—An Indian's Test .....
Dec. 16—A Girl of the Plains (Dr.) .....
Dec. 20—The Cattle Baron's Daughter.....
Dec. 23—The Pale Faced Princess.....

ITALA.
(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Dec. 8—A Soldier of the Cross .....
Dec. 10—Foolshead Knows How to Take Precautions (Com.) .....
Dec. 15—The False Accusation .....
Dec. 17—The Mother's Shadow (Dr.) .....
Dec. 17—Thieves as Quick Change Artists .....
Dec. 22—Who Was the Culprit? (Com.).....
Dec. 24—Greediness Spoiled Foolshead's Christmas (Com.) .....

AMBROSIO.
(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Nov. 16—Mermaid .....
Nov. 16—Tweedledum's Corporation Duty (Com.)
Nov. 23—Gounod Ave Maria (Dr.).....
Nov. 30—The Jeuda's Money (Dr.).....
Dec. 7—The Tell Tale Portrait.....
Dec. 7—Tweedledum Learns a Tragical Part..
Dec. 14—Dido Forsaken by Aenea .....
Dec. 21—Little Peter's Christmas Dinner.....

NESTOR.

Nov. 9—The Woodsman (Dr.).....950
Nov. 16—The Ranchman's Bride (Dr.) .....
Nov. 23—A Deal in Indians.....1000
Nov. 30—Valley Folks (Dr.).....
Dec. 7—The Conquering Hero (Dr.) .....
Dec. 14—The Pilgrim (Dr.) .....
Dec. 21—A Desperate Remedy (Com.).....
Dec. 28—Elda of the Mountains (Dr.) .....

POWERS PICTURE PLAYS.

Dec. 24—A Father's Love (Dr.)) .....
Dec. 27—The Station Agent's Daughter (Dr.)..
Dec. 27—Freddie's Courtship (Com.).....
Dec. 31—A Daughter of Virginia (Dr.).....
Jan. 3—The Pinkerton Man (Dr.) .....
Jan. 3—Beaux Not Wanted (Com.) .....
Jan. 7—A Woman Without a Heart (Dr.) .....

RELIANCE

Nov. 19—Moulders of Souls (Dr.).....
Nov. 26—So Runs the Wat (Dr.).....
Dec. 3—When Woman Wills (Dr.).....
Dec. 10—A Dispensation (Dr.) .....
Dec. 17—The Thin Dark Line.....
Dec. 24—The Refuge .....

REVIER.

Dec. 21—Love's Sorrow (Dr.).....950
Dec. 28—Thoughtfulness Remembered by the Ute (Dr.) 950

SOLAX COMPANY.

Dec. 9—Lady Betty's Strategy (Dr.) .....
Dec. 16—Two Suits .....
Dec. 23—The Pawnshop (Dr.).....
Dec. 30—Mrs. Richard Dare (Com.).....
Jan. 6—The Nightcap (Com.) .....
Jan. 6—Salmon Fishing In Canada (Sc.) .....

THANHOUSER.

Dec. 9—The Iron-Clad Lover .....
Dec. 13—Love and Law (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 16—The Millionaire Milkman (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 20—Looking Forward (Dr.).....1000
Dec. 23—The Childhood of Jack Harkaway (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 27—The Vicar of Wakefield (Dr.) 1000
Dec. 30—Hypnotized (Dr.) 1000

YANKEE.

Dec. 12—A Fight for Millions (Dr.).....
Dec. 16—The Old Miner's Doll (Dr.) .....
Dec. 19—A Ward of Uncle Sam (Dr.) .....
Dec. 23—The Terror of the Plains (Com.).....
Dec. 26—The Insane Heiress (Dr.).....
Dec. 30—The Missing Bridegroom (Dr.) .....
Jan. 6—The Royal Wishbone (Dr.) .....

You Can Fool Some of the People, But, We Don't Operate Any Bunk Games

We run but one concern in New York, you can't get our service but at the address given below.

If you are looking for good service, courteous treatment, honest prices and reliability, write stating your requirements. Write for film catalogue.

ACME FILM COMPANY, Inc.
12 EAST 15th STREET :: :: NEW YORK CITY

5c SHOW SOUVENIRS

IMPORTED CHINAWARE—Per 100	$3.00
ALL LEATHER PURSE—Per 100	3.00
TRICK MATCH BOX—Per Gross	.75
1911 AERIAL PLANS, Latest Novelty—Per Gr.	1.25
FANCY WOOD WHISTLES—Per Gross	.75
JAPANESE TURTLE-IN-GLASS BOX—Per Gro.	.90
FANCY COLORED RETURN BALLS—Per Gro.	1.25
HORSESHOE MIRROR, Asstd. Colors—Per Gro.	1.00
SKELETON ACROBAT NOVELTY—Per Gro.	1.50
FRENCH LIP AIR WHISTLES—Per Gro.	1.25
JAPANESE 4-INCH TRAYS—Per 100	1.50
IMPORTED STONE STEINS—Per Gro.	2.00
DECEPTION WINE GLASS—Per Gro.	1.25

Terms Cash. Personal Checks must be Certified

NEWMAN MFG. CO.,
641 and 647 Woodland Ave., Cleveland, Ohio.

Opera Chairs

The Strongest Made Most Attractive Designs Permanently Noiseless

More of our chairs used than all others combined. There are reasons. Large stocks constantly on hand, and we can make prompt shipments of rush orders.

Write for Catalog V

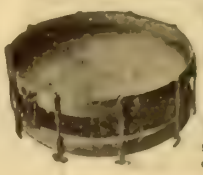
American Seating Company

215 Wabash Avenue CHICAGO — 19 West 18th Street NEW YORK
BOSTON PHILADELPHIA PITTSBURGH

Announcement Slides
Advertising Slides
Songs Illustrated

THREE STAR SLIDE CO.
Rooms 523-4
225 Dearborn Street - Chicago, Ills.

To Trap Drummers



A Limited Time Offer

Special Offer { Size Shell 8 x 14 / Size Shell 8 x 15
$10.00

Solid Maple, Rosewood or Walnut, 10 fine plated thumb screw rods, Kangaroo, Angora or Slunk Calf Drum Heads.

We ship with privilege of 6 days trial

E. P. ZEIDLER DRUM CO. Dept. F. Cleveland, Ohio

To the Trade

I have a large stock of Association and Independent films. My stock is in good condition and if I am misrepresenting, you are invited to my exchange :-:

UNIVERSAL FILM EXCHANGE
1325 Arch Street :: Philadelphia
TOM BIBLE

Xylophones, Orchestra Bells, Chimes, Forks, etc. Send for free illustrated catalogue.

J. C. DEAGAN
3800-3810 N. Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

Want Chairs Quick?

Stafford chairs excell all others. We use no three-ply veneers. Why? Not good enough! Five ply is best, and that is why we use them.

Chairs like cut IN STOCK and GUARANTEED

Ask for Catalog No. 305

E. H. STAFFORD MFG. CO.
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

Sound Effects

In Picture Machine Theaters it is very essential that the imitations and sound effects are of the kind that can be depended upon. We make only practical and serviceable imitations that will give the exact reproduction of the original. We also manufacture Chimes, Tympani, Bells, Xylophones, Drums and accessories.

LEEDY MANUFACTURING COMPANY
1055 E. Palmer St., INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

PIERO CALZABINI

Nine years' experience as Comedy Director and camera operator with Pathe Freres, Ciines Co., etc. Rider in famous Italian Cavalry picture photographed by Ambrosio.

OPEN FOR ENGAGEMENT.

Address Piero Calzabini, care of M. P. World.

Why Pay $500 for a Screen

When you can get the same practical results by using

"Mirror-Screenette"

Curtain Paint on your old curtain?
Costs but $6.00 per Gallon.

It is worth your while to get this paint. It produces what you want—pictures of rich quality, tone, depth, action, as if coming from a mirror.

Think of it! Only six dollars, cash with order, charges paid.

Order to-day! Be just to your patrons!

Manufactured only by

THE MELVIN RICE MOTION PICTURE CO.
121 S. Court Ave., MEMPHIS, TENN.

Moving Picture Pianists

Are you "working up" your pictures? If not, why not? If so, you want some good melodramatic music. Send for free sample page of "Orpheum Collection of Moving Picture Music." Now being used and praised by many of the best houses in the country.

PRICE.....75 CENTS

Also latest cue music (series 1910) for 10 parts and piano.....$1.00

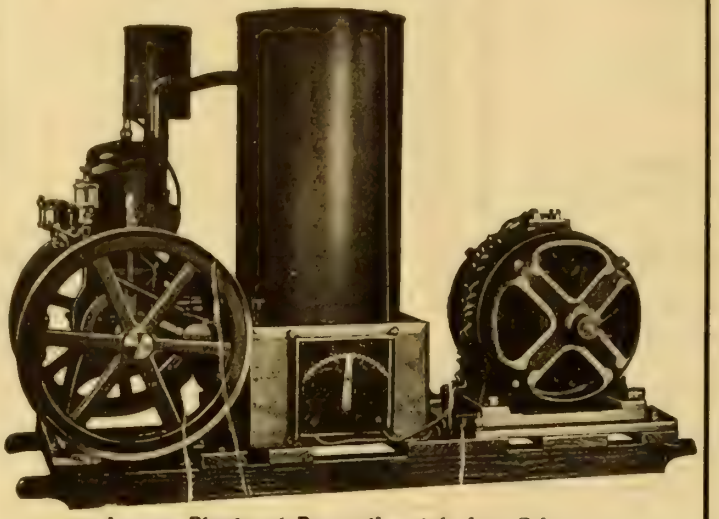
¼ discount on both numbers.

CLARENCE E. SINN
1501 Sedgwick St. CHICAGO, ILL.

WANTED—Young man for perforating room of film laboratory. Experienced or with knowledge of operating and some mechanical skill. Address, PROMPT, care of M. P. World.

Electric Light Plant Complete

$210.35



Larger Plants at Proportionately Low Prices

Including the celebrated DETROIT KEROSENE ENGINE and DYNAMO OF SUFFICIENT CAPACITY TO FURNISH CURRENT FOR YOUR ARC AND 10-16 c. p. TUNGSTEN LAMPS for illumination.
Total cost of operation from 5 to 25 cents per day. Gives you better light than you can buy. Gives you the same light in the afternoon as at night. Can be operated by a ten year old child.

Can Make Immediate Shipment

DETROIT ENGINE WORKS 406 Bellevue Avenue, Detroit, Mich., U. S. A.

OBEY THE LAW

—BUT—

Do not drive away your patrons with an odorous disinfectant. Use Water and

WOOLF'S HYPOZONE

the modern scientific germicide. Test how the OZONE (nascent oxygen), it liberates will sweeten and freshen the air. Dilute HYPOZONE for use with atomizer 100 times with water and get the right disinfectant at One Cent per gallon. Let us demonstrate.

WOOLF CHEMICAL PRODUCTS, Inc.,

2 Rector Street 'Phone 6 Rector N. Y. CITY

SONG SLIDES

L I D E NON-BREAKABLE—NON-INFLAMABLE L I D E

Colored Song and Announcement Slides

Patent Applied For

Just the kind of a slide you have all been waiting for. Guaranteed against breaking from heat or the careless operator. Send for list. Made and sold only by the original inventors. None others genuine.

NORTH AMERICAN SLIDE CO., 143 North 8th Street PHILADELPHIA, PA.

SONG SLIDES

AROMA FOAM

The Fragrant and Powerful Perfumed Disinfectant

If you are using a perfumed disinfectant as a spray in your theater, investigate the merits of AROMA FOAM. Comes in two perfumes, Orange Blossom and Geranium. Both are most refreshing and lasting and do not leave that "headache after effect," so common to products of this nature. Write for prices. Yours for all Sanitary Service.

Sanitary Service Corporation

Suite 3190 80 Wall Street New York

W. E. Greene Film Exchange, Inc.

The oldest and largest Independent Film Exchange in New England

The House of Quality and Satisfaction

MR. EXHIBITOR:

If you are desirous of finding out how to improve your present service and increase your daily attendance call and have a confidential chat with us. If you are unable to call, drop us a line.

W. E. Greene Film Exchange

INCORPORATED

228 Tremont Street Boston, Mass.

Telephone 3790 Oxford

LUCIEN PRÉVOST

MECHANICAL ENGINEER

Formerly Chief Designer of Pathé Frères

OFFICE ADDRESS, 54 Rue Philippe de Gerard, Paris
WORKS : : 25 Bd de la Chapelle, Paris

Cameras
Perforating and Printing Machines (NEW PATTERNS)
Cleaning, Measuring and Joining Machines

SOUVENIRS

Advertising novelties, such as Buttons, Mirrors, Pictures, etc., to give away at matinees. Will bring results :: :: ::

SOL PUDLIN

Manufacturer 137 Bowery, N. Y.

'Phone Orchard 6439

Classified Advertisements

[Classified advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted.]

THEATER FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—One of the largest Moving Picture and Vaudeville Theaters in Washington, D. C. P. O. Box 279, Washington, D. C.

FOR SALE Moving Picture Theater in Western Wyoming town of 9,000 doing good business. Has three outside shows running, keeping two operators busy all the time. Good opening for live man. Reasons for selling, other out of town interests; will stand investigation. Address, WYOMING, care of Moving Picture World.

FOR SALE Moving Picture Parlor, first class condition, doing a good business, very moderate expenses; Pennsylvania town of 8,000, about midway between Harrisburg and Wilkesbarre. Fine opportunity. Address, CODE, care of Moving Picture World.

FOR SALE Moving Picture and Vaudeville Theater, well located on main street, Memphis, Tenn.; complete in operation and making money. Fine opportunity for one familiar with the show business. Address, STAR THEATER, Memphis, Tenn.

FOR SALE OR RENT Fine Picture House in a Connecticut town of 14,000. All ready for business; price low; good reason. PAUL RUSSO, New Haven, Conn.

FOR SALE—Moving Picture Theater in a town of 25,000. Good reasons for selling. A money-maker for a hustler. THE LYRIC, Parkersburg, W. Va.

FOR SALE or Rent—One first-class moving picture house, doing a good business. Good reasons for selling. J. P. DALEY, Daley's Corner, New Haven, Conn.

FOR SALE.—Moving picture theater, town thirty thousand, on main street. Ill health cause of selling. Will sacrifice if sold at once. Seats three hundred. P. O. BOX 256, Hazleton, Pa.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—Educational and descriptive reels, cheap. Full particulars. Write. BIJOU THEATER, Edmonton, Alberta, Can.

FOR SALE No. 5 Power's Cameragraph machine complete. (Never used.) JONES, 34 Mulberry Avenue, Corona, L. I.

SITUATIONS WANTED.

AT LIBERTY—Moving picture operator wants to hear from a good manager; five years' experience. Best of references. JOHN GARDNER, 25 Commercial street, Clifton Forge, Va.

AT LIBERTY Moving picture operator and pair man; five years experience. Strictly sober; reliable. Address, HARRY AFFELT, Au Sable, Mich.

AT LIBERTY Man of many years' experience as chief of laboratories and camera man desires steady position with a responsible concern. First-class references. Address, J. E. R., care of Moving Picture World.

AT LIBERTY—Trap Drummer with years of experience both in vaudeville and pictures. Carry special line of traps for moving picture effects. Member A. F. of M. Address, ANDREW FINLAY, General Delivery, Memphis, Tenn.

AT LIBERTY.—First-class operator or manager. Five years in business. Motiograph machine preferred. Write quick if you want me. H. B. DE HAVEN, Canton, Mo.

MISCELLANEOUS.

WANTED—Power's No. 5 mechanism. Must be cheap for cash. State full particulars. Address, L. S., care Moving Picture World.

WANTED—A second-hand Pathe professional moving picture machine in good condition, cheap. Will sell two Edison one-pin machines in good order. Address, ARMAS DURIO, Bon Ami Theater, Opelousas, La.

NEW THEATER BUILDING—Complete on or about January 10, to lease for a long term of years, in the most congested section of the Bronx, on Bathgate avenue, north of Wendover avenue. Rent reasonable. Inquire of owner on premises, or address, NEW THEATER, care of Moving Picture World.

More Money Every Month

You are in the theatre business to make all you can out of it—you are interested in anything that means larger profits. Our plan is just like "getting money from home." Brings you a check every month, makes your theatre more popular and better patronized, gives you a better standing with the other business men in your town.

NO COST TO YOU

That's the beauty of it. You don't buy anything—don't increase your cost in any way—don't have to make a single change in your theatre, film supply, operator or anything else.

Hundreds of theatre owners are getting our checks every month—making more money than they could without our plan.

You need us—we need you.

Paste this coupon on a postal card mail it to us today

T. R. WOODBURN & CO.
611 First National Bank Building, Chicago

Name .....
Name of Theatre .....
Town State

United States Film Brokers and Importers

41 Union Square West Broadway and 17th St. NEW YORK CITY

The largest dealers in new and second hand Association and Independent Films in the United States.

Second-Hand Film $5.00 per reel upwards.

New Film 4c. per foot upwards.

Cameraphone Film, new, with two sets records.

Edison and Power's Machine, like new.

All goods shipped subject to examination and partial acceptance on receipt of deposit covering express charges.

Complete lists sent free upon request.

Moving Picture Supplies

Tickets, roll of 2,000 .	$ .16
Bio Carbons 6x5-8 per 100 .	2.15
Electra Carbons 6x5-8 per 100	2.10
Announcement Slides, Col.	.25
Extra Heavy Carbon Holders	.75
Imported Condensers . .	.75
Rewinders Complete . .	3.50

SEND FOR DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE

American Moving Picture Supply Company

110 Fourth Ave. - New York City

FILMS FOR RENT

New Films High Class Service

The Pioneer House, With 8 Years Experience and $250,000.00 Back Of It

Write To-day for Terms

EUGENE CLINE

57 and 59 Dearborn St., Chicago

THE ENTERPRISE MODEL B

Portable Calcium Gas Outfit

Is the only Substitute for Electricity for projecting Motion Picture or Stereopticon views and is the

Only Satisfactory Portable Outfit

because it operates by WATER PRESSURE, IS CONSTANT, REGULAR AND RELIABLE and has no complicated spring valves to corrode, choke up and otherwise get out of order. Is patented.

"OXONE" in SQUARE CAKES is most Satisfactory for the production of Oxygen Gas. Send for particulars.

For Sale by Dealers

Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co. MANUFACTURERS AND SALES AGENTS 564 and 572 W. Randolph St. CHICAGO

SPECIAL ROLL TICKETS

The Big Ticket. Any Printing Any Colors.

5,000	$1.25	20,000	$4.60	50,000	$7.50
10,000	2.50	25,000	5.50	100,000	10.00

Get the Samples Stock Tickets, 6 Cents

NATIONAL TICKET COMPANY - - - Shamokin, Pa.

FOLDING CHAIRS

For Moving Picture Shows Grand Stands, Assembly Halls, etc. In sections if wanted.

Write for Catalog No. 2.

The Kauffman Manufacturing Co.
ASHLAND, OHIO

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES

ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. No. 31

The A. H. Andrews Co.

174-176 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill. Branches in all leading cities

CHEAP

Steel Frame Theatre Chairs

ABSOLUTELY Non-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small theatres and Moving Picture shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

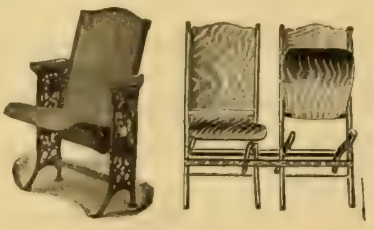
Second Hand Chairs

Also seating for Out-of-Door Use.

Address Dept. W.

STEEL FURNITURE CO., Grand Rapids, Mich.
New York Office: 130 Fifth Avenue
Boston Office: 224 Congress St., Boston, Mass.

Opera and Assembly Chairs



Most popular priced chairs on the market for pictures show use.

Prompt Shipments. Write for Catalogue
PEABODY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO.
NORTH MANCHESTER - - INDIANA
New York Agents—ROBERT J. EHLERS CO.
Lexington Ave and 43rd St. - New York, N. Y.

The Automatic Theatre Chair

It is a friend to the public.
It advertises your theatre and makes your business grow.
It folds automatically and can be revolving, stationary or self righting
It is the only sanitary chair.
It is a space-saver, life-saver and money-saver.
It is the world's greatest theatre chair.
If you have not seen our latest models, investigate.
Write today for Circular A.

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO.
Canal Dover, Ohio, U. S. A.

FILMS FOR SALE. 50 Reels of Film $8 to $16 per Reel
Second-hand one pin Edison machine, $100.00
MAYER SILVERMAN, 105 Fourth Ave., PITTSBURG PA.

We have sold the Exclusive Rights for every State in the Union except Idaho, Montana, North and South Dakota, Tennessee, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Florida and Mississippi

"THE ONLY WESTERN FEATURE FILMS WORTH WHILE"

Testimonial Letters From Delighted Exhibitors Everywhere

"The Cowboy and Indian Frontier Celebration"

Held at Cheyenne, Wyoming
Reviewed and Participated in by Col. THEODORE ROOSEVELT —HAVE PROVEN THE—
BIG FEATURE FILM SENSATION OF PRESENT SEASON

Arrangements for Our Next Year's Feature Films are now engaging our attention and we wish to

QUICKLY DISPOSE OF THE STATE RIGHTS

listed above, and will make you an acceptable price upon receipt of your wire or letter

DON'T MISS THIS LAST OPPORTUNITY

SPECIAL NOTICE

EXHIBITORS:—If you have not yet run this Great Money Getting Show in your Theatre, drop us a Card and we'll see

THAT YOU GET IT AT ONCE

The Tournament Film Co., Toledo, Ohio

FILM CO UNITED

Stop Right Here

WHEN YOU SEE THAT SHIELD

Look no Farther. It Stands for Quality, Superiority, Promptness and an Efficient Independent Film Service

BUYING OUTPUT SALES CO.

United Film Company

Bell Phone NINE EIGHT NINE

One First St., TROY, N. Y.

JUST HATCHED OUT

(Patent applied for.)

Invaluable to Motion Picture Managers

The "TYPO-PAD"

For Displaying Advertisements, Announcements, etc.

Make your own slides on the "TYPO-PAD," by the use of a typewriter, at the amazingly low cost of 2 cents each.

Write for free Sample and information

The AMERICAN TYPO-PAD COMPANY
RALEIGH, N. C.

HALLBERG
THE ECONOMIZER

SAVES two-thirds on electric bill and makes BIG CUT on the first cost of your complete equipment.

I carry stock of all makes M. P. Machines, Opera Chairs and Supplies.

Free Catalogue No. W-50

J. H. Hallberg, 36 East 23d St. New York City

Exhibitors

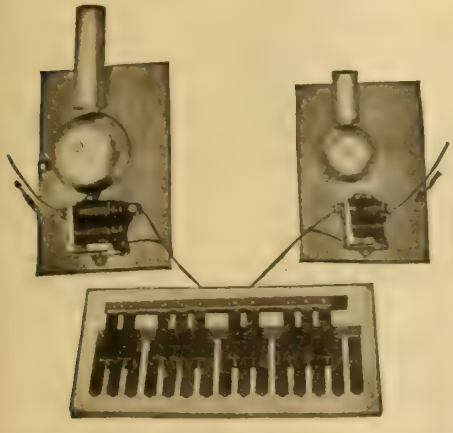
We can supply with exclusive service of Imp, Bison, Powers, Thanhauser, Challenge, Nestor, Atlas, Yankee, American Champion makes cheaper than any other exchange. Signs and Posters—YES.

J. Frank Hatch Film Co.
Hatch Building
109 Fourth Ave., Pittsburg, Pa.

OPERA CHAIRS

The Latest in Seats — Get Our Prices Before You Buy — Largest Variety Lowest Prices — The Best in Seats

GEO. W. BENNETT
744 W. 5th Street
CINCINNATI, - - - OHIO



OUR PATENT ELECTRIC BELLS create great enthusiasm in Moving Picture Houses, play from a keyboard as a solo instrument, or as an accompaniment to songs. Twenty-five Bells, two octaves chromatic, including resonators, magnets and keyboard, $75.00.

J. C. DEAGAN
3800-3810 N. Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

WURLITZER
Automatic Musical Instruments

They do the work of expert musicians and reduce your operating expenses.

Wurlitzer is the world's largest manufacturer. We supply the U. S. Government with musical instruments. Write for big, new 81 page catalogue showing the only complete line of self-players, from a small electric piano to an automatic orchestra representing 35 musicians. Easy time payments.

Concert Pianorchestra.

The RUDOLPH WURLITZER CO.

CINCINNATI, 117 to 121 E. 4th; NEW YORK, 25 & 27 W. 32d (bet. B'way & 5th Ave.); CHICAGO, 266 & 268 Wabash Ave.; PHILADELPHIA, 1835 Chesnut; ST. LOUIS, 912 Pine; CLEVELAND, 206 Prospect Ave., S. E.; COLUMBUS, O., 57 E. Main

UNIFORMS
FOR USHERS, DOORMEN, &c.

We are originators of style and design

Catalogue "M" is ready

The Big House With Little Prices

RUSSELL UNIFORM COMPANY
128 W. 36th Street
NEW YORK
Five doors West of B'way

UNIFORMS
AND CAPS
FOR
Moving Picture Theatres

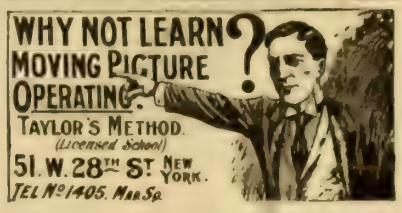
Catalogues, Samples and Prices for the Asking

James H. Hirsch & Co.
208 East Jackson Boulevard
CHICAGO.

NEW SLIDES
For the Following Songs—JUST OUT

I'm a Married Man.
I'll be Right Here in the Same Old Place.
The Vale of Dreams.
I'd Give the World to Call You Mine.
Dougherty.
In My Dreams Of You.
They've Won Every Nation's Battles But Their Own.
Get a Girl to Love You.
My Rose From The Garden of Love.
You Are the Light of My Life.
Where the Desert Meets the Nile.
Lou
Take Me Back To Dear Old Dixie
You Are The Light Of My Life
Put Your Arms Around Me.
Winter.
Gee-Whiz, Sweety, I'm Stuck On You.
Cowboy
That's When Life's One Grand Sweet Song.
Only One Daisy Left
Oh, That Boog-a-boo Man

DeWITT C. WHEELER
120 W. 31st St., N. Y. City



Correspondence Course. Special rates to the trade, send for free illustrated catalogue.

School class meets every morning and afternoon, with F. H. Richardson of Chicago, as chief instructor. Evening classes meet every Monday, Wednesday and Friday. We positively guarantee you a $15 position.

We have a Powers' Cameragraph No. 5 in A-1 condition for $85.00 and an Edison Exhibition Model Machine for $60.00

We carry a large line of electrical supplies and furnish everything for the theatre.

F. C. TAYLOR
49 West 28th Street New York City
Phone 1405 Madison Square

COMPENSARC

That's the device that saves Moving Picture men two-thirds on their electric light bills, and yet gives better light. Did you see our ad last week? Well, don't look it up. Just write for our

Booklet 15018

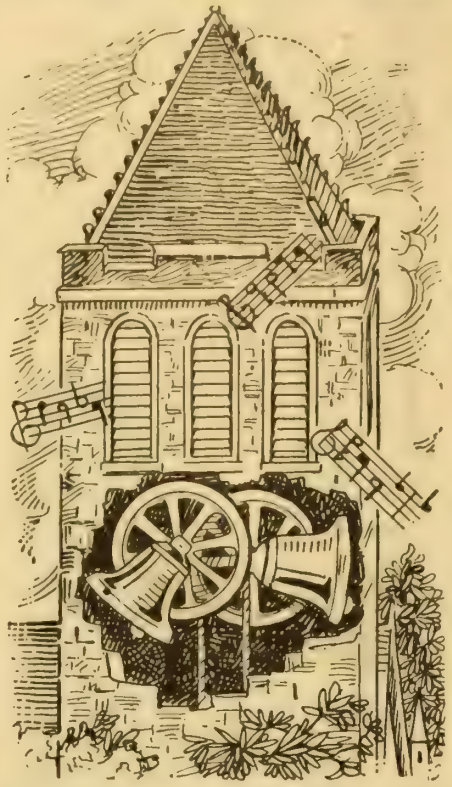
FORT WAYNE ELECTRIC WORKS
1402 Broadway
FORT WAYNE, INDIANA. 733

DECEMBER FILM BARGAINS

Send for our list of used moving picture machines and films. All films are in good running condition at moderate prices.

REPRODUCTION JOHNSON-JEFFRIES FIGHT. Complete. $125.00
ORIGINAL WOLGAST-NELSON FIGHT. Complete. $350.00
ORIGINAL NELSON-GANS FIGHT. Complete, $350.00

CHICAGO FILM EXCHANGE
Chicago, Omaha, Denver, Salt Lake City



OUR

Cathedral Chimes

are the finest Imitation of Church Bells in the World and are used in all the leading theatres.

The price of the 4-tube outfit Complete as shown in cut is

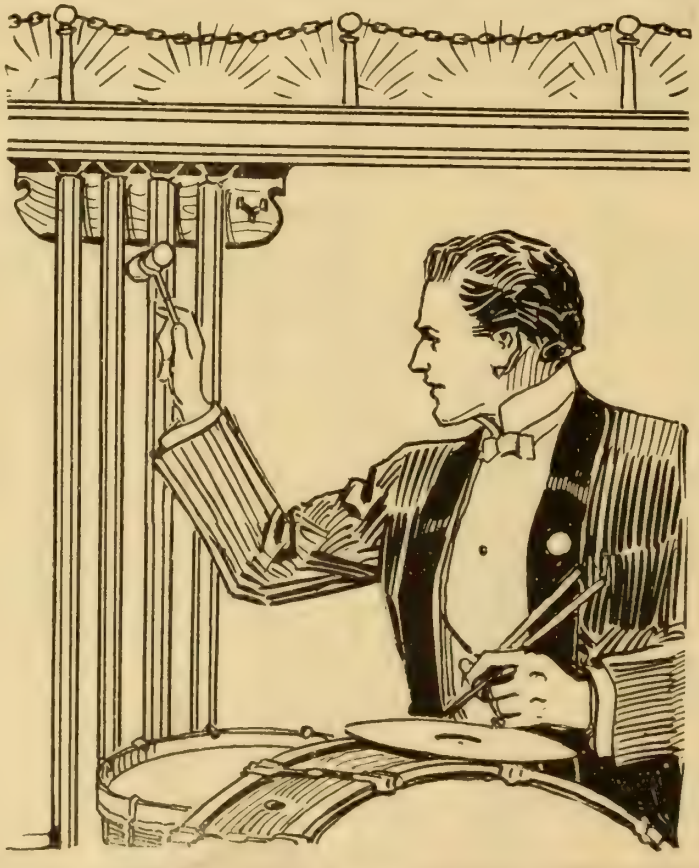
$22.50

We will send anywhere on 10 days trial upon receipt of $2 to guarantee express charges.

NOTE:—With this set you can furnish sound effects for any picture in which a bell is used from a door bell to church chimes.

J. C. DEAGAN

3800 N. Clark Street
CHICAGO, ILL.



AN INJUNCTION

should be served on manufacturers of poor, "unsticky" film cements. EXHIBITORS AND OPERATORS, it will not be necessary for you to serve an injunction if you patch your films with Bull Dog Film Cement, (the best N. I. film cement ever made.)

Patches made with Bull D ement never come apart. It does not thi or deteriorate no matter how long it stands

Licensed Exhibitors: if your exchange will not supply you send us $1.00 for 6 bottles of N. I. cement, prepaid.

Independent Exhibitors: we will send you 5 bottles inflamable and 1 bottle N. I. at the same price.

Manufactured only by
ONE DROP OIL CO.
4039 N. 47th Avenue
CHICAGO, ILL.

ADMISSION TICKETS

Reading—5c.-10c. and ADMIT ONE
Correctly Numbered. Good Paper

Per Roll of 2,000.	$ .20
10 Rolls.	1.90
20 Rolls	3.75

Dissolving Stereopticons and Moving Picture Machines, repair parts for all Machines, Carbons, etc.

ERKER BROS. OPTICAL CO.
604 OLIVE STREET :: ST. LOUIS, MO.

The Moving Picture Theatre Supply House of the West

JUST A MOMENT PLEASE

Mr. Exhibitor, have you sent us your order for one of our

Film Announcement Titles

Any of the following Announcements sent by mail upon receipt of price.

That's All, Good-Night—15 ft.
Hand Colored Trick Film	$2.00
(Same Black and White)	1.50
Entire Change of Program To-morrow—10 ft.
Hand Colored	1.50
(Same Black and White)	1.00
We thank you for your patronage and ask you to call again—20 ft.
Hand Colored	3.00
(Same Black and White)	2.00
Next Show in Five Minutes—10ft.
Hand Colored	1.50
(Same Black and White)	1.00
All that have not seen the entire Performance may remain for the next—20ft.
Hand Colored	3.00
(Same Black and White)	2.00

Any Announcement you wish made to Order at lowest Prices.

Send us an Order. Your money back if you say so.

French American Producing And Manufacturing Co.

918 Madison Street CHICAGO

"NEXT!"

Now that you're through with Nineteen-Ten, start the new year right by putting the boots to Old Gen. Flimco. Kick him out of all interest in your moving picture business. Then hook up with me and enjoy the best year's business you ever dreamed of. I never picked up so many new customers in my career as I have gained during the past few weeks. I never had so many orders for Power's, Edison, Mutograph and other machines. I never saw such convincing proof of the mighty strength of the Independent movement. If you haven't had a copy of my new loose-leaf supplementary list of Independent films, slip me your name and address and get one by return mail.

CARL LAEMMLE, President

THE LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE
196-198 Lake Street . - Chicago
The biggest and best film renter in the world

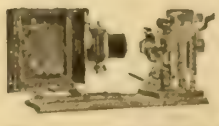
EXHIBITORS BEWARE!

Don't run rainstorm and scratched films in your theatre when you can get first-class films in good condition. We have equipped a special plant where all our films are renovated as soon as scratched, and films come out as good as new. We have several openings for very late service, and if you are interested write or wire at once.

We have the following feature films:

Frontier-Days in Cheyenne
Original Wolgast-Nelson Fight
Nelson-Gans Fight
Custer's Last Stand
U. S. Military Tournament
Knight Templar Conclave
Reproduction Johnson-Jeffries Fight

CHICAGO FILM EXCHANGE
Chicago, Omaha, Denver, Salt Lake City



For Sale—1,000 ft. reels film, $5 to $25; Edison, Power's, Lubin new machines, $100. Several theatres for sale. Model B and Edison gas outfits, $25; song sets, $1; odd slides, 5c. For rent, 12,000 feet late film, one shipment, $12. Will buy, film, Passion Play, machines, show goods.

H. DAVIS, Watertown, Wis.

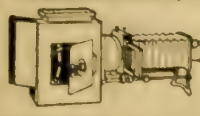
If you are in the Market for

SECOND HAND FILMS

Write to the largest and most reliable Dealers and Importers of these goods in the U. S.

International Film Traders
German Savings Bank Building
147 Fourth Avenue NEW YORK CITY

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES
STEREOPTICONS, SLIDES, ACCESSORIES.



Chas. M. Stebbins
1028 Main Street,
KANSAS CITY, MO.
Large Line of Edison Goods
Established 1899

ADVERTISING : ANNOUNCEMENT SLIDES

Genre Transparency Company
507 N. Clark Street : : : Chicago

PLEASE OBSERVE:

hat in setting up the Buffalo Bill and Pawnee Bill advertisement in our ast issue, an error was overlooked in the following list of States still open for booking.

FOR SALE

NEW JERSEY	$1,500.00	MISSISSIPPI	$1,000.00
DELAWARE		TENNESSEE	1,000.00
SOUTH DAKOTA	900.00	VERMONT	650.00
MINNESOTA	1,000.00	MAINE	800.00
LOUISIANA	1,000.00	NEW HAMPSHIRE.....	650.00
SOUTH CAROLINA.....	800.00	UTAH	800.00
CONNECTICUT	1,000.00	NEBRASKA	1,000.00

P. S. You will notice that New Jersey and Delaware are for sale jointly, for $1,500 instead of $1,500 a piece as per last copy.

Buffalo Bill and Pawnee Bill Film Co.
111 E. Fourteenth St., New York City

5 ADMISSIONS

That's the price of our unexcelled SONG SLIDE SERVICE, or in other words

25 Cents per Set per Week

THINK OF IT

Absolutely no charge for time lost in transportation.
Not alone that, but we ship your week's supply of sets and music in one consignment.

The Largest Slide Exchange in the World

Chicago Song Slide Exchange
Sixth Floor, Portland Block
107 Dearborn Street Dept. 1 Chicago, Ill.

Advertising Copy Must be in Hand on Wednesday Afternoon

The Mirror Screen IS THE Winner!

The Moving Picture Industry is on a solid basis; it is no longer a fad or a passing fancy. The "Soap Box" days of the picture theatres are past, and the manager that shows the best picture "wins out."

ARE YOU WINNING OUT?

The Mirror Screen Turns the Picture Theatre Into a Winner Every Time

Mr. W. W. Smith, proprietor and manager of the Grand Theatre, Springfield, Mo., states that the great popularity of his theatre is due to the wonderful pictures he is able to show on his Mirror Screen.

Some of the "new releases" of Mirror Screens in the East:

Varieties Theatres, Third Avenue, New York City.
Dreamland Theatre, Third Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.
Amusement Theatre, Market Street, Newark, N. J.
Irving Theatre, Fulton Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.
Proctor's Bijou Dream, Newark, N. J.
Keystone Theatre, Summit Avenue, Hoboken, N. J.
Pastime Theatre, Easton, Pa.

SPECIAL NOTICE. Mr. Edward M. Heule has just purchased a large Mirror Screen for his new $10,000 Theatre Beautiful a. Muscatine, Iowa, which opens January 1, 1910.

TAKE THIS TIP:—GET WISE BEFORE YOUR COMPETITOR DOES

Motion Picture Screen Company

SHELBYVILLE INDIANA

HARRY F. BRYAN, General Agent
Room 307—160 Washington Street
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

FRANK MANNING, Eastern Agent
355 Bedford Avenue
BROOKLYN, N. Y.

F. B. BLOOMFIELD, Eastern Agent
Majestic Theatre Building
MUNCIE, IND.

The Cincinnati-Buckeye Film Company

$100.000.00 incorporation, operating the CINCINNATI FILM EXCHANGE, 315 W. 4th Street, Cincinnati, Ohio, and the BUCKEYE FILM PROJECTING COMPANY, 309 Arcade Building, Dayton, Ohio. Biggest Independent Film Renting Concern in the UNITED STATES today. BUYING almost the entire Independent Output. Reference: SALES COMPANY, 111 E. 14th Street, New York. If you are looking for a real Film Service, drop us a line.

The Cincinnati-Buckeye Film Co.

315-317 W. Fourth St. CINCINNATI, OHIO
309-321 Arcade Building DAYTON, OHIO

The Independent Film Exchange of Pittsburg, Pa.

The Pioneer Independent Exchange of Western Pennsylvania buying the output of the Sales Company.

We have a few choice runs that we can let out at reasonable prices. Write us.

INDEPENDENT FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

A. S. DAVIS, Manager

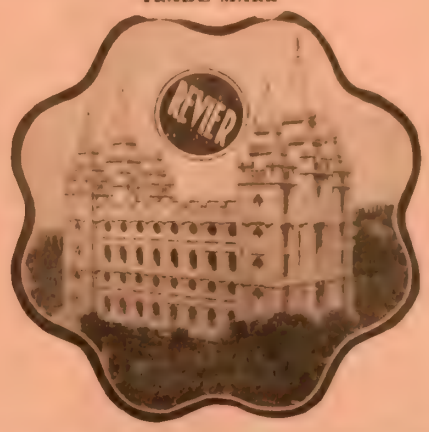
415 Ferry Street, PITTSBURG, PA.

MEN WANTED

To buy
" rent
" exhibit
" demand
" insist on
" fight for

REVIER FILMS

TRADE MARK



WE are fighting for an open market; we refuse to join any combination that stifles competition or dictates prices. Without competition the quality of film stagnates. Don't be blinded by the lurid "Down with the trust" cry. Investigate, see if t isn't a case of "the tea-kettle calling the coffee-pot black." Our motto is "DOWN WITH ALL TRUSTS (not one) BIG OR LITTLE. Square Deal to All Special Privileges to None. Trusts, combinations, film clearing houses, and whatnots are created not for your benefit, but for the sole purpose of gouging, squeezing, freezing out and getting rich quick. What did Gen. Patsco and Gen. Flimco ever do for the exhibitor? (Wait, and see what GENERAL BUNKO does.)

Be INDEPENDENT and demand REVIER FILMS. If your Exchange can't supply REVIER FILMS, I will give you the address of one that can.

DON'T FORGET OUR RELEASE OF Wednesday, Dec. 28th

"Thoughtfulness Remembered by the Ute"

Real Indians, Mustangs, Cowboys, Natural Scenery, Plenty of Action, Beautiful, Steady Photography

BEAUTIFUL 6 COLOR LITHOS

SOLD EXCLUSIVELY BY

A. J. CLAPHAM, 12 EAST 15th STREET, NEW YORK

Sold Direct to Exchanges Only

EXCHANGES AND EXHIBITORS: History (some of it rotten), is being made every day in New York in the moving picture business. My confidential weekly news letter, "Tips to the Trade," covers every rumor and is intended solely to post those interested in what's going on. It's free. Get on my mailing list for a copy.

A. J. CLAPHAM.

Harry A. Mackie

853 Broadway, New York City

Desires to announce to the trade that he has opened a salesroom and repair shop at the above address where he will handle the most superior line of Projection Apparatus and Accessories.

COMPLETE LINE OF

Edison Kinetoscopes

And Parts For Same

Williams, Brown & Earle's Stereopticons, Single, Automatic and Dissolving Opaque Projectors, Combination Opaque and Transparency Projectors, etc., for Home and Professional Use

ALSO A

Repair Department

Under Personal Supervision. Satisfaction Guaranteed. Apparatus Rented for Special Occasions

HARRY A. MACKIE

853 Broadway Corner 14th Street New York City